Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in nursery schools in Lancashire failed to meet expected standards in literacy and mathematical calculation in each of the last five years. [127119]

Jim Knight: The information is not available in the form requested. Children's development at age five is measured by the Foundation Stage Profile which replaced statutory baseline assessment on entry to primary school. This involves a continuous observational assessment during the academic year in which a child reaches the age of five. There are no pass or fail marks but, for the purposes of the national PSA target on improving young children's outcomes, a 'good level of development' at the Foundation Stage is defined as achieving a score of at least six points on a Foundation Stage Profile Scale. A child achieving a good level of development can be deemed to be 'working securely' within the Early Learning Goals.

The following table shows the percentage of young children in the Lancashire local authority area and the North West Government Office region who achieve a score of six points or more in the assessment scales relating to the Communication, Language and Literacy and Mathematical Development areas of learning. Local authorities only supply full child data in an aggregate form and it is not possible to distinguish between nursery schools and other types of provider from this dataset. Sub-national figures are only available from 2005.

Percentage of children achieving six points or more[1,2] in the communication, language and literacy and mathematical development areas of learning on the foundation stage profile in Lancashire local authority area—2005-06

Calculating	80	75	73	72	71	69
Shape, space and measures	89	86	84	83	82	80

[1] Children who achieve six points or more within a scale are deemed to be 'working securely' within the Early Learning Goals.
[2] Includes children in maintained schools and private, voluntary and independent providers.

Care should be exercised in comparing the results year on year. Assessment against the Foundation Stage Profile is not yet universally well established and ongoing improvements in assessment and moderation have contributed to a general downward shift in the scores, including the percentage of children working securely within the Early Learning Goals. The downward shift is apparent across most authorities but to varying degrees. While the downward shift in the figures between 2005 and 2006 reflects these improvements to moderation and assessment, the precise extent of the impact is uncertain. While many local authorities may now have settled in respect of assessment, it is possible that there will be further impact in some authorities for some time although the effects on the results are likely to reduce over time as the survey becomes more embedded.

The latest national figures on the Foundation Stage Profile for 2006 were published in a Statistical First Release 'Foundation Stage Profile 2006 (03/2007)' in January. A copy of the report and additional tables that show local authority achievement are available from the Department's website at:

Pupils: Intimidation

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were excluded (a) temporarily and (b) permanently for bullying in schools in each year between 1997 and 2006. [126073]

Jim Knight: Information on the reasons for pupil exclusions is available from 2003/04 and has been provided in the table as follows.

Information relating to exclusions during the 2005/06 school year is expected to be available in June 2007.

Maintained primary, secondary and special schools[1,2]: Number and percentage of permanent and fixed period exclusions for bullying 2003/04 to 2004/05, England

	Number of permanent exclusions	Percentage of all permanent exclusions[3]	Number of fixed period exclusions	Percentage of all fixed period exclusions[3]
2004/05	130	1.4	7,680	2.0

[1] Includes middle schools as deemed
[2] Includes maintained special schools. Excludes non-maintained special schools
[3] The number of exclusions for bullying expressed as a percentage of the total number of exclusions.
[4] The number of exclusions for bullying has been derived from the Termly Exclusions Survey and applied to the number of permanent exclusions as confirmed by local authorities as part of the Schools Census data checking exercise.

Note:
Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 10.

Qualifications and Curriculum Authority

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the salary is of each of the 10 highest paid employees of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority. [127320]

Jim Knight: The salary of each of the 10 highest paid employees of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority in February 2007 was:

£112,500
£110,000
£110,000
£105,000
£92,435
£90,000
£88,146.

Schools: Admissions

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average ratio was of applications to places in schools which were oversubscribed in the latest period for which figures are available. [127318]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not collected centrally, but may be available from individual local authorities.

Schools: Finance

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much deficit was accrued by each (1) primary and (1) secondary school in each local authority area in England in 2005-06; and if he will make a statement; [122413]

(2) which schools in London ran a deficit in each of the last four years; what estimate he has made of the number of London schools likely to have a deficit at the end of 2006-07; and if he will make a statement; [122423]

(3) what proportion of surplus balances at schools were uncommitted to any specific project in each year since 1997; [127076]

(4) how many schools held excessive balances in each year since 1997; [127077]

(5) what the level of surplus balances was at schools in each year since 1997. [127078]

Jim Knight: In my written ministerial statement of 15 March I announced the publication by the Department of a summary of the data on school balances for the financial years for which information is available, 1999-2000 to 2005-06. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House. The information is also available on the Department's website at:

www.dfes.gov.uk/localauthorities/section52/subPage.cfm?action=section52.default&ID=58

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he expects the Consultation on School, Early Years and 14-16 Funding 2008-11 to affect (a) the date of implementation of the Code of Practice and (b) the funding arrangements to be agreed between the local education authorities and the maintained, private, voluntary and independent sectors. [127591]

Jim Knight: The 2006 'Code of Practice on the provision of free nursery education places for three and four-year-olds' came into force on 1 April 2006, replacing existing statutory guidance and reflecting the extension of the free entitlement from 33 to 38 weeks in private, voluntary and independent sector settings. The consultation on Schools, Early Years and 14-16 relates to funding arrangements for 2008-11.

The Government are committed to extending the early education entitlement to 15 hours free provision that can be taken more flexibly. This extension will be rolled-out nationally from 2007, starting in 20 pathfinder local authorities. To enable the funding system to support the extended entitlement, the Schools, Early Years and 14-16 consultation document sets out a range of potential changes that could be made to the early years funding system at local level. These options are designed to bring the funding systems for maintained and private, voluntary and independent provision into closer alignment, enabling local authorities to respond to parental demand for more flexible early years provision. The consultation also invites views on proposals to increase the role and effectiveness of the early years sector in local decision making on funding issues.

Decisions on the funding arrangements for 2008-11 will be taken in summer 2007 in the light of responses to the consultation and the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007.

Schools: Fires

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was of fires in schools in 2006 in (a) England and Wales, (b) the North East and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [127195]

Jim Knight: The Department is responsible for education in England. The Department does not maintain records on the cost of fires. This is because local authorities, voluntary aided organisations, and individual schools are responsible for fire prevention and for taking out appropriate fire insurance. The Department expects financial provision to be made and planning undertaken locally for unforeseen events, including the rebuilding costs of schools damaged by fire, net of insurance.

Schools: Inspections

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions he has had with Ofsted on the implementation of changes to inspections following the provision of the foundation stage curriculum. [127633]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, meets with Her Majesty's Chief Inspector on a regular basis and I meet with her termly. Inspection is one of the topics frequently discussed and we are working closely with Ofsted on changes to the current arrangements to reflect the introduction and implementation of the Early Years Foundation Stage. Ofsted is currently undertaking a series of pilot inspections based on a common approach to inspection that will be applicable across all early years settings from September 2008. The second phase of the pilots is due to commence in April.

Schools: Sports

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received from community groups on the hiring of sports facilities at private finance initiative schools; and if he will make a statement. [127416]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State receives a large number of representations from many groups. Our correspondence records do not show any representations as described—to undertake further searches would incur disproportionate cost.

Science: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what policy considerations affected the decision not to include the study of the role of lung structure in gas exchange in the revised key stage three Science curriculum. [127324]

Bill Rammell: The role of lung structure in gas exchange can be covered under 'Organisms behaviour and health' in the range and content section of the proposed Key Stage 3 programme of study. Teachers will use the national curriculum planning guidance to ensure appropriate coverage of these topics, while taking full advantage of the flexibility offered by the new programme of study.

Secondary Education: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the new approach to the curriculum outlined in the secondary curriculum review. [127330]

Jim Knight: Our assessment is that the revised secondary curriculum will be effective in providing flexibility for catch-up classes for pupils who have fallen behind the expected level in English and mathematics; effective in providing flexibility to allow pupils to extend and deepen their understanding in areas where they have particular attributes and interests; and effective in providing pupils with the personal skills, attributes and practical life skills they will need for work and in their adult lives.

At the same time, it is our assessment that the revised secondary curriculum will maintain the essential elements of knowledge, skills and understanding that have stood the test of time and will equip pupils for success in further education or training and in the world of work.

Smith Institute

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money from the public purse (a) his Department and (b) its agencies gave to (i) the Smith Institute and (ii) its subsidiary SI Events Limited in each year since 1997; and for what purpose each payment was made. [123088]

Alan Johnson: The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) has made the following payments to the Smith Institute:

	29.95

We have no record of any payments made to its subsidiary SI Events Ltd. Unfortunately, we cannot supply further information on the nature of these payments as the Department does not have immediate access to the original invoices on which the payments were based.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much special educational needs (SEN) funding was provided to students in (a) further education and (b) higher education in each year between 1997 and 2006; and if he will make a statement on his Department's submission for future levels of SEN funding in further and higher education as part of the forthcoming comprehensive spending review. [127431]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Information on the funding allocated to support learners with learning difficulties and/or disabilities who studied in the further education sector is in the following table.

Further Education	Number of learners supported	Funding provided (£ billion)

Source: LSC

Information for 2005/06 will be published in July 2007 and I will write to the hon. Gentleman once this is available. Comparable information is not available before 2003/04 as it was not collected in the same way under previous funding arrangements.

The information includes all LSC funding to support post-16 learners with learning difficulties and/or disabilities studying in England. This includes learners attending further education colleges, school sixth forms and work based learning providers.

For higher education the details are as follows:

Higher Education	Mainstream disability funding (£ million)	Disabled student's allowance (£ million)	Number of students in receipt of disabled student's allowance
2000/01	7.0	39.2	14,500
2001/02	8.7	39.3	18,600
2002/03	9.8	50.4	24,600
2003/04	10.3	[1]—	[1]—
2004/05	10.4	70.7	32,400
2005/06	12.3	78.0	35,400

[1] A change in reporting arrangements for 2003/04 means aggregated figures are not available for this year Source: Student Loans Company

The information includes full-time, part-time, and postgraduate students studying in England.

As the Department has not yet received its comprehensive spending review (CSR) settlement, we are not in a position to announce the funding levels for specific programmes during the next CSR period. However, I can confirm that the costs of supporting learners with learning difficulties and disabilities have been fully integrated into our considerations for this.

Students: Debts

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate his Department has made of the average level of personal debt existing students will have accumulated at the end of their degrees. [127770]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 15 March 2007]: The Student Income and Expenditure Survey 2004/05, published on 30 March 2006, is a comprehensive study on students' income, expenditure, borrowing and debt.

It showed that English domiciled full-time students graduating in academic year 2004/05 anticipated, on average, a total debt of £7,918. For those commencing courses after the introduction of variable fees in the 2006/07 academic year we expect average student debt of around £15,000.

A generous package of support is now available to students. The Government have re-introduced non-repayable grants of up to £2,700 for full-time students. In 2006/07 around half of new full-time entrants were eligible for a full or partial grant. Non re-payable bursaries, typically worth £1,000, are available from universities and colleges to those from low income backgrounds. Additional help is available to students facing financial hardship from the Access to Learning Fund administered by individual higher education institutions.

Student loans are available for tuition fees, as well as living costs, so no student has to find their fees before or during their studies. These loans are repayable only after a student has left their course and only then when their annual income reaches £15,000. The rates of interest are well below that of commercial credit and students only pay back in real terms the amount they originally borrow.

Translation Services

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what services provided by his Department and its related agencies translation services are provided. [113884]

Mr. Dhanda: Translation services are provided by several contracted suppliers for the Department's printed publicity material.

Overseas Students: Medicine

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of medical students in the UK were non-European Economic Area nationals in each of the last five years. [122176]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not collected centrally.

TREASURY

Alcoholic Drinks: Death

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths in which alcohol was the primary cause there were in (a) Suffolk, (b) Norfolk and (c) Cambridgeshire in each year since 1997. [127621]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many deaths in which alcohol was the primary cause there were in (a) Suffolk, (b) Norfolk and (c) Cambridgeshire in each year since 1997. (127621)

The attached table provides the number of deaths with an alcohol-related underlying cause in (a) Suffolk, (b) Norfolk and (c) Cambridgeshire, from 1997 to 2005 (the latest year available).

Table 1. Number of deaths with an alcohol-related underlying cause of death[1], Suffolk, Norfolk and Cambridgeshire[2], 1997 to 2005[3]

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) for the years 1996 to 2000, and Tenth Revision (ICD-10) for 2001 onwards. The specific causes of death categorised as alcohol-related, and their corresponding ICD-9 and ICD-10 codes, are shown in the boxes below. The introduction of ICD-10 in 2001 means that the numbers of deaths from this cause before 2001 are not completely comparable with later years.
[2] Based on county boundaries as of 2007.
[3] Figures are for deaths registered in each calendar year.

Child Trust Fund

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the percentage take-up rate of child trust funds was in each year since the scheme's inception; how many funds have had revenue allocated in each of those years; what plans he has to increase take-up; and if he will make a statement. [128414]

Ed Balls: The latest set of Child Trust Fund account opening statistics showing the number of vouchers issued and accounts opened by parents was published on 4 January 2007 by HM Revenue and Customs at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/child trust funds/child-trust-funds.htm

The next set of statistics is due at the end of March.

To ensure that parents understand the choices available and to encourage them to open a Child Trust Fund account for their child, the Government will continue to run marketing activity and provide appropriate support to parents. Activities to date include the Child Trust Fund Week in January.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to increase the take-up of (a) child benefit and (b) child trust funds by use of the internet. [128415]

Ed Balls: There is a high take-up of child benefit and I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Paymaster General in her reply to the question from my right hon. Friend the Member for North Tyneside (Mr. Byers) on 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1296W. The HMRC website already enables people to claim child benefit on-line, but to safeguard against fraud the claim cannot be wholly electronic. Parents must send the birth certificates for each child to the Child Benefit Office in order to validate their claim. Child Trust Fund vouchers are sent automatically to parents once child benefit has been awarded for a qualifying child.

The Child Trust Fund website www.childtrustfund.gov.uk contains useful information to encourage parents to use their Child Trust Fund voucher, including a step-by-step guide on how to open an account. This site also includes the functionality to ask for a replacement voucher over the internet if a parent has mislaid the original. In addition we provide Child Trust Fund advertising on key parenting websites and on search engines to direct people to the Child Trust Fund website and many Child Trust Fund providers allow online applications for Child Trust Fund accounts.

Civil Servants: Wales

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the impact on the Welsh economy of the proposed reduction in civil service jobs in Wales. [127854]

Mr. Timms: Since 1997 employment in Wales has increased by 11.7 per cent. with an extra 142,000 jobs created. In addition by September 2006 more than 2,400 civil service posts had been moved to Wales from London and the south-east as part of the Lyons relocation programme.

HM Treasury does not centrally hold data showing which Departments intend to make workforce reductions in Wales as part of the SR04 efficiency programme. Departments are responsible for managing their workforce strategies and for implementing their SR04 workforce reduction target.

Climate Change Levy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the change in value of the climate change levy has been since it was first announced in 1999; and if he will restore the value to the 1999 level. [127408]

John Healey: The climate change levy (CCL) was introduced in April 2001 and yielded £555 million in 2001-02. In 2005-06 CCL yielded £744 million. As announced in Budget 2006, the levy will increase in line with inflation on 1 April 2007. The Government keep all taxes under review and any changes are announced by the Chancellor as part of the Budget process.

Customs: Manpower

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Customs officers are dedicated to (a) uncanalised and (b) intelligence-led work along the Sussex coast. [128515]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs does not specifically dedicate staff to any particular stretch of coastline. Instead, staff are flexibly deployed on an intelligence led basis to where the risk is greatest.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on (a) detection rates and (b) other measures in relation to illegal imports of persons and goods of the disbanding of the Maritime and Aviation Intelligence Team. [128517]

Dawn Primarolo: During 2005-06 HMRC undertook a review of its intelligence activity and structure. As a result of that review, the Maritime and Aviation Intelligence Team's functions were reorganised into national hubs of expertise. Intelligence activity is now undertaken nationally by specialist operational teams who link with operational staff across the country. In this way, intelligence continues to support front line activity in HMRC and in other law enforcement agencies. No assessment has yet been made of the changes effected less than 12 months ago.

Customs: Newhaven

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of vehicles which were stopped by Customs officers at Newhaven in 2006. [128511]

Dawn Primarolo: This information cannot be disclosed as this would provide information of value to those seeking to circumvent HM Revenue and Customs' controls, thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what seizures of illegal goods there were at Newhaven in each year from 1997 to date, broken down by (a) type and (b) quantity of goods. [128516]

Dawn Primarolo: National seizures made by HM Revenue and Customs and HM Customs and Excise since 1997 are published in the Annual Reports for HM Revenue and Customs and HM Customs and Excise. The figures for the year ending 31 March 2006 will be published in the next Annual Report.

Information at a regional or local level cannot be disclosed as this would provide information of value to those seeking to circumvent HM Revenue and Customs' controls, thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost to date has been of his Department's Euro Information line on 0845 601 0199. [126748]

Mr. Timms: The Euro Information line was established in 1998 for use by business and the general public to request information or to order published material made available on the Treasury's euro website (www.euro.gov.uk). The cost of Euro Information line is met from within the Treasury's departmental expenditure limit. The direct costs for the helpline currently amount to £185.96 per year plus VAT. The costs of staff time in dealing with calls is not recorded separately.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many calls have been made by businesses to his Department's Euro Information line on 0845 601 0199 requesting information on euro introduction or trade with euro area businesses since the introduction of the line. [126752]

Mr. Timms: Information on calls to the line is not available in the format requested. The total number of call minutes to the line from February 2001 to February 2007 was approximately 19,000. It is not recorded how many calls this represents, nor what proportion of the call minutes originated from businesses.

Economic Growth

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate (a) the level of non-oil related GDP growth and (b) contribution to non-oil related GDP growth of (i) labour productivity growth, (ii) employment rate growth, (iii) average hours worked growth and (iv) working-age population growth in real terms in each year since 1977. [127342]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding a request for an estimate of (a) the level of non-oil related GDP growth and (b) the contribution to non-oil related GDP growth of (i) labour productivity growth, (ii) employment rate growth, (iii) average hours worked growth and (iv) working-age population growth in real terms in each year since 1977. (127342)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) does not calculate an estimate of non-oil related GDP but I have provided our published estimate of gross value added excluding oil and gas (table A). The difference between GDP and gross value added is that GDP includes the effects of taxes and subsidies on products whereas gross value added does not. However, in terms of growth rates the difference is minimal.

ONS does produce estimates of labour productivity, the employment rate, average hours worked and the working-age population. However, these are not used directly in the calculation of GDP and gross value added.

Economic Situation: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the gross value added rate was of the Cumbrian economy in each year since 1990. [127181]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question about Gross Value Added (GVA) of the Cumbrian economy in each year since 1990. (127181)

Regional GVA data are currently published in The Nomenclature of Units for Territorial Statistics (NUTS) regions and Cumbria is a NUTS2 region. Table A has the latest available data from 1995 to 2004.

Gross Domestic Product (GDP) data prior to 1995 were published biennially at the county level. These data were last published in 1998. Table B has the data for Cumbria from 1991 and 1993.

Both data-sets are at current prices, therefore the effects of inflation are not taken into account. The data sets in Table A and Table B were calculated using different methodologies and cannot be used together to obtain a consistent time series.

Table A

	Gross value added in Cumbria (£ million)
1997	5,157
1998	5,250
1999	5,264
2002	5,675
2003	6,047
2004	6,440

Table B

	Gross domestic product in Cumbria (£ million)
1993	4,746

Excise Duties: Beer

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will freeze beer duty; and if he will make a statement; [127171]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of beer duty on profitability in the brewing industry; [127172]

(3) if he will introduce measures to assist investment and growth in the UK brewing industry; and if he will make a statement; [127173]

(4) what assessment he has made of the contribution made to the UK economy of the brewing and pub sector. [127174]

John Healey: Decisions on the taxation of beer are made by the Chancellor at Budget taking all relevant factors into consideration, including the state of the industry and its contribution to the economy.

Excise Duties: Gaming Machines

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will freeze duty on gaming machines; and if he will make a statement. [127175]

John Healey: Decisions on the taxation of gambling are made by the Chancellor at Budget taking all relevant factors into consideration, including the state of the industry and its contribution to the economy.

Financial Services: Advisory Services

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of the registration fees of small to medium-sized independent financial advice practices; what representations he has made to the Financial Services Authority regarding those fees; and if he will make a statement. [127525]

Ed Balls: The Financial Services Authority (FSA) is operationally independent of Government including in relation to the setting of fees. The FSA consults annually on its proposed regulatory fees and levies. The FSA consultation for 2007-08 was published in February and is available at:

http://www.fsa.gov.uk/Pages/Library/Policy/CP/2007/07_03.shtml

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the consequences for public revenues of reducing the rate of inheritance tax from 40 per cent. to 10 per cent., taking account of the probable behavioural impact of such a change; and if he will make a statement. [128018]

Dawn Primarolo: An estimate of the impact on tax revenues of reducing the inheritance tax rate to 10 per cent. from the year 2007-08 can be obtained from the ready reckoner table published by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/tax_expenditures/table1-6.xls

The ready reckoner figures do not include any allowance for the impact of behavioural responses to the change; we can not provide a reliable estimate of such an impact.

Investment Appraisals

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government's cost of capital is for the purpose of investment appraisals and cost comparisons; how this figure is arrived at; how often and against what criteria it is reviewed; and if he will make a statement. [127979]

Mr. Timms: The Government use a discount rate of 3.5 per cent. in real terms in central Government appraisals. This reflects the social time preference rate rather than the cost of capital. The rate is kept under constant review. Further information is contained in "The Green Book: Appraisal and Evaluation in Central Government".

Owner Occupation

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the mean imputed rent is for owner-occupiers in each household income decile. [127313]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the mean imputed rent is for owner occupiers in each household income decile. (127313).

This information is not available. The main National Statistics on household income distribution, such as Households Below Average Income (HBAI) and The Effects of Taxes and Benefits on Household Income, do not use definitions of income which include imputed rent for owner-occupiers. HBAI presents statistics using two definitions of income: 'before housing costs' and 'after housing costs'. This latter measure achieves greater comparability between owner-occupier households and those that rent accommodation, albeit only for a measure of income which disregards housing and the contribution it makes to a households standard of living.

Comparisons of income distributions between countries are particularly affected by structural differences between housing markets. Therefore in statistics for international comparison, the treatment of housing is particularly important. The new EU-SILC (European Union—Survey on Income and Living Conditions) will include estimates of imputed rent from the 2007 survey onwards (data available from 2009 onwards).

Estimates of the total imputed rent for all owner-occupiers are included in the National Accounts, although this information is not available by income decile group.

Personal Income

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) mean and (b) median age is of the household reference person in each household income decile. [127327]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the (a) mean and (b) median age is of the household reference person in each household income decile. (127327).

The ONS analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income' provides information about the income distribution and the characteristics of households in different parts of the income distribution. The latest analysis for 2004/05 was published on the National Statistics website on 12th May 2006 at http://www.statistics.gov.uk/taxesbenefits, while that for 2005/06 will be published on 17 May 2007. This annual analysis is based on data from the Expenditure and Food Survey, which is a sample survey covering approximately 7,000 households in the UK. Tables 15 and 15A provide information on household characteristics by income decile group.

The table below, based on the same underlying data as that appearing in Tables 15 and 15A, shows the mean and median age of the household reference person by household income decile.

The household reference person is the person in the household who owns the accommodation or is responsible for paying rent. If this ownership or responsibility for paying rent is held jointly, then the household reference person is the person with the highest income. A fuller definition is provided in the background notes.

The income decile groups are determined by ranking households according to their equivalised disposable income. The table below also shows the equivalised income boundary points which separate households into decile groups.

Equivalised incomes are standardised to take into account different sizes and compositions of households. The standard household is deemed to be a two adult household with no children, and so these equivalised incomes can be interpreted as indicating a standard of living that would be achieved by a standard household with that income.

The figures shown in the table below are based on a sample survey and are not necessarily accurate to the nearest single year of age, but nevertheless provide a good indication of how the age of the household reference person changes across the income distribution.

Sailing Boats

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of yacht movements between non-EU ports and the UK in the latest year for which figures are available; and how many reports were logged in respect of such movements over the same period. [128519]

Dawn Primarolo: Whether or not the crew of a yacht needs to notify HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) of its arrival depends on its last port of call. If arriving directly from an EU member state, the crew of a yacht need only contact HMRC if they have goods to declare. When arriving direct from a country outside the EU (the Channel Islands are regarded as outside the EU for this purpose), the crew must notify HMRC if any of the following criteria apply:

VAT has not been paid on the vessel;

there are goods in excess of the travellers' allowance detailed in Notice 1 A Customs guide for travellers entering the UK;

they have on board goods which are to be treated as duty free stores;

they have any prohibited or restricted goods;

there is any notifiable illness on board;

there are any people on board who need immigration clearance; or any repairs or modifications, other than running repairs, have been carried out since the vessel last left the EU.

In the year to 15 March 2007 we were advised of 166 inbound yacht movements. HMRC has no further figures relating to such movements.

Skin Cancer

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) diagnosis and (b) mortality rate was for (i) melanoma skin cancer and (ii) non-melanoma skin cancer in (A) Taunton constituency and (B) the UK in each year since 1996, broken down by age group. [127986]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the (a) diagnosis and (b) mortality rate was for (i) melanoma skin cancer and (ii) non-melanoma skin cancer in (A) Taunton constituency and (B) the UK in each year since 1996, broken down by age group. [127986]

The latest available figures for newly diagnosed cases of cancer (incidence) are for the years 2005 (Wales), 2004 (England, Northern Ireland) and 2003 (Scotland). The latest available figures for deaths are for the year 2005.

For the UK, age-specific incidence and mortality rates of respectively, melanoma and non-melanoma skin cancer, from 1996, are given in Tables 1 and 3 below.

For Taunton Deane LA, numbers of newly registered cases of, and deaths from, respectively, melanoma and non-melanoma skin cancer, from 1996, are given in Tables 2 and 4 below. Only a broad breakdown by age (0-59, 60+) is possible because of the small number of cases in some years.

Numbers for both melanoma and non-melanoma skin cancer, for Taunton Deane LA, particularly those for deaths, are too small to produce reliable age-specific rates even on the broad age ranges provided. Numbers for the UK are provided in Tables 5 and 6.

Smuggling: Firearms

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many seizures of illegal firearms were made by HM Revenue and Customs staff in each year since 1997; and how many individuals were prosecuted as a result of such seizures in each year. [127888]

Dawn Primarolo: The answer to the question is as follows:

	Number of seizures of illegal firearms	Number of individuals prosecuted
2002-03	n/a	4
2003-04	171	8
2004-05	83	4

n/a = Not available.

The number of seizures of firearms includes air firearms as defined in the Firearms Act 1968 as amended with the exception of self defence sprays, stun guns and parts of firearms.

The following information is not available:

the number of seizures prior to 1 April 2003;

the number of individuals prosecuted prior to 1 April 2002; and prosecutions undertaken as a result of seizures that were referred to police forces for investigation.

Students: Loans

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total value was of student loan repayments received by HM Revenue and Customs during the financial years (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05; and how much of this has been passed on to the Student Loan Company. [127873]

Dawn Primarolo: Published 2003-04 and 2004-05 student loans cash receipts figures are available in the 2005 and 2006 HM Revenue and Customs Annual Report which can be accessed at

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/reports.htm

HMRC passes on all receipts from student loan collection to the Department for Education and Skills on a quarterly basis.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases student loan repayments made to the Inland Revenue during the financial year 2004-05 have not yet been passed on to the Student Loans Company. [127940]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs will only know the total number of borrowers who have had repayments deducted by their employer when they have finished processing all 1.6 million employers' annual returns for the financial year 2004-05.

However, we currently estimate that 1.9 per cent. of 2004-05 student loan repayments have not yet been passed on to the Student Loans Company.

Taxation: Football

Frank Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether non-British footballers playing in the English Premier League pay UK tax on their incomes, including bonuses; [128022]

(2) whether British footballers playing in the English Premier League pay UK tax on their incomes, including bonuses; [128023]

(3) whether non-British directors of English Premier League football clubs pay UK tax on (a) their incomes, including bonuses and (b) capital gains; [128024]

(4) whether Premier League football clubs owned by non-British individuals or corporate bodies are liable to UK taxation on their (a) profits and (b) capital gains. [128025]

Dawn Primarolo: Footballers playing in the English premier league, directors of English premier league clubs and premier league football clubs pay UK tax on their income and capital gains on the same basis as any other individual or body working or operating in the UK. The correct tax treatment will be determined by the particular facts and circumstances.

Taxation: Self-assessment

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of (a) pensioners and (b) taxpayers submitting tax returns do not have (i) capital gains tax liability, (ii) business income, (iii) property income, (iv) partnership income, (v) income from share schemes and (vi) foreign income; and if he will make a statement. [127267]

Dawn Primarolo: Figures for income tax self assessment returns for the 2004-05 tax year (the latest full year available) are provided in the following table.

Table: Self assessment tax returns received for the 2004-05 tax year, showing numbers and proportions without those supplementary pages which indicate the receipt of various kinds of income and gains.

[2] Besides the main self employment pages, these figures take account of short tax returns with the self-employment income section completed.
[3] Besides the main land and property pages, these figures take account of short tax returns submitted with the UK land and property income section completed.

Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000. The figures in the table relate to returns received and captured onto HMRC computer systems as at March 2007.

Teenage Pregnancy: Greater London

Sarah Teather: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many underage pregnancies were recorded in each London borough in each of the last five years, broken down by ethnic group. [127739]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many underage pregnancies have been recorded in each London borough in each of the last five years, broken down by ethnic group. (127739)

Figures on underage pregnancies are estimated using the number of conceptions that resulted in a live birth, stillbirth or termination.

Information on ethnicity is not collected at birth registration and hence figures on underage pregnancies by ethnicity are not available.

Number of conceptions to girls aged under 16 in each London Borough for the years 2001-2005 (the most recent year for which figures are available), are shown in the attached table. Figures for 2005 are provisional.

Water Charges: Low Incomes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide additional assistance to (a) low income families and (b) pensioners to pay for water bills. [127968]

Dawn Primarolo: Since 1997 the Government have provided significant additional financial assistance to families and pensioners to help them meet all their living costs. Child Benefit and Child Tax Credit are the main tools for directing financial support to families. From April 2007, financial support for all two children families will be at least £1,570, with the poorest receiving £5,810.

From April, the basic state pension will increase by £3.05 to £87.30 a week, the biggest increase in the basic state pension since 2001; and the pension credit guarantee will see its biggest cash rise: by £5 to £119.05 a week for a single person and by £7.65 to £181.70 for a couple.

Welfare Tax Credits

Andrew Selous: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason tax credit repayments cannot be taken from future payments when a single claim becomes a joint claim by a couple; and if he will make a statement. [124660]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 2 March 2007]: Entitlement to a tax credit award comes to an end where an individual who has made a single claim becomes part of a couple. Tax credit legislation does not allow recovery from a subsequent partner where the overpayment arose from an earlier award to which that person had neither claimed nor benefited.

Any overpayment on the single claim can be collected over 12 months. In cases of hardship, HMRC will consider recovering over a longer periods if appropriate.

Written Questions

Andrew Selous: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to provide a substantive reply to question 124660, tabled on 27 February 2007. [128085]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Care Homes: Finance

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her assessment is of the policy implications of the judgment in the 2004 case of Goldsmith v. the London Borough of Wandsworth on the funding of care in nursing homes. [124191]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has examined the Court of Appeal Judgment of 27 August 2004 and does not consider that it has implications for the policy on the funding of care in nursing homes.

Care Homes: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) longest waiting times were for care assessments by each London borough council in each of the last five years. [125627]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information has been placed in the Library. Table 1 shows the cumulative percentage of new clients aged 18 and over whose assessments were completed during the year by length of time from first contact to completed assessment for the years 2003-04 to 2005-06 for each London borough.

Table 2 shows the number of new clients whose assessments were completed during the year by the waiting time between first contact and completed assessment for the years 2003-04 to 2005-06 for each London borough.

Data for earlier years are not available on a comparable basis.

The information needed to calculate the average and longest waiting time for a care assessment is not collected centrally.

Childbirth

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of births were classed as normal in each year since 1995. [126167]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: For the years 2002-03, 2003-04 and 2004-05 the numbers of normal deliveries (defined as those without surgical intervention, use of instruments, induction, epidural or general anaesthetic before or during the birth) are set out in the table. Information for years before 2002 is not available centrally.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what international comparators she uses when assessing perinatal statistics. [127278]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question asking what international comparators are used when assessing perinatal statistics. (127278)

It is difficult to make international comparisons on perinatal mortality because of different definitions used for compiling perinatal mortality statistics. These are due to differences in the legal criteria used for birth registration and inclusion criteria used for recording birth information on other data collection systems. According to the World Health Organisation (WHO), the perinatal period commences at 22 completed weeks (154 days) of gestation (when birthweight is normally 500 grams) and ends 7 completed days afterbirth[1].

In England and Wales, perinatal mortality statistics (since 1992) are based on the legal definition of stillbirths registered at 24 or more weeks gestation, which are collected by the vital registration system, and includes deaths at ages up to 6 completed days of life (whatever the gestational age at live birth). Scotland, Northern Ireland and Ireland use the same stillbirth definition as England and Wales, hence perinatal mortality statistics are comparable between these countries.

Countries such as Austria, Germany, Luxembourg and Portugal collect information on births using the WHO criteria and hence perinatal mortality statistics for these countries are comparable[2]. But in countries such as Denmark, Spain and Sweden, only fetal deaths after 28 or more completed weeks of gestation are registered as stillbirths, and in countries which use no such criteria, regulations about stillbirth registration can affect decisions about whether an event is a late miscarriage or should be registered as a birth. Furthermore, under-reporting can be a problem, particularly where data collection systems are not statutory.

Therefore, the PERISTAT project funded by the European Union was charged with developing a set of indicators for monitoring and describing perinatal health in Europe.

With the PERISTAT indicator set, the aim is to facilitate the surveillance of perinatal health in the EU by harmonizing indicator definitions and encouraging the collection of comparable data for the following purposes:

To assess maternal and infant mortality and morbidity associated with events in the perinatal period.

To describe the evolution of risk factors for perinatal health outcomes in the population of childbearing women, including demographic, socio-economic and behavioural characteristics.

To monitor the use and consequences of medical technology in the care of women and infants during pregnancy, delivery and the postpartum period.

ONS has been providing data for England and Wales for the PERISTAT indicators, where possible.

Childbirth: Death

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of births resulted in (a) maternal and (b) perinatal death in each year since 1995. [126170]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Confidential Enquiry into Maternal and Child Health (CEMACH)'s report on maternal death for the three-year period 2000-02 showed that there were 106 direct maternal deaths in that period, representing 5.3 deaths per thousand of the two million births. The next CEMACH report is expected at the end of the year.

Office for National Statistics data shows that in 2002, the most recent year for which figures are available, there were 4,977 perinatal deaths in 596,122 maternities, or 8.3 deaths per 1,000 pregnancies.

Childbirth: Midwives

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of babies born in England were delivered by midwives in each year since 1995. [126171]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The data is set out in the table.

	Percentage delivered by midwives
1996-97	70.8
1997-98	69.4
1998-99	68.1
1999-2000	66.9
2000-01	66.2

Clostridium Difficile

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department has issued to hospitals on the means to prevent transmission of clostridium difficile; and if she will make a statement. [124526]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has issued the following guidance specifically for the management and control of Clostridium difficile:

A professional letter on health care associated infections including particularly infection caused by Clostridium difficile was issued to all Chief Executives of national health service acute trusts, primary care trusts and strategic health authorities on 7 December 2006. This letter set out the policies and clinical practices needed to control Clostridium difficile and also included very simple operational guidance for managers.

A high impact intervention on Clostridium difficile was added to our delivery programme "Saving lives: a delivery programme to reduce healthcare associated infections including MRSA" in June 2006. This tool will help to reduce infections.

A joint professional letter from the Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Nursing Officer went out to NHS Trusts in December 2005 reminding them of the importance of this infection and listed the key actions to control Clostridium difficile and highlighted the guidance available[1, 2]. The letter has been placed in the Library and is at:

http://www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/LettersAndCirculars/ProfessionalLetters/ChiefMedicalOfficerLetters/ChiefMedicalOfficerLettersArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4125069&chk=cuQ7C%2B

In addition we have asked the Health Protection Agency to review the extant guidance issued in 1994. This revised national guidance should be ready in the spring.

All those providing health care services need high standards of hygiene to prevent infections. Specific measures to control Clostridium difficile are restriction, where possible, of broad spectrum antibiotics, isolation of patients and enhanced environmental cleaning.

Both a simple guide to Clostridium difficile and the National Clostridium difficile Standards group: Report to the Department of Health, are available in the Library and on the Department's website at:

Dental Services: Finance

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total amount of revenue resource was allocated to each primary care trust in England to provide NHS dental services in 2006-07. [127959]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A table listing the primary dental service resource allocations for 2006-07 for all primary care trusts (PCTs) in England as at 31 July 2006 is available in the Library. This set out the net allocations awarded to PCTs and the assumed gross budgets based on illustrative assumptions about levels of patient charge income for each PCT. Strategic health authorities agreed with their PCTs locally how these allocations would be redistributed within the new PCT areas that took effect from 1 October 2006.

Dietary Supplements: EC Law

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will press the European Food Safety Agency (a) to publish a timetable for assessment of evidence dossiers submitted to it under the terms of the food supplement directive and (b) to make it its policy to announce decisions on individual applications as soon as they have been made. [128032]

Caroline Flint: At a recent meeting with part of the United Kingdom food supplements industry, a number of concerns were raised regarding dossiers submitted for an opinion by the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) in relation to the food supplements directive. It was agreed at the meeting that these concerns would be raised with EFSA and this will include the timetable for assessing dossiers and the publication of decisions on individual applications.

Doctors: Foreign Workers

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) junior doctors and (b) fully qualified doctors of (i) European Economic Area (EEA) nationality and (ii) non-EEA nationality have been newly employed by the NHS since July 2006; [122175]

(2) how many (a) junior doctors and (b) fully qualified doctors of non-European Economic Area nationality are employed by the NHS; and how many were employed by the NHS in each of the last five years. [122178]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Drugs: Rehabilitation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the next round of funding for delivering drug treatment strategies as part of the public health programme is expected to be announced. [117968]

Caroline Flint: The Department's press release announced the allocations to primary care trusts for the pooled drug treatment budget for 2007-08 on 26 January 2007. A copy of the press release has been placed in the Library.

East of England Strategic Health Authority: Acute Beds

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the acute services review on major capital development programmes in the East of England strategic health authority area; and if she will make a statement. [126425]

Andy Burnham: Any proposals for the reconfiguration of services are a matter for the national health service locally. There is a well-established and well understood process for managing consultations on such changes so that patients, the public and local stakeholders can help to inform the local debate.

Eastbourne Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency admissions were received at Eastbourne District General hospital in each of the last five years. [125477]

Andy Burnham: Information is not collected at the level of individual hospitals. 2006-07[2]	12,999

[1] Admissions via all A&E types were first collected in Q1 2003-04. Data after this date are for all A&E types, prior to this the figures are for admissions via major (type 1) A&E only.

Family Practitioner Services: Surveys

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are to be surveyed for the NHS's general practitioner patient survey on hospital choice to be provided by Ipsos MORI. [123971]

Andy Burnham: Questionnaires have been distributed to all general practices with a request that they be distributed to all patients referred by their general practitioners (GPs) between 16 January and 30 March 2007 for a first out-patient appointment where the choice policy applies. In some cases, the need for rapid access to diagnosis and treatment may be judged by the GP to override choice-at-referral policy, for example in cases of chest pain or suspected cancer. In other cases, such as maternity or mental health, other kinds of choice may be more likely to improve the patient experience.

General Practitioners: Bedfordshire

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial support her Department provides for general practitioners in Bedfordshire to undertake training to become GPs with a specialist interest; and if she will make a statement. [122818]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for the primary care trusts in discussion with local general practitioners (GPs) to decide how many GPs with a specialist interest are required and how to fund any necessary training.

General Practitioners: County Durham

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there are per 1,000 of the population in County Durham; and how many there were in 1997. [123655]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested. The following table shows general medical practitioners (GMPs) per head of population for the former County Durham and Tees Valley Strategic Health Authority (SHA).

General medical practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars)[1] per head of population, County Durham and Tees Valley SHA

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many Welsh patients were treated in NHS hospitals in England in 2006, broken down by (a) type of treatment and (b) hospital; and how much funding was received by each hospital in payment by the Welsh Assembly Government, broken down by type of treatment; [119009]

(2) how many patients from Wales have been treated in English hospitals as a result of the Welsh Assembly Government's second offer scheme, broken down by (a) health authority area and (b) hospital in which treatment was provided; [119016]

(3) how much each English health authority has received in payment under the Welsh Assembly Government's second offer scheme since its inception; [119017]

(4) what estimate she has made of the cost of follow-up treatment required for patients treated at Weston-super-

Mare Hospital under the Welsh Assembly Government's second offer scheme who have been recalled following knee surgery; and how the costs of the follow-up treatment will be met. [119018]

Andy Burnham: This is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales and I have asked the Health Minister to write to the hon. Member directly.

Health Visitors: Training

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many training places there were for health visitors in each health region in each of the last three years. [124383]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Hearing Aids: Stoke on Trent

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on access to digital hearing aids in Stoke on Trent. [125812]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In order to improve access and reduce waiting times for audiology services, the national audiology framework 'Improving Access to Audiology Services in England', was published on 6 March 2007.

This measure will assist in significantly reducing waiting times and will greatly benefit those who receive hearing aids.

Herbal Medicine: Regulation

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her plans for the future regulation of herbal practitioners; and what principles will underlie the proposed new regulatory regime. [123950]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A working group has been established to prepare for statutory regulation of herbal medicine, traditional Chinese medicine and acupuncture practitioners. The working group, chaired by Professor Mike Pittilo, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of the Robert Gordon University in Aberdeen, has met three times so far and is currently working towards preparing a report to Ministers.

The purpose of statutory regulation is to improve public protection by setting clear standards of training and competence for herbal medicine and acupuncture practitioners. It would also reassure patients that a practitioner they consult is not only suitably qualified, but also competent and up-to-date with developments in practice.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what change there has been in the number of (a) NHS beds, (b) general and acute beds, (c) intermediate care beds, (d) non-residential intermediate care places and (e) adult critical care beds since the publication of the NHS Plan; and if she will make a statement. [126608]

Hospitals: Infectious Diseases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trusts have received an improvement notice as a result of failure to comply with the Code of Practice since October 2006. [123062]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No improvement notices have been issued yet. The Health Act 2006 gave the Healthcare Commission the power to issue improvement notices if it considers that a national health service organisation is not observing the provisions of the Code of Practice in any material respect. The Act, however, includes various other matters that the commission needs to take into account before this power is exercised. The commission is currently reviewing the arrangements in all 41 trusts whose annual health check and rating published in October 2006 gave rise to concern with respect to health care associated infection. This programme will be completed by the end of March. The commission has assured me that if this work reveals evidence of any material failures to observe the provision of the code the issue of formal improvement notices will be likely to follow.

In addition, trusts are being required to make a specific declaration by 1 May regarding their observance of the code as part of the next annual health check cycle. The Healthcare Commission will follow up these declarations as part of a programme to review the application of the code in trusts where there may be risks of inadequate performance. The issuing of improvement notices is an important power to help secure the safety of patients and the commission will use this new power when it is appropriate.

Independent Reconfiguration Panel

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what decision was reached in each case which she referred to the Independent Reconfiguration Panel; and by what date a decision is expected in each case which has not yet been decided. [122628]

Andy Burnham: The Secretary of State has referred four cases to the Independent Reconfiguration Panel (IRP) for advice. The four cases equate to seven separate referrals from Overview and Scrutiny Committees (OSC). Details of the cases and their outcomes are listed. A further case in East Kent was referred to the IRP in April 2003 although this did not relate to a referral from an OSC.

In relation to the 'Making it Better' and 'Healthy Futures' cases, these are currently with the IRP for consideration. The IRP will advise on the cases by 26 June 2007 and the Secretary of State will make a final decision thereafter.

Cases referred by the Secretary of State for Health to the Independent Reconfiguration Panel:

Proposed changes to maternity services in Calderdale and Huddersfield:

Referred by: Calderdale and Kirklees Joint OSC

Outcome: IRP advice accepted in full by the Secretary of State with a decision to support the local NHS proposals for in-patient consultant-led maternity care to be centred on the Calderdale Royal hospital site together with an alongside midwife-led unit. A standalone midwife-led unit would be provided at the Huddersfield Royal infirmary site.

Acute services review in Hartlepool and Teesside:

Referred by: Stockton on Tees borough council, Middlesbrough council, Hartlepool borough council

Outcome: IRP advice accepted in full by the Secretary of State. IRP advice was that a modern hospital should replace the existing out-of-date hospital buildings and be provided on a new site in a well situated location accessible to the people of Hartlepool, Stockton on Tees, Easington and Sedgefield. Until the new hospital is open, consultant-led maternity and paediatric services should be centralised at the university hospitals of North Tees and a midwifery-led maternity unit and a paediatric assessment unit should be provided at the University hospital of Hartlepool in addition to elective surgery and emergency medical services, taking into account best practice.

'Making it Better' consultation on the reconfiguration of in-patient services for women, babies, children and young people in Greater Manchester, East Cheshire and High Peak:

Referred by: Salford OSC, Bury OSC, Rochdale OSC

Outcome: To be confirmed.

'Healthy Futures' reconfiguration of Hospital Services in the North East Sector of Greater Manchester:

Referred by: Rochdale OSC

Outcome: To be confirmed.

Infant Milk

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) supported on the inclusion of synthetic fluorides in infant milk formulas. [112887]

Caroline Flint [pursuant to the reply, 11 January 2007, Official Report, c. 697W]: The Department and the Food Standards Agency have not commissioned or supported research on this topic. The composition of infant formula is harmonised at European Union-level (EU), and for fluoride reflects the recommendation of the EU Scientific Committee for Food that, on safety and nutritional grounds, no minimum level, but a maximum level of 100 micrograms of fluoride per 100 kcal, should be set. This advice recognises the potential fluoride intakes of infants from supplements and/or water used to make up the formula.

Medical Treatments: Somerset

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals involved in road traffic accidents in (a) Taunton and (b) Somerset in each year since 2000 received hospital treatment as a direct result. [127463]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The number of individuals involved in road traffic accidents in Taunton and Somerset is not available in the requested format. Tables have been placed in the Library, which provide data for hospital admissions where the external cause was road traffic accidents for patients who lived in the Dorset and Somerset strategic health authority area since 2000.

Mental Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many mental health patients who committed suicide in the last 10 years were first treated by the NHS on an adult mental health ward when they were under the age of 18 years; [120664]

(2) how many mental health patients who committed a homicide in the last 10 years were first treated by the NHS on an adult mental health ward when they were under the age of 18 years; [120665]

(3) how many times in the last 10 years an inquiry has been carried out into a suicide by a mental health patient where the patient was first treated on an adult mental health ward when they were under the age of 18; [120649]

(4) how many times in the last 10 years an inquiry has been carried out into a homicide by a mental health patient where the patient was first treated on an adult mental health ward when they were under the age of 18. [120650]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 19 February 2007]: Information is not collected in the format requested.

The Confidential Inquiry into homicides and suicides has been asked by the Department (via the National Patient Safety Agency) to collect this information. This process will begin in April 2007.

Mid-Essex Hospital Trust: Hospital Beds

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS hospital beds there are in the Mid-Essex Hospital Trust area; and how many there were in (a) January 1997, (b) January 2001 and (c) May 2005. [127985]

Andy Burnham: The following table shows the average daily number of beds at Mid-Essex Hospital Service NHS Trusts for each of the financial years requested.

Midwives: Manpower

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the work force of the NHS in England, expressed in terms of (a) headcount and (b) whole-time equivalent, was represented by midwives in each year since 1997. [127644]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The proportion of the national health service work force represented by midwives since 1997 is shown in the following table. Between September 1997 and September 2005, the number of midwives employed in the NHS has increased by 2,423 (10.8 per cent.).

Multiple Sclerosis: AIDS

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people in England who have (a) multiple sclerosis and (b) AIDS. [126122]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have made no estimate of the number of people living with multiple sclerosis.

In 2005 there were 43,625 individuals living in England diagnosed with HIV infection and who accessed HIV-related care or treatment. Of this number, 9,868 have had an AIDS defining illness between their date of first HIV diagnoses and 2005.

Estimates would suggest that additional to the 43,625 individuals living with diagnosed HIV infection in the United Kingdom, an additional third (approximately 14,000 to 15,000) remain undiagnosed.

National Centre for Health Outcomes Development

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the National Centre for Health Outcomes Development to report to her Department on the results of their research on emergency readmissions. [112409]

Andy Burnham: The Department expects to receive the report by June 2007.

NHS: Cleaning Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions since October 2004 matrons have exercised their authority to withhold payment for cleaning services by the process set out in the Matron's Charter. [123487]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We do not collect this information centrally. The withholding of payment is the final part of a process which provides an ultimate sanction if reconciliation steps fail.

Issues relating to the performance of individual cleaning contractors are managed by the parties to that contract.

NHS: Finance

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the contribution was from the budget of each participating primary care trust to the London-wide NHS Reserve in each year since 2002. [122421]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The following table shows primary care trust (PCT) top-slice forecast outturn to London strategic health authority at quarter three, 2006-07. From 2006-07 we have abolished planned support and given strategic health authorities the ability to generate reserves from top slicing their PCT allocations. This topslicing did not occur previous to 2006-07.

Financial monitoring returns quarter 3 2006-07

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the projected end-of-year revenue balance is for each primary care trust in England for the year 2006-07; [127956]

(2) how much and what percentage of its total allocations was top-sliced from each primary care trust's budget allocation in England for the year 2006-07. [127957]

Andy Burnham: This information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to top-slice the budgets of primary care trusts in England for the year 2007-08; and if she will make a statement. [127958]

Andy Burnham: All national health service organisations are currently in the process of finalising their financial plans for 2007-08. We have made clear in the 2007-08 NHS operating framework that strategic health authorities (SHAs) will not generally require the scale of contribution to SHA reserves seen in 2006-07 because of the return of the NHS to overall financial balance this year.

NHS: Manpower

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the (a) advantages and (b) disadvantages of counting NHS staff using (i) headcount and (ii) whole-time equivalent basis; and if she will make a statement. [122650]

Ms Rosie Winterton: National health service workforce statistics are collected on both a headcount and whole time equivalent basis to enable the level of workforce resource to be accurately planned taking into account factors such as work/life balance. This will also feed into paybill and pension modelling, and numbers of training commissions.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the future need for (a) midwives, (b) school nurses and (c) health visitors; and if she will make a statement. [124452]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for local planners with support from the workforce review team to determine their future requirement for midwives, school nurses and health visitors to meet local service needs.

North London Breast Screening Service

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2007, Official Report, columns 2303-04W, on the North London Breast Screening Service, what the action plan (a) to recommence breast screening and (b) to clear the backlog is; when she expects the full plan for the recommencement of screening services to be (i) completed and (ii) fully implemented; what other screening units are being considered; what the (A) longest and (B) average time is for which an individual has been waiting for a screening appointment; what the new procedures are which are to be embedded in the service; when she expects to be able to estimate the cost of the reorganisation and consequent additional cost; from which budget the costs will be met; and if she will make a statement. [127576]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 15 March 2007]: This is a local matter. However, the trust is currently working towards the completion of detailed plans to reopen the service during April. The service has been subject to an external review by the national breast screening service quality assurance team. The implementation of all the recommendations arising from the review continues to form a key part of the planning process. The trust will be able to confirm the precise arrangements for resuming the service after the review team has completed its work and is expected to have happened by the end of March.

Plans for clearing the backlog are currently being developed as part of the overall planning process to reopen the service. Preliminary contacts have been made with other breast screening units in London to assess the potential for contracting additional capacity from other providers to assist with clearing the backlog.

A full action plan is currently being drawn up for the recommencement of screening services. This will be completed and implemented once the outcome of the external review is known. The full plan is expected to be in place by the end of March.

Patients currently wait an average of three years to be screened in line with national standards. All women currently due for an appointment will have to wait an additional three months due to the temporary closure of the unit.

A number of new procedures are being introduced to ensure the efficient and safe running of the unit in the future, including:

implementation of a comprehensive framework for the management of quality in the breast screening service.

right results guidelines—this deals with the initial suspension issue of ensuring women who have had a normal mammogram are re-invited for an appointment when they mention other possible symptoms during their appointment.

It is important to note that the temporary suspension of the service was not due to financial considerations. However, the additional financial costs for resuming the service will depend on the outcome and recommendations of the quality assurance review. It is therefore not possible to make an estimate of the costs at this time.

The primary care trusts and the trust are in ongoing discussion as to how the costs will be shared between the organisations.

Ophthalmology: Training

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the merits of funding continuing education training for dispensing opticians. [127301]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 15 March 2007]: The national health service provides a contribution to the cost of continuing education and training for professions whose income derives in part from providing NHS services. Under deregulatory changes approved by Parliament in 1986, the NHS provides optical vouchers to certain eligible groups to assist in buying glasses or contact lenses, but the dispensing of glasses is carried out on a private basis. The Department considers that these arrangements work well in promoting choice and access to services and that it would be anomalous to use public funds to make continuing education and training payments to health care professionals who do not provide services under contract to the NHS.

Patient Choice Schemes: Surveys

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors were taken into account in choosing Ipsos MORI to provide the NHS's GP patient survey into hospital choice. [123118]

Andy Burnham: Ipsos MORI was chosen in line with the Department's procurement guidelines.

Patients: Telephones

Mrs. Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bedside patient telephone units are provided by hospitals in each primary care trust in England. [123428]

Andy Burnham: This information is not collected on a primary care trust basis. However, information is available for strategic health authorities (SHAs).

The number of operational bedside television and telephone units, per SHA is shown in the table.

Peyronie's Disease: Medical Treatments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she has provided to NHS trusts on the recommended treatment for Peyronie's disease; [126255]

(2) which NHS trusts will provide implants as treatment for Peyronie's disease. [126256]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has not provided national health service trusts with advice on the treatment of Peyronie's disease. Treatment options will depend on the severity of the disease, and can include the insertion of an implant for the most severe cases.

Information on which trusts provide implants as treatment for Peyronie's disease is not collected.

Pregnant Women: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women in Lancashire failed to have ante-natal check-ups in each of the last five years. [125742]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not held centrally.

Primary Care Trusts: Voluntary Organisations

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the performance of primary care trusts in implementing the compact with voluntary organisations in their area. [125290]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2002, the Department wrote to all national health service organisations in England asking them to sign up to, or be working towards, a geographically relevant local compact by 31 March 2004. Data to confirm the extent to which this was achieved are not available centrally (although anecdotal evidence would suggest that progress has not been uniform).

I made a fresh commitment to the principles of the compact on 1 December 2006 in a joint statement with Stuart Etherington, Chief Executive of the National Council for Voluntary Organisations (NCVO). In addition, following the report of the Third Sector Commissioning Task Force last July, the "Commissioning Framework for Health and Wellbeing", published for consultation on 6 March, reflects the principles of the compact in positioning the third sector as an important contributor to the commissioning and provision of high quality, responsive services, and promoting a fair playing field for all providers.

Psychiatry: Private Sector

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what payments (a) her Department and (b) the NHS made to the Priory Group and its subsidiaries in each year since 2000. [125942]

Caroline Flint: The Department has made no payments to the Priory Hospitals Group in the period April 2002 and February 2007. Information relating to earlier years is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

We do not hold a list of all the subsidiaries of the Priory Group but the Department have not made payments to any of the clinics listed on the Priory Group webpage.

Information relating to payments by the NHS is not held by the Department.

Royal Surrey County Hospital

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pieces of correspondence were received by her Department on the subject of the future of the Royal Surrey hospital during (a) November 2006, (b) December 2006 and (c) January 2007. [123182]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The numbers of letters received by the Department concerning the future of the Royal Surrey hospital, in the period 1 November 2006 to 30 January 2007 inclusive are as follows.

Month	Pieces of correspondence received
November 2006	1,243
December 2006	374
January 2007	118

Social Services

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which inspection regimes monitor local authorities' activities in social care. [124531]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) monitors and regulates local authorities' regulated social care services and local authorities' performance in delivering their adult social services functions. Councils' performance in delivering social services for children are monitored through joint area reviews and annual performance assessments, led by Ofsted and in conjunction with CSCI.

In addition, some inspections are run jointly with the Healthcare Commission, the Housing Inspectorate or the Audit Commission.

All assessments of council performance in social care feed into the comprehensive performance assessment, led by the Audit Commission.

The responsibility for assessing councils' provision of regulated children's social care services will pass to Ofsted on 1 April.

CSCI publishes comprehensive performance assessments and reports on local authorities on its website at www.csci.org.uk.

Sunscreens

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will commission research into the relationship between the cost of sunscreen and the prevalence of its use. [120489]

Caroline Flint: The Department has no plans at present to commission such research. SunSmart, the national skin cancer prevention and sun protection campaign, run by Cancer Research United Kingdom on behalf of the UK Health Departments recommends:

spend time in the shade between 11 and 3;

make sure you never burn;

aim to cover up with a hat, t-shirt and sunglasses;

remember to take extra care with children; and then use factor 15+ sunscreen or higher.

Surgery: Foreign Workers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many visiting surgeons operated in the NHS in each of the past five years for which figures are available, broken down by (a) surgeons' country of origin, (b) type of operations conducted and (c) employing hospital. [119012]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Surgery: Out-patients

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of outpatient operations were cancelled in each NHS Trust area in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [126479]

Andy Burnham: Data are collected on the number of last minute cancellations, where a hospital cancels a patient for non-clinical reasons on the day the patient is due to be admitted or after arrival in hospital, or on the day of surgery.

Warneford Meadow

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for the future of Warneford Meadow in Oxford. [127920]

Caroline Flint: It has been agreed that ownership of Warneford Meadow will transfer from the Secretary of State for Health to the local health economy. It is a matter for the local national health service to determine how best to use their resources to meet local health needs.

Written Questions

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to answer questions (a) 119012, (b) 119018, (c) 119016, (d) 119017 and (e) 119009 on the treatment of Welsh patients in English hospitals tabled by the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham. [128358]

Andy Burnham: Answers have been given today.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 20 March 2007

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Members: Allowances

Mr. Doran: To ask the Leader of the House whether the Members Estimate Committee has drawn up a detailed proposal for a communications allowance for hon. Members to assist in the work of communicating with the public on parliamentary business in accordance with the Resolution of 1 November 2006. [128315]

Mr. Straw: The Members Estimate Committee's report on the 'Communications Allowance' was published yesterday as House of Commons Paper number 319.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Internally Displaced Persons

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his most recent estimate is of the number of internally-displaced people in Afghanistan; and what assessment he has made of recent trends in that number. [127067]

Hilary Benn: The Government of Afghanistan (GoA) and the UN monitor the number of internally displaced persons (IDPs) across Afghanistan. According to the United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) most recent assessment, conducted in early 2007, the estimated figure for long-standing IDPs in Afghanistan is some 130,000. Around 85 per cent. of these are located in four settlements in the south of the country.

DFID is not directly involved in making such assessments, but monitors UN/GoA figures closely. We are most closely involved with IDPs in Helmand, where last year the UN estimated that around 2,800 families had been displaced. The UK Government responded to this by providing food aid and essential items like soap and blankets for 3,000 internally displaced families. This aid was distributed by the GoA.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128256]

Mr. Thomas: DFID currently uses Royal Mail for the majority of its mail. In addition, there is also an overnight delivery service which transports various items including mail between DFID's two headquarters in London and East Kilbride, Scotland; this service is provided by TNT. Most items sent overseas go via the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Bag Service. A small quantity of mail is sent by various commercial courier companies such as DDI, Churchill's, DHL and Initial City Link.

Developing Countries: Air Pollution

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make it his policy to raise the matter of the impact of indoor air pollution in the developing world at the UN Commission on Sustainable Development in New York in April. [128141]

Mr. Thomas: The 15th Session of the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development (CSD 15) will take place in New York from 30 April to 11 May 2007. The four main themes this year are; Energy for Sustainable Development, Air Pollution/Atmosphere, Industrial Development and Climate Change.

The UK is working with the current EU presidency to agree EU priorities for CSD 15, led by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) with the support of DFID. These include reducing indoor air pollution due to the use of basic biomass fuels by households in developing countries for cooking and heating. The use of basic biomass arises from the lack of access to reliable, affordable and clean energy supplies. We will continue efforts to ensure this concern is included in the formal EU position and raised at CSD 15.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to tackle deaths in the developing world caused by indoor air pollution. [128142]

Mr. Thomas: Indoor air pollution is a considerable health hazard for approximately 2.4 billion people around the world relying on poorly designed wood, dung and coal burning stoves for their cooking and heating. DFID has funded research into the problem, with a current £253,000 programme due to end in July 2007. This is being carried out by Practical Action, a UK based non-governmental organisation active in many developing countries.

While raising awareness of the health risks may change behaviour to reduce exposure to smoke, the best solution is to improve access to reliable, affordable and clean energy supplies. DFID is supporting international efforts and programmes to improve access, including the EU Energy Initiative for Poverty Eradication and Sustainable Development (EUEI), the World Bank's Energy Sector Management Assistance Programme (ESMAP) and the Global Village Energy Partnership (GVEP).

We are working with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) to ensure indoor pollution is raised at the forthcoming 15th Session of the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development (CSD 15) taking place in New York from 30 April to 11 May 2007.

Developing Countries: Water

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to encourage the use of reed-bed technology as a means of tackling water problems in the developing world. [127168]

Hilary Benn: Water shortages exist in many countries, and there is a risk of water pollution from human activities. Technologies for sanitation and wastewater management for specific situations are recommended on the basis of individual merits, and with the agreement of partners, taking account of local technical, financial, economic, social, and other considerations.

The use of Gravel Bed Hydroponic (GBH) reed beds, conventional reed beds or constructed wetlands for wastewater treatment has been the subject of various DFID funded research projects over the last 20 years.

For instance, from 1991 to 1995, DFID funded research into the use of reed beds to treat domestic and industrial wastewater in Egypt. Teams of scientists and engineers in the UK (University of Portsmouth) and Egypt (Suez Canal University) built, monitored and evaluated the operational performance of constructed wetlands as an appropriate technology for semi-arid, developing countries. The research did not provide clear evidence that reed beds were the most appropriate wastewater treatment option, and showed that industrial wastes resulted in erratic performance efficiency.

The outputs of successful research and similar projects are promoted through dissemination channels such as our resource centre network and websites. These technologies have also been promoted in DFID programmes where appropriate. One in Bangladesh in collaboration with WaterAid has seen the use of reed bed technology in the urban environment evidenced.

DFID Central Research Department is currently considering whether to develop a water and sanitation 'Research into Use' programme to promote the adoption of technologies generated through research. Such a programme might analyse the potential of outputs and fund uptake promotion of those technologies with greatest potential.

Mozambique: Floods

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid he is making available to the survivors of the recent flooding and cyclone in Mozambique. [128162]

Hilary Benn: DFID's total contribution to the relief effort in response to both the recent flooding and cyclone in Mozambique stands at £1.09 million. This is made up of donations to Save the Children, Oxfam, the Red Cross and CARE.

Zimbabwe: Overseas Aid

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what steps his Department is taking to assist those who have been affected by economic collapse in Zimbabwe; [127894]

(2) what recent representations his Department has received on the withholding of aid from Zimbabwe due to that country's political situation. [127895]

Hilary Benn: DFID has received no representations on the withholding of aid to Zimbabwe. The UK does not give direct funding to the Government of Zimbabwe. All DFID's funding is channelled through NGOs and UN agencies, much of it programmed jointly with other donors. We do not believe in cutting direct assistance to poor Zimbabweans and thus punishing them further for their unaccountable Government.

The UK is one of the largest bilateral donors of humanitarian support to Zimbabwe, supporting over 1.5 million of the poorest people. Over the last five years, DFID has spent approximately £143 million in Zimbabwe, including over £33 million in the last financial year. This funding prioritises HIV/AIDS, food insecurity and supporting orphans and vulnerable children. DFID also supports civil society organisations to promote better governance and human rights. Our current programmes will help ensure that an additional 30,000 people receive anti-retroviral treatment, will provide health care for around 350,000 children, promote food security in urban and rural areas and assist extremely vulnerable displaced people.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces: Dental Health

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment was made of the oral health of recruits to each of the armed services in each year for which records are available. [126427]

Derek Twigg: The Defence Dental Services (DDS) conduct an oral health assessment of all recruits to the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force. This assessment is of the oral fitness status and initial treatment requirement for each individual and is recorded in the individual's dental record. HQ DDS hold a record of individual fitness rates for recruits from 2004. The table shows the percentage of recruits from each service since records began who were:

1—Fit

2—Fit for role (dental work may be needed but no disease present)

3—Unfit

Armed Forces: Expenditure

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure was on each of the armed services in each of the last 15 years. [127572]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2145W, to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Paul Flynn). Earlier accounts are contained within the MOD's Appropriation Accounts, copies of which can be found in the Library of the House. Budgetary structure and accounting treatment has changed progressively across the period in question.

Armed Forces: Voluntary Organisations

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what his Department's charging regime is for events organised by charities when the main beneficiary is a services charity; [125567]

(2) on which occasions his Department waived fees for charity events organised by services charities in the financial years 2004-05 and 2005-06; and what the total amount of fees waived was; [125568]

(3) what charges his Department made on events organised by services charities for the financial years 2004-05 and 2005-06. [125569]

Derek Twigg: The MOD is required to recover the full cost of the services or facilities it provides to external bodies. HM Treasury rules for all Departments state that there are no special arrangements for the treatment of charities whether services or other.

The information on charges made for events organised by services charities is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Army: Costs

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the running costs were of the housing provided by his Department to the (a) Adjutant General, (b) Chief of the General Staff and (c) members of the Army Board in the last 12 months; [118182]

(2) what estimate he has made of the market value of the housing provided by his Department to the (a) Chief of the General Staff, (b) Adjutant General and (c) members of the Army Board. [118184]

Derek Twigg: The Army Board consists of the Secretary of State for Defence, the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the Minister of State for Defence Equipment and Support, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence, the Chief of the General Staff, the Second Permanent Under-Secretary of State for Defence, Commander in Chief Land Command, Adjutant General, Assistant Chief of the General Staff, the Director General of Land Equipment, Master General of the Ordnance and General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland).

Civilian members of the Army Board are not entitled to occupy defence accommodation.

The following table shows the latest available (financial year 2005-06) running costs for MOD provided housing.

	CGS	AG	GOC NI	Post CinC Land

n/a = not applicable

In addition, ACGS occupies substitute single service accommodation rented from a private landlord at a cost to the MOD of £1,434.38 per month.

All service personnel living in accommodation personally pay charges appropriate to the size and condition of the property they occupy, deducted at source from their salaries.

The houses occupied by the Adjutant General and CinC Land are rented properties. The house occupied by CGS is leased from the Crown estate. The MOD has not therefore assessed the market value of these properties.

The house occupied by GOC NI is owned by the MOD and is located within a barracks behind the wire. The current asset register value for the house is £66,306 but this does not represent the market value. No assessment of market value has been carried out.

Army: Manpower

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many members of the armed forces are assigned to the household of the (a) Adjutant General and (b) Chief of the General Staff; [118180]

(2) how many members of the armed forces are assigned to the households of members of the Army Board. [118183]

Derek Twigg: The Army Board consists of the Secretary of State for Defence, the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the Minister of State for Defence Equipment and Support, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence, the Chief of the General Staff, the Second Permanent Under-Secretary of State for Defence, Commander in Chief Land Command, Adjutant General, Assistant Chief of the General Staff, the Director General of Land Equipment, Master General of the Ordnance and General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland).

Of the 12 members of the Army Board, four have members of the armed forces assigned to their households; the Chief of the General Staff has two, Commander in Chief Land has two, the Adjutant General has one, and the General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland) has two.

These figures do not include drivers or any other position related staff.

Army: Northern Ireland

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) general service soldiers, (b) full-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service, (c) part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service, (d) full-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment and (e) part-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment are automatically entitled to be members of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme. [128623]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: General service soldiers and full-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service are automatically entitled to be members of one of the Armed Forces Pension Schemes. Full-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment had an automatic entitlement to be members of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme 1975 (AFPS 75). Part-time members of the Royal Irish Home Service are not entitled to be members of one of the Armed Forces Pension Schemes. Similarly, part-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment were not entitled to be members of the AFPS 75 Scheme.

The policy in relation to the non-pensionable status of part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment is currently being challenged through an industrial tribunal.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) general service soldiers, (b) full-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service, (c) part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service, (d) full-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment and (e) part-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment contribute directly from their pay into the Armed Forces Pension Scheme. [128629]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: None of these groups make a contribution from their pay into the Armed Forces Pension Scheme. When setting pay levels for all personnel up to Brigadier and equivalents, the Armed Forces Pay Review Body (AFPRB) looks at a range of factors in their consideration of overall pay comparability. Pension is just one of these factors. The AFPRB then makes an adjustment to comparator earnings to reflect the value of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) benefits compared with the pension benefits of comparator employees.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what benefits have been provided since 1977 by the Armed Forces Pension Scheme to (a) general service soldiers, (b) full-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service, (c) part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service, (d) full-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment and (e) part-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment and the (i) widows, (ii) widowers and (iii) children of such soldiers. [128631]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The Army Pensions Warrant 1977 contains details of all the pension benefits provided under the Armed Forces Pension Scheme 1975 (AFPS 75). SI 438/2005 and SI 717/2006 (Amendment) contain details of all the pension benefits provided under the Armed Forces Pension Scheme 2005 (AFPS 05). These have already been placed in the Library. However, part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service, part-time soldiers who served with the Ulster Defence Regiment and their dependants are not entitled to pensions under the Armed Forces Pension Schemes.

The policy in relation to the non-pensionable status of part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment is being challenged through an industrial tribunal.

Cluster Munitions

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the outcomes of the Oslo conference on cluster munitions were; how his Department plans to implement the agreement reached at the conference; and if he will make a statement. [124539]

Mr. Ingram: The UK supported the Oslo Declaration, committing us to work towards a new legally binding instrument on certain types of cluster munition that cause unacceptable harm to civilians. The UK's interpretative statement at Oslo explains how this fits with our national policy. We will continue to pursue the intent agreed at Oslo with all the users and producers through the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons (CCW) and other relevant forums.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what he expects the effects of the outcome of the Oslo conference on cluster munitions to be on the Government's maintenance of stockpiles of (a) dumb and (b) not-dumb cluster munitions; and if he will make a statement. [124540]

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's policy is on the use of the UK's stockpiled cluster bombs, following the Oslo conference, broken down by type of cluster bomb. [127194]

Mr. Ingram: On 4 December 2006 we stated in a Written Ministerial Statement the UK position on cluster munitions and that we would withdraw dumb variants by the middle of the next decade. On 15 December, in debate in the House of Lords, we explained that we were examining the possibility of bringing this date forward. We have now completed our assessment and, as we stated in a Written Ministerial Statement on 20 March 2007, we will now withdraw our two dumb cluster munition variants, the RBL755 and MLRS M26, with immediate effect. We shall retain our other cluster munition, the ERBS M85, which we do not deem to be a dumb cluster munition.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 23 February 2007, Official Report, column 960W, on bombs, what he expects the effects of the outcome of the Oslo conference on cluster munitions to be on the Government's procurement of the (a) guided multiple launch rocket system and (b) the Brimstone advanced anti-armour weapon; and if he will make a statement. [124541]

Mr. Ingram: The outcome of the Oslo conference will not affect procurement of the guided multiple launch rocket system and the Brimstone advanced anti-armour weapon.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 23 February 2007, Official Report, column 960W, on the Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO), which individuals were sent a copy of the March 2004 DESO staff directory and were not employees of defence industry companies. [128396]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 March 2007]: It is not our normal practice to disclose the names of individuals with whom we have communicated in the course of departmental business. We consider such information to be personal data, which the individuals concerned can reasonably expect that we would neither publish nor otherwise disclose to a third party.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many copies of the 2005 edition of the Defence Export Services Organisation staff directory were distributed to individuals outside his Department; and what categories of people were given copies of the directory. [128397]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The information requested forms part of a witness statement submitted by the Ministry of Defence to the Information Tribunal, which will next month hear a case under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 concerning the staff directory of the Defence Export Services Organisation. I will write to the hon. Member after the tribunal has delivered its decision and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departments: Appeals

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many independent bodies existed to hear appeals on decisions made by his Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many there have been in 2006-07 to date. [121702]

Derek Twigg: There are two independent bodies whose function is to hear appeals on decisions made by the Ministry of Defence. The Reserve Forces Appeals Tribunal, created in 1997, hears appeals against call-out for service, or against the level of financial assistance to be provided after call-out, lodged by reservists or their employers. The Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objectors, established in 1970, hears (but does not decide) appeals from service personnel whose application to retire or to resign a commission on the grounds of conscience has not been accepted by the service authorities.

Departments: Complaints

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many complaints were received by his Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many have been received in 2006-07 to date; [121701]

(2) how many staff worked in dedicated complaints units in his Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many have done so in 2006-07 to date. [121703]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence does not keep a central record of complaints, and to gather this data would involve disproportionate cost.

Complaints are generally dealt with by subject-matter experts alongside other correspondence on the same subject. There are, however, two teams whose main role is dealing with complaints. One handles internal reviews of responses to FOI requests, and subsequent appeals to the Information Commissioner and the Information Tribunal. Before the FOI Act came fully into force in January 2005, similar work was carried out under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. The second team deals with complaints about service flying in the lower airspace. The strengths of these teams are shown in the following table.

Strength in full-time equivalent staff of complaints teams

Team	1997-98	2001-02	2005-06	2006-07
FOI appeals team	0	1	3	3.5
Low flying complaints unit	5	5	4	4

Departments: Hilsea

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what basis his Department has asked for a compliant bid from potential developers for the redundant Ministry of Defence site at Matapan Road, Hilsea; and if he will make a statement. [127448]

Derek Twigg: Formal tenders are an appropriate method of selling surplus public sector assets because they create a level playing field for all prospective purchasers. They provide transparency and certainty of bids and so avoid the potential difficulties sometimes associated with informal negotiations. In this case the site had the benefit of outline planning permission and agreed SI 06 contributions and thus was suitable for sale by formal tender. It was advertised through Defence Estates' marketing agents, Drivers Jonas.

The bidding guidelines and legal conditions of sale made it clear that, in order to be compliant, all bids were to be submitted on the appropriate 'Form of Offer' with a 10 per cent. deposit and on an unconditional basis only. Moreover, the conditions of sale stated that the Ministry of Defence reserved the right to disregard any tender which was not submitted in accordance with the conditions of sale including any marked subject to contract.

Ex-servicemen

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when a veterans' card will be available; what the attributes of the proposed veterans' card are; why there has been a delay in producing a veterans' card; and what companies and organisations he has met to discuss the production of the card. [119235]

Derek Twigg: The Department has received recent approaches from two companies—EDS and Forces Online—proposing the introduction of a veterans' card. I have met with EDS and officials have met with both companies to explore the possible benefits. We have separately consulted ex-service organisations to seek their views on the merits of such a card; their clear conclusion was that there was no significant tangible benefit to be had from a card and that the idea was not therefore worth pursuing. In the light of these discussions, we have no current plans to introduce a veterans' card but will keep the matter under review.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance his Department provides to ensure that skills and qualifications obtained by personnel during their period in the armed forces can be utilised and applied in civilian life; and if he will take steps to improve the assistance available to ex-service personnel in this regard. [127362]

Derek Twigg: The provision of opportunities for service personnel to gain nationally recognised civilian qualifications is an important component of the MOD's Personnel Strategy and is detailed in "Defence Policy for the Accreditation of Education, Training and Experience", which aims to have military training, education and experience, where appropriate, accredited against nationally recognised qualifications. Furthermore, the priorities set in this policy are aligned with those in the Government's National Skills Strategy, focusing particularly on qualifications in literacy and numeracy and in wider employability skills, such as NVQs and Apprenticeships, but also accreditation leading to higher education qualifications, including Foundation Degrees.

Although the attainment of the operational requirement remains the primary goal of military training, accreditation to civilian qualifications has an obvious benefit to recruiting, retention and resettlement. The success of this policy is such that, in the last financial year, personnel in the armed services gained:

in excess of 11,000 NVQs or other Level 2 qualifications; over 8,000 apprenticeships at either Levels 2 or 3; and 500 completed Foundation Degrees.

In addition, staff are constantly seeking further opportunities with Awarding Bodies to extend the linkage of military training, education and experience to appropriate civilian qualifications.

However, it is more difficult for Awarding Bodies to validate, in terms of quality assurance and syllabus content, military training and education that was undertaken by serving and ex-serving personnel a number of years ago and thus provide retrospective accreditation opportunities. For those who have left the services with no or very low level qualifications, there are opportunities with local colleges and training providers to gain civilian qualifications funded through schemes such as the Learning and Skills Council's "Train to Gain".

Financial assistance is also provided to support service personnel in gaining nationally-recognised qualifications for their own personal development through the Armed Forces Learning Credits Schemes. First, under the Standard Learning Credit Scheme, service personnel are eligible to claim from public funds 80 per cent. of course fees, up to a maximum of £175 per financial year. Secondly, the Enhanced Learning Credit (ELC) Scheme (introduced in 2004) provides larger scale support to pay for higher level academic and vocational learning at Level 3 or above on the National Qualifications Framework. The claim limit is also 80 per cent. of the annual fee (the claimant making a minimum 20 per cent. personal contribution to demonstrate their commitment). Individuals can draw down a maximum of £1,000 per annum on three occasions after serving four years from registration, and this rises to £2,000 per annum having served eight years after registration. Since the introduction of the ELC Scheme, over 225,000 personnel have registered with 16,500 claims made. While the majority of those registered have not yet made a claim, many of the claims are made in the last two years of service and are used alongside individuals' resettlement provision. Moreover, claims under the ELC Scheme can be made up to 10 years after leaving the armed forces.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many sorties British personnel have participated in flying in (a) SAMA CH2000 and (b) SB7L Seeker aircraft flown by Iraqi pilots; [127024]

(2) how many sorties have been flown in support of British ground operations by Iraqi air force aircraft; [127025]

(3) whether helicopters supplied by the UK to the Iraqi air force will be available to support British ground operations. [127028]

Mr. Ingram: While some UK personnel have flown in Seeker aircraft this is not a regular occurrence and no record of such activity is kept. In the last two months some 70 sorties have been flown in support of British ground operations by Iraqi air force aircraft. No helicopters have been supplied by the UK to the Iraqi air force.

Living Accommodation

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the procedures are for assessing the cleanliness and habitability of armed forces personnel housing before a new tenant moves in; and how many complaints were lodged upon moving in about unclean or ill-equipped housing in each year since 2004. [103744]

Derek Twigg: I apologise for the delay in replying to the hon. Member's question. For Great Britain the procedures for assessing the cleanliness and habitability of service families accommodation (SFA) are laid down in the MOD's Housing Management Manual. A number of separate checks for levels of cleanliness and inspections on equipment are carried out prior to a service family moving into SFA. The standards are set out in the contracts with the service providers for SFA and incorporated in the Guide to Living in Service Family Accommodation.

In England and Wales, there are more than 20,000 move-ins each year. Prior to the rolling-out of the Housing Prime Contract (HPC) in 2006, there were no separate complaints recorded for the level of cleanliness. Under the HPC, in 2006 there were 573 separately recorded complaints about cleanliness. This level of complaints was due to the early problems experienced with the HPC. There is no separate recording process for ill-equipped housing.

In Scotland, houses are maintained through a regional prime contract. There are some 1,500 move-ins each year in Scotland and the number of overall complaints in Scotland were three in 2004, four in 2005 and two in 2006.

Marines: Criminal Records

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Marines were allowed to return to the service in 2006 having served a prison sentence. [128384]

Derek Twigg: In 2006 14 Royal Marines were subject to military detention at Military Corrective Training Centre Colchester and all continued in service following completion of sentence. Additionally, three Royal Marines were imprisoned following conviction by civilian courts. One of these was retained in service on completion of sentence.

Puma Helicopters: Procurement

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce his decision on the proposal to acquire eight Puma AS 330 SI helicopters from Eurocopter; and if he will make a statement. [126042]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 12 March 2007]: We are considering a number of options to increase the flexibility and capability of our helicopter fleet.

Warships

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what names have been selected by the Ships' Names and Badges Committee for the future (a) seventh and eighth Type 45 destroyers and (b) the fourth Astute class submarine. [128580]

Mr. Ingram: No names have been selected by the Ships' Names and Badges Committee for the seventh and eighth Type 45 destroyers. The name for the fourth Astute class submarine has been approved by Her Majesty the Queen and an official announcement will be made once the order has been placed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Smoking

Mr. Doran: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission whether the Commission has decided where smoking will be permitted on the House of Commons part of the parliamentary estate after 1 July 2007. [128314]

Nick Harvey: The Health Act 2006 introduces a ban on smoking in workplaces and enclosed or substantially enclosed public places from 1 July 2007. While the Act does not formally apply on the parliamentary estate, the Commission, on the advice of the Administration Committee, has decided that the House should comply with the principles of the legislation, as it is not desirable that those who work on or visit the parliamentary estate should be treated differently in this respect from those in other workplaces and public places. The Commission recognises, however, that many who work on the estate are unavoidably present for long periods, particularly when the House is sitting. It is therefore desirable to make reasonable provision for those who wish to smoke to do so, provided that the health and safety of other users of the estate is not adversely affected.

With these principles in mind, the Commission has decided that smoking should cease to be permitted from 1 July 2007 in all internal areas of the House of Commons estate, including in bars and private offices. From that date smoking will, however, be permitted in four designated external areas: the Terrace, Commons Court (North West corner), North Terrace (between Portcullis House and Norman Shaw South), and in a designated area on the west side of Canon Row courtyard. Cigarette receptacles will be provided in these areas. "No Smoking" signs will be displayed at entrances to the buildings. I understand that the House of Lords Administration and Works Committee will report its recommendations shortly on the smoking policy for the Lords part of the parliamentary estate.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Wages Board

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is the Government's policy to retain the Agricultural Wages Board. [126010]

Barry Gardiner: Retention of the Agricultural Wages Board (AWB) is a Labour party manifesto commitment. This was re-affirmed by my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby, South (Margaret Beckett) at the Labour party conference in September 2005. We considered the future operation of the AWB before Christmas and agreed that no changes should be made at the present time.

Departments: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Electricity and Gas (Energy Efficiency Obligations) Order 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126615]

Ian Pearson: The Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) for the Electricity and Gas (Energy Efficiency Obligations) Order 2004 estimated that the cost to energy suppliers of meeting their energy efficiency obligations for 2005-08 would be around £1,200 million. If passed on in full to their domestic customers, this would be no more than about £9 per fuel bill per customer per year. We do not anticipate any recurring costs for energy suppliers (other than complying with subsequent obligations). On average costs will be more than outweighed by the benefits to householders in terms of reduced fuel bills or increased comfort from the installation of energy efficiency measures. The RIA estimated that overall lifetime-discounted savings would amount to a net present value of around £1,000 million by 2010, £3,400 million by 2020 and £5,400 million over the lifetime of the measures. Ofgem has estimated that its direct costs of administration for the three-year programme will be around £1.2 million.

DEFRA is committed to regulating better and has a target of a 25 per cent. reduction in administrative burdens. The implementation of a more risk based approach to regulation, in conjunction with tougher penalties combined with improved effectiveness via focus on outcomes, and simplification where possible, is fully consistent with this.

Lighting

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the costs of (a) manufacturing and (b) disposing of (i) an energy friendly light bulb and (ii) an incandescent light bulb. [127592]

Ian Pearson: The Department does not hold information on the costs of manufacturing and disposal of either energy friendly or bayonet light bulbs. This commercial information is held by the companies concerned.

Sewage

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he plans to implement his plans to transfer responsibility for private sewers to sewerage companies; and if he will make a statement. [128606]

Ian Pearson: I announced on 22 February the Government's decision to proceed with the transfer to water and sewerage companies of private sewers and lateral drains in England draining to the public sewerage system. This offers the most comprehensive solution to the problems faced by householders whose properties are connected to a private sewer or lateral drain.

The Government will now consult on a range of ways transfer can be implemented. The consultation will also be used to examine how to prevent the proliferation of new private sewers, in order to prevent the reoccurrence of existing problems. The responses to consultation will inform the drafting of regulations to provide for Water and Sewerage Companies (WaSCs) to make 'schemes' to effect transfer. The earliest date these regulations could be in force is likely to be summer 2008.

TRANSPORT

East Coast Railway Line

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what priority has been given to the redevelopment of existing station facilities in the advice given to bidders for the East Coast Mainline franchise. [128600]

Mr. Tom Harris: Bidders for the InterCity East Coast franchise have been advised of the need to enhance station facilities. These include improving facilities for cyclists, additional car parking spaces and improvements to accessibility for passengers to and from stations. An important dimension is the need for security at stations for passengers and staff through the retention of the present secure station accreditation at all stations where the franchisee is the station facility owner (SFO).

The plan for improving station facilities is given equal weighting to other plans required from the bidding parties.

Galileo Project

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) which countries have put in bids for the Galileo satellite navigation project; [123596]

(2) what progress has been made at a European level on the Galileo satellite navigation project. [123597]

Dr. Ladyman: The European GNSS Supervisory Authority (GSA) is the EU agency that will own Galileo on behalf of the Community and be responsible for regulating and overseeing it. It has been set up in Brussels initially and is currently being staffed. Eleven member states are bidding to provide it with a permanent location: Belgium, the Czech Republic, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Malta, the Netherlands, Slovenia, Spain, and the UK—with a bid for Cardiff. Germany has not made a decision on the location of the GSA a priority during its current presidency of the Union.

The technical development of the system is a joint project of the European Commission and the European Space Agency. Contracts have been let to Surrey Satellite Technology Ltd. for a test satellite, successfully launched in December 2005, and to European Satellite Navigation Industries for another test satellite and for the first four operational satellites that will validate the system.

It is intended that a private sector concessionaire will manage and operate the Galileo system under a 20 year concession, in a public-private partnership (PPP). The GSA has been negotiating with a consortium bidding for this role. The Commission target is for the contract to be signed by end 2007. Full operational capability of the Galileo system is currently expected in 2011-12.

Lighthouses: Ireland

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the basis is in international law for the UK's contribution to the Irish lights fund. [127962]

Dr. Ladyman: Regulation 13 of Chapter V of the International Convention on the Safety of Life at Sea places a general responsibility on contracting Governments for the adequate provision of aids to navigation in and around each of their respective coastal areas. Under Part VIII of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, responsibility for the provision of marine aids to navigation has been given to the general lighthouse authorities (GLAs). These are Trinity House Lighthouse Service, the Northern Lighthouse Board and the Commissioners of Irish Lights, which provides aids to navigation around the coast of the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland.

Under the Merchant Shipping Act, the expenses incurred by all three GLAs are paid out of the general lighthouse fund (GLF), into which are paid light dues collected in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland. The GLF is administered by the Secretary of State. Under an agreement signed in 1985, the Irish Government agreed to contribute to the provision of aids to navigation in the Republic. There is no contribution from the UK Government to the GLF nor is there a separate Irish lights fund.

Official Cars

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 381W, on official cars, how many Cabinet Ministers have chosen the (a) Jaguar and (b) Prius. [128092]

Dr. Ladyman: Ministerial official cars are provided by the Government Car and Despatch Agency. Currently, six Cabinet Ministers use the diesel powered Jaguar XJ and five use the Toyota Prius.

Official Cars: Driving Offences

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving offences were committed by drivers while working for the Government Car and Despatch Agency in each year since 1997. [126905]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The Government Car and Despatch Agency conducts an annual inspection of all driving licences of its drivers. Any driver with six or more points on his or her licence is reminded that the maintenance of a valid licence is a requirement of the job.

Ports: Fees and Charges

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost, including harbour dues and pilotage costs, of access for ships to (a) British ports and (b) continental ports. [127963]

Dr. Ladyman: This Department has not carried out its own detailed assessment of these costs. In the United Kingdom, harbour dues and pilotage charges are set by individual harbours according to commercial decisions under their own harbour acts and under the Pilotage Act 1987. Harbour dues and pilotage charges in other countries are set similarly within their respective legislative and financial frameworks.

Ports: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the date was of each safety inspection carried out on a ship or an aircraft using a port or airport in Northern Ireland in the last three years for which figures are available; what the country of registration of the vessel or aircraft involved was in each case; and what the outcome was of the inspection in each case. [128131]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the countries of registration were of ships and aircraft using Northern Ireland's ports and airports in the last three years for which information is available. [128132] operated to any UK airport. Such information would be found from the aircraft movement logs that are maintained by individual airports.

Dr. Ladyman: The following list shows the various countries of registration of ships which used Northern Ireland's ports for the last 18 months. It is the only information available.

Railways: Bicycles

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of train services permit rail-users to take bicycles on board trains. [128164]

Mr. Tom Harris: All train operating companies (TOCs) permit the carriage of bikes. The Stansted Express carries only folding bikes and bikes flat packed for air travel. All other TOCs carry bikes though most have restrictions either on the number of bikes that can be carried or only carry folding bikes on some peak services.

This is in line with the Department's advice to TOCs that they carry bikes whenever possible in line with the cycling policy document first published by the former Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) in 2004 and since adopted by this Department.

We have asked Cycling England, our advisory body on cycling to carry out a review of how we might further improve the integration of bike and rail journeys in England.

Railways: Disabled

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been allocated for the Railways for All accessibility strategy; and if he will make a statement. [127998]

Mr. Tom Harris: £370 million has been allocated, up to 2015, to improve access at railway stations in Great Britain as part of the Railways for All strategy.

Railways: Taunton

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the reliability of (a) all train services from Taunton to Paddington and (b) the 7.07am train service from Taunton to Paddington in the last 12 months. [127845]

Mr. Tom Harris: In the year to 3 March 2007, the public performance measure moving annual average (PPM MAA) for First Great Western (FGW) train services as a whole was 83.3 per cent.[1] which is an increase of 0.6 per cent. on last year's performance. The Department for Transport does not keep separate records on the reliability of trains running from Taunton to Paddington.

A meeting has been held with FGW and Network Rail to assess performance and reliability. Joint action plans are in place between Network Rail and FGW to address performance trends and train reliability and these are monitored monthly.

Road Traffic

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many major trunk road schemes there have been to improve safety and improve traffic flow at junctions since 1997. [125988]

Dr. Ladyman: There have been eight major (i.e. over £5 million) trunk road schemes to improve safety and traffic flow at junctions since 1997. These are as follows:

Scheme	Scheme objective
A34 Chieveley/M4 Jct 13 Improvement	Congestion relief, safety improvement
A1 Stannington Junction	Safety improvement
A64 Colton Lane Grade Separated Junction	Safety improvement
A14 Rookery Crossroads Grade Separated Junction	Safety improvement
A63 Melton Grade Separated Junction	Safety improvement, congestion relief
A500 City Road and Stoke Junction Improvement	Improving journey times, congestion relief, safety improvement.
A30/A382 Merrymeet Junction	Congestion relief, safety improvement

Shipping: Registration

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the report for the Maritime and Coastguard Agency by Mr. Geoff Adam on the re-launch of the UK Shipping Register. [127964]

Dr. Ladyman: The report is a commercially sensitive document. At this time we do not consider it appropriate to release it publicly.

South West Trains: Overcrowding

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent research he has (a) initiated and (b) evaluated on (i) the level of overcrowding on key routes operated by South West Trains (main line) and (ii) projected levels of overcrowding in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [127603]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department only has access to data covering passengers in excess of capacity (PIXC), which applies to weekday commuter trains arriving in London between 7 am and 9.59 am and those departing London between 4 pm and 6.59 pm. Within the terms of its franchise agreement, Stagecoach South West Trains is measured against total capacity provided and not the PIXC measure.

The Office of Rail Regulation (ORR) publishes PIXC figures in its National Rail Trends publication, the most recent version covering 2005 was published on 5 July 2006.

The document is on the internet at the following address http://www.rail-reg.gov.uk/upload/pdf/294.pdf and has been made available in the Library of the House.

With regard to future demand, the Network Rail route utilisation strategy assumed a growth of 20 per cent. over 10 years. The Department, in letting the new South Western franchise, asked bidders to develop innovative means to manage the expected increase in demand.

Tolls

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he expects the road pricing or congestion charging pilots funded by the Transport Innovation Fund (a) to involve the use of CCTV and (b) to be integrated with the Police's National Auto Number Plate Recognition Data Centre. [124340]

Dr. Ladyman: The choice of systems and technology to be used for road pricing or congestion charging schemes funded by the Transport Innovation Fund will be a matter for local authorities implementing the pilot schemes. The Department has published "Guidance for Local Authorities TIF partnership", which advises local authorities on different technologies available and how they might deploy them. We expect schemes to be focused on tackling congestion.

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that rural issues are taken into account when decisions are made on any new road charging system. [128033]

Dr. Ladyman: No decisions have been taken on the introduction of a national road pricing scheme, or indeed on the design of any scheme. We are asking local authorities, in preparing proposals for local road pricing schemes, to assess the impacts on all groups so as to inform the scheme design.

TREASURY

Bank Notes

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of £5 notes in circulation; and what plans he has to increase the supply. [128438]

Ed Balls: The Bank of England is responsible for issuing banknotes in England and Wales. It estimates that on 28 February 2007 there were 220 million of its £5 notes in circulation with a total value of £1,100 million.

The Bank's policy is for supply of new notes each year to meet the banking system's demand. Therefore the Bank will increase supply in response to demand from the banking system.

Bank Notes: Greater London

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) £5, (b) £10 and (c) £20 notes are being stored in London by the Bank of England. [128437]

Ed Balls: The Bank of England's stocks of new notes stored in the UK on the 28 February 2007 are shown in the following table. For completeness, the figure for £50 notes is also included.

Denomination	Value	£ million Number of notes
£10	3,697.9	369.8
£20	8,553.9	427.7
£50	908.4	18.2

For security reasons the Bank does not disclose the locations of the notes in storage.

Birth Rate

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of (a) the effect of fluctuations in birth rates on economic growth over the past 40 years and (b) the likely effect of such fluctuations on growth over the next 40 years. [127991]

John Healey: The Government set out their assessment of the effect of demographic factors on economic growth over past cycles, and their projection for the medium term, in each Budget and pre-Budget report. The Government published long-term employment and GDP projections covering the period up to 2055 in the 2006 'Long-term public finance report'.

The Government's forward projections take into account previous demographic trends, including fluctuations in birth rates. In addition, the Government's long-term projections take into account future birth rates as given by the Government Actuary's Department's latest set of principal population projections.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what projection he has made of the number of births in England in each year until 2012. [128855]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 20 March 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question regarding what projection has been made of the number of births in England in each year until 2012. (128855)

The most recent projection of the number of births was published as part of the 2004-based national population projections published in October 2005. The information requested is available at:

http://www.gad.gov.uk/Population/2004/england/weng04cc.xls

The next (2006-based) national population projections are scheduled for publication in October 2007.

Child Tax Credit: ICT

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many child tax credit claims are currently unpaid because of software problems. [128858]

Dawn Primarolo: In circumstances where HM Revenue and Customs is unable automatically to pay claimants their full entitlement it will arrange for manual payments to be made.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the software problem is which has prevented payment of child tax credit from April 2006 to Mr. and Mrs. Symons of Verwood; [128859]

(2) when he expects to pay the child tax credit due to Mr. and Mrs. Symons of Verwood. [128860]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I laid before the House on 6 December 2006, Official Report, column 14-15WS.

HM Revenue and Customs will contact the hon. Member's constituents to discuss alternative arrangements to pay their child tax credit.

Construction Industry Scheme

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many temporary Construction Industry Scheme 4 cards were issued to migrant workers in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006; [128145]

(2) how many temporary Construction Industry Scheme 4 cards were issued in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [128146]

John Healey: The number of temporary Construction Industry Scheme 4 cards issued in recent years is shown in the following table.

2005-06	77,000

[1] Data for 2006-07 are incomplete

The number of temporary Construction Industry Scheme 4 cards issued to migrant workers is not available.

Departments: London Underground

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times he has travelled on the London underground on official business in the last 12 months. [128737]

John Healey: The Chancellor has travelled on the London underground on numerous occasions during the last year on official business, the most recent being last week. It is not our practice to set out the details.

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms are in place to ensure his Department's economical use of paper. [128001]

John Healey: The economical use of paper is part of the overall Waste Management Strategy. Under this strategy, staff are encouraged to use printers wisely, and recycling facilities are provided at every desktop.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many work permits were applied for by his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years. [127710]

John Healey: In recruiting overseas nationals, the Treasury follows the Civil Service Nationality Rules published by the Cabinet Office.

The Treasury applied for three work permits in 2006-07. Information for previous years is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

History: Curriculum

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the First Minister for Scotland on promoting British history in Scottish schools. [127816]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers are in constant contact with colleagues on a wide variety of issues, including with colleagues in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Income Tax

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much income tax was paid in the last year for which figures are available by individuals whose income did not exceed their tax free allowance; and what percentage was claimed back. [128165]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to identify how much income tax was paid by individuals on income below the personal allowance. However, the total amount of tax on savings income reclaimed by individuals is around £180 million per year.

Inheritance Tax

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households paid inheritance tax in each year since 1996-7. [128648]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of estates paying inheritance tax each year is published on the HM Revenue and Customs website at:

www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/tax receipts/table1-4.xls.

Inheritance Tax: Northern Ireland

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Northern Ireland paid inheritance tax in each of the last five years. [128386]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table shows the number of taxpaying estates where the domicile of the deceased was in Northern Ireland.

	Number of Northern Ireland estates paying inheritance tax
2000-01	600
2001-02	500
2002-03	500
2003-04	600
2004-05	500
2005-06	500

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in pay band 3 worked on the preparations of the original budget for the 2012 Olympics. [127978]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Fareham (Mr. Hoban) on 13 December 2006, Official Report, column 1198W.

Radio Frequencies: Licensing

Mr. Havard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what level of grant-in-aid has been agreed with Ofcom to undertake its spectrum management functions for 2007-08; and what spectrum auctions he expects Ofcom to undertake in 2007-08. [127673]

John Healey: £79 million of grant-in-aid has been agreed with Ofcom to undertake its spectrum management functions for 2007-08. There is a separate spending cap to cover awards of new spectrum and any costs of clearing spectrum.

The timetable for spectrum auctions is a matter for Ofcom as the independent regulator.

Revenue and Customs: Telephone Services

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the costs of (a) transferring 0845 codes for HM Revenue and Customs services to a freephone 0800 service and (b) using a system where the customer is informed of his or her place in the telephone queue system and the likely time their call will be answered; and if he will assess the merits of introducing such changes. [127105]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC keeps its policy and practice for handling telephone calls from customers through its centrally managed contact centre network under constant review. It remains HMRC current policy to operate customer facing helplines using an 0845 rather than a "freephone" 0800 prefix as the Department believes this strikes the right balance of cost between the customer and the public purse.

HMRC is however also keeping a close watch on proposals being taken forward by Ofcom to introduce a new range of non-geographic "030" numbers.

Rural Development Programme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what commitment his Department has made to funding for the Rural Development Programme. [128104]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials discuss a wide range of issues with their colleagues in other Departments as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

Schools: Cadets

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 8 January 2007, Official Report, column 326W, on school cadet forces, whether Sir Ian Russell's replacement has taken over his responsibilities for cadet forces fundraising. [128423]

Dawn Primarolo: No.

In June 2006, the Government announced funding for the creation of six new state school cadet units. The new units will be set up for three-year pilot periods and will receive initial funding of £800,000 in 2007-08. The pilot expansion of cadet forces will be funded by Government, with a view to consideration of continued expansion of the cadet forces in future years.

Rod Aldridge was appointed chair of v, the new national youth volunteering charity established to take forward the recommendations of Ian Russell's report on youth action and engagement in April 2006. He engages in fundraising for a wide range of youth volunteering activities through v.

Taxation: EC Law

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) progress has been made with and (b) outcome has arisen in each group litigation order tax cases brought against the Government in the European Court since 2003 in which no proceedings are active in UK courts; and what estimate he has made of the likely impact on revenues in 2007-08. [127701]

Dawn Primarolo: Since 2003, four UK group litigation order tax cases have been referred to the ECJ.

For the Franked Investment Income Group Litigation and Class IV of the Advanced Corporation Tax Group Litigation, ECJ judgments were handed down on 12 December 2006. For the Thin Capitalisation Group Litigation, ECJ judgment was handed down on 13 March 2007. These three cases are now waiting a High Court hearing and so there have been no final outcomes. For the CFC and dividend GLO, the High Court referred this case to the ECJ on 15 March 2005, however no date has yet been fixed for an oral hearing. The case is therefore also not yet final.

Given that the outcome of none of these GLOs is final, it would be wrong to comment on revenue impact.

VAT: Public Bodies

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the legislative mechanisms are for making public bodies exempt from the payment of value added tax; and if he will make a statement; [128406]

(2) which public bodies have an exemption from the payment of value added tax; and if he will make a statement. [128407]

Dawn Primarolo: Public bodies pay VAT on their purchases in the same way as any other consumer or business. Under the principles of public funding, irrecoverable VAT costs, like other running costs, are taken into account when determining the funding allocated to those bodies. This is the way the VAT system has worked in relation to public bodies since its introduction in 1973.

Welfare Tax Credits: Fraud

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether cases of forged tax credits resulting in prosecution (a) are reported to local jobcentres and (b) affect the payment of benefits to the individual concerned. [128686]

Dawn Primarolo: Criminal Investigation within HMRC is responsible for prosecuting offences connected with tax credits. (a) Criminal Investigation does not as a matter of course report cases resulting in prosecution for offences connected with tax credits to local Jobcentres. (b) It does however liaise with the Department for Work and Pensions if there are similar offences or benefits potentially affected.

Welfare Tax Credits: Overpayments

Andrew Selous: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether there is provision for relaxation of the repayment rules for tax credit claimants who receive an overpayment as a single award and then enter a joint claim with their spouse/partner to allow repayment to be made over the period that repayments would have been taken from future payments on a single claim; and if he will make a statement. [128782]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC's approach to recovering overpayments is outlined in its Code of Practice 26 "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?"

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casino Advisory Panel

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her officials had with the Casino Advisory Panel on the consistency of the arrangements of the Examinations in Public. [127652]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 15 March 2007]: None. The Casino Advisory Panel (CAP) is entirely independent of the Government. The arrangements for the Examinations in Public (EiPs) were entirely a matter for the panel, and it would not have been appropriate for the Government to intervene. Guidance notes for participants in the EiPs were sent to all the shortlisted authorities in August 2006. Professor Stephen Crow, the Chair of the CAP, who is experienced in chairing similar hearings as part of the planning process, chaired all seven Examinations in Public to ensure consistency.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Casino Advisory Panel took to ensure that bidding authorities for the regional casino licence were given equal periods of time to present their case at their respective Examinations in Public. [127654]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 15 March 2007]: Guidance notes for participants in the Examinations in Public (EiP) were sent to all participating authorities in August 2006. This made it clear that a day had been set aside for each EiP, and that each local authority would be permitted to make a brief opening statement summarising their proposal.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) meetings and (b) discussions the Casino Advisory Panel sought with members of the Joint Scrutiny Committee on the draft Gambling Bill. [127766]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 15 March 2007]: None. However, a number of members of the Joint Scrutiny Committee made representations to the Casino Advisory Panel during the course of its work. Two former members of the Joint Scrutiny Committee—the hon. Member for Barnsley, East and Mexborough (Jeff Ennis) and Lord Faulkner of Worcester—made representations in support of Blackpool's proposal.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice she gave to Professor Crowe and the Casino Advisory Panel on their decision not to allow hon. Members to speak at the Examinations in Public sessions in the areas bidding for a regional casino. [126541]

Tessa Jowell: The Government issued no guidance to the panel on the involvement of Members of Parliament in its work. The panel operated entirely independently of the Government and it was important that the panel was free to decide for itself who it consulted during the course of its work.

The Examinations in Public which the panel held into the shortlisted proposals for the regional casino were just one part of this consultation process, and the panel considered carefully all the information presented to it in developing its final recommendations. A number of hon. Members made written representations, or have otherwise associated themselves with proposals from their areas, these are reflected in Annex H (pp 147-159) of the panel's report. Copies of the panel's report are available in the House Libraries.

The panel issued guidance on the process for the Examinations in Public in advance of the hearings, which included the panel's criteria for selecting participants. The panel sought to select a range of participants representing a broad range of viewpoints, to ensure the broadest possible range of arguments would be presented and discussed during the hearings.

No hon. Members participated personally at any of the EiPs. However, the panel chair reported any representations that had been received from local hon. Members (whether for or against the proposal) at the start of each EiP. These representations were also reflected in the summaries of representations published on the panel's website www.culture.gov.uk/cap.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what evidence on the merits of doorstep and destination casinos the Casino Advisory Panel were offered; and what use of such evidence they made in their considerations. [126742]

Tessa Jowell: The chairman of the panel explained in his foreword to the panel's report to me that in the course of its work the panel received a large amount of evidence, including on issues relating to the merits of doorstep and destination casinos.

The panel carefully considered all this evidence before finalising its recommendations to me.

The documents submitted to the panel are listed at Annex H of the report, which is available at www.culture.gov.uk/cap. The report is also available in the House Libraries.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions were held between her Department and the Casino Advisory Panel on the panel's refusal to allow hon. Members to give oral evidence at their Examinations in Public. [126743]

Tessa Jowell: None. The panel operated entirely independently of the Government and it was important that the panel was free to decide for itself who it consulted during the course of its work.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what discussions were held between officials in her Department and members of the Casino Advisory Panel on the definition of social impact for the purposes of the panel's enquiry; and when such discussions took place; [127176]

(2) what discussions her officials held with members of the Casino Advisory Panel on how to assess willingness to license in respect of applicants in the regional casino category; [127177]

(3) what discussions took place between her officials and the Casino Advisory Panel to determine (a) what tests should be applied by the panel to ascertain willingness to licence in each local authority area for regional casino applications and (b) how such tests should be discussed consistently with each short-listed local authority at the examinations in public for the regional casino applications. [127622]

Tessa Jowell: The Casino Advisory Panel was set up to operate entirely independently of the Government. As a consequence, it would not have been appropriate for the Government to intervene in its work, or to interfere in the way in which the panel interpreted and applied its terms of reference.

The factors which the panel took into account when assessing each of the proposals before it against its remitted criteria are set out clearly in the panel report.

In the Government's assessment, the panel has taken its terms of reference seriously, it has applied them in a balanced and consistent way and it has tested its results back against the original terms of reference.

The Government are satisfied that it has arrived at robust recommendations as a result.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Casino Advisory Panel discussed the (a) definition and (b) merits of destination as opposed to doorstep casinos at its meeting on 24 May 2006. [127178]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Casino Advisory Panel did not meet on 24 May 2006. The minutes of all the panel's meetings are available on its website at:

www.culture.gov.uk/cap.

Departments: Standards

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will include sustainability criteria in her Department's Public Service Agreement targets in the forthcoming comprehensive spending review. [127944]

Tessa Jowell: [holding answer 19 March 2007]: DCMS is working with HM Treasury and other Departments to develop new PSA outcomes as part of the comprehensive spending review. Cross-governmental PSAs will be published as part of the CSR. I am aware of the importance of reflecting sustainability within the relevant priority areas.

Gaming Clubs: Greater Manchester

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings have taken place between (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department and (i) officers and (ii) councillors of Manchester city council since 30 January. [126764]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 12 March 2007]: There have been no meetings between officials in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport responsible for gambling policy, and officers and councillors of Manchester city council since 30 January 2007. At the request of the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Tony Lloyd), I had a brief informal meeting with the leader and chief executive of Manchester city council on 5 February 2007.

Gaming Clubs: Licensing

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings took place between (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department and the Casino Advisory Panel immediately prior to the announcement of the short-list of casino licence candidates; and if she will publish the minutes of such meetings. [126765]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 12 March 2007]: No meetings took place between Ministers and officials in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and the Casino Advisory Panel immediately prior to the panel's announcement of the short list of casino licence candidates.

The panel made a written progress report to me, prior to the announcement of its short list. A copy of the report is available on the panel's website at www.culture.gov.uk/cap and in the House Libraries.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the potential for issues of competition to arise in cases of the siting of (a) regional, (b) large and (c) small casinos in the same town or city as a casino licensed under the Gaming Act 1968. [128419]

Tessa Jowell: A full competition assessment of the impact of the Gambling Act 2005 on the casino market was included in Annex A of the Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) for the Act published on 21 April 2005. Copies of the RIA are available in the House Library.

Monuments: Agriculture

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the number of designated monuments that have been damaged by agricultural cultivation in the last 10 years. [127647]

Mr. Lammy: My Department does not hold such information. However, English Heritage is currently undertaking a programme of regional Scheduled Monuments at Risk studies which will help to quantify the number of Scheduled Monuments under continuous or periodic cultivation, and the proportion of these considered to be at risk of damage. The outcomes of this research will be published by English Heritage later this year.

Olympic Games

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the budgeted cost is of advertising for posts for London 2012. [118745]

Tessa Jowell: From 1 April 2006 to 31 January 2007, the Olympic Delivery Authority's (ODA) total actual advertising cost, including recruitment advertising, search and selection activity, and response handling, was £769,570. The ODA is a start-up organisation and has been recruiting permanent staff from its inception.

The London Organising Committee for the Olympic games and Paralympic games (LOCOG) is a privately funded commercial organisation and will be recruiting up to 2,500 posts between now and 2012. It is not possible at this stage to determine exactly the cost of recruitment as it will be spread over the next five years. LOCOG uses a number of resources to recruit including their website, newspaper adverts and recruitment specialists depending on the posts to be recruited.

Olympic Games: Football

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will seek discussions with (a) the FA, (b) the Scottish FA, (c) the Welsh FA and (d) the Northern Irish FA on providing a British football team for the 2012 Olympics. [128683]

Mr. Caborn: Any decision on whether a Great Britain team participates at the London 2012 Olympic Games is a matter for FIFA, the four home nations' Football Associations, and the organisers of the Olympic tournament.

The Secretary of State has discussed the issue of a Great Britain football team for the Olympics with the Football Association of England on a number of occasions.

The Government believe that a GB Olympic football team at a 2012 London Olympics could be very exciting for football fans and discussions between the various parties continue.

The Government also believe this should not affect the rights of the four home nations to compete separately in international football tournaments—an important part of our footballing tradition.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people are employed in the Government Olympic Executive; what the total salary bill was in the last month for which figures are available; how many people are expected to be employed by the end of 2007; and what the projected annual salary budget is for each year until 2012. [126208]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 8 March 2007]: As of the 28 February 2007, 44 full-time equivalents, including those on contracts, work in the Government Olympic Executive (GOE), with a total salary bill of £243,579 for this month.

By the end of 2007, the new director-general of the GOE will have been able, subject to affordability, to determine the appropriate staff numbers and associated salaries for the GOE for this and future years. The GOE works with Government Departments, agencies and other organisations to maximize the economic, social, health and environmental benefits the Games bring to the UK, and sponsors and supports the Olympic Delivery Authority, London 2012 Organising Committee, and Olympic lottery distributor.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will commission a cost benefit analysis of the Woolwich site for the standard shooting ranges for the 2012 Olympics compared with alternative sites which have existing facilities. [128861]

Mr. Caborn: A number of facilities were assessed during the bid stage to host the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games, and the Royal Artillery Barracks at Woolwich were agreed as the venue for the shooting events after the International Olympic Committee (IOC) gave feedback on the venue portfolio submitted as an applicant city in 2004. The Royal Artillery Barracks are, therefore, part of the host city contract agreement with the IOC. There are currently no plans to carry out any further assessments or analysis of other shooting venues in the UK.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make it her policy to move the site of the standard shooting ranges for the Olympics away from Woolwich. [128862]

Mr. Caborn: The Royal Artillery Barracks at Woolwich were agreed as the venue for the shooting events after the International Olympic Committee (IOC) gave feedback to the London bid organisers on the venue portfolio submitted as an applicant city in 2004. The Royal Artillery Barracks are, therefore, part of the host city contract agreement with the IOC. There are currently no plans to move the Olympic shooting events to an alternative venue.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children's Centres

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children's centres provide childcare places. [127685]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 15 March 2007]: Sure Start children's centres in the 30 per cent. most disadvantaged areas in England must provide integrated early learning and daycare as part of their core services. Based on information supplied by local authorities, 1,111 (97 per cent.) of the 1,137 designated Sure Start children's centres are offering this provision either on the same site as other children's centre services or at a site close by. Children's centres outside the 30 per cent. most disadvantaged areas may choose whether to provide integrated early learning and daycare depending on levels of local need.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children's centres are based in schools. [127686]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 15 March 2007]: Local authorities are responsible for deciding the location of children's centres, and we do not routinely collect data on the numbers based on school sites. We estimate however that, based on an analysis conducted in 2006, around a third of the 1,137 centres currently designated fall into this category.

The proportion of children's centres based on school sites may increase as children's centres are rolled out across England and local authorities take full advantage of the opportunities for co-location and offering integrated services for children and parents from one place.

Children's Centres: Kent

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the criteria are for establishing children's centres in Kent; [127954]

(2) which wards in Kent (a) have children's centres and (b) he expects to have children's centres by 2010. [128192]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 19 March 2007]: We have issued planning guidance for all local authorities which sets out the criteria for the location of children's centres. We have asked them to ensure that these locations enable all children under five in the 30 per cent. most disadvantaged areas of England to have access to integrated services by March 2008. These areas are defined by Super Output Areas as developed by the Office for National Statistics. The exact location within these areas is determined by local authorities in consultation with local partners. When appropriate plans have been made to serve the most disadvantaged areas with children's centre services, the local authority has the flexibility to decide where to locate further centres according to the resources available.

There are currently 18 designated Sure Start children's centres in Kent and a further 52 planned by March 2008. By 2010 every ward in Kent will be served by a children's centre as part of the Government's commitment to offer Sure Start integrated services to every community in England. Day Care: Disabled

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding his Department makes available to assist parents with the cost of child care for children with physical disabilities. [127933]

Beverley Hughes: Parents with disabled children can receive support through the working tax credit (which includes elements relating to disability and severe disability), child tax credit, disability living allowance and carer's allowance. They can also apply for direct payments from their local authority, which are cash payments in lieu of social care services enabling those receiving them to arrange their own services.

In addition, the Department for Education and Skills provides funding to local authorities through the general Sure Start grant to increase the sustainability and diversity of their local child care market, in support of the new duty in the Childcare Act 2006 to secure sufficient child care provision. This funding can be used to provide support for child care places where affordability is an issue for parents, and can also be used to provide training, enable early education and child care settings to make adaptations to premises and equipment, provide additional staff, and support multi-agency working through the early support programme.

Nursery Schools: Westminster

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) three and (b) four-year-olds are attending (i) nursery schools and (ii) classes in Westminster; and how many were attending in 1997. [126446]

Beverley Hughes: The requested information is given in the table.

Parents: Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils whose parents were claiming incapacity benefit achieved (a) more than five A* to C passes including English and mathematics, (b) more than five A* to C passes, (c) more than five A* to G passes and (d) no passes at Key Stage 4 in (i) the Birkenhead constituency, (ii) the Wirral local education authority and (iii) England in 2006. [127767]

Jim Knight [holding answer 15 March 2007]: Data on whether pupils' parents claim incapacity benefit is not collected centrally.

Pupils: Attendance

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many parents received custodial sentences for failing to make their children attend school in each of the last three years. [127531]

Jim Knight [holding answer 15 March 2007]: Home Office data, from the court proceedings database, show the number of defendants sentenced to immediate custody for offences under section 444 of the Education Act 1996 is as follows: 20 in 2005; 22 in 2004; and, seven in 2003. Data for 2006 are not available at this time.

Schools: Admissions

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether under the school admissions code of practice local authorities can give precedence in the waiting list to pupils who have not been allocated a place at a ranked school over those who have been allocated a place at one of their ranked schools. [128837]

Jim Knight: Where a school maintains a waiting list, a child's position on that list can be determined only by how well he or she meets the school's published oversubscription criteria compared to others on the list. Any other information, such as other parental preferences, may not be taken in to account. The new school admissions code also states that a child cannot be given priority on a waiting list based on the date that his or her application was received or his or her name was added to the list.

The only children who may be given precedence over those on a waiting list are those who are the subject of a direction by the local authority to admit or those admitted in accordance with an in-year fair access protocol.

Volunteering: Young People

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the steps being taken to meet the recommendations of the Russell Commission on Youth Volunteering. [128266]

Edward Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

Considerable progress has been made over the past year since the launch of the Russell Commission Implementation Body, v, which has created over 80,000 volunteering opportunities and attracted pledges of over £20 million of match funding for the private sector in addition to the up to £100 million available from Government.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour Orders: Hertfordshire

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders were issued by courts in (a) Hertfordshire and (b) Hemel Hempstead constituency in each quarter since the penalty was introduced; and what percentage of these were issued where the claimant was aged (i) 10 to 14 years, (ii) 15 to 19 years, (iii) 20 to 24 years, (iv) 25 to 29 years and (v) 30 years and over. [121181]

Mr. McNulty: Available information for Hertfordshire criminal justice system area is in the table, but ASBO data are not available at parliamentary constituency level.

[1] From commencement 1 April 1999 to 31 May 2000 data were collected on aggregate numbers only by police force area (pfa). During this period one ASBO was issued in the Hertfordshire pfa.

Note:
Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Drugs: Smuggling

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the performance of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency in detecting drugs trafficking since 1 April 2006; and if he will make a statement. [127588]

Mr. Coaker: As published in the 2006-07 Annual Plan, the SOCA Board determined that SOCA should devote 40 per cent. of its effort against the threat posed by drugs trafficking.

As required by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, SOCA will issue an annual report as soon as possible after the end of the financial year 2006-07. This report will include an assessment of the extent to which the annual plan for that year has been carried out.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what quantities of (a) heroin, (b) cocaine, (c) ecstasy and (d) cannabis were seized as a result of HM Revenue and Customs operations in each of the last three years. [127589]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

Quantities of drugs seizures made by HM Revenue and Customs are published in the Annual Report of HM Revenue and Customs. The last three years' seizures by weight, as published in those reports, are set out in the following table:

	2003-04	2004-05	kilograms 2005-06
Heroin	1,626	1,613	1,057
Cocaine	20,727	8,606	5,798
Ecstasy	1,245	740	468
Cannabis	57,617	57,504	41,611

Firearms

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1928W, on firearms, if he will place in the Library the advice provided by the Forensic Science Service. [127427]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Advice provided by the Forensic Science Service relating to firearms surrendered during the amnesty in 2003 was on a case-by-case basis direct to the police force concerned.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 108W, on Holloway prison, which games and videos are available for use. [126606]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prisoners at Holloway have access to a range of films and DVDs. The prison has a central library of videos and DVDs which are vetted for suitability by the prison librarian. From this small library a number of films are provided to the first night centre for use by new prisoners.

Additionally, women on the enhanced level of the incentives and earned privileges scheme are entitled to receive up to 10 DVDs and six computer games through the post. These games and DVDs must be originals, must arrive at the prison sealed, and are vetted for suitability by prisoner reception staff. Unsuitable games and DVDs are placed in the prisoner's stored property and she is advised in writing that the game or DVD will not be issued as it has been deemed unsuitable. The prisoner may appeal this decision to the Governor should she disagree.

Identity Cards

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the most recent timetable is for introducing compulsory identity cards. [125642]

Joan Ryan: We will start issuing biometric immigration documents from 2008 and identity cards to British citizens from 2009. It is the Government's policy that ID cards should eventually be compulsory for everyone resident in the United Kingdom who is aged 16 or over.

Under the Identity Cards Act 2006 registration on the National Identity Register and the issue of ID cards will be linked to applications for British passports and biometric immigration documents for foreign nationals, subject to approval by Parliament of a designation order under section 4 of the Identity Cards Act. As a result, ID cards will be issued to a large proportion of the resident population as they apply for or renew one of these documents. Passport applicants may opt out of obtaining an ID card before 1 January 2010.

The UK Borders Bill currently before Parliament provides powers to require specified categories of foreign nationals to apply for a biometric immigration document. At some time in the future, further primary legislation will be introduced to provide the powers to require the remainder of the population to obtain an ID card and so to make ID cards compulsory.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) personal data and (b) biometric data he plans identity cards will hold. [125720]

Joan Ryan: It is intended that the identity card for British citizens will be valid as a travel document within the European economic area. As a result, like the passport, it will need to meet International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) requirements regarding information to be recorded on travel documents.

Hence, the biographical information to be recorded on the identity card will closely match that currently recorded on the personal details page of the passport.

With regard to biometric information, it is intended that the biometrics to be recorded on the identity card will be a subset of those to be recorded on the National Identity Register and will be in line with international requirements. This biometric information would be recorded securely on the card's chip and protected by encryption.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to bring forward legislation to make identity cards compulsory. [125947]

Joan Ryan: We will start issuing biometric immigration documents from 2008 and identity cards to British citizens from 2009. It is the Government's policy that ID cards should eventually be compulsory for everyone resident in the United Kingdom who is aged 16 or over.

Under the Identity Cards Act 2006 registration on the National Identity Register and the issued ID cards will be linked to applications for British passports and biometric immigration documents for foreign nationals, subject to approval by Parliament of a designation order under section four of the Identity Cards Act. As a result ID cards will be issued to a large proportion of the resident population as they apply for or renew one of these documents. Passport applicants may opt out of obtaining an ID card before 1 January 2010.

The UK Borders Bill currently before Parliament provides powers to require specified categories of foreign nationals to apply for a biometric immigration document. At some time in the future, further primary legislation will be introduced to provide the powers to require the remainder of the population to obtain an ID card and so to make ID cards compulsory.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 1 February 2007, Official Report, column 519W, on identity cards, what estimate he has made of the number of officials in the Identity and Passport Service who will administer the civil penalty scheme. [126001]

Joan Ryan: At present, the number of officials planned to work on the administration of the civil penalty scheme has not been finalised.

National Identity Register

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether data held on the National Identity Register will be cross-checked with the electoral register. [126593]

Joan Ryan: The Identity and Passport Service uses the services of a credit reference agency to verify identity information provided with passport applications and plans to build on these services when the National Identity Register is introduced. One of the sources of data used by the credit reference agency is the electoral register.

The Government set out the role of the National Identity Register and the Identity Cards Scheme in relation to electoral registration and voting in its evidence to the House of Commons Constitutional Affairs and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister: Housing, Planning, Local Government and the Regions Committees published by the Committees on 16 March 2005.

National Identity Register: Personal Records

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which data fields he plans to be held on each individual entered in the National Identity Register; [125944]

(2) what estimate he has made of the total number of data fields to be held on each individual entered in the National Identity Register; [125945]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of individual data entries to be held on the National Identity Register in each of the first five years of operation. [125946]

Joan Ryan: The information that can be held on the National Identity Register is strictly limited in the Identity Cards Act 2006 and is outlined under section 3 and schedule 1 of that Act.

Details of the IT architecture which will support the recording of that information on the register will be dependent on the design that is agreed with any future suppliers and other parties involved in developing the technical systems that host it.

Thus, until procurement processes are completed and further work is conducted, the number of data fields recording National Identity Register information will not be finalised.

Offensive Weapons

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often the Round Table on guns, knives and gangs has met in the last two years; on what dates it met; and if he will make a statement. [127418]

Mr. Cooker [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Since December 2004, the Round Table on guns, knives and gangs has met four times: on 15 December 2004, 7 March 2006, 7 February 2007 and 6 March 2007.

Passports

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1515W, on passports, which fictional passports have been issued. [127558]

John Reid: Available IPS records confirm that the following fictional passports have been issued:

Character	Production	Date
Thomas Sweeney	Brookside	June 2000
Columbus Bear	When You Wish Upon a Star	July 2000
Diane Begley	Blue Murder	February 2004
James Bond	Casino Royale	February 2006

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 20 February 2007, Official Report, column 1514W, on passports, whether there is a separate service level agreement for the Passport Validation Service. [127883]

John Reid: As stated on 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1514W, updated key performance indicators for the Identity and Passport Service will be published later in the spring. A number of these will specifically relate to the Passport Validation Service.

The Passport Validation Service also enters into contractual agreements with user organisations which specify the terms under which the Passport Validation Service is delivered to them.

Police Custody

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were held in police cells during the recent activation of Operation Safeguard; and how many were (a) remand prisoners, (b) male remand prisoners, (c) prisoners given custodial sentences and (d) male prisoners given custodial sentences. [124830]

John Reid: Between 12 October and 22 December 2006 Operation Safeguard was used on 4,617 occasions. This does not correspond precisely to the number of prisoners: one occasion means one prisoner night in a police cell.

A breakdown of numbers of remand prisoners and prisoners given custodial sentences held in police cells is not held centrally. No women prisoners have been held in police cells.

Police Custody: Manpower

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether recommendations were made by his Department to (a) any chief constable and (b) ACPO on prisoner-to-police officer ratio during the recent activation of Operation Safeguard. [124721]

John Reid: The staffing levels in custody suites being used under Operation Safeguard are determined by individual chief constables based on operational knowledge and experience. Each site is fully risk assessed and resourced accordingly.

Police: Cadets

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding his Department has provided to police authorities in respect of police cadets in the latest period for which figures are available. [128851]

Mr. McNulty: Government funding for police authorities is chiefly allocated using a funding formula that provides an assessment of the relative need of each police force in England and Wales.

Funding for police cadets is not separately identified. Decisions on the distribution of resources are matters for the chief officer and the police authority.

Police: Disciplinary Proceedings

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in England and Wales are suspended by police authorities; and what the total value is of their annual salaries. [128850]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not held centrally by the Home Office and is a matter for each force.

Police: Discrimination

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints of (a) racism, (b) gender discrimination and (c) discrimination on the ground of sexual orientation were made by (i) police officers, (ii) police community support officers and (iii) special constables against the police in each of the last five years. [121849]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office does not hold a central record of the number of complaints of racism, gender discrimination and discrimination on the ground of sexual orientation made by police officers, police community support officers and special constables against the police. These are matters for the grievance procedure of each force.

Police: ICT

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many information communication technology systems are being used by police forces in England and Wales, broken down by force. [127309]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 March 2007]: The day-to-day operational management of a force and therefore the systems used to support it are the responsibility of the force chief constable and their police authority.

Police: Internet

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has given to police chief constables on the (a) design, (b) maintenance and (c) availability of information held on their websites. [127424]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 14 March 2007]: These decisions are for chief constables who are responsible for the day-to-day operational management of their force.

Police: Sirens

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance is given to police car drivers on the use of their sirens at night-time; and whether the guidance (a) is kept under review and (b) has been amended in the past two years; [128398]

(2) what monitoring is undertaken of the adherence of police car drivers to guidance on the use of their sirens at night-time. [128436]

Mr. McNulty: Regulation 37 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 restricts the fitting of sirens and other devices to specific emergency vehicles. Regulation 99 allows use of a siren only to indicate to other road users the urgency of the purposes for which a vehicle is being used, or to warn other road users of the presence of the vehicle on the road.

Subject to compliance with construction and use regulations, the use of sirens is according to police discretion. It is for individual chief officers to decide on whether to issue local guidance and on monitoring of adherence to such guidance.

Prison Service: Manpower

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers were employed (a) in total and (b) full-time (i) as at 31 March in each year since 1997 and (ii) on 31 January 2007. [127082]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the number of officer grade staff employed within the public sector Prison Service and the contracted estate each year since 1997 is contained in the following table.

Number of officer grade staff employed within the public sector Prison Service and the contracted estate each year since 1997

Date	Total	Full-time equivalent

Notes:
1. Figures include both publicly and privately managed establishments.
2. Full-time equivalent figures are not available prior to 2000.
3. Figures relate to prison officers, senior officers and principal officers within the public sector Prison Service and prison custody officers within contacted prisons.
4. Officers employed within public sector Prison Service headquarters are included.
5. Private contractors have not been able to supply information for; Ashfield and Doncaster prior to 2002, Dovegate in 2004, 2002 and 2001, Forest Bank, Altcourse, Rye Hill and Wolds prior to 2004 and Lowdham Grange in 2005, 2004 and prior to 2002.

Prisoners

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the percentage change in the prison population was in each year since 1997. [127083]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The numbers of prisoners held in all prison establishments in England and Wales in each year since 1997 with the percentage annual increase can be seen in the table.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Prisoners: Civil Proceedings

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information his Department collects about civil claims made by (a) current and (b) former prisoners against the prison service. [127878]

John Reid: The Prison Service currently collates sufficient information to monitor the progress of civil claims brought against it. The majority of that information is legally privileged and cannot be disclosed.

Prisoners: Elderly

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prisoners are aged (i) 60 to 64 and (ii) over 65 years. [126418]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The figures requested in the question for all prison establishments in England and Wales as at the end of January 2007 are in the following table:

Age band	Male	Female	Total
65 and over	1,020	16	1,036

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Prisons: Islam

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid from public funds to prison imams in each year since 2001. [127952]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 19 March 2007]: Imams are employed both on a full-time and sessional basis. Payments being made are from both the overall chaplaincy budget and sessional budgets held by Governors at establishments. Therefore the information requested is not held centrally or is readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons (a) employed and (b) used an imam in each year since 2001. [127953]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The prisons recorded as having a directly employed Muslim chaplain on 31 March each year since 2002 are shown in the following list. All establishments (unless the post is vacant) have one or more Muslim chaplain either employed or fee paid. Muslim chaplains have been coming in to prisons for many years on a fee paid basis. Central records are not maintained of how often these services are used.

Public Order Offences

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the use of penalty notices for disorder. [128214]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are reviewing the list of offences for which a penalty notice for disorder may be issued. No decision has yet been made on whether and, if so, how to extend the scheme.

Serious Organised Crime Agency: Surveys

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to publish the results of the poll commissioned by the board of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency of staff views. [127590]

Mr. Coaker: No. The results of the staff survey are being discussed and will then be circulated internally to SOCA staff.

SOCA values the staff survey as an opportunity to receive honest views on corporate issues. It is completed on the basis that results will not be made public. Publication could undermine the confidence necessary for it to be an effective tool for the organisation, which is still at an early stage of its development.

Theft: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were cautioned for shoplifting in Lancashire in each of the last five years. [127101]

Mr. McNulty: The number of offenders cautioned for stealing from shops and stalls (shoplifting) in the Lancashire police force area from 2001 to 2005 is shown in the table.

Number of offenders cautioned for stealing from shops and stalls (shoplifting) in the Lancashire police force area, 2001 to 2005[1,2]

Theft Act 1968 Sec 1.	Stealing from shops and stalls (shoplifting)	1,143	986	975	1,152	801

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Young Offenders

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug rehabilitation requirement orders were (a) issued to and (b) breached by young offenders aged 18 years and under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [126111]

Mr. Coaker: Drug rehabilitation requirements were introduced under the Criminal Justice Act 2003, which came into effect on 4 April 2005. They can be made under community orders or suspended sentence orders and apply only to offenders aged 18 and over. Between April and December 2005, 140 drug rehabilitation requirements were made by the courts for offenders aged 18 who commenced probation service supervision. In this same period some 30 drug rehabilitation requirements were terminated early by 18-year-olds either for failure to comply with requirements or for further offence convictions. The equivalent figures for the period January to September 2006 were 160 for both commencements and terminations[1].

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system, and the totals have been rounded.

[1] The 160 early terminations in 2006 include drug rehabilitation requirements commencing in both 2005 and 2006.

Young Offenders: Community Service Orders

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community rehabilitation orders were (a) issued to and (b) breached by young offenders aged 18 years or under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [127453]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For sentencing purposes juveniles are defined as being aged 17 and under. Eighteen-year-olds are treated as adults. This response therefore is confined to young offenders aged 10-17 in the interest of clarity.

Statistics on sentencing of young offenders (persons aged 10-17) are published in "Sentencing Statistics 2005" (Home Office Statistical Bulletin No. 03/07), a copy of which is in the Library.

Table 3.7 on page 70 includes numbers of community rehabilitation orders made.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

The bulletin referred to is also available on the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs07/hosb0307.pdf

Quality checks have shown that breach data are unsuitable for publication. Statistics on breaches can therefore only be published when significant improvements have been made to the submissions of these data to the Home Office.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Businesses: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Energy Act 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126655]

Malcolm Wicks: The most recent estimate was published in the Regulatory Impact Assessment that accompanied the Act when it was passed in July 2004.

Construction: Tolls

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the potential impact on the construction industry of the introduction of road user charging. [128682]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

No decisions have been taken on a national road pricing scheme. The Government are working with local authorities interested in establishing local pricing schemes to address local congestion problems, and the first of these is expected to be in place in four to five years. Any decision on a national road pricing scheme will be taken only on the evidence of these schemes.

Given that no decisions have been taken on whether to introduce national road pricing and if so what form it might take, it is not possible to estimate the potential impact on the construction industry at this stage.

Natural Gas: Wales

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with representatives from the Welsh Assembly Government on the Felindre to Tirley pipeline. [125882]

Malcolm Wicks: Prior to the consenting of this pipeline by the Department of Trade and Industry on 7 February 2007, Welsh Assembly Government officials attended a number of meetings held for stakeholders covering various issues, including the impact of the pipeline on the Brecon Beacons National Park and Special Areas of Conservation.

Telephone Services: Regulation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Services (ICSTIS) has (a) issued formal reprimands to service providers, (b) ordered service providers to submit future promotions and services to them for prior approval for a set period, (c) ordered a service provider to pay reasonable and valid claims for compensation, (d) imposed fines on service providers, (e) barred service providers from access to service and (f) banned named individuals from operating services for set periods for breaching the ICSTIS Code of Practice. [124254]

Margaret Hodge: ICSTIS lists over 7,900 active service providers which it regulates. The latest figures available are for 2006. During that year, ICSTIS (a) issued formal reprimands to 160 service providers, (b) asked three service providers to submit future promotions and services to them for prior approval for a set period and these services are individually monitored for compliance, (c) ordered 33 service providers to pay refunds to customers (the only compensation system open to ICSTIS), (d) imposed 157 fines on service providers, (e) barred access to service to 64 service providers and (f) banned two named individuals from operating services for set periods for breaching the ICSTIS Code of Practice. In some cases, individual service providers could have faced more than one of the aforementioned sanctions.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many service providers the Independent Committee for the Supervision of the Standards of Telephone Services has found in breach of its Code of Practice. [124255]

Margaret Hodge: ICSTIS lists over 7,900 active service providers which it regulates. In 2006, the last year for which figures are available, 99 service providers were found to be in breach of the ICSTIS Code of Practice. Further details are available in the written PQ answer 124254.

Water Power

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for trials of (a) tidal, (b) pump storage schemes, (c) wave and (d) hydroelectric power generation. [126896]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI currently has no plans to trial pump storage or hydroelectric schemes. Such schemes are the application of well understood mature technology and have been in operation for several decades.

Support for the research and development of wave and tidal technologies including prototype trials is provided under the DTI's Technology Programme. The programme is currently supporting five tidal and two wave projects that are expected to lead to trials of the technology.

In addition, we anticipate that the DTI's Marine Renewables Deployment Fund will support a number of multi-device grid connected wave and tidal demonstrations.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Audience Community Safety Staff

James Brokenshire: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what rights of audience community safety staff have to appear in court. [128213]

Bridget Prentice: The phrase 'community safety staff' covers a wide range of people including those working within the local authority in their community and antisocial behaviour teams and those working within housing management organisations.

Under section 60 of the County Courts Act 1984, a local authority officer has a right of audience in the county court in certain housing proceedings. Currently employees of housing management organisations who manage local authority housing stock do not have a right of audience. They rely on the court's discretion, under section 27 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, to be able to appear in court.

As part of the Government's Respect agenda we are considering how to take forward plans to allow employees of housing management organisations similar rights to local authority officers in certain proceedings related to their housing management functions, including measures to tackle antisocial behaviour.

Landlord and Tenant: Fees and Charges

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance her Department has issued on the types of services incurring service charges on which freeholders will be obliged to consult residents and leaseholders following the implementation of the Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003. [128879]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Communities and Local Government is responsible for the Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003. Guidance on the types of long-term agreements which a landlord is obliged to consult upon under these regulations is available in the Departments' booklet, "Long Leaseholders—A Guide to Your Rights and Responsibilities". This briefly explains the service charges consultation process itself and includes examples of the types of agreements that would need to be consulted upon where they exceeded 12 months.

The Leasehold Advisory Service (LEASE), an Executive non-departmental public body sponsored by this Department, has also issued more detailed guidance on the consultation process and describes some types of long term agreements which a landlord is obliged to consult upon. LEASE can also give free advice on this and other service charge issues.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether she plans for freeholders to have an obligation to consult residents or leaseholders on service charges for the provision of (a) a managing agent and (b) the provision of buildings property insurance; and what anti-avoidance measures are in place to avoid the consultation requirements being sidestepped by the rolling renewal of agreements of less than one year. [128880]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Communities and Local Government is responsible for leasehold issues. Legislation provides that landlords are required to consult with leaseholders where an agreement of more than 12 months is to be entered into that will incur expenditure to be funded through leaseholder service charges. This includes agreements with managing agents or relating to building insurance. Parliament agreed during the passage of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 that agreements of 12 months or less should not automatically require consultation. However leaseholders with agreements of 12 months or less do have the right to challenge the reasonableness of service charges they may be asked to contribute towards.

Attendance Allowance: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex are in receipt of (i) attendance allowance and (ii) carer's allowance. [125456]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of attendance allowance and carer's allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 20 March 2007:

Community Care Grants

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average length of time taken to process an application for a community care grant was in the last year for which figures are available. [124874]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what the average processing time for Community Care Grant applications was in the last year for which figures are available. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The time it takes to process Community Care Grant applications is measured by counting the average length of time taken to clear all claims processed within a set period (usually monthly). The measure is referred to as the Average Actual Clearance Time.

The clearance time for an individual Community Care Grant application is measured in whole working days from the date the application is received to the date of the decision, inclusive.

The expected service level for Community Care Grants is nine days.

The information in the table covers the twelve months to January 2007.

National Monthly Community Care Grant Average Actual Clearance Times in Days

	Days
February 2006	7.5
March 2006	7.5
April 2006	9.0
May 2006	10.4
June 2006	9.7
July 2006	8.9
August 2006	9.5
September 2006	10.4
October 2006	10.0
November 2006	8.9
December 2006	9.0
January 2007	9.1

I hope this is helpful.

Departments: Freedom of Information

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost to his Department of monitoring the time spent processing requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 for the purposes of the proposed fees regulations. [121716]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. friend the Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs on 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 866W.

Disability Discrimination Act

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Disability Discrimination Act 2004 and 2005 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126637]

Mrs. McGuire: There was no Disability Discrimination Act 2004, but on 1 October 2004 we extended the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 to a further 1 million employers and 7 million jobs, including 600,000 in which disabled people were working. From the same date, we extended the duties for service providers and these changes helped to open up more services to around 10 million people in this country who are likely to be protected by the Act.

Regulatory impact assessments of the costs of implementing the duties that came into force in 2004, and of implementing the Disability Discrimination Act 2005, are available in the Library of the House.

Disabled Children

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what support his Department gives to low income households with disabled children. [125544]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 March 2007]: The Department for Work and Pensions provides a range of financial support for low income households with disabled children.

Depending on the circumstances of the parents, support for low income families may come from jobseeker's allowance or income support, both of which include special premia to help meet the additional costs associated with disability.

Disabled children may also be entitled to disability living allowance (DLA), a non-contributory, non-income-related and tax free contribution towards the disability-related extra care and mobility costs of severely disabled people. If a child receives DLA, their parent or carer may also be eligible to claim additional support through carers allowance.

Support is also available from other Government Departments; for example, HM Revenue and Customs are responsible for administering the child tax credit and working tax credit, both of which provide extra help for families that include a disabled child.

Jobcentre Plus: Chorlton

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what average time staff at the Chorlton office of Jobcentre Plus took to process applications to the Social Fund in the last 12 months; [125583]

(2) how many calls to the call centre at the Chorlton office of Jobcentre Plus were (a) answered, (b) missed and (c) intentionally terminated before being answered in each month since January 2006; [125584]

(3) what average time those calling the call centre at the Chorlton office of Jobcentre Plus waited before their call was answered in the last 12 months. [125585]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the average time taken to process Social Fund applications in the Chorlton office in the last 12 months, the average waiting times for those calling the office and how may calls were answered, missed and intentionally terminated before being answered. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The year to date performance against the clearance target for each of the five elements of Social Fund payments for Chorlton office is set out below:

	Days against target
Budgeting Loans	5.85 days against a target of 6 days
Community Care Grants	10.24 days against a target of 9 days
Crisis Loans	1.41 days against a target of 2 days
Funeral Payments	9.87 days against a target of 16 days
Sure Start Maternity Grants	6.48 days against a target of 5 days

Chorlton is a centralised Benefit Delivery Centre that has been taking on the Social Fund work of a number of smaller sites throughout the last six months. This has led to some deterioration in performance in December and January. Specific recovery plans have been put in place to improve this including training additional staff and we expect performance to recover.

Chorlton has not yet had the new telephony system installed that will allow the missed, answered and intentionally terminated calls or average waiting times to be monitored so I am sorry that I am unable to provide this information. The new telephony system should be installed by the end of December 2007.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentre Plus: Compensation

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many special payments have been made to customers of Jobcentre Plus in compensation for the poor performance of Jobcentre Plus in each of the last six months for which figures are available; and what the total amount of such special payments was. [119373]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 6 February 2007]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many special payments have been made to customers of Jobcentre Plus in compensation for the poor performance of Jobcentre Plus in each of the last six months for which figures are available; and what the total amount of such special payments was. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The Jobcentre Plus special payments scheme is part of a wider scheme operated by the Department for Work and Pensions. Details are contained in the Financial Redress for Maladministration Guide, a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library.

Information on the number of special payments made by Jobcentre Plus and the total amount of those payments in the last six months is in the table.

	Special payments
2006	Number of payments	Amount Paid (£)
July	439	166,612.23
August	530	161,749.63
September	412	131,224.17
October	350	133,764.22
November	545	229,654.41
December	339	136,258.45

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentre Plus: Norfolk

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many crisis loan payments were made from (a) Swaffham and (b) Downham Market Jobcentre Plus branches in each of the last five years. [126239]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many Crisis Loan payments have been made from the Swaffham and Downham Market Jobcentre Plus branches in each of the last five years. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Crisis Loan payments have only been made from these Jobcentres since 2004. Prior to that, payments were issued from the former Benefits Agency offices. For customers from Swaffham and Downham Market this was the office in Kings Lynn. Details of the number of Crisis Loan payments issued from the two offices since 2004 are outlined in the table below.

	Downham Market	Swaffham
2004-05	138	71
2006-07	182	237

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how far residents of (a) Swaffham and (b) Downham Market will have to travel to their nearest Jobcentre Plus branch if existing branches are closed; and what assessment he has made of the availability of public transport for those journeys. [126249]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how far residents of Swaffham and Downham Market will have to travel to their nearest Jobcentre Plus branch if existing branches are closed; and what assessment he has made of the availability of public transport for those journeys. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Information about the availability of public transport and the distances to be travelled is included in the table:

Transport availability to other jobcentres from Downham Market and Swaffham

	Destination	Method	Distance (miles)	Frequency (minutes)	Journey time (minutes)
Downham Market	Kings Lynn Jobcentre	Train	12	60	16
		Bus	12	30	40-50
Swaffham	Dereham Jobcentre	Bus	14	30	30
	Kings Lynn Jobcentre	Bus	17	30	30

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the profile of customers visiting each of the Jobcentre Plus branches earmarked for closure in Norfolk; [126250]

(2) what services are offered at the (a) Swaffham, (b) Downham Market, (c) Wymondham and (d) Hunstanton Jobcentre Plus branches; and what average number of people used each branch on each day in the last six months. [126257]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking what assessment he has made of the profile of customers visiting each of the Jobcentre Plus branches earmarked for closure in Norfolk and what services are offered at the Swaffham, Downham Market, Wymondham and Hunstanton Jobcentre Plus branches; and what was the average number of people using each branch on each day in the last six months. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The Jobcentres at Downham Market, Hunstanton, Swaffham and Wymondham deliver the full range of advisory interventions, with the exception of New Jobseeker Interviews at Downham Market, Hunstanton and Swaffham. The New Jobseeker Interviews are held at Dereham for Swaffham customers, and Kings Lynn for customers from Downham Market and Hunstanton.

All locations carry out Fortnightly Jobsearch Reviews for customers in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance. In addition, all four Jobcentres currently provide Jobpoints that enable customers to search for advertised jobs. Jobsearch facilities are also available to all customers via the Internet and by Jobseeker Direct our telephone based Jobsearch service delivered through our network of contact centres.

The average numbers of people who have attended the offices for Fortnightly Jobsearch Reviews and advisory interviews on a daily basis in the last six months are set out in the table.

Average daily number of fortnightly reviews and adviser interviews at Downham Market, Hunstanton, Swaffham and Wymondham Jobcentres

	Fortnightly reviews[1]	Adviser interviews[1]
Downham Market	22	10
Hunstanton	18	6
Swaffham	20	7
Wymondham	45	15

[1] Per day.

The number of advisory interventions for Wymondham is considerably higher as New Jobseeker interviews are still carried out there.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff are employed at the Jobcentre Plus branches in (a) Swaffham and (b) Downham Market. [126252]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Personal Accounts Delivery Authority: Public Appointments

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost has been of the human resources consultancy work being performed for his Department in the search for the (a) chairman and (b) chief executive of the Personal Accounts Delivery Authority. [125457]

Mrs. McGuire: The contract for the recruitment of the chairman and chief executive for the proposed Personal Accounts Delivery Authority was procured through the Cabinet Office framework for services of this type: this framework was let upon the principles of fair and open competition.

The Department considers the exact cost of the recruitment agency to be commercial in confidence on the basis that this would harm the competitive position of the successful bidder in future public sector bids were their market competitors to understand their costs for this contract.

The information is therefore withheld under Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information exemption category 13—Third party's commercial confidences.

State Retirement Pensions

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the annual cost of increasing the additional 25 pence paid to pensioners over 80 years of age to £5 per week. [127509]

James Purnell: The estimated annual cost of increasing the additional 25 pence paid to pensioners over 80 years of age to £5 per week is £500 million in 2007-08.

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the annual cost is of uprating state pensions to pensioners over 80 years of age. [127519]

James Purnell: The estimated cash cost of uprating state pensions to pensioners over 80 years of age this April will be approximately £490 million.

Note:
The state pension components included in this answer are the basic state pension, additional state pension and graduated retirement benefit for UK and overseas pensioners.

Village Agents

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the current funding arrangement is for village agents; and what will happen when the present funding comes to an end. [128055]

James Purnell: The Gloucestershire Village Agents is one of eight LinkAge Plus Pilots. Funding for the eight pilots for two years was secured at approximately £10 million.

Overall pilot allocation for Gloucestershire is £937,015. This funding was for pump priming to kick start the pilot in Gloucestershire.

All LinkAge Plus pilots have to develop plans to ensure long-term sustainability beyond the two year funding package: no further central funding will be provided.

A full evaluation of LinkAge Plus will be completed in autumn 2008.

Vocational Training: Fees and Charges

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what checks are undertaken by jobcentres on firms conducting interviews in jobcentres for enrolment on training courses for which applicants will have to pay; and whether it is a requirement for the pass rates of such courses to be made known to interviewees. [124659]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 2 March 2007]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding what checks are undertaken by Jobcentre Plus on firms conducting interviews in Jobcentres for enrolment to training courses for which applicants will have to pay; and whether it is a requirement for the pass rates of such courses to be made known to potential applicants. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Our vacancy policy is to refuse to accept or advertise a vacancy where an up-front fee is payable and this is non-refundable to applicants if they are unsuccessful in gaining employment.

It is not a requirement to advise applicants of the pass rate for a particular training course.

I hope this helpful.

Welfare to Work: Reform

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received on the welfare system in the UK. [127750]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Ministers in this Department regularly receive representations from members of the public and representatives of major organisations regarding our welfare system. We continue to liaise closely with a wide range of stakeholders.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Adoption: Equality

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether a faith-based adoption agency which is not in receipt of public funds would be eligible for the exemption under Regulation 14, paragraph 3, of the proposed Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007. [128086]

Meg Munn [holding answer 19 March 2007]: A faith-based adoption agency that is not operating on behalf of and under contract with a public authority could qualify for the religious organisation exemption under Regulation 14, paragraph 3 of the proposed Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007—provided the agency is not being run on a commercial basis and can demonstrate that the exemption is necessary either to comply with the doctrine of the organisation, or to avoid conflicting with the strongly held religious beliefs of a significant number of the religion's followers.

Audit Commission: Expenditure

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) budget and (b) administrative costs were of the Audit Commission in each year since its creation. [126947]

Ruth Kelly: This is an operational matter for the Audit Commission and I asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member. The chief executive subsequently replied to her on 14 March as follows:

Letter from Steve Bundred, dated 14 March 2007:

Your parliamentary question on the total budget and administrative costs of the Audit Commission in each year since its creation has been passed to me for reply.

The Commission does not have full records of its budget for each financial year since 1984. Instead, I have set out the Commission's actual costs for each year since 1984 in the annex to this letter.

It is not possible to answer your questions about administrative costs in the absence of any clear definition of this term. The definition of administrative costs employed within central government is not applicable to the Commission as the Commission does not have programmes run by third parties, and therefore all our expenditure is incurred in support of our statutory duties as set out in the Audit Commission Act 1998.

A copy of this letter will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

The Audit Commission's costs since 1984 are as follows:

Year end	Period length (months)	Total (£000)
1984	12	12,859
1985	12	17,347
1986	12	21,623
1987	12	23,625
1988	12	25,482
1989	12	28,169
1990	12	33,704
1991	12	46,383
1992	12	61,000
1993	12	73,775
1994	12	82,216
1995	12	88,657
1996	12	92,356
1997	12	93,130
1997	7	60,311
1998	12	104,983
1999	12	111,081
2000	12	143,847
2001	12	177,927
2002	12	212,972
2002-04	17	324,054
2005	12	230,736
2006	12	193,824

The Audit Commission changed its financial year end in 1997 so there are two sets of accounts for that year. Our financial year end was changed again in 2004, so the period 2002-04 is for 17 months, from November 2002 to March 2004.

Commission for Equality and Human Rights

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent representations her Department has received from black and minority ethnic groups on the involvement of the Race Equality Group in the development of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights. [127451]

Meg Munn: The Secretary of State has received two letters on the involvement of the Race Equality Group in the development of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights (CEHR). Officials have also met with the chair of the British Federation of Race Equality Councils, who is also a member of the Race Equality Group, to discuss a programme of work to aid the transition of race equality councils to the CEHR.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government for how long the appointed Transition Commissioners are expected to assist the Commissioner for Equality and Human Rights. [127452]

Meg Munn: The transition Commissioners have been appointed to assist in assuring good continuity between the work of the existing equality Commissions (Commission for Racial Equality, Disability Rights Commission and the Equal Opportunities Commission) and that of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights. Under the Equality Act, the transition commissioners will remain in post for up to two years after the dissolution of the existing Commissions.

Community Development: Expenditure

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many Millennium communities have been constructed; in what locations; and how many homes have been completed in each. [128534]

Yvette Cooper: There are seven Millennium communities. Greenwich Millennium Village was the first to be announced in 1997. The others are at Allerton Bywater (near Leeds), New Islington (East Manchester), South Lynn (Kings Lynn), East Ketley (Telford), Oakgrove (Milton Keynes) and Hastings. In total the programme will bring forward over 9,000 eco-home 'Excellent' standard homes, plus other commercial and community facilities, providing inspiration to both the development industry and the general house-buying public and demonstrating how difficult sites can be brought back into use.

All the projects are currently on site with the exception of Oakgrove (Milton Keynes) where construction work is due to start towards the end of 2007.

A total number of 955 homes have been completed to date. Of these, 867 are at Greenwich, 44 are at Allerton Bywater, 21 are at Kings Lynn and 23 are at New Islington.

A further 895 homes are currently under construction, and we anticipate 6,000 being completed by 2010.

Council Housing: Rents

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what powers local authorities have to increase rent for council house tenants; and if she will make a statement. [127660]

Yvette Cooper: Section 24 of the Housing Act 1985, as amended by section 162 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 and by section 92 of the Local Government Act 2003, provides that:

1. A local housing authority may make such reasonable charges as they may determine for the tenancy or occupation of their houses.

2. The authority shall from time to time review rents and make such changes, either of rents generally or of particular rents, as circumstances may require.

European Framework Convention on the Protection of National Minorities

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment her Department has made of the merits of including Cornish people within the terms of the European Framework Convention on the Protection of National Minorities. [123433]

Meg Munn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 6 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1885-86W.

Local Government: Reform

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether a by-election would be held under her proposals for reform of local government if a member of a directly elected executive (a) resigned and (b) died. [127063]

Ruth Kelly: The Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill provides that if the executive leader resigns or dies, there is a by-election for the whole executive. If any other member of the executive resigns or dies, it is the decision of the leader whether or not there is a by-election for that position, unless the remaining number of executive members is below the minimum allowed in which case there must be a by-election for that position.

Members: Correspondence

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Northavon dated (a) 2 October 2006, (b) 14 November 2006 and (c) 26 January 2007 on home information packs. [128607]

Yvette Cooper: I have now replied to the hon. Member's correspondence. I apologise for the delay.

(2) what steps she plans to take to ensure that her Department takes into account the principles of good regulatory practice in her forthcoming consultation on non-domestic rates for unbundled local loops; and if she will make a statement; [128061]

(3) what account her forthcoming consultation on non-domestic rates for unbundled loops will take of the potential impact on the wider broadband market; and if she will make a statement. [128074]

Mr. Woolas: The forthcoming consultation on non-domestic rates and local loop unbundling will be in line with the Government's code of practice on consultations. This includes following better regulation best practice and carrying out a regulatory impact assessment which will cover the factors relevant to delivering the best solution for administering the future rating of unbundled local loops.

Social Rented Housing

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) who maintains the National Register of Social Housing; [128489]

(2) how many homes in England are on the National Register of Social Housing. [128590]

Yvette Cooper: The National Register of Social Housing is under development and contained records of 1,026,338 units of social housing stock as at 9 March 2007. The database is maintained by the Analytical Services Directorate in Communities and Local Government.

Tenancy Deposit Scheme

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department is taking to ensure that letting agencies receive the information necessary to implement the tenancy deposit scheme. [127420]

In addition an advertising campaign started on 26 February which will run to late May using national press, regional press, trade press, foreign traveller press, online and radio. [128910]

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether any (a) people and (b) organisations have been served with orders for disclosure under section 8(3) of the Charities Act 1993 and associated legislation by the Charity Commission in pursuit of its investigation into compliance issues at the Smith Institute; and if she will make a statement. [128156]

Edward Miliband: This is a matter for the Charity Commission as the non-ministerial Government Department responsible for the regulation of charities in England and Wales. The chief executive of the Charity Commission will write to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1633W, on the Smith Institute, what the title was of each publication purchased; and how many volumes of each were purchased. [128888]

Slavery: Anniversaries

Ms Butler: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what legacy he expects the Government to leave at the end of the commemorations of the bicentenary of the abolition of the transatlantic slave trade. [117867]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Government have worked with grassroots and national organisations around four main themes, which will each provide a legacy:

1. To increase awareness of the slave trade and Britain's role in both the trade and its abolition

2. To commemorate those who suffered and died as a result of the transatlantic slave trade and recognise those people who campaigned for abolition and ensured the new laws were enforced.

3. To increase awareness of the need to address legacy issues of the slave trade, such as discrimination, racism and inequality in the UK, and poverty, disease and lack of educational access in parts of Africa, and highlight the ongoing work of the Government in this respect.

4. To highlight that slavery exists today in the form of people trafficking for the purposes of sexual exploitation and forced labour and that the Government are taking action to eradicate it.

The Government's approach to the bicentenary complements our ongoing action to tackle contemporary issues, including race inequality and community cohesion issues in the UK, poverty and modern day slavery internationally, and improving education and access to it for all our children. Further announcements will be made throughout the year about what the Government are doing in these areas to ensure the bicentenary commemorations leave a positive and lasting legacy for the future.

Ms Butler: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will bring forward proposals for an annual remembrance day in relation to abolition of the slave trade. [125021]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Government are committed to commemorating the bicentenary of the abolition of the slave trade and has a range of events and activities planned throughout 2007.

There have been calls from several quarters for a national memorial day to recognise the injustice of the slave trade and its many victims. There is already a UNESCO International Day for the Remembrance of the Slave Trade and its Abolition on 23 August. Some cities in the UK, such as Liverpool, already take part in this.

The Government are aware of the calls for an annual national remembrance day and we are keen, during this bicentenary year, to listen to the views of local communities about what date this should fall on and what form it might take, if such a day were to be instituted.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

West Bank: Israeli Settlements

10. Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will table a motion under Chapter 7 of the United Nations Charter requiring Israel not to expand its settlements in the west bank. [128297]

Dr. Howells: Settlements are illegal under international law and settlement activity is an obstacle to peace. The Roadmap is clear that Israel should freeze all settlement construction including the "natural growth" of existing settlements, and dismantle all outposts built since 2001. We will continue to raise our concerns about settlement activity with the Israeli government.

We have no plans to table a Chapter 7 resolution in the UN Security Council onIsrael's settlement activities.

Palestine Government

11. Mr. Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of prospects for a National Unity government in Palestine. [128298]

Dr. Howells: I welcome President Abbas' continued efforts at intra-Palestinian reconciliation, which have led to agreement on the forming of a National Unity government. This is a positive step.

We will judge the National Unity government by its actions and respond accordingly.

13. Mr. Malik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of prospects for a National Unity government in Palestine. [128300]

Dr. Howells: I welcome President Abbas' continued efforts at intra-Palestinian reconciliation, which have led to agreement on the forming of a National Unity government. This is a positive step.

We will judge the National Unity government by its actions and respond accordingly.

Arms Sales

12. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Chinese government on arms sales to Iran. [128299]

Mr. McCartney: As part of discussions on a new Security Council resolution, officials have had detailed discussions on imposing restrictions on arms exports to and from Iran with all their P5 (China, France, Russia, US) colleagues. I am pleased to say we have now reached agreement on a text, and are taking forward these discussions with non-permanent members.

We expect the measures to build on those in resolution 1737 and cover financial measures and asset freezes against Iranian entities and individuals, as well as restrictions on the arms trade with Iran.

This is a proportional and incremental response in order to increase the pressure on Iran, which is flouting its legal obligations to comply with UN Security Council requirements.

Climate Change

14. Michael Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the European Union is taking to promote the tackling of climate change internationally. [128301]

Margaret Beckett: The EU has shown international leadership on tackling climate change by agreeing an ambitious package at the Spring Council, including a commitment to reduce EU greenhouse gas emissions by 20 per cent. by 2020.

This underlines the EU's intent to move swiftly to a competitive, low carbon economy, and paves the way for progress in the G8 and the UN. It also shows that EU governments are responding actively to their citizens' concerns.

Zimbabwe

16. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her South African counterpart on the security situation in Zimbabwe. [128303]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke to her South African counterpart on 15 March about the situation in Zimbabwe. They discussed the deepening crisis and what more needs to be done to increase the pressure on Mugabe and his Government to change their policies and bring the country back from the brink. We will continue to work closely with South Africa and other members of the international community to achieve this end.

I should add that in my statement to the Human Rights Council on 13 March, I joined my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, in utterly condemning the violent repression of the peaceful prayer meeting on 11 March. While in Geneva last week, I also discussed Zimbabwe with Louise Arbour, UN High Commissioner for Human Rights. The situation in Zimbabwe remains deeply worrying. Importantly, our humanitarian assistance in the form of food and health care is continuing and this is helping to keep ordinary Zimbabweans alive.

18. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the political situation in Zimbabwe. [128305]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary in her answers to questions in the House earlier today set out the Government's position on the political situation in Zimbabwe.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to Portugal on the unacceptability of the presence of President Mugabe and other members of the government of Zimbabwe at the EU-African Union summit during the forthcoming Portuguese presidency of the EU. [127732]

Mr. McCartney: The UK wants a successful EU-Africa summit that signals the EU's commitment to Africa and confirms a genuine partnership between the two continents founded inter alia on a respect for good governance and human rights which is lacking in today's Zimbabwe. We have made our views on Zimbabwean representation at the summit clear to our EU partners, including Portugal. We will look to the presidency for a solution on attendance that is consistent with the EU Common Position on Zimbabwe.

Iraq: Civil War

17. Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of whether Iraq is in a state of civil war. [128304]

Dr. Howells: We share concerns at the high levels of violence in Iraq, but the term civil war is not an accurate description: the Iraqi Government are still unitary and there is no rival Government. Key is to bring down the level of violence and to reach a sustainable political solution. The Government of Iraq are committed to this and their friends and allies are providing support to help them achieve it.

Bilateral Relations: Russia

19. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on bilateral relations with Russia. [128306]

Mr. Hoon: A productive partnership with Russia is important to the successful achievement of a wide range of the Government's international priorities. We will continue to work with Russia on important issues such as Kosovo, Iran, energy and climate security, and in the promotion of trade and investment. Where obstacles and disagreements exist, we continue to insist on a transparent, open and honest dialogue to resolve them.

Ethiopia

20. Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications of the recent release of kidnapped embassy officials in Ethiopia for the activities of consular staff. [128307]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are delighted that the five staff and family members from our embassy in Addis Ababa abducted recently in Ethiopia have been released. The Government do, however, remain concerned for the welfare of the Ethiopians who were taken at the same time as the embassy group and hope they too will be released.

To deal with this incident, the Government deployed additional staff to our embassies in Asmara and Addis Ababa, and to Djibouti. Along with staff already posted to these embassies, and with officials in London and elsewhere, they worked tirelessly and in a wholly co-ordinated way to help secure the release of the five.

The Government are grateful for the exceptional co-operation and assistance received from Prime Minister Meles of Ethiopia and President Isaias of Eritrea, and their Governments, as well as from others in the region.

Sri Lanka

21. Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the political situation in Sri Lanka; and if she will make a statement. [128308]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met Sri Lanka's Foreign Minister, Rohitha Bogollagama, on 7 March. She made clear our view that violence would not resolve the conflict. She emphasised the Government's commitment to Sri Lanka's Norwegian-facilitated peace process and our willingness to help bring about a peaceful solution. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister reiterated these points in the House on 14 March.

Pakistan

22. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Pakistan concerning the dismissal of the Chief Justice. [128309]

Dr. Howells: We are closely following developments in Pakistan following the decision to suspend the Chief Justice of Pakistan and to refer his case to the Supreme Judicial Council.

The EU Troika has made a joint démarche to the Government of Pakistan, stressing the need to respect the independence of the judiciary and to follow the rule of law.

Iran

23. Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the UK is advocating at the UN Security Council on Iran's nuclear programme. [128310]

Dr. Howells: The United Kingdom is co-sponsoring the Resolution on Iran currently before the Security Council, drafted by the UK, China, France, Germany, Russia and the US (the "E3+3"), which builds on the measures implemented by Security Council Resolution 1737.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of Iran's compliance with Security Council resolutions; and if she will make a statement. [128302]

Dr. Howells: International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Director General, Dr. Mohammad el-Baradei, reported on 22 February that Iran has not complied with Security Council Resolution 1737, and therefore neither with 1696 which made the IAEA Board requirement of the suspension of all enrichment-related and reprocessing activities a mandatory requirement. The Security Council is, as envisaged in Resolution 1737, considering further measures under Article 41 of the UN Charter.

Kashmir

24. Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Governments of India and Pakistan on the political situation in Kashmir. [128311]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed India-Pakistan relations and the situation in Kashmir with the Government of Pakistan during her visit to Islamabad in February 2007.

We welcome India and Pakistan's continuing commitment to the dialogue process, and hope that this will lead to a lasting resolution of all outstanding issues, including Kashmir.

Convention on Bribery

25. Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the United Kingdom's obligations are under the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development convention on bribery; and if she will make a statement. [128312]

Mr. McCartney: I made a statement on 19 March, and we published the report on our progress on implementing the Convention on 15 March. I have placed copies of both documents in the Library of the House.

Afghanistan: Administration of Justice

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she expects functioning institutions of justice to be fully operational as set out in the London Compact of 2006 in (a) Badakhshan, (b) Badghis, (c) Baghlan, (d) Balkh, (e) Bamyan, (f) Daykundi, (g) Farah, (h) Faryab, (i) Ghazni, (j) Ghor, (k) Helmand, (l) Herat, (m) Jowzjan, (n) Kabul, (o) Kandahar, (p) Kapisa, (q) Khost, (r) Konar, (s) Kunduz, (t) Laghman, (u) Lowgar, (v) Nangarhar, (w) Nimruz, (x) Nurestan, (y) Oruzgan, (z) Paktia, (aa) Paktika, (ab) Panjshir, (ac) Parvan, (ad) Samangan, (ae) Sar-e Pol, (af) Takhar, (ag) Wardak and (ah) Zabol in Afghanistan by the end of 2010; what progress has been made; and what progress she expects to be made by the end of the year in each province. [127499]

Dr. Howells: The benchmarks set out in the 2006 Afghanistan Compact cover a range of issues including the institutions of justice. The Compact also mandated the Joint Co-ordination and Monitoring Board (JCMB) to keep progress of all the benchmarks under regular review. The JCMB, comprising members of both the Afghan Government and the international community, meets four times a year to review the implementation of the Compact and suggest corrective action, as appropriate. As a member of the JCMB, the UK is playing a full part in ensuring the Compact is implemented and carefully monitored.

The full details of all the progress reviews to date are available on the Afghanistan National Development Strategy's website (www.ands.gov.af) under 'JCMB'.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the reforms to strengthen the professionalism, credibility and integrity of key institutions of the justice system in Afghanistan was met by the end of 2006 in accordance with the target of the London Compact of 2006; what further progress she expects to be made by the end of 2007; and whether she expects the targets to be fully implemented by the end of 2010. [127526]

Dr. Howells: The Italian Government is the partner on justice sector reform in Afghanistan. However, it is supported by the efforts and investments of the UK and other members of the International Community, including through the Government's work on Counter Narcotics (CN). To date we have contributed to the Italian remit by building up the counter-narcotic criminal justice system infrastructure in the following ways: professional mentors working with organisations such as the Criminal Justice Task Force, supporting judges, prosecutors, investigators; building a high-secure detention prison wing; Her Majesty's Prison Service training for Afghan prison officers; and training and mentoring for the CN Police.

The Benchmarks set out in the 2006 Afghanistan Compact cover a range of issues, including the institutions of justice. The Compact also mandated the Joint Co-ordination and Monitoring Board (JCMB) to keep progress of all the benchmarks under regular review. The JCMB, comprising members of both the Afghan Government and the international community, meets four times a year to review the implementation of the compact and suggest corrective action, as appropriate. As a member of the JCMB, the UK is playing a full part in ensuring the compact is implemented and carefully monitored.

The full details of all the progress reviews to date are available on the Afghanistan National Development Strategy's website (www.ands.gov.af) under 'JCMB'.

Afghanistan: Drugs

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the impact of opium crop eradication efforts in Helmand in 2006 on the security situation in the province. [127143]

Margaret Beckett: According to the UN Office on Drugs and Crime, an estimated 3,166 hectares of opium crop were eradicated in Helmand in 2006. There is no evidence to suggest that increased Taliban activity in Helmand last year was due to the Afghan Government's counter narcotics efforts. Poppy eradication does not generally meet with violent resistance if it is targeted at areas where there are legal alternatives for farmers.

The UK will continue to work with the Afghans to ensure eradication in Helmand is targeted effectively and that local security conditions are taken fully into account.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the impact of the eradication of opium crop in 2005 on the overall opium crop harvested in Afghanistan in 2006. [127144]

Margaret Beckett: I refer the right hon. Member to the written answer my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, (Dr. Howells), gave the hon. Member for Newport, West (Paul Flynn) on 13 December 2006, Official Report, columns 1099-1100W. Cultivation of opium in Afghanistan went up by 59 per cent. in 2006, as a result of a number of factors. However, the UN Office on Drugs and Crime's 2006 opium survey suggests that where eradication took place in 2005 farmers were less likely to plant poppy in the next season.

Eradication is an important means of deterrent, where there is access to legal livelihoods. It needs, however, to be balanced with measures to interdict drugs, bring criminals to justice, build institutions and encourage development of rural communities to provide alternatives for poppy farmers.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what strategy is in place for opium crop eradication in Afghanistan in the lead up to the 2007 harvest. [127147]

Margaret Beckett: Eradication policy and implementation is the responsibility of the Afghan Government, and is one of the eight pillars of their National Drug Control Strategy (NDCS). The NDCS supports the efforts of the Central Afghan Eradication Force and governor-led-eradication campaigns. The NDCS also states that eradication should be targeted in areas where there is access to legal rural livelihoods. The UK provides support to the Afghans for the planning, monitoring and targeting of eradication.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her estimate is of the volume of production of opium in Afghanistan in each of the past five years; and what her estimate is of likely production volume in the next three years. [127860]

Dr. Howells: The UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) conducts an annual survey into the level of opium poppy cultivation and production in Afghanistan. These surveys assess that the potential volume of opium production in Afghanistan was 6,100 metric tonnes (mt) in 2006, 4,100 mt in 2005, 4,200 mt in 2004, 3,600 mt in 2003 and 3,400 mt in 2002. The cultivation picture varies between and within provinces and comparing total levels of production does not necessarily represent an accurate picture of progress to date; in areas of Afghanistan where access to governance, security and development has improved, reductions achieved in 2005 were sustained and in some cases improved upon in 2006. Although it is too early to predict the levels of production in the next three years, the UNODC's 2007 Rapid Assessment Survey suggests that Afghanistan may be facing another year of high poppy cultivation.

Afghanistan: Migrant Workers

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she expects Afghanistan and (a) its neighbours and (b) other countries in the region to reach agreements to enable Afghanistan (i) to import skilled labour and (ii) to enable Afghans to seek work in the region and send remittances back to Afghanistan by the end of 2010 as set out in the target of the 2006 London Compact; what progress has been made; and what progress she expects to be made by the end of 2007. [127504]

Dr. Howells: The Afghan Government and their regional/international partners continue to work towards the benchmarks set out in the Afghanistan Compact. The Joint Co-ordination and Monitoring Board (JCMB), which comprises members of the Government of Afghanistan and the international community is mandated under the Compact to keep all the benchmarks under regular review. An update on progress against the benchmarks is expected in May. The full details will be available on the Afghanistan National Development Strategy's website (www.ands.gov.af) under "JCMB".

Afghanistan: Prisons

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she expects prisons to have separate facilities for men, women and juveniles in Afghanistan by the end of 2010 in accordance with the target of the London Compact of 2006; what progress has been made towards the target; and what progress she expects to be made by the end of 2007. [127527]

Dr. Howells: The female prison population in Afghanistan currently stands at approximately 300 persons, approximately 2 per cent. of the overall prison population. They are all detained in separate accommodation for women.

In Afghan law, a juvenile is between the ages of 12 and 18. Juvenile detention is monitored by the UN Office of Drug Control. They report that a number of designated facilities currently exist, which are separate from prisons and other adult detention facilities. Adult males are detained separately from both women and juveniles.

Work is ongoing on construction projects at Wardak, Lashkar Gah, and a new detention facility in Gereshk. Two other facilities, Mazar-e-Sharif and Gardez are being overseen through the UN Office of Drugs and Crime and should be completed end of 2007. All these new facilities will be fully compliant with UN minimum standards of prisoner accommodation.

Burma

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her European colleagues on the military dictatorship in Burma. [127514]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions on Burma with European colleagues.

However, I raised Burma with EU and Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) colleagues at the EU/ASEAN Ministerial meeting in Nuremberg on 15 March. I stressed at the meeting, which was attended by all ASEAN Nations including Burma, that the ongoing human rights abuses perpetrated by the Burmese government were unacceptable and should cease. A number of EU Partners also condemned the Burmese regime.

Chad: Refugees

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the situation in Chad; what action the Government is taking to avert a worsening of the situation in Chad; what discussions she has had with (a) her counterparts on the United Nations Security Council and (b) the British High Commission in Yaounde on the assessment of the situation by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees. [126807]

Mr. McCartney: The UK is in regular contact with the UN High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) and other humanitarian agencies about the evolving situation in eastern Chad. Officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and the Department for International Development (DFID) undertook a humanitarian assessment to eastern Chad in February. We are concerned at the increasing levels of internal displacement due to inter-ethnic fighting and cross-border attacks from Darfur, the protection of refugees, the security environment for humanitarian agency operations and the fragility of the natural resource base to support displaced populations. The UK, through DFID, is providing £4 million to support the humanitarian response to refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs) this year.

Representatives from the FCO and our High Commission in Yaounde visit Chad regularly. A UK delegation, including a representative from our High Commission in Yaounde, visited N'Djamena from 19-22 February this year. The delegation met a wide range of interlocutors, including the Foreign Minister and senior officials of the Government of Chad, and the UNHCR representative. The delegation took every opportunity to impress on interlocutors:

the need to improve Chad/Sudan relations and border security, in accordance with the Tripoli Agreement; the importance of the Government of Chad honouring its responsibility to the refugees and IDPs, and accepting the deployment of the UN to assist in achieving this objective; that we and the international community were looking to the Government of Chad to pursue dialogue with the rebel groups with a view to bringing Chad's internal rebellion to a peaceful conclusion.

The UK continues to raise the humanitarian situation in Chad, including the plight of refugees and the internally displaced, in relevant Security Council consultations on a regular basis. We did this most recently on 27 February.

Together with partners in the Security Council, we are urging the UN to develop a workable plan for a UN presence in Chad as proposed by UN Security Council Resolution 1706.

China: Abortion

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on forced abortions in China; and if she will make a statement. [128110]

Mr. McCartney: We are aware of reports of the maladministration of China's One Child Policy involving enforced sterilisation and abortions, including those highlighted by the human rights lawyer, Chen Guangcheng. While we do not question China's right or need to implement family planning policies, we have made it clear to the Chinese Government that we believe they should be based on the principles of consent and not coercion.

Cuba: Political Prisoners

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her estimate is of the number of political prisoners being held by the Cuban Government. [127505]

Mr. Hoon: It is difficult to estimate the number of political prisoners in Cuba as the Cuban Government maintains tight control over information about its prisons. However, Amnesty International currently recognises that there are at least 67 "prisoners of conscience" in Cuba and is currently reviewing the cases of dozens of other prisoners who could also be considered prisoners of conscience.

In a report dated 9 January, the Cuban Commission for Human Rights and National Reconciliation (CCHRNR—a standard non-official source of human rights information in Cuba) documented 283 cases. The CCHRNR has also reported thousands of young Cubans who are imprisoned on the charge of "peligrosidad predelictiva", which means they have not committed a crime but are considered likely to do so. More information on the human rights situation in Cuba can be found in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's 2006 Annual Human Rights Report at:

www.fco.gov.uk/humanrights

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations her Department has made to the Government of Cuba on the detention of Dr. Oscar Elias Biscet. [127720]

Mr. Hoon: We remain extremely concerned about the plight of Dr. Oscar Elias Biscet and other political prisoners in Cuba. We are particularly concerned about those political prisoners who, like Dr. Biscet, are reported to be suffering poor health yet are not provided with adequate medical treatment. Our embassy in Havana continues to monitor Dr. Biscet's case and maintains contact with his supporters and family. We regularly raise the situation of all political prisoners in Cuba with Cuban authorities both in London and Havana and call for their immediate release. During its most recent review of the EU's Common Position on Cuba in June 2006, the European Council once again

"urged the Cuban Government to unconditionally release all political prisoners".

More information on the human rights situation in Cuba, and on UK and EU actions, can be found in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's 2006 Annual Human Rights Report, available at:

www.fco.gov.uk/humanrights

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms are in place to ensure her Department's economical use of paper. [128007]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office through our intranet, environmental volunteers in directorates, and annual awareness raising campaigns encourages staff to rely where possible on paperless communications and to minimise the amount of paper consumed.

EC Action: Terrorism

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the (a) terms of reference and (b) membership are of the European Union's clearing house in respect of the addition and deletion of groups included on the list of terrorist organisations; what opportunities there are for (i) the organisations themselves and (ii) other non-government bodies (A) to have a hearing and (B) to submit evidence; and if she will make a statement. [128848]

Dr. Howells: The Council of the EU decided in 2001 to draw up a list of terrorist groups and individuals in order to implement UN Security Council Resolution 1373 (2001), which obliges all UN member states to

"freeze without delay funds and other financial assets or economic resources of persons who commit, or attempt to commit, terrorist acts or participate in or facilitate the commission of terrorist acts".

The EU autonomous terrorist asset freezing regime was established under Council Common Position 2001/931/Common Foreign and Security Policy of 27 December 2001.

The Council keeps the EU list of terrorist groups and individuals under continual review. Decisions to add or remove individuals or groups are made by the Council of Ministers.

The EU has reviewed and improved its procedures for listing individuals and groups, taking full account of the judgment by the Court of First Instance of the European Communities on 12 December 2006. All groups listed since 12 December have been notified of the reasons for their inclusion on the list, and an explanation as to how the group can exercise its right to provide further information relevant to the case and/or petition for delisting.

In addition to petitioning the Council for delisting, groups and individuals may also challenge their listing before the Court of First Instance of the European Communities.

Other non-government bodies can also provide relevant information and/or evidence to the Council of the EU, by contacting the Council Secretariat.

Embassies: Ministers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she keeps a record of which Ministers have stayed at each British embassy or residence. [123001]

Margaret Beckett: Records of where Ministers stay on overseas visits are not held centrally. Obtaining the information the hon. Member requires would incur disproportionate cost.

Equatorial Guinea: Human Rights

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the human rights record of the government of Equatorial Guinea. [126974]

Mr. McCartney: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office takes a close interest in the human rights situation in Equatorial Guinea, and raises concerns about human rights issues both bilaterally and through the regular EU dialogue with Equatorial Guinea.

We continue to be extremely concerned about the lack of access to justice and lack of independence of the judiciary in Equatorial Guinea, following the trials of the alleged coup plotters in 2005. Arbitrary detention is common for political reasons, as well as criminal, and is sometimes imposed for apparently minor offences. Imprisonment without trial is also commonplace. Expatriates working on contracts in the country have been detained, not always in prison, in purely commercial disputes. Corruption and bribery is widespread throughout the judicial system. Nepotism is also rife, so resolving consular difficulties can be problematic and time consuming. Where trials do occur, they are often considered to be unfair. Amnesty International, which observed the coup trials in 2005, stated in its 2006 report that subsequent trials were also unfair, with defendants held incommunicado before the trial and reportedly convicted on the basis of confession statements extracted under torture.

Iran: Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response she (a) has made and (b) plans to make to the European Commission's conclusion on Iran's future acquisition of sufficient weapons-grade uranium to make a nuclear weapon; and if she will make a statement. [127925]

Dr. Howells: The European Council Secretariat prepared a "food for thought" paper, intended to stimulate discussion at the February meeting of the General Affairs and External Relations Council. The paper did not reflect a considered or shared EU analysis.

Concerns about Iranian development of enrichment technology are pressing, but it is also clear that Iran is having difficulty in mastering enrichment technology. We still have time to make diplomacy work, and a renewed suspension of enrichment-related activity is still relevant and important.

The UK and the rest of the EU remain fully committed to finding a negotiated solution and to prevent Iran from acquiring the means to produce nuclear weapons, through stepping up pressure on Iran to comply with United Nation Security Council and International Atomic Energy Agency Board of Governors requirements while keeping generous proposals on the table. We have seen that Security Council Resolution 1737 has stimulated a debate inside Iran about the cost of the course on which the regime has set the country. A further resolution imposing additional incremental measures is under discussion in the Security Council.

Iraq: Oil

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings officials from her Department have held with international oil companies since January 2003 at which Iraq was discussed; and who was present at each meeting. [128150]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave to him on 19 February, Official Report, columns 399-400W. Meetings with oil companies since 2003 have involved a wide range of Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials.

Marc Swanson

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress her officials have made in their inquiries of the Ministry of Justice in Brazil on the disappearance of Marc Swanson in 2003; and if she will make a statement. [128287]

Dr. Howells: Our officials in London and Brazil are continuing to press the Brazilian Ministry of Justice for information about the ongoing investigation into the disappearance of Marc Swanson. We will continue to do all we properly can to ensure that the authorities are doing everything possible to trace him. Officials continue to maintain contact with the local police and will ensure the family are kept fully up to date.

Marie Therese Nlandu

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has received on the imprisonment of Marie Thèrese Nlandu in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [126811]

Mr. McCartney: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received a number of letters from members of the public and hon. Members on the detention of Mme Nlandu. There have also been several parliamentary questions on the case.

Namibia

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Government Ministers visited Namibia in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [126988]

Mr. McCartney: No Government Ministers visited Namibia in 2005 or 2006.

Namibia: Land Redistribution

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Namibian government on land redistribution in Namibia. [126973]

Mr. McCartney: Our high commission in Windhoek has regular discussions with the Government of Namibia, including over the issue of land redistribution. In the areas of land reform and restitution, the Government of Namibia are officially committed to a constitutional and market-based process of land reform through the willing buyer, willing seller principle. The Department for International Development has previously funded assistance on the technical aspects of Land Reform, in collaboration with Germany, by supporting the work of the Namibian Ministry of Land's permanent technical team. Although the UK no longer has a bilateral aid programme in Namibia, areas such as land reform continue to be supported, through our contribution to the European Commission.

Namibia: Zimbabwe

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Foreign Minister of Namibia on Zimbabwe. [126990]

Mr. McCartney: Our High Commission in Windhoek regularly raises Zimbabwe with Namibian Government Ministers and the Government of Namibia is well aware of our views. Zimbabwe was most recently discussed on 22 February when the Heads of EU Missions in Windhoek met the Namibian Deputy Foreign Minister.

North Korea: Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the access given to North Korean nuclear facilities for International Atomic Energy Agency director Mohamed el-Baradei. [126808]

Mr. McCartney: Dr. el-Baradei visited the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) on 13-14 March. He said during a press briefing on 5 March that the purpose of his visit would be twofold. Firstly, to consider normalisation of relations between the DPRK and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and secondly, to make arrangements for IAEA personnel to carry out inspections, as agreed at the latest round of Six Party Talks on 13 February.

Further details on Dr. el-Baradei's visit to the DPRK can be found on the IAEA website at:

http://www.iaea.org/NewsCenter/Focus/IaeaDprk/index.shtml.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role she expects the United Kingdom to play in ensuring North Korea dismantles its nuclear weapons programme; and if she will make a statement. [127337]

Mr. McCartney: The agreement reached by the participants in the Six Party Talks on 13 February is a step in the right direction towards the peaceful denuclearisation of the Korean Peninsula. The UK bilaterally and the EU will take every opportunity to urge the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) to fulfil the commitments it has entered into. However, we remain profoundly concerned by the nuclear test conducted on 9 October 2006 and look to the DPRK to stop all activities of concern as set out in UN Security Council Resolution 1718. Meanwhile the sanctions remain in place.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response she has made to the decision taken by North Korea to commence a nuclear disarmament programme; and if she will make a statement. [127340]

Mr. McCartney: We welcome the Democratic People's Republic of Korea's (DPRK) commitment to shut down and seal the Yongbyon nuclear facility and invite back International Atomic Energy Agency personnel to monitor the agreement. This is an essential first step towards the goal of full denuclearisation of the Korean Peninsula. The UK bilaterally and the EU will continue to urge the DPRK to fulfil the commitments it has entered into. We remain profoundly concerned by the nuclear test conducted on 9 October 2006 and look to the DPRK to stop all activities of concern as set out in UN Security Council Resolution 1718. Meanwhile, the sanctions remain in place.

Pakistan: Entry Clearances

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff at HM High Commission, Islamabad, are employed to work full-time on immigration matters. [127747]

Dr. Howells: At present there are 245 staff employed full-time on Immigration matters in our High Commission in Islamabad.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what average time was taken between the receipt by HM high commission, Islamabad of a registered appeal against the refusal of entry clearance and a review being completed by an entry clearance manager in the most recent period for which figures are available. [127755]

Dr. Howells: During January to February 2007, the most recent period for which the information is available, the average time taken between receipt of a registered appeal and a review being completed at our visa section in Islamabad is approximately six weeks.

Poland

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans she has to visit Poland. [126969]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary currently has no plans to visit Poland. However, she met the Polish Foreign Minister Fotyga in London on 19 March.

Security Guards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contracts were awarded by her Department to private military security companies for work in (a) Iraq, (b) Afghanistan and (c) other countries in each of the last five years; what the (i) value and (ii) purpose was of each such contract; and if she will make a statement. [127014]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has a duty of care to its staff and to ensure that all contracts are subject to rigorous selection so that we obtain full value for money. Any company engaged by the Department needs to pass through a stringent and transparent procurement process in line with Public Procurement Guidelines.

The information in the table covers contracts put in place by the FCO with private security companies, and reflects the contract values concerned and not the actual spend. Many of these contracts, most notably those in Iraq and Afghanistan, also cover other Government Departments with the costs thereof being shared out accordingly.

The FCO has in excess of 200 posts and operates a devolved budgetary system for the contracting of security services, with the exception of certain posts in hostile/high-threat environments (in the table), therefore complete central records of contracts with private security companies are not maintained.

Each post would need to be contacted to provide details of the companies used and the value of each security contract. Such office-wide outreach would require significant resource, in excess of the current threshold for disproportionate cost.

Sri Lanka: Armed Conflict

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking in relation to recent clashes between the Tamil Tigers and the Sri Lankan government. [127889]

Dr. Howells: I refer my right hon. Friend to the written answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Cotswold (Mr. Clifton-Brown) on 13 March 2007, Official Report, columns 246- 47W. The UK urges both sides to the conflict to pursue a peaceful solution and to do more to protect the civilian population.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations her Department has received on the conflict in Sri Lanka. [127890]

Dr. Howells: We receive frequent representations from hon. Members, members of the Sri Lankan diaspora and non-governmental organisations on the conflict in Sri Lanka. These representations reflect a wide variety of views.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with EU counterparts on the conflict in Sri Lanka. [127891]

Dr. Howells: The EU, as one of the co-chairs of the Tokyo Conference, has a key role to play in the Sri Lankan peace process. Officials in London, Brussels and at our high commission in Colombo are in frequent contact with the German EU Presidency, EU partners and the European Commission.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the recent clashes between the Tamil Tigers and the Sri Lankan Government. [127892]

Dr. Howells: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to him on 14 March 2007, Official Report, column 283, and to the written answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cotswold (Mr. Clifton-Brown) on 13 March 2007, Official Report, columns 246-247W.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking in relation to recent reports of human rights abuses against Tamils by the Sri Lankan Government. [127893]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade spoke at the fourth session of the UN Human Rights Commission in Geneva this month about the need for the Sri Lankan Government to move forward with the effective investigation of human rights violations and to hold those perpetrating such acts to account. There should be no immunity for human rights violators.

I also refer my right hon. Friend to the written answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cotswold (Mr. Clifton-Brown) on 13 March 2007, Official Report, columns 246-247W.

Sudan: Armed Conflict

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Foreign Secretary of (a) Libya, (b) Egypt and (c) Chad on the Darfur Region of Sudan. [126998]

Mr. McCartney: The UK's ambassador-at-large for the Sudanese Peace Process, Christopher Prentice, met the Chadian Foreign Minister on 20 February. He also met senior representatives of the Government of Libya on 21 February.

The UK's Permanent Representative-designate to the UN in New York, John Sawers, discussed Darfur with a range of senior interlocutors in Egypt on 4 to 5 March. And my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, met the Egyptian Ambassador on 6 March.

With all our interlocutors we emphasise the need for an immediate ceasefire in Darfur, an early resumption of the political process there, and the rapid implementation of the UN support package for the African Union Mission in Sudan, culminating in the formation of the hybrid force.

Sudan: Chad

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Governments of Sudan and Chad to try to reduce border tensions. [126940]

Mr. McCartney: We take every opportunity to press both Sudan and Chad to stop supporting each other's rebels and to fulfil their obligations under the Tripoli Agreement. Our ambassador-designate to the United Nations in New York, John Sawers, did so in meetings with the Government of Sudan on 6 March. And Christopher Prentice, our ambassador-at-large for the Sudanese Peace Process, raised the issue in meetings with the Government of Chad on 20 February. Given the importance of this issue, we will continue to press both Governments on this matter. We also regularly discuss Sudan and Chad with our partners in the Security Council and with regional Governments such as Libya.

I raised a range of issues with the Sudanese Minister for Justice in a meeting with him in the margins of the Human Rights Council in Geneva on 14 March.

Sudan: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in introducing the new UN-AU hybrid force into Darfur. [126941]

Mr. McCartney: The UN-African Union (AU) hybrid force for Darfur will be the final part of a three-phase approach to increasing UN support to the AU Mission in Sudan (AMIS) agreed in Addis Ababa in November last year. The initial stage (the Light Support Package) has been partially deployed. The AU and UN have agreed on the details of the second stage (the Heavy Support Package), but have been waiting, since 24 January, for President Bashir's acceptance of these. The UN's Department of Peace-Keeping Operations is working with the AU to finalise details of the Hybrid force.

My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, visited New York last month to press the UN for more rapid action to implement the support package for AMIS. We have passed the same message to the AU. In the meanwhile we remain committed to supporting the AU force, to which we have committed over £65 million since its inception.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Namibian counterpart on the progress of the African Union in dealing with the humanitarian situation in Darfur. [126972]

Mr. McCartney: The issue of Darfur is raised through our high commission in Windhoek, as part of a regular dialogue on African peacekeeping issues. The issue was discussed most recently on 22 February, when heads of EU missions met the Namibian Deputy Foreign Minister in Windhoek.

Timor-Leste: Homicide

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the President of Indonesia to request that Indonesia's former Information Minister, Yunus Yosfiah, give his account of events in Balibo in October 1975 to the Court following the request of the Deputy Coroner made during the inquest in New South Wales into the death of Brian Peters; and if she will make a statement. [127601]

Mr. McCartney: The Australian Government has not sought our help with the inquest. We have previously made representations on the Balibo case to the Indonesian government and they are aware of our position.

Timor-Leste: Politics and Government

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) the latest security situation in Timor-Leste and (b) the likelihood of (i) the Presidential and (ii) Parliamentary elections being conducted in a free and fair manner; and if she will make a statement. [127602]

Mr. McCartney: Our Embassy in Jakarta covers Timor-Leste. The Embassy deployed a team of four officials to Dili on 7 March to assess the situation on the ground. They reported that Dili was calm at the time of their arrival, but that the security situation remains fragile and susceptible to change at any moment.

We are concerned by the deterioration of the security situation in Timor-Leste and the resulting casualties and have urged all concerned to bring an end to the violence and resolve the problems within the framework of the constitution and laws.

Eight candidates have registered for the Presidential elections scheduled for 9 April and the date of the Parliamentary elections will be set after this date. The UN Mission to Timor-Leste (UNMIT) has been working to ensure that the elections take place on time and there has been no indication that they are likely to be postponed. UNMIT will provide trained and experienced election monitors to ensure that the elections are carried out in a fair and open manner.

Whales: Conservation

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has made to her counterparts in (a) Japan, (b) Norway and (c) Iceland on full-scale commercial whaling; and if she will make a statement. [125348]

Margaret Beckett: I have made no representations to my counterparts in Japan, Norway and Iceland.

The departmental lead on this subject lies with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). Officials from DEFRA and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are in daily contact regarding whaling, and work in tandem to lobby governments and to publicise the need for whale conservation.

UK officials at the International Whaling Commission meeting in June 2006 were at the forefront of the opposition to Japan's unsuccessful attempts to overturn the international moratorium on commercial whaling. In December 2006, the UK joined a demarche of 27 countries requesting Japan to reconsider its planned whaling programme for 2007.

The UK has consistently opposed Norway's commercial whaling programme. In April 2006, the UK led a demarche against Norway's announcement of a record increase in the number of North Atlantic minke whales they planned to catch last year. As it transpired, Norway only caught 546 of its planned catch of 1,052.

The UK led the international condemnation of Iceland's decision to resume commercial whaling. In November 2006, our British ambassador in Reykjavik led a demarche of 25 countries plus the European Commission, making clear the extreme disappointment felt by those parties at Iceland's decision, and urging Iceland to abandon its current operations. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Local Environment, Marine and Animal Welfare (Mr. Bradshaw), summoned the Icelandic ambassador to protest in the strongest possible terms against Iceland's activities.

Zimbabwe: Politics and Government

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the detention of Morgan Tsvangirai and other figures from the Movement for Democratic Change by the Zimbabwean government; and if she will make a statement. [127502]

Mr. McCartney: Our ambassador in Harare and officials from the embassy, together with other members of the diplomatic community, have sought access to those detained following the violent suppression of the Save Zimbabwe Campaign prayer meeting on 11 March, as well as visiting the hospitals where the injured are being treated, and reported back on the horrific torture some of those have been subject too, including opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai.

As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, have already made clear in their statements, we utterly condemn the violent and unwarranted action taken by the Government of Zimbabwe on 11 March and hold Mugabe and his government responsible for the safety of all those detained. The Zimbabwean ambassador was called into the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 13 March to hear the UK's condemnation at first hand, and we have met leaders of Zimbabwe's trade unions to express support for their civil rights. We have urged the Zimbabwe authorities to allow all those still detained access to legal advice and all necessary medical care, and to arrange for their immediate release.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with counterparts within the United Nations Security Council of the implications of the situation in Zimbabwe for international peace and security. [127728]

Mr. McCartney: We keep in touch with members of the UN Security Council about the situation in Zimbabwe, and encourage the UN to stay focused on all aspects of the appalling conditions in Zimbabwe. We welcome the UN Secretary-General's condemnation of the recent arrest and beating of legitimate protestors in Zimbabwe, and the 13 March statement by the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Commonwealth Secretariat on measures to engage with (a) government and (b) civil society groups in Zimbabwe on resolving the situation in that country. [127729]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary briefed the Commonwealth Secretary-General on 30 January about the situation in the country. However, Zimbabwe withdrew from the Commonwealth in December 2003 and there is currently no formal engagement between the two. Before Zimbabwe can rejoin and enjoy the support of the Commonwealth, it will need to satisfy all Commonwealth members it is meeting the basic human rights and governance principles as set out in the Harare Commonwealth declaration. As the dire current situation in Zimbabwe clearly demonstrates, it is a long way from doing so.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been received from South Africa on a joint strategy with the EU for resolving the situation in Zimbabwe. [127730]

Mr. McCartney: None. However, there have been regular discussions between the UK and South Africa about the appalling situation in Zimbabwe.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will hold discussions with (a) the South African Development Community and (b) EU member states on (i) the use of incentives and disincentives in support of a co-ordinated international strategy on the situation in Zimbabwe and (ii) development of a new constitution, repeal of repressive laws and holding of internationally supervised presidential and parliamentary elections. [127734]

Mr. McCartney: The EU Common Position was renewed in February. It consists of targeted measures applied in response to the human rights abuses committed by the Government of Zimbabwe. We will continue to discuss the situation in Zimbabwe with EU partners in Harare and Brussels. Zimbabwe is a regular subject in the EU's dialogue with the South African Development Community (SADC) and with individual SADC members. However, the SADC has shown no desire to engage with the EU in a co-ordinated international strategy of the kind suggested by the hon. Member. We and the EU will continue to raise the issues with them.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will seek discussions with the South African Development Community on (a) a joint strategy on timelines and benchmarks to be met by Zimbabwean authorities in restoring and implementing a democratic process and (b) negotiations towards an exit strategy. [127735]

Mr. McCartney: We have encouraged South African Development Community (SADC) member states and in particular members of the SADC troika, (Lesotho, Botswana and Zambia) to urge the Government of Zimbabwe to undertake the wide-ranging political and economic reform to address the current crisis, so as to avoid further violence and economic collapse. We have intensified these contacts in recent days.

HEALTH

Alliance Medical: Screening

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many diagnostic scans were performed through the contract with Alliance Medical in each region in each year since it began; and what proportion this represents of scans agreed in the contract. [126610]

Andy Burnham: The information is not available in the format requested. The total number of magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scans performed through the contract with Alliance Medical to the end of January 2007 was 214,000. The contract, which is for a period of five years, is for 606,000 MRI scans in total.

Bedfordshire Primary Care Trust: Finance

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations her Department received on the establishment of a local improvement finance trust within the area of the Bedfordshire Primary Care Trust; and if she will make a statement. [126424]

Andy Burnham: The Department have received no representations from Bedfordshire Primary Care Trust (PCT) about the establishment of their NHS local improvement finance trust (LIFT). Bedfordshire PCT, with their public sector partners, are progressing with establishing their LIFT company. They have selected their preferred partner and are working towards financial close.

Blood: Screening

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make international normalised ratio blood testing a requirement under the GP contract; [124724]

(2) what estimate she has made of the number of GP practices which have ceased international normalised ratio blood testing following the introduction of the new GP contract; and if she will make a statement; [124725]

(3) if she will take steps to ensure that the international normalised ratio blood tests are available from GPs; and if she will make a statement. [124726]

Andy Burnham: International normalised ratio blood testing is currently delivered in general practice as part of the national enhanced service which primary care trusts (PCTs) are able to commission as a more specialised service. As these services are commissioned locally by individual PCTs, we have no central information on the number of general practitioner practices providing this service.

Breast Cancer: Medical Treatments

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many breast cancer treatments have been recommended for use by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence since its creation. [121935]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has positively appraised the following treatments for breast cancer:

Capecitabine for locally advanced and metastatic breast cancer

Docetaxel for early and advanced breast cancer

Gemcitabine for metastatic breast cancer

Hormonal treatments (anastrozole, exemestane and letrozole) for early breast cancer

Paclitaxel for advanced breast cancer

Trastuzumab for early and advanced breast cancer

Vinorelbine for advanced breast cancer

Breast Cancer: Screening

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has (a) received and (b) considered the Report by the Advisory Committee on Borderline Substances into the value of breast cancer screening of over 70s; and if she will make a statement. [124971]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The report into the evidence of extending breast screening to women aged over 70 as part of the national health service breast screening programme was commissioned by the Department's policy research programme on behalf of the Advisory Committee on Breast Cancer Screening (ACBCS).

The final report is currently being peer reviewed. Once the peer review process is complete the report and peer review comments will be considered by the ACBCS. They will make a judgment as to whether the report provides sufficiently robust evidence to support screening women over 70 or whether further work is necessary. They will advise Ministers as appropriate.

Colorectal Cancer: Screening

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients have been screened under the bowel cancer screening programme, broken down by centre; how many people within the target 60 to 69 age group it is estimated have yet to be screened at each centre; and what the timetable is for completing the first screening within the target age group; [126517]

(2) what plans she has to publish an assessment of the bowel cancer screening programme; [126518]

(3) when each centre began screening for bowel cancer; [126519]

(4) if she will introduce a screening programme for bowel cancer for everyone over 50 years of age. [126520]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is in the table.

As at 19 February 2007, 52 per cent. of men and women had returned their testing kits. This figure is likely to rise as kits are being sent out all the time and there is a time lag between people receiving and returning the kits.

Local screening centres cover populations of around 500,000 people. Men and women in their 60s in these populations are invited to be screened on a general practitioner practice basis over a two year period. For each two year screening round we would expect each local screening centre to invite 50,000 people for screening. It is estimated that full national roll-out of the programme in England will be achieved by December 2009. All eligible men and women will therefore have been invited for screening by December 2011.

The national health service bowel cancer screening programme is in the relatively early stages of roll-out. We will consider publishing an assessment of the programme when roll-out is more complete.

The bowel cancer screening programme is beginning by inviting men and women aged 60 to 69 to be screened as the risk of bowel cancer increases with age, with over 80 per cent. of bowel cancers arising in people who are 60 or over. The successful NHS pilot study also showed that men and women in their 60s were more likely to take up their invitations for screening than men and women in their 50s. Within the programme men and women aged 70 and over are able to self-refer for screening every two years.

When we have rolled out the programme to the whole of England, we will make an assessment of whatever next steps may be required, including looking at the age range.

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Dementia: Research

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what Government funding was provided for research into (a) prevention, (b) treatment and (c) cure of dementia in each of the last five years; and what percentage of the health budget this represented in each year. [126835]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The most recent information available is shown in the following table.

Expenditure on dementia research (£ million)

	Department of Health	Medical Research Council	Total	Percentage of total national health service expenditure
2000-01	4.7	8.2	12.9	0.03
2001-02	2.9	6.6	9.5	0.02
2002-03	1.6	6.6	8.2	0.02
2003-04	1.1	7.4	8.5	0.01
2004-05	0.6	6.2	6.8	0.01

The departmental figures relate to national research programme expenditure. They do not include the part of the research and development allocations made annually to NHS providers that has been spent on dementia research. This information and information on the breakdown of funding for research into the prevention, treatment and cure of dementia is not held centrally.

Dentists: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in (a) Eastbourne and (b) England have exhausted their 2006-07 NHS budgets. [125468]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCT) in England do not award dental providers an annual budget but an annual contract value, which is payable in equal monthly instalments, in return for an agreed level of service. Service levels may be defined by an annual number of units of dental activity (which are a weighted measure of courses of treatment), or they may include service outputs that cannot be measured through courses of treatment. All contract payments will be honoured if the dental provider delivers their agreed service levels. The Department does not assess the performance of individual dental providers. PCTs, as the commissioning bodies, are responsible for monitoring the delivery of services by their local dental providers. Dental services in Eastbourne are the responsibility of the East Sussex Downs and Weald PCT.

Departments: Appeals

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many independent bodies existed to hear appeals on decisions made by her Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many there have been in 2006-07 to date. [121675]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department had no independent appeal panels.

Appeals against the Department's decisions (final stage complaints) are dealt with by the Parliamentary and Health Service Ombudsman (PHSO).

The Department used the services of an independent reviewer for a single case in 2006.

Executive agencies are independent organisations with their own complaints procedures and administration. The two Executive agencies are the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (PASA) and the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA).

PASA has not had any independent bodies to hear appeals. Complaints about maladministration of non-procurement activity are governed by the Parliamentary Ombudsman. Legal options are available to suppliers if commercial complaints are not resolved by PASA's complaints procedure.

Throughout the period between 1997 and 2005, the MHRA had five independent advisory bodies set up to hear appeals on technical decisions made by the agency. These were the Committee on Safety of Devices, the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM), the Medicines Commission (CM) and the Independent Review Panel for Borderline products; the Independent Review Panel for Advertising. In October 2005, the CSM and the MC were disbanded and a new body, the Commission for Human Medicines replaced them.

Departments: Complaints

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints were received by her Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many have been received in 2006-07 to date. [121674]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department cannot identify complaints figures for 1997-98 and 2001-02 except at disproportionate cost.

Volumes of complaints are calculated by calendar year, not financial year.

There is a separate complaints procedure for complaints involving the national health service and social care. This is completely independent of the Department.

The total number of inquiries dealt with by the head of complaints in 2005 was 339, of which most were not categorised as complaints about the Department and its work. The total for 2006 was 256.

From 1 January 2007 to 26 February we have received five complaints.

The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (PASA) is one of the Department's two Executive agencies. Executive agencies respond to complaints received about their work.

	Number of reports available
1997-98	0
2001-02	4
2005-06	11
2006-07	7

PASA logs as complaints only those where they have a specific issue relating to the performance or specific activity by the agency rather than complaints about policy.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA)

	Number of reports available
1997-98	2
2001-02	2
2006-07	3

These are formal complaints that were referred to the central complaints officer to deal with. MHRA does not have records of complaints that were dealt with at local level for these periods.

Departments: Freedom of Information

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost to her Department of monitoring the time spent processing requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 for the purposes of the proposed fees regulations. [121765]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary for Constitutional Affairs (Vera Baird) on 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 866W.

Departments: Public Expenditure

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what her Department's total expenditure on centrally funded (a) initiatives, (b) services and (c) special allocations was in each year since 1997-98; and what anticipated expenditure is in 2006-07; [123122]

(2) what the (a) titles and (b) values are of the programmes which were transferred from her Department's central budget to the NHS budget in each year since 1997. [123129]

Andy Burnham: Tables have been placed in the Library and they provide:

(a) listings of all allocations by budget title and value to national health service organisations from 1997-98 to 2005-06;

(b) total expenditure of the centrally funded, initiatives services and special allocations programme from 1997-98 to 2005-06;

(c) special allocations issued with initial allocations from 1997-98 to 2005-06; and

(d) special allocations and associated budgets issued to NHS organisations as additional allocations (and which are included in the tables described in (a) and (b) above).

There is no recognised division in the centrally funded initiatives services and special allocations programme between initiatives and services.

Full year 2006-07 information on centrally funded initiatives services and special allocations is not yet available, but the 2006-07 Departmental Report which has a provisional publication date of May 2007 will provide a breakdown of the main budget lines.

The tables correct the information given in answer to the hon. Member for the Vale of York (Miss McIntosh) on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1693W.

Dermatology

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) names and (b) job titles are of the officials within her Department who have responsibility for overseeing the delivery of dermatology services. [128279]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not have any officials who solely focus on overseeing the delivery of dermatology services. Responsibility for general oversight of the delivery of the Department's public service agreement targets rests with the Department's recovery and support unit. The accountable Director-General is Mr. Duncan Selbie.

Diabetes: Young People

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she issues to (a) GPs, (b) primary care trusts and (c) other health professionals on support for children and students with diabetes. [126554]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national service frameworks (NSFs) for diabetes and for children, young people and maternity services were issued in 2001 and 2003-04 respectively. The diabetes NSF highlights the need to improve diabetes services for children and young people so that all children and young people with diabetes, their families and others involved in the their day-to-day care are supported; to optimise the control of diabetes and to enhance their physical, psychological, intellectual, educational and social development.

The Department and the Department for Education and Skills issued the joint publication Managing Medicines in Schools and Early Years Settings in 2005. It recommends that schools, supported by their local authorities and local health professionals, develop policies on managing medicines and put in place effective management systems to support individual children with medical needs, including diabetes.

A report by the children and young people's diabetes services working group will be published shortly. This will act as an implementation support tool to enable the commissioning and evaluation of service delivery necessary to meet the commitments set out in the NSFs. It includes issues such as support in schools, transition from children's to adults health services, structured education, psychological support, family support and monitoring for complications including retinal screening.

Dietary Supplements

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will press the European Food Standards Agency (EFSA) to extend the maximum permitted derogation period under the food supplement directive for those supplements where EFSA has not completed its assessment of submitted evidence dossiers. [127992]

Caroline Flint: The European Commission (EC) will be contacted shortly regarding the current deadline for European Food Standards Agency to have completed its assessment of dossiers submitted in accordance with the food supplements directive, and for decisions to have been taken by the EC Standing Committee for the addition of substances to the annexes in the food supplements directive, and for this deadline to be reviewed.

Drugs: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent in Lancashire on anti-drug initiatives in each of the last 10 years. [125676]

Caroline Flint: Information is not available on drug treatment spend prior to 2001 when the Department and the Home Office commenced the specific allocation for drug treatment in the form of the pooled drug treatment budget (PTB)

The table shows the PTB funding allocated to Lancashire in each year since 2002-03, when data were first available.

The following pooled drug treatment budgets were allocated to the Lancashire drug action team (DAT) for the years 2002-07.

	Pooled drug treatment budget allocation to Lancashire DAT (£000)
2002-03	3,061
2003-04	3,890
2004-05	4,259
2005-06	5,161
2006-07	6,633

Drugs: Misuse

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate of the numbers of problematic drug users and those accessing treatment formed the basis of the drug pooled treatment budget allocation for 2007-08 in Enfield; and what the latest estimate is following the research commissioned from the University of Glasgow produced in 2006. [119534]

Caroline Flint: In previous years the pooled drug treatment budget (PTB) has been allocated using a formula based on an estimate of population need, linked to social and economic factors, known as the York formula. For 2007-08, the York formula continues to determine the majority of the PTB allocation formula. In 2007-08 the PTB indicative allocations also includes a small element of redistribution from those areas who currently receive a high level of Government contribution to the cost of treatment per person treated, to areas where the contribution is significantly lower. Nationally, this will mean a distribution of funding that is flatter per person treated than has previously been the case. For Enfield, the projected number of individuals in drug treatment in 2006-07 is 604. These figures are based on April to December data from the national drug treatment monitoring system.

The Government contribution per person treated in Enfield in 2006-07 was the second highest in England at £4,191. The contribution per person treated in 2007-08 will be £3,954, compared with the national average of £2,300 and the London average of £2,582.

The latest estimate for problematic drug users in Enfield, from the University of Glasgow data is £1,409. This figure is for problematic users of heroin and crack cocaine only and was not used in the calculations for the 2007-08 PTB.

Drugs: Rehabilitation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people underwent drug detoxification within NHS (a) run and (b) funded facilities in each of the last five years. [122186]

Caroline Flint: The national drug treatment monitoring system (NDTMS) records the number of individuals in national health service funded treatment in England. During 2004-05, since when this data has been available, there were 5,472 instances of in-patient detoxification reported to NDTMS and during 2005-06 there were 6,461. It is not possible to distinguish NHS run and non-statutory in-patient detoxification services.

Under-reporting of data to NDTMS is significant for in-patient treatment.

Note:

Over half of drug detoxification takes place on general medical or psychiatric wards, which do not contribute data to NDTMS.

Eastbourne Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been allocated to Eastbourne district general hospital for burns care services in 2007-08. [125469]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Eastbourne district hospital is not a provider of specialised burn care services and therefore there are no plans to allocate any central monies for burn care to this hospital in 2007-08.

The Queen Victoria hospital in East Grinstead acts as the provider of specialised burn care services in the NHS south-east coast region.

Eating Disorders

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she plans to take over the next two years to tackle eating disorders. [125164]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We take the issue of eating disorders, especially among young people, very seriously. This is why the Department asked the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to produce a clinical guideline on the core interventions in the treatment and management of anorexia nervosa, bulimia nervosa and related eating disorders, which NICE published in 2004. The guideline covers physical and psychological treatments, treatment with medicines, and information specifically for patients, carers and the general public. The guideline is due for review in January 2008.

In the four years to the end of March 2007, we will have invested over £400 million of additional money into the child and adolescent mental health services (CAMHS) provided by the national health service and local authorities. These funds will assist in meeting and maintaining the Department's public service agreement (PSA) standard of a comprehensive CAMHS, including services for young people with an eating disorder. Further funds totalling £134 million have been made available to the NHS and local authorities in 2006-07 to help achieve a comprehensive CAMHS in every area by the end of 2006 and ensure that it is maintained thereafter.

As primary care trusts (PCTs) consider local health needs and commissioned services, they will need to assess whether the right balance exists between in-patient care and home-based care, particularly at a highly specialised levels, to help individuals with eating disorders. This means that PCTs will need to consider their commissioning role, where they work with local organisations and opportunities exist to commission services jointly—for example, where voluntary organisations can provide services more effectively than statutory services.

We made a manifesto commitment in 2005 to increase the provision of psychological therapies. This followed 2001 Department guidelines on treatment choice in psychological therapies which included eating disorders, and 2004 guidance, "Organising and Delivering Psychological Therapies", to help local services to understand best practice and how to organise local services to support access. Last year we embarked on a new programme, Improving Access to Psychological Therapies, (IAPT), to provide more effective and timely access to psychological therapies for people with mild to moderate mental health problems, such as anxiety and depression. IAPT's two national demonstration sites in Newham and Doncaster, and a national programme of regional projects, will complete their work by March 2008 but interim results are showing positive gains in health and wellbeing in many of the 3,500 people already referred to the service.

Between 2004 and 2009, the Department is also funding a five-year initiative, Shift, to tackle the stigma and discrimination surrounding mental health issues in England. Shift works with young people and professionals to promote awareness of all mental health problems, including eating disorders.

We fund several voluntary sector organisations involved with eating disorders, including Weight Concern and beat, formerly the Eating Disorder Association for whom we are funding a three-year pathways to recovery project, which provides a support network of people who have had eating disorders. This project, which began in June 2006, will receive £131,000 over its three-year duration. The Department is also considering whether we can undertake further research into eating disorders through the National Institute for Health Research, about which I hope to make an announcement in the near future.

Family Planning

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of closure of specialist family planning clinics on the availability to general practitioners of training in contraceptive services. [124018]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Funding arrangements are a matter for primary care trusts who must be free to prioritise their local funding according to local needs. The Government do however acknowledge the key role specialist contraception services play in providing training to other contraceptive providers and in particular the role they play in supporting general practice. We recognise the need to increase the numbers of sexual and reproductive health consultants and the Department is working closely with the Faculty of Family Planning and Reproductive Healthcare to ensure workforce capacity is available for the future.

General Practitioners

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which patient and public interest groups responded to the Good Doctors, Safer Patients public consultation. [122123]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1686W, to the hon. Member for North-West Leicestershire (David Taylor).

Health Services: Greater London

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has carried out a race equality impact assessment of the reductions in budgets for 2007-08 for (a) South London and Maudsley NHS Trust, (b) Southwark Primary Care Trust and (c) Lambeth Primary Care Trust. [128184]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 19 March 2007]: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) should work in partnership with their primary care trusts and local health providers to determine how best to use the funds allocated, to meet national and local priorities for improving health, to tackle health inequalities and modernise services. It is for local national health service bodies to assess the effect of their decisions, including their effect on particular parts of their local population.

All NHS organisations are currently in the process of finalising their financial plans for 2007-08. We have made clear in the 2007-08 NHS operating framework that SHAs will not generally require the scale of contribution to SHA reserves seen in 2006-07 because of the return of the NHS to overall financial balance this year.

Health Services: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS staff in Lancashire have received training in communication with children. [126622]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Health Services: Private Sector

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the amount the NHS will pay to private healthcare providers in (a) 2007-08 and (b) 2012-13. [121782]

Andy Burnham: National health service spend on private healthcare providers will be determined by the choices made by patients and those who commission services locally on their behalf.

As the NHS financial planning process for 2007-08 is not yet complete, it is not yet possible to provide an estimate of this category of expenditure. Funding for the NHS beyond 2007-08 has not yet been agreed with HM Treasury.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess the applicability of European competition law to (a) the future configuration of clinical services provided by private sector contractors and (b) capacity of her Department to intervene in support of such services. [127955]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 19 March 2007]: We do not believe it would be appropriate for the Department to conduct such an assessment. Whether and if European Union competition law applies to the configuration of clinical services provided by private sector contractors is a matter for the EU authorities.

Heart Disease: Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many major accident and emergency departments in England offer primary angioplasty. [126548]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary angioplasty is carried out in a catheter laboratory by a team of professionals including a cardiologist with training in angioplasty techniques, cardiac nurse and scientific and technical staff. It does not take place in an accident and emergency department although some hospitals have a catheter laboratory, which is situated close to the emergency department.

There are currently about 30 centres able to offer primary angioplasty, and 50 per cent. of these offer a 24 hour a day, seven day a week service. A small number of centres are in hospitals without an emergency department.

Source:

British Cardiovascular Intervention Society audit of angioplasty as at September 2006.

Hospitals: Crimes of Violence

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to prevent incidents of violence against staff in (a) Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull hospitals and (b) hospitals nationwide. [125300]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Security Management Service (NHS SMS) was created in April 2003, with both policy and operational responsibility for security management within the national health service. A comprehensive strategy has been implemented detailing the preventative pro-active and reactive action that is to be taken both nationally and locally to tackle this problem.

A network of local security management specialists (LSMS) supported nationally by the NHS SMS guidance, has been introduced, as well as mandatory conflict resolution training for all front line NHS staff, with over 250,000 staff trained by March 2006.

A national physical assault reporting system (PARS) has been developed to monitor and respond to incidents of assault against NHS staff. Using a clear definition as to what constitutes a physical assault, figures for the number of reported assaults against NHS staff 2005-06, released on 1 November 2006, indicate there were 1,690 fewer than 2004-05.

New measures to tackle nuisance and disturbance behaviour on NHS premises have also been proposed and consulted upon. As well as reducing the impact of this behaviour on the delivery of healthcare, the proposed legislation will give health bodies the power to remove an individual displaying this behaviour before an incident may escalate into violence.

Arrangements aimed at the prevention of violence against NHS staff specifically at Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull NHS Trust are made at local level, responding to local requirements.

Hospitals: Transport

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has issued guidance to primary care trusts on how to estimate the carbon impact of changes in travel patterns arising from proposals for hospital reconfiguration. [127668]

Andy Burnham: Any proposals for the reconfiguration of services are a matter for the national health service locally. We would expect the local NHS to take into account a wide variety of issues when putting forward such proposals. There is a well established and well understood process for managing consultations on proposed changes so that patients, the public and other stakeholders can help to inform the local debate.

Influenza: Drugs

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1552W, on influenza, what the (a) site and (b) content is of the stockpile of antiviral drugs held by (i) the Government and (ii) the World Health Organisation. [125885]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The United Kingdom Government's stockpile is composed of Oseltamivir. The stock for England is stored in a single location in England and the details of the location have not been made public for security reasons. The stock for each devolved administration has already been distributed to each country.

The World Health Organisation's stockpile is composed of Oseltamivir and is being stored in Hoffman-LaRoche warehouses located in Switzerland and the United States of America.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1552-53W, on influenza, if she will take steps to ensure that the preparedness of countries where humans have died from infection with avian influenza is brought up to at least the level that exists in the UK. [125886]

Ms Rosie Winterton: International collaboration offers the best opportunity to improve preparedness internationally. The United Kingdom (UK) will continue to work closely with the World Health Organisation (WHO), the European Community and other bilateral and multi-national groups in this regard. In particular at the European Community, World Bank and People's Republic of China pledging conference on avian and pandemic influenza in Beijing in January 2006, the UK pledged $35 million (£20 million), with the aim of improving international preparedness and response.

Maternity Services

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on childbirth and maternity care by her Department in the latest year for which figures are available. [126048]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Estimates of expenditure on childbirth and maternity care are available from the programme budgeting returns. In the 2005-06 financial year expenditure on maternity and reproductive health was estimated at £2.9 billion, with a further £0.8 billion spent on treating neonatal conditions.

Maudsley Hospital

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has carried out a race equality impact assessment of the decision to close the Maudsley Hospital 24 hour emergency clinic; and if she will make a statement. [128185]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The Department did not carry out a race equality impact assessment of the Secretary of State's decision to support national health service proposals to reconfigure mental health crisis services in Southwark and Lambeth, which included the closure of the emergency clinic (EC) at the Maudsley hospital.

A race equality impact assessment of the proposed closure of the EC was carried out at local level by the South London and Maudsley NHS trust in the autumn of 2006. In summary, the assessment did not demonstrate that closure of the EC would have an adverse impact upon service users from black and minority ethnic communities.

Mental Health

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of (a) oral questions and (b) written questions to her in the last session of Parliament were about mental health issues. [127374]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The term mental health covers a wide range of topics and these cannot be identified separately from our data base without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mentally ill: Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will discuss with the Home Secretary the number of anti-social behaviour orders given to people with mental health conditions. [124311]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected centrally about the characteristics or circumstances of persons issued with antisocial behaviour orders, so it is not known how many were issued to people with mental health problems.

However, the 2006 Home Office guidance, "Bigger, Better, Bolder", includes information on vulnerable people who commit antisocial behaviour. This makes it clear that, where there is evidence to suggest that a perpetrator of antisocial behaviour has a disability, learning disability, mental health problem, or is vulnerable in any other way then a practitioner with specialist knowledge should be involved in an assessment of the cause of the behaviour and how it can be addressed. The guidance calls for specialist involvement in the design of any intervention so this can be properly tailored to the needs of individuate and their carers.

The Department and the Home Office have regular discussions on a range of issues and areas of concern.

Mid-Essex Hospital Trust: Redundancy

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many job losses are expected through (a) compulsory redundancies and (b) not filling vacancies at the Mid-Essex Hospital Trust in the period 2006 to 2008; and how many of these job losses will be (i) nurses, (ii) doctors and (iii) consultants. [127533]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 19 March 2007]: This information is not collected centrally.

Midwives

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the status is of her Department's six-point plan for the recruitment and retention of NHS midwives; what the total expenditure on the plan has been to date; what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the plan; and what future activity is planned. [122627]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The six-point plan, developed in partnership with the Royal College of Midwives, was launched by the Government in March 2004.

Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire Workforce Development Confederation were responsible for the implementation of the plan, as part of the National Midwifery Recruitment, Retention and Return Project, which they led between 2003 and November 2007. They were given £200,000 to support the delivery of the project.

Strategic health authorities will be sent project reports, outlining the effectiveness and recommending future action, for their specific area.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors are taken into account in estimating the average caseload of community midwives. [127930]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Decisions about the size of community midwives' case loads are made locally. It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) in partnership with local stakeholders to commission services in order to meet the specific needs of the local community.

The maternity standard of the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services requires national health service maternity care providers and PCTs to ensure that there is a range of ante-natal, birth and post-birth care services available locally.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant midwives there are in the NHS in England, broken down by region; and whether her Department has a target for the number of NHS consultant midwives. [122635]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following table shows the number of national health service consultant midwives by strategic health authority (SHA) area.

The Department has not set a target for the number of NHS consultant midwives.

NHS consultant midwives by SHA area as at 30 September 2005

National Patient Safety Agency

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the absence from work of the joint chief executives of the National Patient Safety Agency. [121428]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The joint chief executives of the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) began a period of extended leave on 7 July 2006 and an interim chief executive was appointed on 31 July 2006. The agency has continued to deliver the work programme for 2006-07 that it agreed with the Department.

The joint chief executives are due to retire on 31 March 2007 and the NPSA is currently in the process of recruiting a permanent chief executive.

NHS: Finance

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when there was last a national target for the level of administrative costs in the NHS; and what that level was. [123115]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS plan stated that

"by 2004 the share of NHS spend on management costs will be cut so that a higher share of every pound spent goes into frontline patient care".

As a percentage of the overall national health service budget management costs have fallen from 3.9 per cent. in 2002-03 to 3.7 per cent. in 2004-05, continuing the downward trend from 5 per cent. in 1997-98.

In addition, the £250 million that will be released as a result of the recent re-organisation of the NHS will be returned directly into frontline services. Managers however will remain a key part of the NHS workforce in supporting clinical care and delivering improvements in waiting times and the accessibility of services.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of payment by results on hospitals in the NHS. [127281]

Andy Burnham: Information about the programme of evaluation of payment by results is available on the Department website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PolicyAndGuidance/OrganisationPolicy/FinanceAndPlanning/NHSFinancialReforms

The programme includes work done by national health service organisations in South Yorkshire, where most trusts were early implementers of payment by results, as well as specific research projects undertaken by the Centre For Health Economics at York university. We have also commissioned an independent evaluation of the implementation of payment by results from the Health Economics Research Unit at the university of Aberdeen, supported by the university of Dundee and the Office of Health Economics in London. This project began in December 2004 and is due to be completed this summer.

NHS: Foreign Workers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many non-UK nationals work for the NHS as (a) doctors and (b) nurses. [122473]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

NHS: Manpower

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the reasons are for delaying the publication of the NHS workforce census. [123139]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Information Centre for health and social care had planned to publish the workforce census in March 2007. It will now be published in April 2007.

This is because the reorganisation of primary care trusts (PCTs), which took place on 1 October 2006, has impacted on the collection process. Data have been provided by PCTs in different formats and this has required extensive validation (of the quality of data submitted), to ensure consistency with previous years. In many instances new staff within PCTs have been involved in this process, which has led to delays

In addition over 200 organisations have submitted workforce data through the new national payroll system, the electronic staff record (ESR). Additional data validation has been undertaken to ensure that in the first year of deriving census information from this source, it is of at least equivalent quality to that previously collected directly from trusts and PCTs.

The Information Centre for health and social care is working with the Department to review systems for collecting workforce information and looking at ways of building on the development of the ESR. When the ESR is fully rolled out across the national health service in 2008 this should enable comprehensive workforce data to be available more quickly and frequently.

NHS: Pay

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on (a) employment of temporary staff and (b) local area weighting allowances by each hospital acute trust and foundation hospital trust in 2005-06. [126378]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information has been placed in the Library. This shows expenditure by each national health service trust on salaries and wages of non-NHS staff and medical and dental London weighting in 2005-06.

NHS: Public Relations

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each NHS hospitals trust spent on public affairs support from private companies in the last 12 months. [127609]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not held by the Department.

NHS: Secondments

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration primary care trusts are required to give to the possible effects of secondments of staff for training purposes on the provision of (a) front-line services and (b) numbers of available beds before approving those secondments. [122648]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Agreeing secondments is a local decision and will depend on both the financial and staff resource available to continue to deliver current service requirements. Properly managed secondments can deliver appropriate training and development needs for staff.

NHS: Training

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking to ensure that health authorities and trusts collect adequate data on the involvement of staff in work-based learning; [123403]

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure that rates of participation in work-based learning are consistent across the different grades of NHS staff. [123404]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This is a matter for local employers and strategic health authorities. Training needs for national health service staff are determined against local NHS priorities, through appraisal processes and training needs analyses. Employers have a duty to ensure staff have the appropriate education and training to deliver priorities and services.

Access to training courses or learning opportunities in the workplace is a local decision.

Nurses: Schools

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many school nurses were employed in each health region in England in each of the last three years; [124382]

(2) how many school nurses there are in each health region in England. [124891]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of school nurses employed in each health region is shown in the table. School nurses have only been separately identified robustly in the national health service workforce census since 2004.

Obesity: Children

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to encourage the NHS to provide fitness regimes for obese children; and how this will be funded. [127580]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published guidance on the prevention, identification, assessment and management of overweight and obesity in adults and children in December 2006, which contained a series of recommendations across a wide range of sectors including the national health service. NICE recommend that obesity treatment and prevention interventions in the NHS should be long-term and must be multi-component rather than one-off activities. These programmes should include behaviour change strategies to increase people's physical activity levels or decrease inactivity, improve eating behaviour and the quality of the person's diet and reduce energy intake.

Operating Theatres

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many operations were conducted in each operating theatre in England in each of the last five years; how many hours per week each theatre was in use in each year; and what the net cost per theatre hour used was in each year; [124110]

(2) how many operations were conducted in England in each of the last five years, broken down by strategic health authority; how many hours per week on average an operating theatre was in use in each authority in each year; and what the net cost per theatre hour used in each authority was in each year. [124390]

Andy Burnham: Tables showing the numbers of procedures conducted in England in each of the last five years, by strategic health authority, have been placed in the Library. The rest of the information requested is not available centrally.

Ophthalmology: Training

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors were taken into account in deciding not to provide continuing educational training for dispensing opticians in the review of general ophthalmic services. [126279]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service provides a contribution to the cost of continuing education and training for professions whose income derives in part from providing NHS services. Under deregulatory changes approved by Parliament in 1986, the NHS provides optical vouchers to certain eligible groups to assist in buying glasses or contact lenses, but the dispensing of glasses is carried out on a private basis. The Department considers that these arrangements work well in promoting choice and access to services and that it would be anomalous to use public funds to make continuing education and training payments to health care professionals who do not provide services under contract to the NHS.

Paediatrics: Vetting

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatricians working in hospitals in England have an up-to-date Criminal Records Bureau certificate clearing them to work with children. [122911]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally. It is the responsibility of individual employers to carry out Criminal Records Bureau checks when employing any staff working with children, including paediatricians, in order to satisfy themselves that they are safe to carry out this type of work. NHS Employers provides guidance to employers on this matter.

Paramedical Staff: Manpower

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paramedics there were in each year since 2000; and what the projected numbers are in each year to 2010. [123263]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows the number of paramedics in the national health service in England since 2000.

It is for local planners with support from the workforce review team to determine their future requirement for paramedics to meet local service needs.

NHS hospital and community health services: paramedic staff 2000-05

Patients: Per Capita Costs

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of expenditure by her Department on (a) male and (b) female patients aged (i) 0 to 5, (ii) 5 to 9, (iii) 10 to 14, (iv) 15 to 20, (v) 21 to 25, (vi) 26 to 30, (vii) 31 to 40, (viii) 41 to 50, (ix) 51 to 60, (x) 61 to 70, (xi) 71 to 80 and (xii) over 80, excluding costs relating to maternity care and childbirth, in the latest year for which figures are available. [126049]

Andy Burnham: The table shows the breakdown by age and gender of total hospital and community health services (HCHS) expenditure for the year 2003-04, excluding costs relating to maternity care and childbirth.

The age groups from the programme budget differ to those requested.

2003-04 is the latest year this data is available. Due to a change in national programme budgeting categories from 2004-05 onwards, we no longer collect HCHS expenditure data broken down by age and gender.

HCHS expenditure by age group and gender, 2003-04, millions

Age group	0-4	5-15	16-44	45-64	65-74	75-84	85+	Total
Expenditure (£ million)	2,376	1,461	9,245	7,021	5,890	6,763	3,818	36,574
Of which:
Male	1,217	749	4,632	3,470	2,783	2,740	1,090	17,873
Female	1,160	712	4,613	3,551	3,107	4,022	2,727	18,701

Notes:
1. Figures in table may not sum due to rounding.
2. The total HCHS expenditure in 2003-04 was £38,151 million. The difference of £1,577 million is attributable to maternity care and childbirth.

Pneumococcal Disease: Vaccination

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding she is providing for catch-up immunisation against paediatric pneumococcal disease in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [127829]

Caroline Flint: For the catch-up immunisation programme, general practitioners are being remunerated £7.51 as an item of service payment for each child vaccinated as defined in Statement of Financial Entitlements (Amendments) (No. 6) Direction 2006. Funding for the vaccination programme has been distributed to the national health service as part of the roll out of the 2006-07 central programme budgets.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the success of the catch-up programme in immunising children against paediatric pneumococcal disease. [127830]

Caroline Flint: Following the introduction of pneumococcal vaccine into the routine childhood immunisation programme, the Health Protection Agency (HPA) is undertaking enhanced surveillance of pneumococcal disease in children. These data are available on the HPA website. The data show that cases of invasive pneumococcal disease, caused by serotypes against which the vaccine protects, are beginning to fall in younger children.

Primary Health Care: Eastern Region

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was allocated to the East of England Deanery NHS in each year since 1997 to provide postgraduate training in the primary care sector; and if she will make a statement. [122822]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally.

Skin Cancer

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the proportion of skin cancer cases attributable to the use of sun beds by people under the age of 18 years; and what steps she is taking to limit the use of sun beds by under-18s. [124261]

Caroline Flint: Information is not held centrally on the proportion of skin cancer cases attributable to the use of sunbeds by under 18-year-olds.

SunSmart, the national skin cancer prevention and sun protection campaign run by Cancer Research UK on behalf of the United Kingdom Health Departments, supports health promotion events, and includes in their printed resources and on the SunSmart website information to promote awareness of the risks to health associated with the use of sunbeds, including use by minors.

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) guidelines also recommend that sunbeds should not be used by young people and that the part of the guidelines providing advice for customers should be made available to the public at sunbed establishments. The Department and the HSE are in discussion about a review of the guidelines and whether they need to be strengthened.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated to skin cancer education awareness. [124262]

Caroline Flint: The Department and the other United Kingdom health departments commission Cancer Research UK to run SunSmart, the national skin cancer prevention and sun protection campaign. The SunSmart campaign includes raising both public and professional awareness of skin cancer through providing information about it and guidance on preventative measures to reduce the risks associated with skin cancer. The campaign raises awareness through support for health promotion events, the provision of printed resources, media briefings and through the SunSmart website. The Department contribution to the funding for the financial year 2007-08 will be £104,000.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) the number and (ii) children's unsupervised use of coin-operated unstaffed sunbed salons; [126137]

(2) what assessment she has made of the therapeutic value of sunbed use. [126138]

Caroline Flint: Excessive exposure to ultraviolet radiation, both natural and artificial, is the most important modifiable risk factor for skin cancer. The Government do not advise people to avoid the sun entirely but to enjoy it safely and prevent sunburn. Similarly they advise against the use of sunbeds for cosmetic purposes but they recognise the right of individuals to make informed choices.

The possible need for information about the number and distribution of coin-operated sunbeds, and the scale of any sunbed use by minors, is one factor that the Department has considered as part of its review of options for the regulation of such sunbeds.

Skin Cancer: Charities

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support her Department offers to skin cancer health campaigning initiatives by charities; and if she will make a statement. [126587]

Ms Rosie Winterton: SunSmart, the national skin cancer prevention and sun protection campaign which is run by the charity Cancer Research UK, receives funding from the Department and the other United Kingdom Health Departments. The campaign provides resources and information for health promotion events, and the SunSmart website also provides a valuable information resource for those interested in promoting health and preventing skin cancer.

Smoking

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the percentage of adults aged 16 and over who smoked in each year since 1977, broken down by gender. [127833]

Caroline Flint: Information on smoking prevalence for those aged 16 and over is available from the general household survey. The following table shows the prevalence of cigarette smoking among adults, by gender in England, from 1978 to 2005, the earliest and latest years for which these data are available.

Sonographers: Manpower

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sonographers were employed by the NHS in each of the last five years; how many sonographers were newly-registered in each year; how many sonographers are in training; and if she will make a statement on the future funding of training for sonographers. [126571]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The Department does not collect central data on workforce numbers for sonographers employed by the national health service.

The Society and College of Radiographers do hold some data on sonographer workforce numbers, however these only represent those people who choose to register with the society.

Sonography is not commissioned nationally and it is for each NHS trust to make a case to its strategic health authority for funding to cover costs of training.

Special Advisers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the notices of external employment given by her special advisers in the past 12 months. [108616]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The rules for civil servants, including special advisers, who wish to take up other employment in addition to their civil service duties are set out in section 4.3 of the Civil Service Management Code. Such information is not normally made public. There are no plans to create a public register of interests for special advisers.

Tuberculosis: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1977W, on tuberculosis in Greater London, if she will break down the figures by nationality of the patient. [127254]

Caroline Flint: Information on the nationality of tuberculosis patients is not collected centrally, although information is collected on country of birth. Because of the small numbers of cases reported by most countries of birth for individual boroughs, and the consequent risk of deductive disclosure, the following table provides aggregated data for the London region.

Urology: Medical Treatments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans her Department has to assist people with urology, continence and stoma problems in obtaining alternative service providers in the event that their current providers exceed the prescribed number of items they are allowed to dispense; [128099]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the impact on service providers of changes proposed recently by her Department to services for people with urology, continence and stoma problems; [128100]

(3) which organisations her Department consulted concerning proposals to change services for people with urology, continence and stoma problems; and what representations she has received on the adequacy of the consultation. [128101]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are currently consulting on changes to the payment process for items and services related to stoma and incontinence appliances within part IX of the Drug Tariff. Interested parties wishing to comment on these proposals can do so until the deadline of 2 April 2007.

As this consultation process is ongoing, no decisions, or plans on changes to services for stoma and incontinence appliances have been finalised.

It is not meaningful to provide a list of organisations consulted, or representations on the adequacy of the consultation process, until the consultation process has ended.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which individuals were sent copies of the draft guidelines on termination of pregnancy in Northern Ireland; what the cost was per copy of the guidelines; and for what reason the draft guidelines were not subject to public consultation. [119961]

Paul Goggins: The draft "Guidance on Termination of Pregnancy in Northern Ireland" was issued to interested parties in January 2007. A list of consultees has been provided.

Costs were limited to photocopying and postage costs met out of general departmental administrative expenditure. The Department decided to conduct a limited consultation on this guidance as there is no change in the law in NI and the document covers the clinical aspect of the issue.

List of consultees

1. Family Planning Association
2. Life
3. Precious Life
4. Doctors for Life
5. Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child
6. Northern Catholic Bishops
7. Church Forum
8. Workshop members
9. Chief executives of HSS Boards and Trusts
10. Chief executives of four Health and Social Care Councils
11. NI Executive of Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists
12. Royal College of Psychiatrists
13. Royal College of General Practitioners
14. Chief executive of the new Health and Social Services Authority
15. Royal College of Nursing
16. Royal College of Midwifery
17. MLAs (party leaders and health representatives only)
18. Law Society for NI
19. The Bar Council
20. NI Family Planning Doctors Association
21. NI Medical And Dental Training Agency.

Note:

2-6 of the organisations were permitted to intervene in the judicial review.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate his Department has made of the number of abortions that will be performed in Northern Ireland each year once the draft guidelines on termination of pregnancy in Northern Ireland have been implemented; whether additional funding is being made available to health authorities in Northern Ireland to implement the draft guidelines; and if he will make a statement. [119964]

Paul Goggins: There is no change to the abortion law in Northern Ireland. The draft guidance restates the current law regarding termination of pregnancy in Northern Ireland and provides clinical guidance on the issue.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are in place to protect the poultry industry in Northern Ireland following the reported outbreak of an H5N1 virus infection in Suffolk; and whether the Northern Ireland Influenza Pandemic Control Committee met in relation to the latest outbreak. [120232]

David Cairns: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) keeps the risk of Avian Influenza (AI) under constant review. The Department has a range of preventive measures in place, which are ongoing, to address the risk of AI entering Northern Ireland and to stop it spreading in poultry. Wild bird surveillance is under way this winter throughout Northern Ireland and to date no highly pathogenic H5N1 AI has been found here. A NI Bird Register is in place to gather essential information about poultry, game and other captive birds for the purposes of risk assessment, disease prevention and control. DARD has issued extensive guidance to bird keepers on biosecurity measures to protect their birds, including on how to plan for housing birds in the event of an outbreak. This is also available on the DARD website.

Following the outbreak of H5N1 AI in Suffolk, DARD has reviewed the level of risk and has put in place some additional precautionary measures. These include the introduction of a number of trade restrictions including new general and specific licensing arrangements, and a ban on the movement of birds from Great Britain to attend bird gatherings and pigeon races here. The Department has also reiterated to bird keepers the importance of good biosecurity measures to minimise the risk to their birds. The Department continues to liaise closely with Defra to monitor developments, and also maintains very close contact with the Department of Agriculture and Food in the Republic of Ireland. The Department will continue to keep the situation under constant review and the need for additional measures in proportion to the level of risk.

The Department has a contingency plan in place for use in the event of an outbreak here to contain and eradicate H5N1 AI if it does occur here.

H5N1 avian influenza is primarily a disease of birds. Transmission to humans in contact with poultry/other birds occurs rarely and to date has occurred almost exclusively in people with very close physical contact with infected birds. The Northern Ireland Pandemic Influenza Control Committee (NIPICC) is concerned with contingency planning for, and management of, a pandemic of human influenza. As such NIPICC does not have a role in reviewing/managing an outbreak of avian influenza and hence has not met in relation to the most recent H5N1 outbreak in Suffolk.

Burglary

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidences of domestic burglary were recorded in each Police Service of Northern Ireland district command unit area in each of the last 12 months; and how many people were apprehended for this crime over the same period. [125041]

Paul Goggins: Table 1 outlines the number of domestic burglaries recorded and cleared, by district command unit (DCU), during period 1 February 2006 to 31 January 2007. The PSNI do not collate statistics by the number of persons apprehended.

Table 2 sets out details of the number of persons arrested for domestic burglary by DCU during the period 1 February 2006 to 31 January 2007. We have included this second table as it sets out the number of arrests per custody suite and not DCU as this is how it is recorded at present as not all DCU's have custody suites.

Departments: Correspondence

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many letters were (a) sent and (b) received by his Department in each of the last 12 months. [120037]

Mr. Hain: The Northern Ireland Office does not hold the information for all letters centrally and could only provide the information at a disproportionate cost.

The Department collates information for public letters and ministerial correspondence for the annual departmental report, as part of the six national standards for central Government which were introduced to the Department and its executive agencies from April 1997.

The first two standards are to answer (1) letters from the general public and (2) ministerial correspondence quickly and clearly, within a departmental target of 15 working days. Performance for the period 1 January 2006 to 31 December 2006 was as follows:

	Number of letters received	Percentage in target
NIO Core	1,259	73
Northern Ireland Prison Service	1,588	92
Forensic Science Northern Ireland	92	98
The Compensation Agency	13,506	92
Public Prosecution Service for NI	549	97
Youth Justice Agency	455	100

Departments: Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on (a) involuntary and (b) voluntary staff exit schemes in (i) his Department and (ii) each agency of the Department in each year since 1997-98; how much is planned to be spent for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [123918]

Mr. Hain: The Northern Ireland Office does not hold the information centrally on involuntary and voluntary exit schemes since 1997and could provide the information only at a disproportionate cost. There is no planned spend for involuntary exit schemes in 2007-08. Voluntary exit scheme costs are generally met as a result of staff not being replaced and are infrequent.

Dogs: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dogs classified as dangerous under the relevant dangerous dogs legislation were signed over for humane destruction in Northern Ireland in each district council area in each of the past six months, broken down by breed of dog involved. [120442]

David Cairns: Local councils provide statistical information to the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD), with respect to enforcement of the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1983 (as amended). The information is provided on a quarterly basis and includes the number of dogs destroyed under the legislation.

The number of dogs handed in for humane destruction from March 2006 is detailed in the following table. From the information provided to DARD by local councils, it is understood that the dogs involved were all pit bull types. As these figures are incomplete and do not include details for all councils for the last quarter of 2006, I will write directly to the hon. Member with the complete data as soon as they become available.

Domestic Wastes

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1258W, on domestic wastes, if he will name the suppliers that the three district councils used to insert microchips in the bins. [128621]

David Cairns: The three district councils in Northern Ireland which have claimed grant from the Waste Management Grant Scheme against the costs of "bin chipping" are: Craigavon, Newtownabbey and North Down.

The suppliers used by Craigavon and Newtownabbey were Manvik, and the suppliers used by North Down were AMCS/Waste Management Solutions.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1258W, on domestic wastes, on what date funding was given for the installation of microchips in the bins. [128622]

David Cairns: Grant claimed for costs involved in the installation of "bin chips" was issued as follows:

Craigavon—November 2006;

Newtownabbey—March 2006 and May 2006; and

North Down—October 2006

Drug Seizures

Firearms: Crime

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent estimate he has made of the number of illegally-held weapons in circulation in Northern Ireland. [123538]

Paul Goggins: As any estimate about the number of illegally-held weapons in Northern Ireland would be based on intelligence, it would be inappropriate to publish this information.

Hospitals: Waiting Lists

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress being made towards the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety waiting times targets within each health trust area in Northern Ireland; and whether he expects the targets to be met in each case. [128130]

Paul Goggins: I have set targets that, by the end of March 2007, no patient should be waiting more than six months for a first consultant-led outpatient appointment and no more than six months for inpatient or daycase treatment.

All trusts have made excellent progress since April 2006 and I am confident that both targets will be achieved at the end of March.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people died whilst waiting for treatment on the NHS in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years, broken down by health trust area; and what the length of wait was in each case. [128133]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available.

Macular Degeneration

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland (a) have wet age-related macular degeneration (AMD), (b) were diagnosed with wet AMD in each of the last five years and (c) he estimates will be diagnosed with wet AMD in the next 12 months. [126320]

Paul Goggins: The information is as follows:

(a) The Department does not collect figures on the number of people who have wet age-related macular degeneration in Northern Ireland.

(b) The number of people diagnosed with wet age-related macular degeneration is not available. Information is available only on the number of admissions[1] to hospital, where the patient had a diagnosis of wet age-related macular degeneration.

The following table shows the number of admissions[1] in Northern Ireland, during each year between 2001-02 and 2005-06 (the latest year for which figures are available), where at least one of the diagnoses was wet age-related macular degeneration.

	Admissions[1]
2001-02	270
2002-03	369
2003-04	359
2004-05	472
2005-06	438

Hospital In-patient System.

The only treatment currently available to patients suffering from wet age-related macular degeneration on the NHS is photodynamic therapy. Patients for whom photodynamic therapy is not appropriate have two options:

1. They can be reviewed as out-patients because they may become eligible for photodynamic therapy should their condition change; and

2. They will be offered low vision support—for example, fitted with specialist glasses.

Other drug therapies do exist which are yet to be approved by NICE and financially approved by commissioners.

(c) The number of people who will be diagnosed with wet age-related macular degeneration in the next 12 months is not available.

Motor Vehicles: Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the criteria used to determine the location of mobile vehicle licence detection units take account of the estimated rate of licence evasion in various parts of Northern Ireland. [120874]

David Cairns: Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland (DVLNI) treats Northern Ireland as one area for the detection of unlicensed vehicles and the vehicle excise duty evasion rate is given for Northern Ireland as a whole.

However, DVLNI does consider evidence in respect of the unlicensed database, the continuous registration database and detections from previous deployments, which is collated. This is used to identify areas where it is felt the automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) vehicles would be effective and work rotas are drawn up accordingly.

Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what use Ordnance Survey Northern Ireland makes of (a) variography and (b) pictometry techniques. [120788]

Maria Eagle: Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland makes no use of either technique.

Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland currently has a reseller agreement with the Somerset-based UK agent for pictometry and, as part of that agreement, holds a sample dataset of the North Down area of Northern Ireland for demonstration purposes.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what satellite photography Ordnance Survey Northern Ireland has (a) used and (b) purchased in the last five years; and what high resolution satellites were used. [120790]

Maria Eagle: The information is as follows:

(a) In the last five years Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland has used 10 and 20 metre resolution (captured in 1990) and five metre resolution (captured in 2000) satellite photography as background imagery to assist in creating land use datasets for use within the MOLAND spatial indicators project.

(b) Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland purchased the 1990 photography in 2005. The 2000 photography is owned by the Joint Research Centre (JRC) of the European Commission and was provided, under licence, to Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland for the duration of the project.

Spot satellites were used for the 1990 10 and 20 metre resolution photography and the IRS (Indian Remote Sensing) satellite was used for the 2000 five metre resolution photography.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) purpose and (b) function is of the Ordnance Survey Northern Ireland's STAR computer system. [120860]

Maria Eagle: The information is as follows:

(a) The purpose of Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland's (OSNI) STAR (System for Tracking AceMap Requests) System is to record, in a central computerised system, all ground changes relevant to the updating of OSNI large scale mapping and to track the progress of the surveying of those changes and their addition to the OSNI topographic database.

STAR has been provided to a number of OSNI key customers in order that they can input notifications of change, query the progress of OSNI surveying relevant to their business needs, and perform limited spatial queries.

(b) The system records notification of ground changes, such as new housing development, on a map background. Notifications can be added by OSNI staff and/or users of OSNI mapping such as the Land Registers of Northern Ireland (LRNI) either from local knowledge, new address information supplied by the local authorities or from aerial photography within the STAR system. The recorded information is used by OSNI managers to allocate work to the OSNI survey teams and to track the progress of that work. Customers such as LRNI can also monitor any requests for map updates that they submit using the system. STAR also provides several map query tools that enable users to take measurements such as distance and area from the underlying OSNI large-scale mapping.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what maximum or highest resolution of aerial photography Ordnance Survey Northern Ireland holds for any part of Northern Ireland. [120867]

Maria Eagle: The highest resolution aerial photography that Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland holds for any part of Northern Ireland is 1:5,000 scale.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many aerial photographs Ordnance Survey Northern Ireland has (a) purchased and (b) taken in-house in each of the last five years. [120789]

Maria Eagle: The information is as follows:

(a) In each of the last five calendar years Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland has purchased the following numbers of aerial photographs.

	Number
2002	—
2003	4,539
2004	1,789
2005	2,263
2006	1,948
Total	10,539

(b) In each of the last five calendar years Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland has taken, in-house, the following numbers of aerial photographs.

	Number
2007	1,950
2008	2,720
2009	2,368
2010	2,825
2011	5,303
Total	15,166

Parliament Buildings

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of external lighting of Parliament Buildings for the most recent period for which figures are available in each of the last five years. [100682]

Mr. Hain: The cost of electricity for Parliament Buildings over the past five years is as follows:

April 2002 to March 2003	117
April 2003 to March 2004	130
April 2004 to March 2005	125
April 2005 to March 2006	82
April 2006 to November 2006	75

The slightly lower figures for 2005 and 2006 are primarily down to there being less people in the building.

These costs are for total electricity usage as it is not possible to separate the cost of external lighting.

Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1883W, on the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland, if he will meet the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland to discuss her definition of collusion as used in her recent report. [127170]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has no plans to meet the Police Ombudsman to discuss specifically her definition of collusion as used in her recent report. However, broad issues arising from the Police Ombudsman's report have been discussed in meetings including the Ombudsman and Ministers.

Ports

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the authorities at (a) the Port of Belfast and (b) the Port of Larne on their future plans for development; and what meetings he has had with representatives from these ports in each of the past five years. [120436]

David Cairns: During the period of direct rule from October 2002, Ministers with responsibility for ports and harbours in Northern Ireland have met with the respective ports on the following occasions:

Port of Belfast

28 May 2003
26 July 2004
27 March 2006
27 June 2006
26 August 2006
11 December 2006
12 February 2007

Port of Larne

14 January 2003
13 January 2004

Ministers were briefed on future port development plans at a number of these meetings. Decisions on port development are matters for the trust port of Belfast and the privately owned port of Larne.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been made of the likely impact on trade at the Ports of Belfast, Larne and Warrenpoint of the proposed ports development on the east coast of the Irish Republic; and what discussions he has had with the Government of the Republic of Ireland on these developments. [120437]

David Cairns: I have not discussed the proposed ports development on the east coast with Republic of Ireland Ministers.

The assessment of the likely impact on trade at the trust ports of Belfast and Warrenpoint and the privately owned port of Larne are commercial matters for each of the ports.

Prisons: Drugs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent estimate he has made of levels of drug use in Northern Ireland's prisons; and what steps he is taking to prevent drug use in prisons. [126889]

Paul Goggins: The Prison Service collates monthly statistics from each of the establishments broken down by drug types and quantities found. A quarterly report is presented to the management board analysing the trend over the previous three months. Figures outlining the number of voluntary drug tests and the pass and failure rate are also provided.

Prevention methods used by the Prison Service include the searching of visitors and inmates, the use of passive drug dogs, deployment of specialist equipment and trained staff, the use of CCTV in all areas and the collation of intelligence in liaison with other Criminal Justice Agencies.

An addictions manager has been appointed to implement the service's revised Alcohol and Substance Misuse Policy and she will take up her post soon.

Public Sector: Pay

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the pay award to nurses and other public sector workers for 2007-08; and what assessment he has made of the effect of this announcement on the (a) morale and (b) productivity of public sector workers in Northern Ireland. [127129]

Mr. Hanson: I am discussing the application of the recent Pay Review Body settlements with ministerial colleagues in HM Treasury. Where comparable, the settlements, including those for nurses and other health professionals, will apply in Northern Ireland. The Pay Review Body pay awards should ensure that the public sector can recruit, retain and motivate suitable staff. The Government have achieved a great deal in recent years with significantly increased investment in public services, with the NHS being the main beneficiary. This in turn has led to greatly increased pay for front line staff, fully recognising the hard work they undertake and service they offer on a daily basis. On balance, the latest pay award ensures that key front line workers continue to be fairly rewarded while maintaining the wider need for overall awards that help maintain our current UK economic success.

While Northern Ireland health care workers are not formally covered by the Pay Review Bodies this will change in 2008-09 when these staff groups are incorporated formally into the pay review body process. A productivity working group has been established in Northern Ireland following the independent Appleby Review. This group will continue to monitor and assess productivity levels in the local health sector.

Pupils: Intimidation

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assistance and guidance is provided by his Department to help (a) teachers and (b) pupils deal with bullying. [128119]

Maria Eagle: The Department has taken pro-active steps to tackle bullying through development and publication of guidance. Furthermore, the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 2003, which came into operation on 1 April 2003, places a duty on all grant-aided schools to have an anti-bullying policy and to draw up measures to prevent all forms of bullying among pupils. Inspections of pastoral care arrangements in schools include an assessment of anti-bullying measures and if improvements can be made schools are advised at the time.

In 2004 the Department in partnership with voluntary organisations, including Save the Children, established an Anti-bullying Forum to enable a collaborative and co-ordinated approach to tackling bullying in schools. The Forum enables members to share models of best practice and disseminate information, to develop and co-ordinate joint initiatives and to ensure that schools and organisations working with children and young people are able to develop appropriate strategies to prevent and deal with bullying behaviours.

From early 2006 the Department has been funding a coordinator post attached to the NI Anti-Bullying Forum. She is currently involved in developing a regional anti-bullying strategy based on good practice here and elsewhere and in developing a support network for schools. In addition she will be researching best practice solutions to emerging problems such as cyber-bullying.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of bullying were recorded in schools in each education and library board area in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years. [128120]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education does not collect this information.

A research report on the scale and nature of bullying in schools, commissioned by the Department, will be published later this year. That will allow for a comparison with a similar study published in 2002 and the identification of any change.

Railways: Belfast

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funding is planned for the Belfast to Larne railway line in the next three years. [120432]

David Cairns: Translink's capital programme for the next three years on the Larne line is as follows:

Completion of the works to Three Mile Water Viaduct as the final part of the Bleach Green to Whitehead Re-lay Project (£500,000)

Improvements to signalling systems (although most of the £915,000 spend will be in 2010/11)

Works to sea defences (£300,000)

Bridge strike protection at Carrickfergus (£150,000)

Plans have also been approved to improve facilities and disabled access across the whole railway network at a cost of £17 million. All of the stations and halts on the Larne line will benefit from this project.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motorists in Northern Ireland should have completed the Statutory Off Road Notice during 2006, but did not; and how many of these were subsequently prosecuted. [121610]

David Cairns: Statutory Off Road Notification (SORN) was introduced in Northern Ireland in December 2002. However, the offence of failing to make a SORN declaration was superseded in December 2003 by the introduction of continuous registration which created the new offence of being the keeper of an unlicensed vehicle; a vehicle being unlicensed if neither a current licence nor a Statutory Off Road Notification is in force. Accordingly, there are no longer any prosecutions specifically for failing to make a Statutory Off Road Notification. During 2006, action was taken against 12,837 motorists for being the keeper of an unlicensed vehicle, resulting in the payment of over £538,000 in penalties.

Roads: Belfast

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made with the upgrading of (a) the A8 Belfast to Larne Road and (b) the A72 Belfast to Carrickfergus Road; and if he will make a statement. [120434]

David Cairns: The chief executive of roads service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 13 February 2007:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a parliamentary question regarding what progress has been made with the upgrading of (a) the A8 Belfast to Larne Road and (b) the A72 Belfast to Carrickfergus Road; and if he will make a statement. As this issue falls within my responsibility as chief executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

Roads Service completed a package of major improvements on the A8 Belfast to Larne road in 2005 at a cost of some £13.3 million. With the completion of these works, which included a significant number of safety improvements, approximately 43 per cent. of the road between Sandyknowes (M2) and Larne is now of dual or motorway standard. Current traffic volumes on the remaining single carriageway section, between Ballynure and Kilwaughter do not merit the provision of a dual carriageway standard road at this time and it is the Department's view that the recent improvements provide a high level of service on this road.

However, you will be aware that on 31 July 2006, the Minister for Regional Development David Cairns MP, published the Consultation Document - 'Expanding the strategic road improvement programme 2015'. This included a proposed £10 million improvement scheme at the M2/A8 (M) Sandyknowes Junction. Roads Service has received some 80 responses to the document including a number in support of further upgrading of the A8. All responses are currently being considered and it is hoped that an announcement of the final proposals "will be made later this year.

You also enquired about progress on upgrading the A72 Belfast to Carrickfergus Road. I presume you meant the A2 Belfast to Carrickfergus Road.

I can advise that a proposed road improvement scheme on the A2 at Greenisland is included in Roads Service's major works preparation pool. The preparation pool comprises the highest priority major works schemes which are being designed and taken through the necessary statutory procedures with a view to progressing to construction within the next five years.

Following assessment of alternative route options, a preferred route has been selected and a preliminary design has been completed. The Department has prepared a Notice of Intention to Make a Direction Order, a Notice of Intention to make a Vesting Order, and an Environmental Statement, which we plan to publish in March 2007. A public exhibition will be held to coincide with the publication of these documents and there will be a formal period for public comment/objection to the Department's proposals which, depending on the outcome, may result in a public inquiry being required.

Subject to the successful completion of the statutory procedures and funding being available, Roads Service would hope to commence construction in 2008-09.

Roads: Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost to the public purse was of the road gritting programme in Northern Ireland between 1 November and 31 January in each of the last four years. [120875]

David Cairns: The chief executive of roads service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 19 February 2007:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding, what the total cost to the public purse was of the road gritting programme in Northern Ireland between 1st November and 31st January in each of the last four years. As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

I can advise that the total cost of Roads Service's winter gritting programme in Northern Ireland between 1st November and 31st January in each of the last four years is as follows:

	Cost of winter gritting programme (£000)
1 November 2003 to 31 January 2004	2,072
1 November 2004 to 31 January 2005	2,064
1 November 2005 to 31 January 2006	1,822
1 November 2006 to 31 January 2007	[1]1,770

Schools: Fire Prevention

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what fire safety training is provided to teachers and other school staff in Northern Ireland. [127122]

Maria Eagle: Fire safety training is the responsibility of individual school Boards of Governors. In order to help them carry out that responsibility, the Education and Library Boards have set out detailed fire precautions guidance in their publication "Health and Safety Manual—A Manual for Principals and Governors". That manual requires school principals to ensure staff receive training in areas such as fire prevention and evacuation and also requires that a safety inspection is completed annually. Principals and governors of schools are further assisted by each board's health and safety practitioner in the preparation of fire evacuation policies and testing of school-based procedures. While primarily aimed at governors in controlled and maintained schools, the manual is also available via the boards' websites to voluntary grammar and grant-maintained integrated schools, whose governors have similar responsibilities.

Seas and Oceans: Environment Protection

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the proposed Marine Bill; and whether the Bill will be extended to Northern Ireland. [128121]

David Cairns: On 15 March, the Government published "A Sea Change, a Marine Bill White Paper" which set outs proposals for a new legal and management framework for the marine environment including Northern Ireland. However the White Paper makes it clear that it will be a matter for the incoming Assembly and local Ministers to decide on Northern Ireland's continued involvement in taking forward the proposals.

Secure Accommodation

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients were held in secure accommodation in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years who were not designated as requiring such accommodation. [126943]

Paul Goggins: This information is not available.

Smoking

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance and assistance has been provided by his Department to affected businesses in enforcing the smoking ban in Northern Ireland. [128135]

Paul Goggins: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has funded the appointment of Smoke-free Environments Officers, who are currently providing advice and guidance to employers and businesses about the forthcoming smoke-free legislation. In addition, the Health Promotion Agency will next month distribute, on behalf of the Department, a smoke-free guidance pack for employers. The pack, which will include sample "no smoking" signage, is available for downloading now from the Agency's "Space to breathe" website:

Swans

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what estimate he has made of the number of whooper swans that settle in Northern Ireland each year; where they stay; whether any of the sites are potentially affected by road schemes; and if he will make a statement on the protections afforded to the swans; [119455]

(2) when he expects to reply to question 119455, on the protection afforded to whooper swans in Northern Ireland, tabled by the hon. Member for Worthing West on 27 February for answer on 6 February. [127867]

David Cairns: Due to an administrative oversight question 119455 was not answered earlier.

The most recent survey recorded 4,331 whooper swans in Northern Ireland in January 2005.

There are five main sites that regularly support whooper swans in numbers of international or regional importance. These are Upper Lough Erne, Lough Neagh and Lough Beg, Lough Foyle, River Foyle, River Lagan-Flatfield and River Blackwater-Derryscollop. There are a number of other smaller, more widely dispersed flocks.

My officials are aware of only one road scheme with the potential to impact on a whooper swan site. This is the proposed further road development at Toome, County Londonderry. This is still at the planning stage and is subject to an assessment as required by article 6 of the Habitats Directive. Recent surveys of the swans at this location will provide further information on the number and behaviour of birds overwintering on Lough Beg.

Whooper swan is listed in Annex II of the Birds Directive and three special protection areas have been classified for them at Lough Neagh and Lough Beg, Lough Foyle and Upper Lough Erne.

Whooper swan is also listed on schedule 1 of the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985, which affords protection for them throughout Northern Ireland.

Towerview School, Bangor

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the timetable is for the new school build for Towerview Primary School in Bangor; whether he expects this timetable to be met; and if he will make a statement. [127128]

Maria Eagle: I understand that planning for Towerview Primary School is well advanced and that final design stage costs are to be submitted by the South Eastern Education and Library Board to the Department of Education for approval. Once design costs have been received and approved it would normally take a few months to complete the remaining stages before construction work could commence. I would therefore expect that the scheme should be able to start by the summer and take around 12 to 15 months to finish, subject to the necessary stages being completed satisfactorily.

Translink: Closed Circuit Television

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the Translink public transport fleet has CCTV fitted; and what assessment he has made of the impact of CCTV in deterring crime on the transport network where it is used. [128126]

David Cairns: Translink has advised that the percentage of public transport that has been fitted with CCTV is as follows: Metro 64 per cent., Ulsterbus 22 per cent., NIR 61 per cent.

Case studies of bus security and good practice clearly indicate that CCTV has a role to play in crime reduction and improved driver/passenger security and that staff morale and customer confidence is increased by the use of on-board CCTV. It is the intention that all new vehicles are fully equipped with CCTV systems at build stage.

Travel: Concessions

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of those eligible were issued with a Smart Pass in each of the last six years, broken down by eligibility category. [128127]

David Cairns: The information is not readily available in the form requested. SmartPasses were first issued by the Department for Regional Development in March 2002 and became operational in May 2002. Although the number issued is known, there is no record of the number of former passholders who are now deceased. The following table sets out the number of first-time passes issued by eligibility category in each of the last six financial years. These figures do not include SmartPasses issued to replace those reported lost, damaged, stolen, etc. It has not been possible to obtain exact figures for eligible populations, but the table includes estimates used for planning and budgetary purposes.

Water Charges

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the proposed cap on capital values for domestic properties will apply to water bills. [120858]

David Cairns: The inclusion of a charge cap for the unmeasured domestic charging regime has been an integral part of the proposals since they were first published in the integrated impact assessment consultation (November 2004).

The proposed cap seeks to ensure that domestic customers whose properties have a high capital valuation do not pay charges which are substantially higher than could be justified by their use of the services.

The charge cap for 2007-08 has been set at £385 for water (around £128 with the phasing in of charges) and £385 for sewerage (around £128 with phasing). It is estimated that the capped charge will apply to around 1 per cent. of properties.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimate is of the highest domestic water bill in Northern Ireland under the new capital value system once transitional relief has been phased out. [120859]

David Cairns: The average combined bills in 2009-10 when water and sewerage charges are fully phased in will be around £340 (the projected England and Wales average charge) with the highest combined water and sewerage bills being capped at around £800.

Water: Meters

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Northern Ireland Administration is taking to provide the option of water metering for households that wish to opt in to a meter. [119565]

David Cairns: As the first steps in a managed, long-term transition to widespread metering, from 1 April 2007 meters will be installed on all new connections (new build properties and first time connections); and all consumers aged 60 years or over will be able to apply for a meter. Information packs, including how to apply for a meter, are currently being circulated to all households in Northern Ireland.

This phased approach will be reviewed within two years when decisions will be taken about extending the metering option to further groups of consumers.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of existing domestic properties in Northern Ireland will be able to volunteer to have a water meter installed from April 2007 rather than pay the unmetered rate. [120855]

David Cairns: From April 2007 Northern Ireland Water will begin a managed long-term transition to widespread domestic metering. Meters will be installed in all new properties and first time connections and metering will be available to pensioner households who apply. For the purposes of this provision pensioner households includes those where the householder is aged 60 or over. It is estimated that such households account for around 30 per cent. of existing domestic properties.

This policy is due to be reviewed within two years.

TRANSPORT

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many work permits were applied for by his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years. [127711]

Gillian Merron: The number of work permits applied for over the past five years by the Department and its agencies on behalf of permanent staff was:

	Number
2002	4
2003	6
2004	4
2005	6
2006	2

Driving Offences

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of his joint letter with the Secretary of State for the Home Department to Chief Constables in England and Wales in early 2007 outlining the Government's position on enforcement levels of criminal motoring offences. [128590]

Dr. Ladyman: Yes.

M1: Tinsley

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whom he would expect to consult before agreeing to a request to close the M1 at Tinsley in order to facilitate the demolition of the cooling towers; and how much notice he would give the public of any such closure. [128911]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency would consult with the police, Sheffield city council and Rotherham metropolitan borough council, once details have been finalised, before agreeing a request to close the M1 at Tinsley in order to facilitate the demolition of the cooling towers.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on which days it would be possible to close the M1 at Tinsley to facilitate the demolition of the cooling towers; and for how long such a closure would be in place. [128912]

Dr. Ladyman: It is likely that if demolition of the cooling towers at Tinsley were to go ahead the M1 will be closed from 9 pm on a Saturday through to 6 am on a Monday, or until such time as it is safe to reopen the motorway.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the length of time the M1 at Tinsley will need to be closed in order to allow the demolition of the cooling towers; and what assessment he has made of the likely effect on traffic. [128913]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is currently assessing for how long the M1 at Tinsley would need to be closed, and the impact on traffic.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received any requests to close the M1 at Tinsley for the purpose of demolishing the cooling towers; and whether any such closure is planned. [128914]

Dr. Ladyman: No formal requests to close the M1 at Tinsley have been received for the purpose of demolishing the cooling towers. However, on safety grounds the Highways Agency would close the M1 should the demolition go ahead.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the cost of closing the M1 at Tinsley to facilitate the demolition of the cooling towers. [128915]

Dr. Ladyman: The cost of closing the M1 at Tinsley to facilitate the demolition of the cooling towers cannot be estimated until details have been finalised.

Railways: Brighton

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what work has been undertaken to enhance capacity on the London to Brighton line since 1997. [125982]

Mr. Tom Harris: Since 1997 the measure to address capacity issues on the Brighton Main Line has been to introduce new rolling stock for the Southern franchise. The old slam door fleet has been fully replaced, with 24 per cent. extra trains in total, with each new train having more capacity than the train it replaced.

The next phase of capacity enhancement will be implemented as the Brighton Main Line Rail Utilisation Strategy (BML RUS). The BML RUS will make better use of the existing capacity on the Brighton Main Line. After this the next measure would be the Thameslink programme that will be decided on as part of the comprehensive spending review this year

The High Level Output Statement (HLOS), again due to be published this year, will set out the best long-term plan to accommodate the growth on this route beyond the steps already taken and the plans already in place.

Roads: Repairs and Maintenance

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there is a backlog of maintenance for local roads. [125991]

Gillian Merron: Local authorities are responsible for the maintenance of their highways networks. Each local authority decides on appropriate service levels and standards for their own highways and what maintenance is required. The Department does not collect information centrally on the amount of work that authorities consider to be outstanding.

The Department has encouraged all local highway authorities to produce asset management plans for their roads. These bring together inventory and conditions information which, together with target condition based upon desired service levels, will inform calculations of maintenance need. We are also working with local authorities to identify best practice in highways asset management with a view to publishing best practice guidance. This will build on the UK Roads Liaison Group's three codes of practice covering street lighting, highways and bridges, published in November 2004, July 2005 and September 2005 respectively, which provide advice on efficient and effective management of the network.

Speed Limits: Gloucestershire

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fixed speed cameras are located in Gloucestershire, broken down by site and district council area. [129010]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not hold this information by district council area. The information is held for the area covered by the Gloucestershire Safety Camera Partnership and the site details are shown in the following list.

Transport: Tamworth

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what transport improvements for which his Department is responsible there have been in Tamworth constituency in the last 12 months; and what improvements are planned. [128347]

Gillian Merron: The Department allocated £24.049 million of capital resources to Staffordshire county council for 2006-07 through the local transport block funding for integrated transport and maintenance.

Staffordshire's delivery of their first local transport plan period was excellent and their plan for the second local transport period to 2011 has been assessed as 'good'. We have already committed a further £40.86 million in support for capital investment in the plan, and further allocations for highway maintenance will be announced in December.

On the railways, investment of over £8 billion has gone into the West Coast Main Line. From December 2008 Tamworth will benefit in having a regular hourly service throughout the day to and from London and Crewe plus fast morning and evening business services to and from London.

Tamworth has also benefited from the A5 Weeford to Fazeley improvement which was completed in October 2005.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects longer Pendolino trains to be operating on the West Coast Main Line. [128742]

Mr. Tom Harris: Negotiations continue to take place with Virgin Trains and their partners over the provision of additional cars for the Pendolino trains. I cannot give any specific time scales at this stage.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the humanitarian needs of the Democratic Republic of Congo; and if he will make a statement. [128349]

Hilary Benn: Compared to the situation this time last year, there has been some small improvement in the humanitarian situation in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC): the overall numbers of new displacements per month has reduced slightly; the total number of displaced persons is now estimated by the UN Organisation for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UNOCHA) to be about 1 million; there has been a continuing flow of Congolese refugees returning from neighbouring countries with about 405,000 remaining outside the country and there has been a considerable reduction in the recruitment of child soldiers.

However, there remains considerable cause for concern. The Congolese army continues to steal from and harass the population. This has been exacerbated where attempts to carry out a mixing process between the army and remaining militia groups has increased ethnic tensions in certain areas and has led to large numbers of people being displaced. In the Kivus, the population also continue to be harassed by the foreign armed group the FDLR (Democratic Front for the Liberation of Rwanda). Throughout the region sexual violence remains unacceptably high and outbreaks of disease such as cholera, meningitis and plague add to the suffering of the population. For those areas where greater stability means that people can return home, they need help with the basics such as health care, clean water and assistance to restart farming. This is also true for many areas throughout the country where infrastructure and services have been destroyed or neglected.

The DRC Humanitarian Action Plan, developed by the humanitarian community in DRC, estimates the total need for 2007 to be US $687 million. This includes interventions to save lives and to help people return home or to have access to basic services when there is no other support. DFID expects to spend about £35 million on humanitarian aid for DRC in 2007. This will include a contribution of £30 million to the DRC Humanitarian Pooled Fund (in support of the Humanitarian Action Plan). The first £15 million for the pooled fund has already been transferred, as has £2 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross for their annual appeal for DRC.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral aid initiatives the UK is undertaking in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [128350]

Hilary Benn: The UK had £67 million development assistance available to the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) in financial year 2006-07. Approximately half of these funds have been spent on emergency humanitarian support through the UN and non-governmental organisations, with the remainder on supporting the 2006 electoral process, improving transport links to some isolated areas, supporting police and justice reform, supplying anti-malarial bednets and basic health, education, water and sanitation services and tackling HIV/AIDS. Additionally, through the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool, we are supporting the EU mission advising on reform of the army; the disarmament, demobilisation and reintegration of militia groups; and the provision of tents, water and sanitation and human rights training to soldiers in the new integrated brigades (and their families and local communities) to try to stop them preying on civilian populations to make ends meet.

Available funds are set to increase if the country continues to make progress. We are currently finalising our post-elections strategy for the DRC. We are doing this under the umbrella of the Common Assistance Framework—a joint strategy with all DRC's other major donors. This will help ensure that donor support to the DRC is co-ordinated and so more effective. All of our programmes are developed in consultation with other donors—such as the World Bank, UN, European Commission, the United States, Belgium and Sweden, and many will be jointly implemented. For example, the programme we are developing on road rehabilitation will be implemented through the World Bank, and also financed by the European Commission. Our humanitarian support to those most in need is implemented by the UN and non-governmental organisation and funded by several donors through a "pooled fund" mechanism which allows DRC's humanitarian co-ordinator to deploy funds quickly and flexibly to wherever the need is greatest.

Under out post-elections strategy our planned portfolio will focus on:

1. Building an effective and accountable state—including reform of the police, army and justice sector.

2. Enabling democratisation and accountability.

3. Supporting the provision of basic services—health, education and infrastructure—to the population and tackling HIV/AIDS.

4. Enabling growth by rebuilding roads and promoting better management of the DRC's natural resources.

5. Providing immediate humanitarian assistance to those in desperate need of assistance.

Developing Countries: Debts

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what total (a) value and (b) proportion of debts belonging to heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC) is owned by commercial creditors; and how much debt relief has been provided by commercial creditors under the HIPC initiative. [128346]

Hilary Benn: The World Bank and IMF estimate that approximately 5 per cent. of the total outstanding debt of all HIPC countries (US$63.2 billion in Net Present Value terms) was owed to commercial creditors.

Countries that receive debt relief from multilateral organisations and bilateral (Government) creditors are required to negotiate equivalent debt relief from other creditors, including commercial banks and companies. Many commercial banks are part of the 'London Club' and offer debt relief under the HIPC framework. However, a survey of 24 HIPCs in 2006 led the IMF and World Bank to estimate that only a limited number of commercial creditors (holding approximately 5.5 per cent. of the total commercial debts) have provided their share of HIPC debt relief directly.

Many of the remaining commercial creditors have agreed to around 90 per cent. debt reduction as part of operations managed by the World Bank under their Debt Reduction Facility (DRF), the remaining 10 per cent. of the debt is paid for by the World Bank and donors with some contribution from HIPCs towards the costs. By mid-2006, over $4.5 billion worth of commercial debt owed by HIPCs had been eliminated in this way.

However, some of the remaining commercial debt is bought by vulture funds. These companies wait until a country's circumstances have improved (for example after debt relief) and then press their case through the courts, seeking large settlements. We are working bilaterally and multilaterally with HIPC Governments to raise awareness of this issue and encourage preventative action. DFID is co-funding a Debt Management Capacity Building programme and supports a wide range of other activities to strengthen public financial management and accountability. DFID also supports the World Bank's DRF, and we have recently agreed to provide a contribution of $3.5 million to a package that will help Nicaragua buy back over $1.3 billion-worth of commercial debt.

Developing Countries: Diseases

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with representatives of the Drugs for Neglected Diseases Initiative on treatment for (a) malaria and (b) other diseases. [128940]

Hilary Benn: DFID is providing £6.5 million to the Drugs for Neglected Diseases Initiative (DNDi) from 2005 to 2008. Officials from the Central Research Department hold regular discussions with DNDi about their work to develop new treatments for malaria and such neglected tropical diseases as leishmaniasis, sleeping sickness and Chagas disease.

Institute for Public Policy Research: Finance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding his Department provided to (a) the IPPR and (b) IPPR Trading Ltd. in each year since May 1997; and for what purposes. [125714]

Hilary Benn: Tables 1 and 2 contain details of DFID funding to IPPR and IPPR trading respectively since March 1997.

Uganda: Overseas Aid

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has made to the Government of Uganda on the distribution of (a) development funds and (b) budget support to that country's regions. [128471]

Hilary Benn: The overarching framework for allocating budget resources in Uganda is the Government's own Poverty Eradication Action Plan. DFID participates in the process through which the Government of Uganda determine the distribution of budget funds which include assessments of performance and financing needs in individual sectors and an annual Public Expenditure Review in which development partners and civil society are consulted about budget plans for the next year and the medium term. Allocations to the Poverty Action Fund, through which poverty reduction expenditure is prioritised, are now nearly 40 per cent. of the Government's budget compared to about 20 per cent. at the end of the 1990s. DFID's Poverty Reduction Budget Support (PRBS) supplements the Government's own resources in the budget. Decisions about PRBS take into account the Government's commitments to poverty reduction, strengthening financial management and accountability and respecting human rights and international obligations.

The distribution of support to the country's regions is an important part of the discussions which DFID has about performance and financing needs in individual sectors such as health, education, water and agriculture. The provision of services at district level is largely funded by the central Government. Ensuring that the criteria for allocating resources to districts take proper account of poverty is a priority for DFID. We have worked closely with the Government in different sectors to improve allocation criteria so that the distribution of funds and the provision of services better reflects needs. In recent years there has been a shift in the allocation of resources in favour of poorer districts, although there is scope for further improvement. A recent National Audit Office study noted the contribution DFID has made to bringing about positive changes in the district budget allocation system.

A particular focus for our discussion about support to Uganda's regions has been the situation in the north where the humanitarian consequences of conflict have created major additional needs on top of normal per capita expenditure, including the requirement for large scale food distribution. These additional needs have largely been met by the donor community. We have pressed the Government to do more. The Government responded in the 2006-07 budget by making available an extra £5.3 million (approximately) for the districts of the north affected by conflict.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Consultation Papers

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what procedures her Department is following in drafting Part I of the Creative Economy Green Paper; and when she expects the Green Paper to be published. [128231]

Mr. Woodward: Part 1 of the forthcoming Creative Economy Green Paper will set out a clear analysis of the state of the UK's creative economy, the factors that have driven its recent success and the challenges the sector faces.

In preparing this, we will draw on the findings of seven Working Groups set up at the outset of the Creative Economy Programme, our existing evidence base and specially commissioned research, as well as responses to an earlier online consultation and a range of industry summits and bilateral discussions.

The work commissioned by DCMS from the Work Foundation will contribute to an economic analysis. We plan to publish later in the summer.

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what procedure her Department used in appointing the Work Foundation to write a paper on the creative economy. [128232]

Mr. Woodward: The Department appointed the Work Foundation on a single tender, taking into account several factors. Principal among these was that the Work Foundation was undertaking a major wider project on 'The Knowledge Economy', of which the creative economy is a part. This enabled the organisation to produce expert, innovative and specialised work for this consultancy drawing on their wider experience, evidence base and stature.

The consultancy project also demands powerful leadership with the ability to help the Department engage in challenging discussion with a wide range of senior figures in the private and public sector. These additional factors also supported the appointment of the Work Foundation.

Copyright: EC Law

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what opportunity was given to stakeholders to comment on the evidence received by the Gowers Review prior to publication of the Gowers Report. [128233]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The Gowers Review conducted a public call for evidence in the early stages of the review. Over 100 respondents made their evidence publicly available prior to the publication of the review for wider discussion. The review also met with a wide range of stakeholders—including representatives from the creative industries and consumer groups—throughout 2006 to discuss emerging evidence.

Film

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2007, Official Report, columns 322-4W, on film, which other industry summits she (a) has held and (b) plans to hold to inform the further development of the Joint Creative Economy Programme with the Department of Trade and Industry; and who has been invited to each. Mr. Woodward: We have held industry summits on:

Film
Broadcasting Architecture Music
Publishing

We will hold industry summits on:

Software Games
Design
Performing Arts
Advertising
Fashion.

I am arranging for a list of those people invited to each industry summit to be placed in the House Libraries. Invitations to the Fashion Summit have not yet been issued.

Museums and Galleries

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what requests she has received from any authority within European member states in respect of the restitution of museum artefacts from those states which are held by British museums. [128779]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received no recent requests from EU member states in respect of the restitution of artefacts held by British museums.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with her counterparts in other EU member states on the restitution of museum artefacts. [128780]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no recent discussions with her counterparts in other EU member states on this issue.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many businesses based in (a) the London Borough of Newham, (b) the London Borough of Tower Hamlets, (c) the London Borough of Hackney, (d) the London Borough of Waltham Forest and (e) the London Borough of Greenwich have secured tenders for the construction phase of the London Olympics; [126289]

(2) how many UK-based businesses in each region have secured tenders for the construction phase of the London Olympics; [126290]

(3) how many businesses based in (a) the London Borough of Newham, (b) the London Borough of Tower Hamlets, (c) the London Borough of Hackney, (d) the London Borough of Waltham Forest and (e) the London Borough of Greenwich have submitted applications for contracts during the construction phase of the London Olympics; [126291]

(4) what value of contracts has been secured by UK-based businesses in each region for the construction phase of the London Olympics. [126716]

Mr. Caborn: The Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) is currently engaged in a process of procuring contracts for the construction phase of the Olympic and Paralympic facilities. To date, the ODA has not awarded any construction phase contracts. The ODA has awarded the contract for the project and programme management of the Olympic Park, and has had the contracts for the undergrounding of the powerlines and remediation and demolition work novated over to them from the London Development Agency.

To date, 1,480 businesses in London have registered an interest in London 2012 contract opportunities of which 143 are interested in construction opportunities. In respect of submitted applications for contracts during the construction phase, applications are currently being reviewed and details of successful applicants will be made available once contracts have been awarded.

Tourism

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which UK cities received the highest number of tourist visitors in each of the last 10 years. [128846]

Mr. Woodward: Table 1 shows the UK cities with the highest number of visits by overseas residents from 2000 to 2005. Due to methodological changes to the International Passenger survey in 1999, comparisons with earlier years would be misleading, and are therefore not reported.

Table 2 shows the UK cities with the highest number of overnight visits by domestic residents for 2005-06 only, as data for previous years would involve disproportionate costs to obtain.

Information on domestic same day visits is not available at this level of detail.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Air Pollution

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what estimate the House authorities have made of the volume of (a) carbon dioxide, (b) methane, (c) perfluorocarbons, (d) nitrous oxide and (e) carbon equivalent released by the incineration of waste from the House of Commons estate when calculating the estate's carbon footprint. [120729]

Nick Harvey: Only residual waste after recycling has taken place is sent for incineration with energy recovery. In 2006 residual waste collected from the parliamentary estate amounted to 1,299 tonnes. This material was combusted at an energy recovery facility regulated by the Environment Agency, generating 725,000 kilowatt hours of electricity. The recovered energy is classed as renewable energy by the UK Government, in line with Directive 2001/77/EC on the promotion of electricity produced from renewable energy sources in the internal electricity market.

Recovering energy from waste is acknowledged in the Stern review as an effective weapon in combating climate change, displacing carbon dioxide emissions from fossil fuel power generation sources.

The carbon footprint associated with the combustion of this waste is made up of a number of components:

(1) Direct emissions of greenhouse gases (GHG), expressed as carbon equivalents

(2) "Avoided" emissions of GHG (that is, emissions displaced from an equivalent amount of fossil fuel power generating capacity)

(3) GHG emissions (additional or saved) from waste transportation

(4) Net GHG emissions, taking account of direct, avoided and transport-related emissions.

Direct emissions of GHG

GHG emissions from waste combustion are calculated in two steps. First, an estimate is made of the percentage of fossil and non-fossil carbon in the waste. Second, the emissions from the combustion of the fossil carbon within the waste are calculated. Emissions of non-fossil carbon do not contribute to global warming and are therefore not taken into account.

Methane is not produced in combustion plants. The remaining greenhouse gases are released in trace quantities relative to emissions of carbon dioxide. Because their concentrations in the emission gases vary according to the composition of the waste, the total GHG effect expressed in tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalents (Teq) is estimated using emission factors developed by DEFRA, based on measured emissions averaged across UK energy recovery facilities.

Direct GHG emissions following the combustion of residual waste from parliamentary estates amounts to 415 Teq, of which 295 Teq is carbon dioxide.

GHG emissions from waste transportation

A saving in GHG emissions is realised when residual waste from the parliamentary estates is combusted, since the energy recovery facility is just 12 miles from the House. Previously the waste was being transported to landfill further away from the estate.

The GHG emission factor developed by DEFRA for waste transportation varies between 0.37 and 0.49 kg carbon dioxide equivalents per tonne of waste transported, depending on distance travelled. For transportation of 1,299 tonnes of parliamentary estates waste, this amounts to a GHG emission of between 0.48-0.65 Teq. Since this is less than 1 per cent. of the emissions of direct or avoided emissions, the GHG saving in transporting the waste a shorter distance will be omitted when presenting net emissions.

Net GHG emissions

The carbon footprint associated with the combustion of waste from the parliamentary estates is obtained by subtracting avoided emissions from direct emissions.

This equates to a net GHG saving of 20 Teq. Therefore 20 Teq should be subtracted when determining the total carbon footprint of parliamentary estates.

Electoral Register: Chorley

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which areas within Chorley borough have low electoral registration rates. [126613]

John Healey [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question regarding which areas within Chorley borough have low electoral registration rates. (126613)

The attached table provides information, for each electoral ward in Chorley, comparing the number of people who are registered to vote as local electors with the "estimated usually resident population" aged 18 and over. The resulting percentages are labelled as "registration rates" on the table and this term is used in the remainder of this reply. These data provide the closest available approximation to the information you requested. It is not possible to calculate the percentage of the eligible population who are registered to vote: the resident population aged 18 and over is not the same as the number of people eligible to vote.

These "registration rates" are not published as National Statistics: there are a number of issues that mean care needs to be taken when interpreting the data. In particular, care needs to be taken when considering areas where the usually resident population differs radically from the population eligible to vote. An example of such an area might be one containing prisons (as is the case for Lostock ward) or accommodation for a United States Air Force base, as prisoners and American citizens are not eligible to vote. These people are however included in the population estimates as they are usually resident. Therefore, the estimated "registration rate" calculated for such areas is considerably reduced.

Please note that the population estimates have a reference date of 30 June, and electoral data a reference date of 1 December. Attainers have been excluded from the electorate data (as they are under 18) to give the best possible comparison.

There is also inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate (both parliamentary and local/European) as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. This is one of the main reasons some areas show rates in excess of 100 per cent.

The population data are estimates and as such are subject to a margin of confidence. The ward level population estimates are derived from estimates for a different geography that have been published with the status of experimental statistics. Therefore, the estimates, and electoral registration rates derived from them, should not be treated as being exact. The latest derived available ward estimates are for mid-2004 and therefore data are shown for this year.

2004: Electoral registration rates, wards in Chorley, in ascending order.

Employment Level

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people of working age were (a) in full-time employment and (b) in part-time employment in each year since 1979-80; [124618]

(2) what the (a) employment rate, (b) full-time employment rate and (c) part-time employment rate for (i) women and (ii) men was in each year since 1979-80. [124619]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many people of working age have been (a) in full-time employment and (b) in part-time employment in each year since 1979-80 and what the estimate is of the (a) employment rate, (b) full-time employment rate and (c) part-time employment rate for (i) women and (ii) men for each year since 1979-80. (124618 & 124619)

Table 1 shows the number of people in employment (working age) and the full-time and part-time employment for people aged 16 and over by gender for each year from 1992 to 2006. A full-time and part-time split is not available for the working age population on a consistent basis.

Table 2 shows the working age employment rates by gender for each year from 1992 to 2006. It also shows the percentages of people working both full-time and part-time based on those who are aged 16 years and over. A full-time and part-time split is not available for the working age population on a consistent basis.

The two tables provided are for the three months ending December in each year from 1992 to 2006 and are seasonally adjusted.

Each month the ONS publishes employment levels and rates and full-time and part-time employment in the Labour Market Statistics First Release available within the attached link (see tables 2 and 3) http://www.statistics.gov.uk/pdfdir/lmsuk0207.pdf.

Estimates are taken from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the (a) total employment rate and (b) total full-time employment rate in the (i) 10 local authority areas and (ii) 10 local authority wards in the UK with the (A) highest and (B) lowest employment rates for the latest year for which information is available. [124620]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimate has been made of the (a) total employment rate and (b) total full-time employment rate in the (i) 10 local authority areas and (ii) 10 local authority wards in the UK with the (A) highest and (B) lowest employment rates for the latest year for which information is available. (124620)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of employment for local areas from the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation definitions.

Table 1, attached, shows employment rates, for persons of working age, for the 10 local authorities, in Great Britain, with the highest employment rates and the ten authorities with the lowest rates for the 12 months ending in June 2006 from the APS. Table 1 also shows the number of persons, aged 16 and over, in full-time and part-time employment expressed as a proportion of the total number of employed persons aged 16 and over.

As these estimates are for a subset of the population in a small geographical area, they are based on small sample sizes, and are therefore subject to large margins of uncertainty.

Table 2, attached, shows employment rates for persons of working age for persons of working age for the ten wards, in Great Britain, with the highest employment rates and the ten wards with the lowest rates from the 2001 Census as reliable ward data is not available from the APS. For clarity, the local authority of the ward is shown. Table 2 also shows the number of persons, aged 16 to 74, in full-time and part-time employment expressed as a proportion of the total number of employed persons aged 16 to 74.

Government Contracts: Equal Opportunities

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance the Office of Government Commerce has produced on making the award of public contracts conditional on the bidding private sector firms meeting equality or diversity criteria or targets. [128639]

John Healey: Social issues—such as equality and diversity considerations—can be taken into account in the procurement process where they are relevant to the subject of the particular contract. OGC published a guidance note, 'Social Issues in Purchasing', in January 2006 on the scope to include social considerations in the procurement process.

The 'Social Issues in Purchasing' note can be found at:

http://www.ogc.gov.uk/documents/Social_Issues_in_Purchasing.pdf

Institute of British Studies

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress his Department has made towards establishing an Institute of British Studies. [125775]

John Healey: A range of organisations is advancing proposals for such an institute.

Lakshmi Mittal

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has met Lakshmi Mittal since 1997. [111351]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings with a wide variety of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Migrant Workers

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions Ministers in his Department have had with counterparts in the Home Office regarding recent changes to the Highly Skilled Migrants Programme. [119134]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials are in regular contact with colleagues in other Departments.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2006, Official Report, column 727W, on ministerial travel, which publication lists the overseas visits of (a) the Paymaster General, (b) the Financial Secretary and (c) the Economic Secretary; and if he will make a statement. [109204]

John Healey: As with all inquiries relating to the cost of ministerial travel, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the information the Government have published on an annual basis since 1999, listing overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 and the total cost of all ministerial travel. Information for 2006-07 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the financial year. All ministerial visits are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Office for National Statistics: Internet

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to improve the user-friendliness of the Office for National Statistics website. [127826]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Dennis Roberts, dated 21 March 2007:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking, what steps are being taken to improve the user-friendliness of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) website, I am replying in her absence. (127826)

The existing ONS website is over five years old and at the time it was created it was rated as one of the best Government websites. However, internet technology changes extremely quickly and we recognise that the website is now in need of updating. ONS is part-way through a project to develop a new website to meet the needs of users. The new website is being designed to be effective and easy to use, and will also need to take on board organisational changes to ONS resulting from the Statistics and Registration Service Bill. Rollout of the new site is due to start in 2008.

Although our main efforts are devoted to developing the new website we are not neglecting the existing site. We have an ongoing programme of refinement to make modest improvements for users. We continue to monitor performance and to keep content topical: in particular the homepage is updated almost daily to provide easy access to the latest data and commentary.

Official Visits

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many visits to India (a) HM Treasury civil servants and (b) special advisers took in preparation for his recent visit to India; and what estimate he has made of the cost of each visit. [111924]

John Healey: While Treasury officials have visited India, there were no preparatory visits specific to the Chancellor's visit.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2007, Official Report, column 2269W, on Official Visits: USA, whether he stayed at the British embassy on the visit in April 2006. [128898]

John Healey: We do not provide details of Ministers' accommodation arrangements.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of Partnerships UK's assessment of the potential for private investment in the construction of the infrastructure for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympics; and if he will make a statement; [128408]

(2) what assessment his Department has undertaken of the potential for private investment in the construction of (a) venues and (b) the Olympic Village for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympics; what the outcomes were of such assessments; and if he will make a statement. [128409]

John Healey: The potential level of private investment in the construction of different elements of the Olympic Park is subject to commercial negotiations with private developers.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date he had first sight of the original budget for the 2012 Olympics prior to its approval by Cabinet for submission to the International Olympic Committee. [128418]

John Healey: The original budget for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games was developed from 2002 onwards.

Smith Institute

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many events his Department held in conjunction with the Smith Institute as part of the (a) Gowers, (b) Leitch, (c) Cox, (d) Cave and (e) Stern reviews; [123341]

(2) whether responses to consultations as part of the (a) Gowers Review, (b) Leitch Review, (c) Cox Review, (d) Cave Review and (e) Stern Review were received from the Smith Institute. [123342]

John Healey: The Department held no events and received no responses.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2007, Official Report, column 1134W, on the Smith Institute, which charities applied to hold events at No. 11 Downing street in each year since 1996 but had their request turned down. [123617]

John Healey: A list of all the organisations which have applied to use No. 11 Downing street is not available. However, the Treasury tries to accommodate all charities which have applied to do so.

Unemployment: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many economically inactive people of working age there were in Peterborough constituency in age groups (a) 18 to 24 years, (b) 25 to 50 years and (c) 50 years or more in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [128200]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 21 March 2007:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many economically inactive people of working age there were in Peterborough constituency in age groups (a) 18 to 24 years, (b) 25 to 50 years and (c) 50 years or more in each year since 1997. I am replying in her absence. (128200)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of inactivity from the annual local area Labour Force Survey (LFS) and the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation definitions.

The attached table shows the number of economically inactive persons aged 16 to 24, 25 to 49, 50 to retirement age and for all persons of working age resident in the Peterborough constituency from the annual local area LFS for the 12-month periods ending in February from 1997 to 2004 and from the APS for the 12-month periods ending in March from 2005 to 2006. These numbers are also expressed as a percentage of the relevant population.

As these estimates are for a subset of the population in a small geographical area, they are based on very small sample sizes, and are therefore subject to large margins of uncertainty. In this case, the sample sizes are not sufficient to give an accurate estimate of even the direction of the change over the period.

V

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he attended the parliamentary reception for the charity V in February. [127210]

John Healey [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Chancellor did not attend.

Written Questions

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has received representations from the Leader of the House on his Department's answers to written parliamentary questions. [128803]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials discuss a wide variety of issues relating to parliamentary business with their counterparts in other Departments, including the Privy Council Office.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces: Postal Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on delays to mail sent to the United Kingdom from UK forces deployed abroad; and if he will make a statement. [128046]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2208W, for vessels chartered up to mid-February 2006.

Gibraltar: Military Bases

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians are employed at the dockyard in Gibraltar. [128095]

Mr. Ingram: Further to the answer I gave my right hon. Friend on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1657W, I am not able to confirm how many civilians are employed at the dockyard in Gibraltar because the facility is operated by a private company. They, and not the Ministry of Defence (MOD), employ the civilians who work there.

The number of civilian personnel employed by the MOD in Gibraltar is listed in the following table[1], showing both core MOD staff, and locally engaged civilians as at 1 January 2007. These figures represent all civilian personnel in Gibraltar. Details for specific areas such as the dockyard are not held centrally.

[1] All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

	Full-time equivalents[2]
Core MOD	60
Locally engaged civilians	960
Total	1,020

[2] Full-time equivalence counts part-time staff by the number of hours they work as a proportion of their full-time conditioned hours.

Hercules Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will assess the adequacy of work carried out by the contractors fitting suppressant foam to Hercules aircraft. [128356]

Mr. Ingram: We are satisfied that the contractor is applying quality assurance processes robustly and that the fitting of explosive suppressant foam to Hercules aircraft will be completed within the agreed timeframe.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the value of the Hercules aircraft ZH876 and its contents that was written off and destroyed following the landing accident north of Basra. [128945]

Mr. Ingram: The current market value of a C-130J aircraft is in the region of £45 million.

Identification Friend Foe Systems

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether he expects the Battlefield Target Identification System to supersede the Bowman and Coalition Blue Force Situational Awareness Demonstrator; [122218]

(2) whether he expects the Battlefield Target Identification System to be fully inter-operable with (a) the United States and (b) other NATO countries; [122220]

(3) when he expects the Battlefield Target Identification System to come into service; and if he will make a statement. [122221]

Mr. Ingram: The Battlefield Target Identification System (BTIS) is intended to help identify friendly forces, helping to reduce the risk of fratricide. It will complement other systems providing better situational awareness and also contributing to reduced risk of fratricide, such as Bowman and the Coalition Blue Force Situational Awareness Demonstrator, not replace them.

The BTIS programme has not yet reached its main investment decision point and in line with our normal practice no in-service date will be confirmed until that point. We fully recognise the importance of any UK combat identification system being inter-operable with US and other NATO and coalition partners.

Iraq: Armoured Fighting Vehicles

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Mastiff protected patrol vehicles have reached the front-line troops in Iraq. [128856]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 20 March 2007]: The first Mastiff vehicles were delivered to Iraq at the end of 2006 and are being used on operations.

I am withholding details on the number of vehicles that are currently deployed as it would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of our Armed Forces.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers from Welsh regiments he expects to be included in the next roulement of troops that will be sent to Iraq in June; and if he will make a statement. [128426]

Mr. Ingram: A total of 640 soldiers from the Battlegroup headquarters and three armoured infantry companies of the Second Battalion, the Royal Welsh Regiment and one infantry company of the First Battalion, the Royal Welsh Regiment will be deploying to Iraq in June as announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence in his statement on 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 59WS.

Mine Clearing Vehicles

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many mine clearing vehicles were sold from his Department's inventory in each of the last four years. [128282]

Mr. Ingram: The only mine clearing vehicles that MOD has sold in the last four years are three Aardvark Flail units which were sold in 2005.

Royal Naval Hospital Haslar

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to relocate the Royal Hospital Haslar. [128230]

Derek Twigg: None. The Royal Hospital Haslar will lose its formal military status on 31 March. However, we expect that it will continue to operate much as it does now until late 2009, with the support of military doctors and nurses, providing health care to the local community and, in very small numbers, military patients, until Portsmouth Hospitals Trust is able to relocate its clinical activity elsewhere. The hospital will then be closed.

Military doctors and nurses will continue to maintain their skills and treat patients in the hospitals of the Portsmouth Hospital Trust and other NHS trusts which host Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs). Military patients will continue to receive treatment from the MDHU host trusts and other parts of the NHS.

Selly Oak Hospital

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the (a) accommodation and (b) treatment of wounded servicemen and women is organised at the NHS Selly Oak hospital. [128483]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: Military patients admitted to Selly Oak hospital, or other hospitals of the University Hospital Birmingham Foundation Trust, are accommodated in wards appropriate to their clinical need. The largest number of operational casualties have required treatment as trauma orthopaedic cases. They are therefore the focus for the military managed ward that has been developed at Selly Oak to enable military patients to be accommodated together in a single ward, where it is clinically appropriate to do so.

The military managed ward offers the opportunity to accommodate military patients together in six-bedded bays or, when necessary, in side isolation rooms. A works project, now out to tender, will change the layout of the ward to produce a separate area for military patients, utilising the two bays and isolation rooms at the far end of the ward.

The treatment of military patients is the responsibility of the NHS Trust. A military trauma co-ordinator is responsible for liaising with clinical colleagues, military and civilian, to provide advice on Service issues and ensure that military aspects of military patients' treatment are fully taken into account. On the military managed ward, military nurses will always be on duty and currently include 19 qualified nurses and 5 health care assistants. They work closely together with NHS colleagues to provide nursing care, with special emphasis on military patients. A military ward manager, supported by three military deputies, is responsible for all aspects of the military presence on the ward.

Military patients at Selly Oak and elsewhere in the Birmingham area are supported by the work of two full-time community psychiatric nurses and four welfare officers of the Defence Medical Welfare Service. Families of injured Service personnel are provided with welfare support and accommodation when necessary. Accommodation available includes seven flats, plus a number of family rooms.

We shall continue to enhance the capability of the military managed ward and the care available for all military patients. The development of the ward would not have been possible without the close and enthusiastic support of the NHS Trust.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Children: Day Care

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Education on the availability of wraparound child care. [126068]

Mr. Jim Murphy: My Department works closely with the Department for Education and Skills on the delivery of the Government's ambitious 10-year child care strategy, including the extension of wraparound child care.

The Department for Work and Pensions and the Department for Education and Skills share two PSA targets, to improve outcomes for young children and to increase the stock and the take up of formal child care as a contribution towards reducing the proportion of children living in households where no one is working.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the availability of child care to parents of children aged between 11 and 16 years old, with particular reference to during school holidays. [127593]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not collected centrally. From April 2007 all English local authorities will have a duty to carry out an assessment of the sufficiency of child care in their area. This will involve a detailed assessment of the demand for, and supply of, child care in their area, including holiday provision for children aged 11 to 14 (and up to 18 if disabled). This will enable local authorities to plan how to secure sufficient child care and establish the services parents and children need.

Children: Maintenance

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on progress towards the Government's target to reduce the time taken to process child maintenance applications. [125832]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 21 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, about the Government's target to reduce the time taken to process child maintenance applications. [125852]

The Child Support Agency has been set six targets by the Secretary of State for 2006/07, which were published in the Agency's Business Plan, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library, or on the internet via the following link: www.csa.gov.uk/pdf/english/reports/plan0607.pdf.

Two of these targets relate to the processing and clearing of applications received since the new scheme was introduced in March 2003.

The first concerns the volume of applications being cleared and states that: by 31 March 2007, the Agency will have reduced the volume of uncleared new scheme applications by 25 per cent. of the amount outstanding by the end of March 2006. The second concerns the speed with which new applications should be processed and states that: by 31 March 2007, the Agency will clear 55 per cent. of the new applications within 12 weeks of receipt and 80 per cent. within 26 weeks.

The Agency's latest performance against these targets was published in table 2.1 and table 3 of the December 2006 Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary Statistics, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library, or on the internet via the following link: www.dwp.gov/asd/asd1/child_support/csa_quarterly_dec06.asp.

Income Support: Lone Parents

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of lone parents whose youngest child is over 11 are receiving income support; and how many and what proportion are (a) carers for a disabled child and (b) have a disability themselves. [121529]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is in the following table.

Lone parents with youngest child over 11

	Number	Percentage
Claiming income support	108,950	19.1
Caring for a disabled child	105,000	25.1
Report disability themselves	160,000	28.1

Notes:

1. The number of income support lone parents is reported using DWP administrative data.
2. Lone parent population data is taken from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) 2006 Q2—it indicates there were 570,000 lone parents with a youngest child aged over 11. In total there were 1.78 million lone parents.
3. The second quarter of 2006 covers April to June, while the administrative data are taken from August 2006. These figures are not directly comparable. The figure indicating the estimated proportion of lone parents claiming income support should be considered as indicative only.
4. Information concerning the number of lone parents with a disabled child is reported using the Family and Children's Study 2004 and includes working and non-working lone parents with a disabled child. Population estimates have been produced by grossing up from a sample of 7,000 families, so there will be a margin of error around these estimates and they should be treated with caution.
5. The number and proportion of lone parents with a disability is taken from the LFS 2006 Q2. This includes those who self-report as DDA or work-limiting disabled, or both.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether mechanisms are in place for jobseekers to recommence their benefits after ceasing short-term employment without having to sign on again in person; and if he will make a statement. [125667]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There is no mechanism in place for jobseekers to recommence their jobseeker's allowance claim without having to register in person.

To ensure people are able to reinstate their benefit claim quickly after a short break, Jobcentre Plus fast-track people through what is known as a rapid re-claim process. This is used for people who are returning to benefit within 12 weeks and whose circumstances (in relation to the claim) are unchanged. Rapid re-claim supports the incentive to take up employment, including short-term periods of full-time work, by allowing the completion of a shortened claim form. To be able to move quickly back into benefit also eases the concerns felt about re-claiming benefits if the work suddenly comes to an end.

While rapid re-claim still requires a face-to-face contact—needed to put in place things such as the jobseeker's agreement, which is a legal requirement—the process is much streamlined and involves a shorter interview and much reduced paperwork. Interviews are typically undertaken with 48 hours and people being required to confirm their circumstances remain as previously stated in writing.

Written Questions

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to answer question 111479, on the quality of new deal programmes, tabled by the hon. Member for Fareham on 23 January 2007. [126116]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I replied to the hon. Gentleman on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1733W.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Construction: Research

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the percentage of the construction industry's total value which was represented by research and development spending in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [127406]

Margaret Hodge: The DTI does not collect estimates of the percentage of the construction industry's total value represented by research and development (R and D) spending. However, the Office for National Statistics (ONS) collects statistics which are indicative of formal Business Enterprise R and D (BERD) as follows:

ONS BERD

	Construction contracting—R and D as percentage of gross value added
2001	0.06
2002	0.06
2003	0.05
2004	[1]

[1] BERD data for 2004 are withheld to avoid disclosure of figures in which the returns of individual businesses could be identified.
Source: ONS - Research and Development in UK Businesses (MA14)

Although the Government's aim is to raise the level of research and innovation across the UK economy, it is difficult to capture innovation in project-based activities such as construction. The Department's innovation survey shows that 44 per cent. of construction enterprises were involved in some form of innovation activity between 2002 and 2004. The sector's main contractors and specialist engineering innovation activity is largely of a site-based problem-solving form, although some also undertake formal research and development.

Data Protection: Costs

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Data Protection Act to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125591]

Vera Baird: I have been asked to reply.

The regulatory impact assessment for directive 95/46/EC (the data protection directive) includes a compliance cost assessment, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of both Houses.

This assessment lists the total start-up costs of the legislation as £836 million and £630 million in recurring annual costs. There was no assessment of the potential costs to regulators.

In December 2006 the DCA published a report on its participation in the cross-Government administrative burdens measurement exercise, which was intended to measure the administrative costs to businesses, charities and the voluntary sector of complying with Government regulation. This measured the costs to business of complying with the Data Protection Act and associated secondary legislation as £55.9 million in recurring annual administrative costs. However, it should be noted that due to the methodology used during this exercise this figure should be regarded as indicative and not statistically robust.

The full report can be accessed at:

http://www.dca.gov.uk/pubs/reports/r2r_mexrc_rep.pdf.

Departments: Complaints

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints were received by his Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many have been received in 2006-07 to date. [121671]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The central Department (also covering the Small Business Service) does not collate figures on complaints. Figures for the Department's other agencies are as follows:

			Patent Office
	NWML[1]	Insolvency service	Formal	Informal	Companies House
1997-98	1	927	20	94	[2]—
2001-02	3	595	27	33	29,008
2005-06	0	428	10	[3]9	34,804
2006-07	5	331	31	[3]100	31,875

[2] Figures for 1997-98 are not available due to a change in computer software

[3] A high number of these complaints were about the same subject

Dietary Supplements: Channel Islands

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the size of the market share of suppliers based in the Channel Islands in the food supplements and herbal remedies mail order sector in (a) 1996 and (b) 2006. [123914]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

Information is not held centrally by Government on the amount of food supplements and herbal remedies obtained by mail order from the Channel Islands. No estimate has been made on the size of the market share of suppliers based in the Channel Islands.

East of England Tourist Board: Grants

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what key performance indicators have been agreed between the East of England Development Agency and the East of England Tourist Board in respect of the grant of £1 million in the (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08 financial year. [124331]

Margaret Hodge: As part of the business plan for tourism, under which the East of England Tourist Board (EET) is tasked with delivering tourism marketing and promotion for the external lending mandate investment, the following key performance indicators were agreed:

Secure at least 10 per cent. private sector cash match-funding and at least 10 per cent. benefit-in-kind for all marketing and PR campaigns.

Achieve a return on investment of 4:1 for all domestic campaigns.

Achieve a return on investment of 25:1 for international campaigns.

Evaluate all PR activity to show where the activity was placed, what message was received and how it was received and what the opportunities of exposure to the message were.

This return is then measured through capturing information from the visitors via research (online and at the area/destination and via the industry) as their reasons for visiting and the spend per head.

These key performance indicators are valid for the lifetime of the agreement between EEDA and EET which is until March 2008.

Enterprise Capital Fund

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been invested in (a) the Enterprise Capital Fund providing early stage funding for companies developing sustainable technologies and (b) other Enterprise Capital funds. [125778]

Margaret Hodge: The information is as follows:

(a) Government and private investors have commited to invest up to £30 million in the 21st Century Sustainable Technology Growth Fund.

(b) Investment committed by Government and private investors into the other four funds currently awarded Enterprise Capital Fund status totals £95 million.

These funds were launched in the second half of 2006 and are expected to invest the commitment over the next seven to eight years.

Government Contracts: Equal Opportunities

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidance his Department, its agencies or sponsored public bodies produced on making the award of public contracts conditional on the bidding private sector firms meeting equality or diversity criteria or targets. [128666]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department of Trade and Industry has recently reviewed its procurement procedures as part of its work to implement the public sector duties to promote equality of opportunity for race, (imposed by the Race Relations Act 1976 (as amended by the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000)), and disability, (imposed by the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (as amended by the Disability Discrimination Act 2000)).

The Department's invitation to tender documents now contain information alerting potential contractors to the need to demonstrate an understanding and application of the disability and race duties in the services they provide or are seeking to provide. This information makes it clear that while contractors are not subject to these public sector duties in an individual capacity, DTI's legal obligations extend to those organisations with whom they contract. In addition, the Department also now requires its top 50 existing suppliers to if requested, provide, management information to demonstrate their compliance with the duties. The Department, in its revised standard terms of contract, has the right to terminate a contract for non-compliance with the duties. These provisions, specific to the duties, complement the Department's pre-existing anti-discrimination best practice and contractual requirements.

The Department's procurement guidance and documentation is available on the internet for agencies and sponsored bodies to access and apply at their discretion.

The Department does not hold central records of the guidance issued by its sponsored public bodies in this area.

I have asked the chief executives of the executive agencies to respond directly to the hon. Gentleman.

Letter from Tim Moss, dated 21 March 2007:

I am responding to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

Companies House is not a contracting authority in its own right. All of our tenders are issued on behalf of the Secretary of State for the DTI, and as such we do not have our own bespoke invitation to tender documentation but instead utilise the DTI full procurement document set which they provide. These recently updated terms reinforce their, and therefore Companies House's stance on diversity and equality issues in respect of third party suppliers.

Letter from Ron Marchant CB, dated 21 March 2007:

Please see the following, from the Patent Office, in response to your recent parliamentary question.

Written PQ 2006/1636: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what guidance his Department, its agencies or sponsored public bodies produced on making the award of public contracts conditional on the bidding private sector firms meeting equality or diversity criteria or targets.

The Patent Office, as an Executive Agency of DTI, adopts similar procedures to that of its parent department, using invitation to tender documentation that requests private sector firms to demonstrate compliance with equality or diversity issues. Further, the Patent Office let contracts that are governed by DTI standard terms and conditions of business that address compliance with the Duties, and ensure that evaluation criteria for contract award decisions also address equality or diversity issues.

Letter from Graham Horne, dated 21 March 2007:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to you directly on behalf of the Insolvency Service in respect of your question (2006/1636) asking about its guidance on making the award of its contracts conditional on the bidding private sector firms meeting equality or diversity criteria or targets.

I can confirm that the Insolvency Service follows the procurement procedures and guidance set down by its parent department, the Department of Trade and Industry, who are responding separately to your question.

Letter from Dr. Jeff Llewellyn, CE, dated 21 March 2007:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question regarding the guidance his Department, its agencies or sponsored public bodies produce on making the award of public contracts conditional on the bidding private sector firms meeting equality or diversity criteria or targets.

The National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) uses the same guidance and documentation as the Department of Trade and Industry. Details of the guidance and documentation were set out in the answer to written PQ2006/1636 provided to you recently by the Department of Trade and Industry.

Manufacturing: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to encourage (a) research and development, (b) manufacturing and (c) international investment in (i) Eastbourne and (ii) East Sussex. [125487]

Margaret Hodge: The DTI provides support to encourage research and development, manufacturing and international investment in Eastbourne and East Sussex through a range of national and regional programmes and initiatives:

The Government have introduced and improved the R and D tax credit to enable companies in all regions to carry out research and development projects, the credit is presently worth £600 million per year in Government support. In 2006-07 we are providing £3.3 billion to support UK science which includes £2.3 million to the Technology Programme which is to support the UK research base and £430 million to the Technology Programme which is 600 collaborative R and D projects across 40 technology areas, enabling manufacturers to capitalise on key technologies.

Regionally, three programmes are managed by the South East England Development Agency (SEEDA) on behalf of the Department. These are the Grant for Research and Development, Selective Finance for Investment and the Manufacturing Advisory Service.

In addition, SEEDA provides advice and information via the Business Link network as well as support through programmes such as the Innovation Advisory Service and Enterprise Hub Programme, among others. SEEDA also manages regional delivery of the national inward investment promotion framework which is operated by UK Trade and Investment. The framework seeks to encourage foreign direct investors as well as working directly with relevant partners in the region to encourage appropriate international investment—including into East Sussex.

Regional Government: Northern Region

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total expenditure by (a) the Northwest Regional Development Agency, (b) One Northeast and (c) Yorkshire Forward was on the recent New Local Government Network pamphlet Redesigning Regionalism: leadership and accountability in England's regions. [126911]

Margaret Hodge: Northwest Regional Development Agency, One Northeast and Yorkshire Forward have each contributed £5,000 to the production of the report by the New Local Government Network. The report dealt with the roles of regional development agencies, city regions and regional assemblies and set out a range of options to enhance accountability. These issues reflected the priorities set out in the Local Government White Paper and are also being considered in the sub-national review as part of the comprehensive spending review process.

Space Technology: European Union

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Government have contributed to the EU space programme site in French Guyiana since its inception. [128569]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK Government have contributed €140.9 million to the European Space Agency (ESA)—not EU—programme supporting the site in French Guiana since 1976 when the programme started.

Trade Promotion

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what requests he has received for Ministers to visit non-EU countries on trade promotion visits since May 2005; [124805]

(2) which countries Ministers in his Department have visited on trade promotion visits in each year since 2000; which Ministers visited each; and on what date each visit took place. [124807]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 2 March 2007]: There is no central record of ministerial visits, and it would incur disproportionate cost to obtain this information. All ministerial visits are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers. Since 1999, the Government have published, on an annual basis, a list of overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 and the total cost of all ministerial travel. Information for 2006-07 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the financial year.

Under-represented Groups

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has carried out into the barriers to enterprise experienced by under-represented groups. [117322]

Margaret Hodge: Research to increase our understanding of the barriers to enterprise for under-represented groups has been carried out within the following research projects.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Absent Voting: Prisoners

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate her Department has made of how many UK citizens serving a punishment in a foreign prison voted by post or proxy in (a) the 2005 General Election and (b) 2006 local elections. [128882]

Bridget Prentice: The details of voters who are registered at overseas addresses are not held centrally. Therefore no estimate has been made.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which postal companies handle mail dispatched by her Department and its agencies. [128247]

Vera Baird: My Department uses two postal companies to handle mail despatched by the Department and its agencies. The service providers are Royal Mail and DX Network Services.

Election Petitions

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations her Department has received from Equifax on the reliability of Election petitions. [128883]

Bridget Prentice: I am not aware that Equifax has made any such representations.

Elections: Fraud

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what submissions her Department has made to the Council of Europe on electoral fraud in the last six months. [128877]

Bridget Prentice: I, and officials from my Department, met with the Council of Europe Delegation during their visit to the UK on 26-28 February. My officials have also contributed to Council of Europe seminars on electoral modernisation, which have included discussions on election security.

Electoral Systems: Reform

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether she plans to implement the proposals of the Chairman of the Committee on Standards in Public Life made on 27 February 2007 on the electoral system. [128893]

Bridget Prentice: The Government will respond formally to the Committee's report in due course.

Legal Opinion

Ms Buck: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many clients received Level One advice in each English region in each of the last five years. [128673]

Vera Baird: Level One work in the Not-for-Profit contract allows providers to spend up to 10 per cent. of their casework time on short matters that do not require an assessment of financial eligibility.

Not-for-Profit providers record the number of hours undertaken at Level One, not the number of cases. The number of hours worked under Level One in the Not-for-Profit contract since 2002 is set out in the table. Data prior to this date are not available.

	Hours
2002-03	32,601
2003-04	35,347
2004-05	44,345
2005-06	52,723

Data broken down by region can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Under the Legal Service Commission's Funding Code, the first level of legal aid advice, Legal Help, is also referred to as Level One. This answer refers to the Level One work as defined in the Not-for-Profit contract only.

Small Claims: Personal Injury

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs on what date her Department plans to announce its findings on the appropriateness of raising the small claims limit for personal injury claims on the small claims track. [128769]

Vera Baird: The Government have been considering all the case track limits and intend to publish a consultation paper in April.

Voting Rights: Commonwealth

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which Commonwealth countries have reciprocal agreements with the UK on residential qualifications for voting in (a) local elections and (b) national elections. [128768]

Bridget Prentice: I am not aware of any formal reciprocal agreements with any Commonwealth country. The Representation of the People Act 1983 provides that all Commonwealth citizens who are lawfully resident here are entitled to vote in parliamentary and local elections. Decisions about the voting rights of British citizens resident in other Commonwealth countries are for the individual countries concerned.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoption

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what average time his Department took to process an inter-country adoption in each of the last five years from (a) the time of the original adoption panel and (b) the sending of documentation to the other country involved; and if he will make a statement. [127394]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department does not record information on the time period between the date of a prospective adopter's adoption panel and the receipt of their inter-country adoption application papers in this Department. Information on the processing time in each of the last five years between receipt of applications in this Department and the papers being sent to country, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Apprentices

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learners (a) started and (b) successfully completed the framework for (i) apprenticeships and (ii) advanced apprenticeships in each year between 1997 and 2006. [127430]

Phil Hope [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Figures for learners starting and achieving apprenticeships and advanced apprenticeships can be derived from the work based learning (WBL) individualised learner record (ILR). The WBL ILR was collated for the first time in 2002-03 and figures are presented from that time.

The following table shows the number of starters and achievers for apprenticeships and advanced apprenticeships 2002-03 to 2005-06.

	Advanced apprenticeship		Apprenticeship
	Number of starters	Number of achievers	Number of starters	Number of achievers
2002-03	48,410	25,250	119,210	38,180
2003-04	56,960	23,820	136,600	45,540
2004-05	51,050	25,950	132,220	61,190
2005-06	52,130	32,990	122,850	77,180

Note:
Numbers are rounded to the nearest 10 learners.

The number of learners who started an apprenticeship and the number of achievers in each year are mutually exclusive. This combination of figures is not used to calculate performance information for WBL.

Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how long it took on average to produce a section 7 case in respect of Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service proceedings in (a) 2006-07 and (b) each of the preceding five years; [126086]

(2) whether he expects any reduction in the number of Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service self-employed contractors in 2006-07; [126087]

(3) how many vacancies there are for (a) private law and (b) public law in each of the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service regions. [126089]

Mr. Dhanda: These are matters for the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS). Anthony Douglas, the Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with this information and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Anthony Douglas, dated 20 March 2007:

I am writing to you in response to the three Parliamentary Questions that you tabled recently:

126086—To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how long it took on average to produce a section 7 case in respect of Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service proceedings in (a) 2006-07 and (b) each of the preceding five years.

CAFCASS does not collect information on the duration of cases and has not done so since it was established in 2001. For the last 3 years, CAFCASS has operated to a guideline that a section 7 report will take on average 25 hours to produce. We operate to a standard of 12 weeks in which to file all private law reports. However, local filing agreements are made between CAFCASS teams and their Courts, and these agreements fluctuate from month to month and case to case. The way the 25 hours work will be distributed across the filing period will also vary from case to case. Urgent cases are always dealt with first.

CAFCASS currently has 72 teams and at 31 January 2007, 30.6% of teams filed their report within 12 weeks. 25% of teams filed within 14 weeks. 43.1% of teams filed within 16 weeks, and 1.3% (1 team) had a filing time of over 16 weeks. This figure varies with demand, for public law cases and other types of reports ordered to be produced by CAFCASS as well as section 7 cases.

126087—To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, whether he anticipates any reduction in the number of Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service self-employed contractors in 2006-07.

CAFCASS expects that the total number of self-employed contractors for 2006-07 will be 400, a reduction of 37 on 2005-06. Exact figures will not be available until after 31 March 2007, the date which marks the end of the financial year.

126089—To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many vacancies there are for (a) private law and (b) public law in each of the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service regions.

The table below indicates the vacancies as at 31 January 2007. CAFCASS does not categorise practitioners into private and public law.

Region	Vacancies (whole time equivalents)
East Midlands	1.5
Eastern	9.4
Greater London	0
North East	1.83
North West	7.3
South East	1.73
South West	2.5
Southern	4.0
West Midlands	4.0
Yorkshire & Humberside	6.0

A copy of this reply will be placed in the House Library.

Children: Day Care

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether funding for child care is available to parents who accompany their child to the care facility; and if he will make a statement. [128316]

Beverley Hughes: The Government provide funding to local authorities in the form of a General Sure Start Grant, which can be used to support child care locally. Local authorities are free to support parent and toddler groups, where parents remain with their children throughout the session, if they consider it appropriate to do so.

Children's Centres

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the potential effect of increased competition for child care places following the increase of Sure Start children centres. [128746]

Beverley Hughes: Our 10 Year Childcare Strategy has highlighted the need for further Government support to increase the child care options open to parents especially in rural or disadvantaged areas. Since April 2005, our emphasis has been on local authorities sustaining existing good quality child care places rather than creating new ones. While Sure Start children's centres in the most disadvantaged areas must offer integrated early learning and day care provision as part of their core services, we have never intended centres to set up in competition with good existing provision. Local authorities must consult private, voluntary and independent providers when planning their children's centres strategy and, by working in partnership with them, plan to make the best use of the experience and expertise of local providers.

The Together for Children consortium, appointed by DfES to support local authorities with their ongoing delivery of Sure Start children's centres, are challenging them to maximise their use of private, voluntary and community sector organisations in delivering children's centre services.

Departmental Statistics

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much his Department spent on statistics relating to the work of his Department in each of the last five years. [107270]

Alan Johnson: There is no definition of the term "statistics relating to the work of the Department" and no centrally held information on either the volume or costs of statistics published each year on this basis.

Estimates for the annual costs of National Statistics are contained the relevant National Statistics annual report and accounts, which are available on the National Statistics website at:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/product.asp?vlnk=1051 .

The last year that they were produced was 2004-05.

Education: Surveys

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007 to question 121412, on the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority curriculum review, if he will place in the Library a copy of the tender document for the contract awarded (a) to Ipsos Mori, (b) to surveymonkey and (c) for the analysis of the responses to the surveymonkey survey. [122667]

Jim Knight: Copies of the invitation to tender documents for the contracts awarded to (a) Ipsos Mori and (c) for analysis of the responses to the surveymonkey survey, have been placed in the House Library.

The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority pay an annual subscription to use the surveymonkey technology in its consultations.

English Language: Fees and Charges

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions he has had on the use of certified pay slips as proof of low pay in order to meet the fee remission requirements for English for speakers of other languages courses. [129041]

Phil Hope: My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning, who is responsible for English for speakers of other languages (ESOL), has held initial discussions on the use of pay slips and a raft of other evidence with the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). This is ongoing dialogue and is dependant upon the final report of the Race Equality Impact Assessment. Following its publication, the funding mechanisms for colleges and providers will be clarified by the LSC through further guidance.

English Language: Migrant Workers

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what legal advice his Department has received on the legality of admissions tutors deciding whether to accept a prospective migrant worker on to a free literacy course or a fee-paying English for speakers of other languages course. [127199]

Phil Hope: Admissions are a matter for individual institutions and the Department for Education and Skills has not sought advice on this specific issue.

Learning and Skills Council (LSC) guidance to providers is clear that providers should base the acceptance of any learner on to a course based on the outcome of a formal initial assessment of their learning needs and the aspirations of that learner.

Literacy and ESOL learning programmes are different in terms of the content and learner support they offer and we would expect providers to help learners make the right choice of learning programme based on the potential of the course to meet their needs and enable them to achieve a qualification and progress.

Gershon Review

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what efficiency savings have been made in his Department and its associated public bodies as a result of the Gershon review; and if he will make a statement. [108366]

Bill Rammell: The Department is reporting progress against our efficiency target through existing departmental reporting processes. We reported most recently in the Department's 2006 autumn performance report 2005 and will report further progress in the 2007 departmental performance report that we expect to publish in May.

Overseas Students: English Language

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions he has had with the Learning and Skills Council on the extension of self declaration as a means of verifying students' eligibility for English for speakers of other languages courses; and what mechanism is in place to ensure that colleges receive funding for such students. [128809]

Phil Hope: My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning, who is responsible for English for speakers of other languages (ESOL), has held initial discussions on eligibility criteria and a raft of other evidence with the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). This is ongoing dialogue and is dependent upon the final report of the Race Equality Impact Assessment. Following its publication, the funding mechanisms for colleges and providers will be clarified by the LSC through further guidance.

Schools

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many maintained schools there are in each local authority area in England. [128475]

Jim Knight [holding answer 20 March 2007]: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

Schools: Finance

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the overall balance of the schools budget is in each local education authority in England. [128476]

Jim Knight [holding answer 20 March 2007]: In my written ministerial statement of 15 March I announced the publication by the Department of a summary of the data on school balances for the financial years for which information is available—1999-2000 to 2005-06. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House. The information is also available on the Department's website at:

www.dfes.gov.uk/localauthorities/section52/subPage.cfm?action=section52.default&ID=58

Training: Parents

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions he has had on provision of support for training to improve parenting skills. [127796]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 19 March 2007]: From 2006-08, the Government are funding a number of projects to increase the availability of training for practitioners to work with parents. These projects range from universal services provided through mainstream settings such as extended schools and Sure Start Children's Centres through to early intervention, prevention and targeted commitments in the Respect and Social Exclusion Action Plans. Additionally, we will establish the National Academy for Parenting Practitioners which will enable increased training and dissemination of best practice for the parenting work force. This will result in improved delivery of evidence based parenting programmes. The NAPP will become fully operational in October 2007.

Workers Educational Association

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many courses were run by the Workers Educational Association in its southern region in (a) 1997 and (b) 2006. [127623]

Phil Hope [holding answer 15 March 2007]: The Workers Educational Association (WEA) is a specialised designated institution and has a single national contract to deliver further education, through the London Learning and Skills Council (LSC). The Department is not able to provide information on all the courses run by the WEA. However, the following table provides information on LSC funded learners on WEA courses for 2005/06 (the latest year for which we have complete data). Information for 1997 is estimated from the Further Education Funding Council who were responsible for further education funding prior to the LSC.

Southern region (LSC south-west and LSC south-east)

	Number of funded learners
1997	2,609
2005-06	18,570

Youth Opportunity Card

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made in the development of the Youth Opportunity Card. [128278]

Beverley Hughes: After careful consideration we no longer intend to run the Youth Opportunity Card pilots. We have carried out, with excellent support from the 10 pilot local authorities, detailed and extensive work to assess whether the Youth Opportunity Card is deliverable and the associated costs, benefits and risks. Our conclusions are that the costs outweigh considerably the money being provided to young people, considerable risks and uncertainties remain and there is no off-the-shelf technological solution or one that can be developed with certainty at the present time.

Therefore we do not believe that going ahead with the card at this point in time would provide value for money. However, I am absolutely committed to opening up new ways of giving young people the means to make their own choices and a real say over what is provided for them. I want to continue to work with the local authorities to develop alternative means of achieving the same ends.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Wages Board

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he had with (a) the chairman and members of the Agricultural Wages Board and (b) other bodies and persons on his Department's proposal for a regulatory reform order in respect of the board before making the decision to abandon the proposal. [125960]

Barry Gardiner: My noble Friend the Lord Whitty, when he was Minister of State, met the chairman and other independent members of the Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales on a number of occasions to discuss the future operation of the board. He also met the National Farmers Union and the Transport and General Workers Union. The possible introduction of a regulatory reform order to modernise the legislative framework was discussed at these meetings.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the reasons were for the abandonment of his Department's proposal for a regulatory reform order in respect of the Agricultural Wages Board. [125961]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA prioritises activities in the light of competing demands for available resources. The introduction of a regulatory reform order in respect of the Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales was not considered to be a high priority in relation to current DEFRA objectives.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the likely change to his Department's budget which would result from abolishing the Agricultural Wages Board and subsuming its functions within the national minimum wage scheme. [125962]

Barry Gardiner: It would not be possible to subsume the board's functions within the national minimum wage. In particular the board sets statutory minimum rates for overtime which are not provided for under the national minimum wage arrangements. Loss of statutory protection for overtime would significantly reduce the protection given to agricultural workers and would be contrary to the Government's commitment to maintain the agricultural minimum wage arrangements.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost to his Department was of developing a proposal for a regulatory reform order in respect of the Agricultural Wages Board. [125963]

Barry Gardiner: The possible development of a regulatory reform order (RRO) was considered by staff in the DEFRA agricultural wages and labour team. This work was integral to the Department's overall policy considerations in this area and no specific record of time spent on RRO activities was kept.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of the Agricultural Wages Board in each of the last five years. [125964]

Barry Gardiner: The cost of the Agricultural Wages Board in each of the last five financial years was as follows:

2001-02	262,333
2002-03	225,133
2003-04	308,595
2004-05	621,763
2005-06	385,204

Agriculture: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Single Farm Payment Scheme claims (a) have been adjusted and (b) are under review in Cumbria. [126862]

Barry Gardiner: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 59WS. Detailed analysis of payments made under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme is not yet available.

Agriculture: Subsidies

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Single Payment Scheme claims (a) have been adjusted and (b) are under review. [126121]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 8 March 2007]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 59WS.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in which agricultural sectors in each EU member state Common Agricultural Policy support remains coupled to production. [127594]

Barry Gardiner: This information can be found in the "Overview of the implementation of direct payments under the CAP in Member States" copies of which are available in the House Libraries or on the Europa website at:

http://ec.europa.eu/agriculture/markets/sfp/ms_en.pdf

Animal Welfare

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance he has issued under the Animal Welfare Act 2006 on the distribution of animals as prizes in fairs and fetes. [128487]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Animal Welfare Act 2006 contains a provision relating to the giving of pets as prizes. The ban has been limited to unaccompanied children under the age of 16. This is in line with another provision which raises the age at which children can buy a pet from 12 to 16.

The Animal Welfare Act 2006 is accompanied by a set of Explanatory Notes and an additional Guidance Note to help enforcers of the Act. DEFRA has also produced the leaflet, 'Your Duty to Care', for owners and keepers and animals, which sets out the Act's provisions.

We also plan to make the Guild of Showmen aware of relevant information on the new law, which we have made available on the DEFRA website.

Bovine Tuberculosis: Disease Control

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cattle have been tested for bovine tuberculosis using the gamma interferon test in each English region since October 2006; and how many cattle tested positive to the test in each region. [127574]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested, for the period between 23 October 2006 (the launch date of the new policy on the use of the gamma interferon (g-IFN) blood test) and 31 January 2007, is set out in the following table.

Animal health divisional office region (England)	Number of animals tested with g-IFN	Number of these animals testing positive for bovine tuberculosis
Carlisle	560	11
Exeter	442	66
Gloucester	13	7
Leicester	1,617	111
Lincoln	373	37
Preston	391	1
Reading	370	16
Reigate	394	8
Stafford	1,496	77
Taunton	864	51
Truro	33	13
Worcester	509	40
Total	7,062	438

Regions are omitted where no sampling has taken place.

Monthly data on the numbers of cattle g-IFN tested will be available on the DEFRA website shortly.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what account he plans to take of evidence obtained from badger culling operations at Steeple Leaze, Dorset and Thornbury, Gloucestershire in the future development of a bovine TB strategy. [127582]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are taking into account all the available evidence in considering a way forward on badger culling, including the badger culling operations at Steeple Leaze, Dorset and Thornbury, Gloucestershire. However, there were no scientific controls set up at the time of these operations. The Krebs review pointed out that the scientific merit of the results was limited because controls allow us to reduce the impact of possible confounding factors on the results observed. In the absence of scientific controls, it is not possible to distinguish the contribution of such factors from the effects of badger removal.

However, the review also suggested that both a before and after comparison, and a comparison with incidence in geographically close areas where no contemporary systematic removal of badgers occurred, provide useful information about the effect of culling.

A complete assessment of previous tuberculosis (TB) control strategies can be found in the 1997 'Report on Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle and Badgers' by Professor John Krebs and the Independent Scientific Review Group, which is available in the House Library.

Cattle: Transport

Gwyn Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many live calves were transported across Great Britain in 2006 and January 2007 in the course of being exported from the Republic of Ireland to the continent; how many of those calves were unloaded at a staging point or control post in Great Britain and given food, liquid and at least 24 hours rest; and if he will make a statement; [128170]

(2) what steps he takes to ensure that live calves that are transported from the Republic of Ireland via Larne and Great Britain to the continent are unloaded at a control post in Great Britain and given food, liquid and at least 24 hours rest; and if he will make a statement. [128171]

Mr. Bradshaw: The export health papers and journey logs are issued by the Republic of Ireland authorities so this information is not readily available. It may be possible to provide some information on the number of cattle which have transited the United Kingdom from Ireland via the TRACES (Trade Control and Expert System) database. This is not currently functional, but I will write to my hon. Friend when information becomes available.

It is the responsibility of the Republic of Ireland authorities to check that transporters factor in any required rest stops into their planned journeys when approving journey logs for journeys starting in Ireland. Staff at Dover have a target of checking at least 30 per cent. of cattle leaving the country for slaughter or fattening. Any Irish cattle inspected and found not to have complied with the journey and rest time requirements will be returned to a control post to take a minimum 24 hour rest before continuing their journey.

Claims Annual Report

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's Claims Annual Report 2005-06; and when the next report is due to be published. [121398]

Barry Gardiner: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs does not, as a matter of course, prepare a Claims Annual Report. There is no plan to publish such a report.

Departments: Air Pollution

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate has been made of the carbon footprint of his Department. [124523]

Ian Pearson: Carbon emissions from the DEFRA estate and its business travel over the last five years is given in the following table where data are available.

Total carbon emissions

Tonnes

	Buildings	Business travel	Total
2001-02	12,063	[1]—	12,063
2002-03	12,033	[2]6,072	18,105
2003-04	11,888	[2]5,403	17,291
2004-05	11,732	[2]5,750	17,482
2005-06	12,548	[3]7,445	19,993

[1] Not known
[2] Carbon emissions from road vehicles
[3] Carbon emissions from road vehicles and air travel Buildings

Buildings

There has been a temporary increase in the size of the DEFRA estate while refurbishment works have been undertaken. DEFRA is seeking to reduce the size of its estate, and is working with the Carbon Trust to implement a Carbon Management Programme which will maximise energy efficiency and carbon saving.

The Department is working with the Carbon Trust to develop a carbon footprint label for each building on the DEFRA estate.

Business Travel

Reporting mechanisms to capture carbon emissions from all forms of business travel (road, air and rail) will be available for financial year 2006-07.

The Department offsets air travel (from April 2005), rail travel (from June 2006) and will offset vehicle travel from June (2007).

Carbon Footprint Reporting

It is the Department's intention to publish its carbon footprint later this year.

Departments: Meat

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what account he takes of animal welfare standards in the countries from which food procured by his Department is produced. [127596]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA ensures its catering services providers supply meat that satisfies EC meat hygiene and animal welfare regulations. DEFRA ensures its catering services providers specify farm assurance standards in accordance with the model clause in DEFRA's catering services toolkit.

Farmers: Income

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of changes in the average income of farmers in each sector of the farming industry in each of the last five years. [128097]

Barry Gardiner: The average net farm income for all types of farms in the United Kingdom is expected to be around £20,600 in 2006-07, about 20 per cent. higher than 2005-06 in real terms. Incomes are forecast to have doubled for cereals and general cropping farms due to better prices for crops, while lowland livestock farms and mixed farms also benefited from improved prices. Specialist poultry, specialist pigs and dairy farm incomes are expected to fall, as are incomes for less favoured area (LFA) grazing livestock farms. Figures for the net farm income by type of farm in each of the last five years are shown in the following tables.

Fly Tipping

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the total cost of fly-tipping to landowners in each region; and if he will make a statement. [128177]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 19 March 2007]: DEFRA does not hold data on the clear-up costs of fly-tipping to private landowners by region, and no estimate has been made.

Currently, Flycapture, the national fly-tipping database, set up by DEFRA, the Environment Agency and the Local Government Association, collects data on the incidents dealt with and investigated by local authorities and the Environment Agency.

The cost of clearing illegally dumped waste reported by local authorities between April 2004 and March 2005 was over £44 million. For the period between April 2005 and March 2006, the cost was almost £50 million.

However, it is estimated that the costs of clearing fly-tipping on private land could increase the 2005-2006 clearance costs to over £100 million.

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will bring forward proposals to compensate landowners for costs they incur in disposing of fly-tipped material; and if he will make a statement. [128178]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The Government have been working closely with the Environment Agency (EA) and local authorities (LAs) to bring forward a number of policies and measures that are aimed at preventing fly-tipping in the first place, and to ensure more effective enforcement. For example, the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 contains several measures that are designed to enhance the powers and capability of LAs and the EA to tackle fly-tipping.

One of these measures involved giving courts the power to make an order against anyone convicted of the main offence of illegal waste disposal to pay for costs incurred by a landowner in removing waste that has been illegally deposited.

In many cases, LAs will often work with landowners to deal with repeated incidents of fly-tipping and to tackle specific problems or issues. I am also aware of the good work being done by the National Fly-tipping Prevention Group, which has been working closely with organisations like the National Farmers Union, the Country Land and Business Association, Network Rail and the National Trust. The Group has recently produced guidance to landowners on how to deal with fly-tipping and gives tips and ideas for ways in which joint working can help tackle hot-spot areas.

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received on the cost of fly-tipping to landowners; and if he will make a statement. [128179]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 19 March 2007]: Some representations have been received by the Department on this issue.

At a national level, the Environment Agency (EA) and DEFRA meet quarterly with major interested organisations including the National Farmers Union, the Country Land and Business Association, Network Rail and the National Trust through the National Fly-tipping Prevention Group. The Group's objective is to generally explore ways of improving the system of controls on fly-tipping and to identify better ways of preventing and tackling the problem.

The Group has issued guidance to landowners on how to deal with fly-tipping and also discusses ways in which joint working can help tackle the hot-spot areas where repeated fly-tipping is taking place. This can often be tackled by co-ordinated action from the landowner and the local authority or EA.

Horses: Transport

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on the live export of horses for slaughter; and what recent discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on this issue. [127594]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government share the British public's concern over any trade in the export of horses for slaughter. The export of horses is legal under free trade rules and could not be unilaterally banned. However, there is no evidence of such a trade from this country; no horses have been exported for slaughter for many years and there is no evidence of any demand for a trade in live horse exports for slaughter from this country.

This issue has not arisen in any recent discussions with my EU counterparts. However, EC Regulation 1/2005 on the welfare of animals during transport came into effect on 5 January 2007. This includes new rules which should restrict such a trade by requiring, among other things, that unbroken horses may only travel for up to eight hours.

Landfill

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the household waste material collected as part of doorstep recycling collections by local authorities that is subsequently disposed of by the local authority or commercial contractors in landfill counts as landfill for the purposes of the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme. [128661]

Mr. Bradshaw: Household waste material collected by local authorities as part of doorstep recycling, but subsequently disposed of by a waste disposal authority (WDA) or a commercial contractor to landfill, counts towards a WDA's allowances under the Landfill Allowances Trading Scheme (LATS).

Plastics: Recycling

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of plastic waste from (a) industrial, (b) residential and (c) agricultural sources was recycled for (i) new plastics and (ii) fuel in the last period for which figures are available. [127543]

Mr. Bradshaw: Recycled plastic waste, usually derived from a number of sector sources, can displace virgin material in the production of a variety of different products. My Department does not therefore hold precise figures for the percentage of plastic from individual sectors recycled and used in the production of new plastics or for fuel.

Latest estimates from WasteDataFlow show that 38,000 tonnes of plastic waste from household sources were sent for recycling in 2005-06. Compositional analyses of household waste suggest that around 4 per cent. is dense plastic (e.g. bottles, packaging), equating to around 1 million tonnes in 2005-06. This suggests that around 4 per cent. of plastic in the household waste stream was sent for recycling.

A report published by the Environment Agency, 'Recycling Agricultural Waste Plastic', estimated that around 87 thousand tonnes of plastic waste arises from the agricultural sector in England, with approximately 1 per cent. of this being recycled.

Detailed information for industrial plastic waste is not available.

Regeneration

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of his Department's spending was devoted to (a) urban and (b) rural regeneration and redevelopment in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2005-06. [125892]

Barry Gardiner: The Government are committed to building a strong economy and fair society where there is opportunity and security for all. This commitment applies equally in rural and urban areas. The majority of the Department's programmes benefit both rural and urban areas. However, the cost of these programmes attributable to regeneration and redevelopment could not be identified without disproportionate cost.

Sustainable rural communities are one of DEFRA's five strategic priorities which underpin its overarching aim of promoting sustainable development. This will be achieved in part by encouraging sustainable regeneration in disadvantaged rural areas. Details of delivery against all of DEFRA's strategic priorities can be found in the departmental report.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many (a) extra payments and (b) refunds have been made as a result of adjustments to 2005 Single Payment Scheme claims; and what the total value of each category was; [125689]

(2) what proportion of 2005 single payment scheme claims have been adjusted; and what proportion are under review. [125704]

Barry Gardiner: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 59WS. The priority has been to correct claims where it has been determined an extra payment is required. So far approximately 3,100 extra payments with a value of over £2,865,000 have been processed and approximately 700 overpayments with a value of £1,185,000 have been identified for recovery.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what change there has been in the number of (a) cattle, (b) pigs and (c) sheep reared on farms in England since the introduction of the single farm payment. [127862]

Barry Gardiner: The number of cattle, pigs and sheep in England at June each year is shown in the following table. This information can be found on the DEFRA website at:

Tyres: Recycling

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department has undertaken into the feasibility of tyre pyrolysis for diesel production as a way of recycling tyres; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which this technology is being used in the UK. [127542]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has not undertaken any research into the feasibility of tyre pyrolysis for diesel production as a way of recycling tyres or carried out any assessment on the extent to which this type of technology is used in this country. However, the Environment Agency has carried out some research to gather data on the general pyrolysis process, but this has not looked specifically at the feasibility of tyre pyrolysis for diesel production.

Waste Disposal: Fees and Charges

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what average charge each local authority made for bulk waste doorstep collection in the last year for which figures are available. [127680]

Mr. Bradshaw: The data requested are not held centrally.

Under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 (EPA), waste collection authorities (WCA) are able to charge households for the collection of some wastes prescribed by the Secretary of State as listed in the Controlled Waste Regulations 1992. This includes any article which exceeds 25 kilograms in weight or any article that does not fit, or cannot be fitted, into the receptacle provided. However, section 45 (3) of the EPA restricts the amount that can be charged by the WCA for the service.

In practice, many local authorities provide a free household collection service for bulky waste, or make provision for those on low incomes.

Waste Management

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government plan to publish their waste strategy. [128451]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are planning to publish their waste strategy for England in May.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

10 Downing Street

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many requests from hon. Members to bring constituents to visit 10 Downing street were acceded to in each of the last 10 years, broken down by political party of the hon. Member. [128712]

Hilary Armstrong: The information requested is not held centrally. However, hon. Members from all parties are invited on a rolling programme to nominate and accompany a small group of children from their constituencies to have tea at No. 10 Downing street. Hon. Members are invited to select, in a fair and open way, children who have a particular interest in visiting No. 10 Downing street. Since 1998 approximately 450 MPs have accepted invitations for children to come for tea.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what her Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128076]

Hilary Armstrong: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office, to the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald) on 27 February 2006, Official Report, columns 39-40W and to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office to the Member for South Holland and The Deepings (Mr. Hayes) on 11 July 2006, Official Report, columns 1822-23W.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Angola

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings she had with her Angolan counterpart in 2006. [128[illegible]]

Mr. McCartney: There were no formal meetings with the Angolan Foreign Minister, Dr. João Bernardo Miranda, in 2006. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, held discussions with Foreign Minister Miranda on 26 January this year in the margins of the African Union Summit and subsequently met the Angolan Vice Minister of the Interior, General Martins, who was in the UK on a visit sponsored by the Government.

Austria: Lichtenstein

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Austrian counterpart on the recent transfer of territory from Austria to Lichtenstein; and whether approval for such a transfer is required at an EU level. [128570]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no discussions with the Austrian Foreign Minister on the territorial integrity of Austria and Liechtenstein. There has been no transfer of territory between the two countries. Modern land measuring technology has recently proved that Liechtenstein's borders are slightly longer than previously thought.

Bangladesh

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Bangladesh regarding the security of (a) Sheik Hasina and (b) the British High Commissioner there; and if she will make a statement. [128796]

Dr. Howells: We have made no representations to the caretaker Government of Bangladesh with regard to the security of the leaders of any of the political parties. We have, however, raised our concerns over the security of our High Commissioner in Dhaka based on our duty of care towards all UK diplomats serving worldwide.

Belarus

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking in the UN Security Council with regard to sanctions on Belarus. [128572]

Mr. Hoon: Previous attempts to discuss Belarus at the UN Security Council have not met with success, due to objections by Russia. We have no current plans to raise this subject in the UN Security Council.

Current EU restrictions imposed after the recent fraudulent elections are designed in such a way that they can be targeted towards the regime, not the people of Belarus. A decision to renew these EU measures for a further 12 months was cleared by parliamentary scrutiny in March this year.

Brazil: Ethanol

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has had discussions with ministerial colleagues in the Department of Trade and Industry on the purchase of ethanol from Brazil; and if she will make a statement. [128653]

Mr. Hoon: Discussions have not taken place between Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) Ministers about the purchase of ethanol from Brazil.

There are, however, regular discussions between senior officials of the FCO, DTI and other Government Departments on climate and energy security issues. Ethanol could be key to UK objectives in both areas, and has featured regularly in these discussions. The Government also maintain a regular dialogue with the Brazilians, the European Commission, the International Energy Agency and others on ethanol production and trade.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Brazilian ethanol with the Brazilian Foreign and Trade and Development Ministers during her visit to Brazil in July 2006. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry visited an ethanol plant with the Brazilian Trade and Development Minister during his visit to Brazil in September 2006.

Burma: Foreign Investment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make it her policy to ban investment in Burma from (a) the UK and (b) British Dependent Territories; and if she will make a statement. [128777]

Mr. McCartney: We favour multilateral sanctions, such as those included in the EU Common Position on Burma, because they have a greater practical impact and send a stronger political signal. Any changes would need the support of all EU member states as the Common Position can only be amended by consensus.

The Common Position includes a ban on investment in or the provision of financial services to certain Burmese state-owned enterprises. The ban is in force in the UK and British Overseas Territories. Companies incorporated or constituted in the British Overseas Territories need to comply with the law, or risk prosecution.

We give no support to companies wishing to invest in Burma. British companies who enquire about trade and investment in Burma are informed of the political situation and the regime's record on human rights. A copy of the EU Common Position on Burma is available in the Library of the House.

Burma: Sequestration of Assets

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will freeze the UK assets of (a) the government and (b) state-owned enterprises of Burma; and if she will make a statement. [128831]

Mr. McCartney: The assets of senior members of the Burmese Government and those who benefit from their policies, as listed in Annexe I to the EU Common Position on Burma, are already frozen. The Common Position also bans investment in the named state-owned enterprises listed in Annexe II.

We believe that the present EU Common Position on Burma is the best achievable policy, given the range of views amongst our partners. Any additional measures would need the support of all other EU member states as the Common Position can only be amended by consensus. We do not believe that there would be consensus to strengthen the Common Position. A copy of the EU Common Position on Burma is available in the Library of the House.

Convention on the Non-Navigational Uses of International Watercourses

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects to ratify the United Nations convention on the non-navigational uses of international watercourses. [128163]

Mr. McCartney: The UK did not sign the convention while it was open for signature, and the Government have no immediate plans to accede to it.

Corruption

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her counterparts in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development on tackling corruption. [126893]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no such discussions this year. However officials, including from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, participate with officials from other countries in regular meetings of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development Working Group on Bribery. This met on 16-18 January and again on 12-14 March.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the UK's compliance with obligations to tackle corruption under Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development agreements. [126903]

Mr. McCartney: The UK's progress report on our implementation of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Bribery Convention, following up on the recommendations contained in the OECD's "phase two review" of March 2005, was one of the items discussed at the Working Group on Bribery plenary meeting of 12-14 March. During a debate in the House on 7 February my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs undertook to publish this report after the meeting, Official Report, column 908. This has been done and copies of the report are available in the Library of the House.

Croatia

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations the Government has made to Croatia on the process of returning confiscated homes to Serbian people. [128655]

Mr. Hoon: Croatia must continue to address the issue of returning Serb refugees. Much progress has been made in repossessing properties occupied during the 1991-95 conflict, building new houses for returning Serbs and reconstructing housing destroyed during the fighting. The Government have also started providing social housing for those Croatian Serbs who lost their tenancy rights during the conflict. But the process needs to be accelerated, and this issue remains an important feature of the EU's political dialogue with Croatia. In addition our ambassador in Zagreb maintains a regular dialogue with the Croatian Government on this and other issues.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects Croatia to be able to join the EU. [128650]

Mr. Hoon: The EU has not set a target date for Croatian accession. Croatia is making good progress in its accession negotiations. It has provisionally closed two chapters and opened a further three out of a total of 35. We strongly support EU enlargement and Croatia's EU accession as soon as it has made the necessary preparations and met fully the conditions of membership.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the security situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and if she will make a statement. [127863]

Mr. McCartney: The security situation in parts of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) remains fragile, particularly in the Kivus, Ituri and northern Katanga. Bas-Congo and Kinshasa are calm, but tensions there between Government forces and other groups remain.

Ill-disciplined and poorly-paid Congolese armed forces present the greatest threat to civilians in some areas. Congolese and foreign militias also abuse local populations in eastern DRC. We continue to push for improved security sector reform and military training, to ensure that the Congolese army protects the population. We continue to encourage the UN peacekeeping mission in the DRC to take robust action against armed groups that threaten civilians.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the political situation in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [128348]

Mr. McCartney: A new Congolese government was named on 5 February, and announced its programme on 22 February, along with a "Governance Contract", to be adopted by parliament as a framework for the government's future work programme. This should help to improve the government's transparency and accountability. New Ministers have now taken up office and the National Assembly will shortly begin legislative business.

There remain many challenges for the government, notably reforming the security sector, reducing corruption, delivering services to the people and improving regional relations.

We have raised several times with the government, including at presidential level, the need for opposition groups to be granted sufficient political and legal space in which to operate, and for freedom of expression to be improved and respected.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which postal companies handle mail dispatched by her Department and its agencies. [128242]

Dr. Howells: The British Forces Post Office handle and screen incoming mail on behalf of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO). They also process outgoing and incoming diplomatic bags.

The Royal Mail and DHL Express are used for the dispatch of FCO mail within the UK. DHL Globe Forwarding is used for the dispatch of the diplomatic bags to our overseas missions. Overseas missions use a local (usually international) company to despatch diplomatic bags to London.

Departments: Publicity

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128068]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not keep a central record of amounts spent on advertising and promotional campaigns. This information, and the costs of each campaign broken down by costs relating to television, radio and print media, could be obtained only by requiring individual budget holders to examine all invoices for the last 10 years. This could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Djibouti

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) she and (b) Ministers in her Department had with the government of Djibouti in 2006; and what (i) discussions and (ii) visits at official level were undertaken. [128568]

Mr. McCartney: There were no discussions between UK and Djibouti Ministers in 2006. However, our Ambassador to Djibouti, based at the British Embassy in Addis Ababa, and officials had regular discussions with Djibouti government officials in 2006. The Ambassador visited Djibouti every three months and maintained friendly and cordial relations with the Djibouti Foreign Minister, Mr. Mahamoud Ali Youssouf.

On 26 April 2006, Mr. Rachad Farah, the Djibouti Ambassador based in Paris had talks with senior Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) officials in London and on 21 June 2006, the Djibouti Foreign Minister visited the UK and discussed bilateral and regional issues with senior FCO officials.

Egypt: Sudan

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Egyptian counterpart on Egyptian-Sudanese disputed border territory in south-eastern Egypt. [128562]

Dr. Howells: While my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had discussions on Sudan with her Egyptian counterpart, she has not discussed this specific issue with him. The UK continues to follow developments at official level, although neither the Egyptian nor the Sudanese government has raised the matter with our embassies. The UK maintains a full and productive dialogue with Egypt on a range of Sudan-related issues.

Embassies: Expenditure

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost was of maintaining UK embassies in the last year for which figures are available. [128341]

Mr. Hoon: The total cost of building maintenance for our missions overseas in financial year 2005-06 was £44.9 million.

Human Trafficking: EU Countries

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her EU counterparts on human trafficking through new EU entrance countries. [128318]

Dr. Howells: Human trafficking through the EU is an issue which has been raised regularly at EU Councils and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has discussed it with a number of EU partners bilaterally. Human trafficking has not been on the agenda of formal Council meetings since the accession of Bulgaria and Romania. However, the principal work at EU level to tackle human trafficking is being taken forward at official level on the basis of the EU action plan on human trafficking which was adopted during the UK Presidency of the EU. The EU action plan provides a comprehensive approach to tackling this problem and the impact it has on its victims. A report on progress is due to be received before the end of 2007. The UK's action plan on tackling trafficking in human beings, which will be published soon, reflects the work being done by the UK. The UK announced on 22 January its intention to sign the Council of Europe Convention on trafficking in human beings; both Bulgaria and Romania, the newest EU member states, have signed the Convention and Romania has additionally ratified it.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on US Democrat policy of troop withdrawal from Iraq. [127648]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary receives regular reports on US politics, both the administration's and opposition's policies, from our embassy in Washington, including on the recent action by Democrats to table legislation calling for US troop withdrawal in Iraq.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what the membership is of the working group for security and border security agreed at the expanded regional neighbours' meeting in Baghdad on 10 March; what the objectives are of the group; and what she plans the role of the UK to be; [128601]

(2) what the membership is of the working groups on (a) energy and electricity and (b) refugees agreed at the 10 March expanded regional neighbours' meeting in Baghdad; what the objectives are of each group; and what she expects the role of the UK to be on each. [128604]

Dr. Howells: The Government of Iraq has not finalised the membership or structure of the working groups, but we expect those neighbours with a relevant interest to participate. The UK is ready to assist if invited by the Government of Iraq.

For each group the common objectives are to improve co-operation and co-ordination between Iraq and its neighbours.

Kosovo: Refugees

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations her Department has made to the authorities in Kosovo on the return of Serbian Kosovans to their homes. [128649]

Mr. Hoon: The United Kingdom continues to work closely with the UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) to encourage the Kosovo authorities to implement the UN standards for Kosovo, including on sustainable returns and the rights of communities. The recent UNMIK standards assessment of 9 March 2007 (further information can be found at: demonstrates the progress made in all areas of the standards process.

The United Kingdom has committed £1.5 million over two years, along with funding from the UN Development programme and UN High Commission for Refugees, to a project to support the rapid return of minority communities to their homes. The Kosovo Government is the single largest donor to the returns process, having contributed £22 million since 2003. Projects implemented by Kosovo's municipalities helped 141 Serb families to return to Kosovo during 2006.

The United Kingdom does not take this progress for granted, and we would like to see more intensive progress. Work on standards will not end with a status settlement; it will continue as an important obligation to be taken forward by the Kosovo Government. We continue to press the Serbian Government to support the return of Kosovo Serbs and will work with partners on the ground in Kosovo to support the conditions for their return.

Mauritania: Elections

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whom her Department has appointed as election observers for parliamentary observers in Mauritania. [128553]

Dr. Howells: The first round of the Mauritanian presidential elections took place on 11 March. Officials from our embassy in Rabat were in Mauritania to observe the elections.

The European Union sent a large Election Observation Mission to Mauritania. The Mission issued a press release on 14 March praising the transparent and calm manner in which the elections were conducted and expressing satisfaction that the overall results corresponded to the wishes of voters. The second round of the presidential elections will take place on 25 March.

Morocco

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had in the UN Security Council on the attempt by Morocco to reclaim the territory of Ceuta in northern Morocco; and if she will make a statement. [128652]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has held no discussions in the UN Security Council about Ceuta.

Namibia

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Namibian counterpart on the future of the Caprivi Strip in north east Namibia; and whether she has received representations from Caprivi separatists on this matter. [128566]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the future of the Caprivi Strip with the Namibian government. Our High Commission in Windhoek continues to monitor developments linked to the Caprivi Strip, including the ongoing court case of 12 individuals accused of separatist activities.

North Korea: Nuclear Weapons

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what personal involvement she has taken in negotiations with the North Korean regime on its nuclear weapons programme. [128563]

Mr. McCartney: The Democratic People's Republic of Korea's (DPRK) nuclear weapons programme is a key focus for the Six Party Talks (6PT). While we remain profoundly concerned by the nuclear test conducted on 9 October 2006, the agreement reached at the latest round of talks on 13 February is a step in the right direction towards the peaceful denuclearisation of the Korean peninsula, proving that diplomatic negotiations are the way forward. Although not a member of the 6PT, the UK is fully supportive of this process and will continue to urge the DPRK to fulfil the commitments it has entered into under the February agreement, as well as comply with UN Security Council Resolution 1718 and resume its obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Tanzania: BAE Systems

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has received from the Tanzanian government on the repayment of money paid for BAE Radar Systems. [128567]

Mr. McCartney: We have not received any representations from the Tanzanian government about the repayment of money paid for the BAE Radar System.

Tibet: Human Rights

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her Chinese counterpart on human rights in Tibet. [128571]

Mr. McCartney: We regularly raise our concerns on the human rights situation in Tibet with the Chinese Government. We did this most recently at the 15th round of the UK-China human rights dialogue, which took place in London on 5 February.

Turkey: EU Enlargement

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent progress has been made on Turkish membership of the EU. [128344]

Mr. Hoon: Following the General Affairs and External Relations Council in December 2006, momentum in Turkey's accession process has been re-established. Steady progress is being made under the German presidency on individual chapters of the acquis. We will support the efforts of the presidency to ensure that this continues.

Western Sahara

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there are plans for the territory of Western Sahara to be recognised by the UK as a sovereign independent country; and if she will make a statement. [128551]

Dr. Howells: The UK regards the status of Western Sahara as undetermined, pending UN efforts to find a solution. To this end, the UK fully supports the efforts of the UN Secretary-General, and his Personal Envoy to Western Sahara, Peter Van Walsum, to assist the parties to achieve a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution, which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara.

On 31 October 2006, the UN Security Council unanimously adopted UN Security Council Resolution 1720, which renewed the mandate for the UN Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara until 30 April 2007. The Government supported this and will continue to encourage all parties to engage with the UN process.

Zimbabwe

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the current economic situation in Zimbabwe. [127902]

Mr. McCartney: The economic situation in Zimbabwe is dire. The official rate of inflation is now in excess of 1,700 per cent. although most reliable estimates place it in excess of 3,000 per cent., there is 80 per cent. unemployment and the country, which was once the breadbasket of southern Africa, is now dependant on food relief to feed its own people. The responsibility for this rests fully with Mugabe and until there is a much-needed change of policy, the economic disintegration of Zimbabwe is set to continue.

Zimbabwe: Elections

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department will take to ensure that the next presidential election in Zimbabwe in 2008 will be free and fair. [127898]

Mr. McCartney: We will continue to give practical support to civil society organisations committed to increasing democratic space in Zimbabwe. But it is for the Government of Zimbabwe ultimately to ensure that Zimbabwe's next presidential elections are free and fair, and that the ordinary people of Zimbabwe are allowed to exercise their democratic right to elect a leader of their choice.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports she has received on the arrest and treatment of Morgan Tsvangirai by the Government of Zimbabwe; and if she will make a statement. [127899]

Mr. McCartney: Our embassy in Harare has kept us informed of what has been happening to Morgan Tsvangirai and those others who were detained and badly beaten on 11 March. All have now been released and are receiving medical treatment.

As has already been made clear in statements by both my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, we utterly condemn the violent and unwarranted action taken by the Government of Zimbabwe against peaceful campaigners exercising their democratic right to voice their opinions.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her EU counterparts on the political situation in Zimbabwe. [127900]

Mr. McCartney: We are in regular contact with our EU partners on the political situation in Zimbabwe. They share our concerns and, like us, are pressing for policy change in Zimbabwe and an end to the country's deepening economic and humanitarian crisis. Only last month, EU partners agreed to maintain and strengthen EU targeted measures against Zimbabwe for a further year.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to her Department on the treatment of opposition members in Zimbabwe by the government of that country. [127901]

Mr. McCartney: None. But my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, summoned the Zimbabwean ambassador on 13 March and made our views of the horrific events on the preceding day perfectly clear. In the last few days, we have also spoken to a number of EU, African and other countries about the situation in Zimbabwe and have discussed the need for more pressure to be applied on Mugabe to change his policies.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Amphetamines

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence there is from UK seizures of illicit drugs and their precursors on the use of pseudoephedrine and ephedrine from over-the-counter medicines in the manufacture of methamphetamine in the UK. [127966]

Mr. Coaker: There has been increasing concern from the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Serious Organised Crime Agency that pseudoephedrine and ephedrine can be extracted from over the counter remedies relatively easily and used in the manufacture of methamphetamine.

The police have identified in specific cases that multiple packs of particular pharmacy pseudoephedrine containing products had been purchased and used in the illicit manufacture of methamphetamine. They have also identified that, in part, packs were obtained from numerous pharmacies to obtain adequate quantities for manufacturing.

In January, the Commission on Human Medicines recommended that changing the legal status of pseudoephedrine and ephedrine to a prescription only medicine together with restricting the pack size was necessary to protect public health in the UK and that a consultation exercise should be conducted on these proposals. Department of Health Ministers accepted this advice and a full public consultation exercise was commenced by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency on 7 March 2007 and can be accessed via the MHRA's website:

www.mhra.gov.uk.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders: Gloucestershire

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders were issued by each division of Gloucestershire constabulary in each of the last five years; and how many of them were breached in each year. [125285]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) are issued by the courts. The number of ASBOs issued at all courts in Gloucestershire, as reported to the Home Office by the Court Service, and the number proven in court to have been breached, up to 31 December 2005 (latest available) is in the table.

Number of antisocial behaviour orders issued in each year at all courts in the Gloucestershire Criminal Justice System (CJS) area and the number that were proven in court to have been breached in each year, for orders issued between 1 January 2001 and 31 December 2005 (latest available)

	ASBOs issued in year[1]	ASBOs breached in year[1, 2]
2003	7	5
2004	26	13
2005	30	37

[1] ASBOs may be issued in one area and breached in another. In this table breaches of ASBOs issued in Gloucestershire are counted irrespective of the area in which the breach occurred.
[2] An ASBO can be issued in one year and breached in another.
Notes:
1. It is possible for an individual to breach their ASBO in more than one year, so persons may be counted more than once in this table.
2. Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

(Issued): As reported to the Home Office by the Court Service.
(Breached): OCJR Court Proceedings Database.

Biometrics

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to check facial images taken for the purposes of biometric passports or identity cards against CCTV footage from unsolved crimes. [126437]

John Reid: There are no plans currently to do so.

Domestic Violence: Durham

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of domestic violence were reported in (a) County Durham and (b) Easington constituency in each of the last five years. [126451]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Although the Home Office collects data on the number of reported domestic violence incidents by police force area, it does not routinely collect these data at constituency level. However, the Government Office for the north east has provided the following data:

	County Durham	Easington
2001-02	6,036	1,477
2002-03	6,409	1,413
2003-04	6,538	1,265
2004-05	7,206	1,305
2005-06	6,508	1,378

Electronic Tagging

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were subject to electronic monitoring whilst on bail in each of the last two years; and how many of these people were charged with violent crimes. [125335]

John Reid: The following table sets out the number of separate occasions on which courts imposed an electronically monitored curfew requirement as a condition of bail in each of the last two financial years in England and Wales. The figures have been provided by the two electronic monitoring suppliers G4S and SERCO.

Total number of times courts imposed a curfew with electronic monitoring as a bail condition

Financial year	Number
2005-06	8,548
2006-07 (to 31 January 2007)	14,104

Data on defendants subject to electronic monitoring while charged with violent crimes are not collected centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times he has written to members of the judiciary on the subject of electronic monitoring of people whilst on bail in the last 12 months. [125336]

John Reid: I have not written to members of the judiciary on the subject of electronic monitoring of defendants while on bail in the last 12 months.

Identity Cards

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the oral answer from the Minister for Immigration of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 1, on identity cards, if he will publish the research and briefing documents on which his statement that 70 per cent. of the costs of identity cards will be spent on introducing biometric passports is based. [127719]

John Reid: Cost estimates for the national identity scheme are outlined every six months in cost reports laid before Parliament pursuant to section 37 of the Identity Cards Act 2006. The first such report was published in October 2006 and is available at:

http://www.identitycards.gov.uk/news-publications-legislative.asp

Immigration: Criminal Records

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the absence of data on offences committed abroad by foreign nationals on the adequacy of risk assessments of those individuals by the Immigration Service. [124469]

Mr. Byrne: The review announced by right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will consider how information about criminality is recorded and shared both within the UK and between the UK and other countries as well as how such information is used to protect the public.

Immigration: Northern Ireland

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) non-EEA residence card (Form EEA 2) and (b) permanent residence card (Form EEA 4) applications are being considered by his Department from each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland; and how many of these applications were submitted more than 14 weeks ago. [125546]

Mr. Byrne: This information would be available only by examination of individual records at a disproportionate cost

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) each port and airport in Northern Ireland have been detected as in alleged breach of the Immigration Rules (i) in each of the past four years and (ii) in the current year to date. [125677]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 7 March 2007]: We are unable to provide the figures for immigration offenders detected in Northern Ireland by the Local Enforcement Office (LEO) for the years requested as they form part of the national picture and therefore cannot be quantified.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter of 5 February 2007 from the hon. Member for Beaconsfield. [123621]

John Reid: I wrote to the hon. Member on 19 March 2007.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many parking penalties were issued in the area of each local authority in England with parking responsibility in 2006; and what percentage change this represents from the equivalent figures for 2000. [128675]

Mr. Coaker: Information on penalty charge notices issued by local authorities operating decriminalised parking enforcements were first published in 2002 and can be found in the annual Home Office publication 'Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary tables' (latest available covers 2004)— Tables 22(a) and 22(b) refers. The publication is available on the Research Development and Statistics (RDS) website. Copies of the publication are also available in the Library.

2005 data will be available later this year; 2006 data will be available in 2008.

Passports

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1514-5W, on passports, if he will list the organisations using the Passport Validation Service. [127557]

John Reid: The Passport Validation Service (PVS) is used by organisations from both the private and public sector.

Public sector customers include the Criminal Records Bureau, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA), Department of Work and Pensions, e-Borders, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, HM Revenue and Customs, Immigration and Nationality Directorate and the Police.

Within the private sector, organisations regulated by the Financial Services Authority have to comply with the "Know Your Customer" requirements in order to guard against money laundering. As part of meeting these requirements, many financial institutions already check passports of individuals as part of opening accounts or taking out loans.

PVS offers such institutions the ability to ensure that these checks are more effective and secure by confirming whether the passport presented is a valid passport and has not been reported as lost or stolen. Thus, this provides a deterrent against fraud and forgery. Private sector organisations using PVS do so via a call centre, they provide PVS with the details from the passport in front of them and PVS confirms or denies whether this information matches our records. No personal details are divulged by PVS.

There are currently seven financial services organisations using PVS. Each is regulated by the Financial Service Authority and has been accredited before being allowed to enter into contracts to use PVS. Organisations are accredited to ensure they have a legitimate need to use the service and systems are in place to regulate staff using the service and to ensure adequate data protection.

However, it is not intended that the names of these organisations should be published so as not to reduce the effectiveness of the Passport Validation Service as a deterrent to combat fraud.

Police: Working Hours

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours of overtime were worked by police officers in each of the last 10 years. [127760]

John Reid: The Home Office does not collect figures on the number of overtime hours worked by police officers.

John Reid: This information is not held centrally.

Prisoners Transfers

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK prisoners are being held under prisoner transfer arrangements for offences committed abroad. [127875]

John Reid: Between 1 January 2000 and 31 December 2006, 295 British nationals convicted of offences committed abroad were returned to prisons in England and Wales to continue serving their sentences.

The repatriation of prisons to Scotland and to Northern Ireland is a matter for Scottish Ministers and for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Prisoners: Bridgend

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what issues require resolution at Sandville Self-Help Centre prior to the resumption of pre-release prisoner volunteers being placed there. [128484]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All outstanding issues between the CSV, probation and prison service have been resolved. Instructions to resume placements at Sandville and the revised Memorandum of understanding are due to be issued to all relevant establishments shortly.

Prisoners: Females

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners have children who are (a) under five years and (b) under 18 months. [127759]

John Reid: This information is not kept routinely by the Prison Service. A resettlement survey commissioned in 2003-04 by the service showed that half of all female prisoners had dependent children (including stepchildren) under 18, and 46 per cent. of those women had lived with at least one dependent child before custody.

Prisons: ICT

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2006, Official Report, column 271W, on the C-NOMIS IT project, what the outcome was of the review conducted in January; and what plans he has for further releases and implementation of the C-NOMIS system across the wider prison estate. [127684]

John Reid: As planned, the NOMIS Programme Board reviewed an independently assured plan for developing and testing the versions of C-NOMIS that are to be rolled out across England and Wales, including the timing of the upgrading of the IT infrastructure and how all of these are underpinned by a strengthened contractual arrangements with our suppliers. Lessons learnt from the highly successful introduction of the early version of C-NOMIS at HMP Albany on the Isle Wight were also taken into account.

Going forward, we plan to introduce a second version of the application with an improved level of functionality no later than July 2007. At the discretion of HM Prison Service and private sector prisons management this could be implemented in as many as 25 suitable prisons. Work is already well advanced to confirm identification and scheduling of that group. This will begin with upgrading HMP Albany and going live at other two Isle of Wight prisons, HMPs Parkhurst and Camp Hill.

Beyond that, the main C-NOMIS base release, encompassing full prison and probation functionality, will be available no later than July 2008. In the near future senior prisons managers will be meeting with colleagues from probation and the C-NOMIS Project deployment support teams to decide how they will schedule the remaining prisons for implementation.

Given this re-planning we now anticipate that this major roll-out schedule can now be speeded up significantly overall without cutting down on the time to implement for individual sites. We expect the roll-out of replacement of legacy systems—LIDS in the case of prisons—to be complete by the end of March 2009 which represents only a slight delay on the original plans.

Prisons: Religion

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what vetting procedures are undertaken by his Department before employing a minister of religion in HM prisons. [127563]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Ministers of religion fall under the category of chaplains and the checks undertaken include checks on: identity; proof of address; entitlement to work in the UK; criminal record check; references; qualifications, endorsement from the relevant faith adviser and national security vetting.

Secure Accommodation: Wales

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in which secure accommodation facilities female adult offenders from each local authority in Wales were held in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [128467]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information about the prisons in which women from each local authority in Wales are held is not available centrally.

Stray Dogs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department has taken to ensure that police authorities are fulfilling their obligations to receive stray dogs under the Environmental Protection Act 1990; and what sanctions may be imposed on police authorities who fail to fulfil their obligations. [124582]

Mr. Coaker: Under section 150 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 local authorities and the police have a shared responsibility to receive stray dogs from members of the public. It is a matter for the chief officer of the individual force concerned to determine the operational priority attached to activities within his or her force area.

War Crimes

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2153W, on war crimes, if he will list the cases for which all proceedings are complete in recent years to which the answer refers. [128019]

Joan Ryan: The cases referred to in my answer were applications for arrest warrants in respect of Henry Kissinger, Robert Mugabe, Bo Xilai, Narendra Modi, Ariel Sharon, Shaul Mofaz and Doron Almog.

Weir Prison

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons were for the sale of HMP Weir in May 2006. [128094]

Mr. Sutcliffe: At the time it closed, The Weir was no longer considered appropriate for the accommodation of prisoners. Substantial investment would have been necessary to keep it open.

Women's Prisons: Per Capita Costs

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average daily cost was of keeping a prisoner in each women's prison in the latest period for which figures are available. [128496]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The average daily cost per prisoner for each female establishment in 2005-06, and the average cost for the whole female estate, is shown in the table.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to question numbers 114242, 114243 and 114244, tabled by the hon. Member for West Suffolk on 9 January 2007. [120886]

Mr. Byrne: I replied to the hon. Member on 2 March 2007, Official Report column 1562W.

Young Offenders: Suicide

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) attempted suicides, (b) threats of suicide and (c) incidents of self-harm there were in each young offenders institution in (i) 2003, (ii) 2004, (iii) 2005, (iv) 2006 and (v) 2007 to date; and if he will make a statement. [127947]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 19 March 2007]: In response to (a), there is no definition of what constitutes an attempted suicide, as it is very difficult to measure suicidal intent.

The information requested at (b) is not collated centrally in the requested format and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The exact information requested at (c) is not available. Self-harm figures are derived from a national recording system of each incident of self-harm in prison, the majority of which are minor, and can only be considered as an estimate.

Youth Justice Board

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the research programme of the Youth Justice Board relates to the Board's outcome measures. [126856]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Each individual study in the YJB's research strategy is aligned with at least one corporate target. The YJB's Research Programme Board (RPB) oversees the development and progress of the research strategy and has representatives of every directorate in the YJB, as well as policy and research representatives from the Home Office. Research and evaluation directly informs national policy and local practice and is part of the ongoing process of development which is monitored by the YJB's performance team who provide outcome measures for the targets.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Aggregates Levy

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what mechanisms will be introduced to ensure that monies raised through the implementation of the aggregates levy sustainability fund are allocated to projects which will result in environmental benefits in Northern Ireland; [120336]

(2) when the Government plans to implement the aggregates levy sustainability fund in Northern Ireland. [120337]

David Cairns: The Department of the Environment is currently preparing a business case with a view to setting up a sustainable development fund in 2007-08.

Community Relations: Belfast

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress made in evaluating the Community Safety Unit's pilot project on the recording of hate incidents in South Belfast. [127186]

Mr. Hanson: Project RIOH, the pilot project for recording hate incidents in South Belfast is currently being evaluated. Reporting centres and other stakeholders have been canvassed for their views on the operation of Project RIOH and the information collected is currently being considered. The multi-agency group which oversaw the project is due to meet soon to consider the findings of the evaluation.

Dual Nationality

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) British subjects, (b) Irish citizens and (c) people with dual British-Irish nationality there were in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [123511]

Mr. Hain: The Government do not hold the information in the format requested. However, the 2001 census gives information about the place of birth of those living in Northern Ireland on 29 April 2001: Of the 1,685,267 people living in Northern Ireland on census day, 1,534,268 are recorded as having been born in Northern Ireland, 81,389 were recorded as having been born elsewhere in the UK and 39,051 were recorded as having been born in the republic of Ireland.

Place of birth does not, of course, determine citizenship. Entitlement to British citizenship is regulated by the British Nationality Acts and Irish citizenship is a matter for the Irish authorities. However, under the terms of the Belfast Agreement, the British and Irish Governments recognised the right of the people of Northern Ireland to identify themselves as Irish or British or both, as they so choose, and confirm their right to hold both British and Irish citizenship. Annex 2 to the Agreement signed by the two Governments defines "the people of Northern Ireland", for this purpose, as meaning "all persons born in Northern Ireland who had, at the time of their birth, at least one parent who is a British citizen or an Irish citizen or is otherwise entitled to reside in Northern Ireland without any restriction on their period of residence".

English Language

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tutors taught English for Speakers of Other Languages courses in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [128389]

Maria Eagle: The following figures relate only to those colleges in the statutory further education sector that have maintained details of the number of English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) tutors employed during the period requested. No details are held on the number of ESOL tutors employed by other, non-statutory organisations.

Academic year	Number of tutors
2005/06	90

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much expenditure from the public purse there was on English for speakers of other languages courses in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [128390]

Maria Eagle: Expenditure, funded by the Department for Employment and Learning, on English for speakers of other languages (ESOL) courses in further education colleges, in each of the last five years, was:

2006-07	1,469,297
2005-06	865,059
2004-05	691,628
2003-04	486,093
2002-03	349,276

Funding is also available within the new deal programmes. However, it is not possible to separately identify this funding.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much money was given to primary schools in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years to help children for whom English is not their first language; [128391]

(2) how much money was given to secondary schools in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years to help children for whom English is not their first language. [128393]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education has provided earmarked funding for the provision of teaching and teaching support for English as an Additional Language (EAL), through the education and library boards in each financial year as follows:

2002-03	200,000
2003-04	400,000
2004-05	410,000

2005-06	570,000
2006-07	834,000

These figures are not available by allocation to primary and post-primary schools.

In addition, since 2005-06 schools have received additional funding within the delegated budget shares distributed under the common funding formula for all pupils, identified within the schools annual statistical return as requiring additional support for English as an Additional Language.

Allocations for primary and secondary schools were as follows:

	Primary	Secondary
2005-06	1,106,000	531,000
2006-07	1,691,000	783,000
2007-08	2,462,000	1,035,000

Higher Education

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many third level education institutions the Minister for Higher and Further Education has visited since her appointment to the Department. [120428]

Maria Eagle: As Minister with responsibility for Employment and Learning I have visited three third level education institutions: the North East Institute of Further and Higher Education; Belfast Institute of Further and Higher Education; and the North West Institute of Further and Higher Education.

Prisons: Drugs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding was allocated to drugs treatment for prisoners in Northern Ireland in each of the past six years; and how many prisoners received drugs treatment in each Northern Ireland prison over the same period. [128029]

Paul Goggins: The information is not available in the form requested. It is not possible to differentiate between resources allocated and prisoners participating in programmes for drugs or alcohol misuse. The Prison Service has contracts with three community voluntary support groups to provide counselling services to prisoners who have abused substances.

Information about the financial support given to the groups is only available for the past five years as follows:

2002-03	294
2003-04	379
2004-05	472
2005-06	551
2006-07 to February	386
Total	2,082

The number of prisoners facilitated is as follows:

	Number
2002-03	[1]914
2003-04	[1]—
2004-05	443
2005-06	496
2006-07 to February	466
Total	2,319

The NI Prison Service also has a policy of continuing community substitution programmes when a prisoner is committed to prison; this has been in place since September 2004. This aspect cannot be accurately costed as much depends on the drug and dosage used and the length of time that the individual is kept on the programme—some will still be on it when discharged. The number of prisoners involved is as follows:

	Number
2004	14
2005	19
2006	23
Total	61

In addition, the Prison Service has a detailed detoxification protocol which sets out recommendations for treatment and support to prisoners who allege that they are addicted to drugs or alcohol but who are not participating in a community substitution programme. It is not possible to put a cost against such treatments or identify the number of prisoners treated.

Racial Harassment

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many victims of racist incidents have been helped under the Practical Actions scheme of his Department's Community Safety Unit since the scheme's inception. [127187]

Mr. Hanson: The Practical Actions scheme has been developed by the Community Safety Unit in partnership with the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the PSNI. The scheme provides personal and home security measures to victims of hate incidents where an individual has suffered a hate incident at or near their home or where an individual's home has been damaged as a result of a hate incident. The scheme has been available to victims since February and to date two victims of racist incidents have received support under the scheme.

Railways: Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Translink will make an estimate of the cost of providing a passing loop in the Ballykelly area for trains between Coleraine and Londonderry. [120287]

David Cairns: Translink estimate the cost of providing a passing loop at Ballykelly to be £500,000.

However, this would also require the introduction of a new signalling system between Castlerock and Londonderry at an estimated cost of between £8.5 million and £10 million.

Roads: Scotland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations he has made to the Scottish Executive in relation to the upgrading of (a) the A75 Stranraer to Dumfries Road and (b) the A77 Stranraer to Ayr road. [120433]

David Cairns: There have been no representations.

Schools

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schools the Minister for Higher and Further Education has visited since her appointment to the Department, broken down by (a) management type and (b) education and library board; and if he will make a statement. [120429]

Maria Eagle: Since my appointment to the Department of Employment and Learning, as Minister for Further and Higher Education, I have not visited any schools. However, as Minister for Education, I have visited a total of 13 schools:

(a) Broken down by management type—grant maintained integrated, three Roman Catholic maintained, seven controlled and two voluntary grammar.

(b) Broken down by education and library board—four in the SEELB, five in the BELB, one in the WELB and three in the NEELB.

Water Service: Standards

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the amount of water lost through leakage in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [128137]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 20 March 2007:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what estimate he has made of the amount of water lost through leakage in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years for which figures are available (128137). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

The estimated level of water lost through leakage in the three years from 2003/04 to 2005/06 is as follows:-

	Leakage (megalitres)
2003-04	83,950
2005-06	64,970

The final outturn for March 2007 is not yet available but Water Service is on schedule to achieve its set target of 61,685 Megalitres.

Water: Shortages

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hosepipe bans were introduced in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; how many breaches of each ban were recorded; and what penalty was enforced in each case. [128138]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 20 March 2007:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how many hosepipe bans were introduced in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; how many breaches of each ban were recorded; and what penalty was enforced in each case (128138). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

No hosepipe bans have been introduced in Northern Ireland in the last 10 years. Temporary prohibitions on non-essential hosepipe usage were last introduced in 1995. Anyone contravening the ban would have been liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £200. Water Service has no record of any convictions during that time.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Community Development

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she plans to take to encourage councils to develop neighbourhood charters. [128220]

Mr. Woolas: The Government have agreed a protocol on the production of non-statutory guidance with the Local Government Association. As such we are working with the Local Government Association, the Improvement and Development Agency and a range of other stakeholders to ensure that there is appropriate advice available to help local authorities develop effective local charters with local communities; and to fit them coherently into the overall sustainable community strategy for the area.

Community Development: Ethnic Groups

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 31 January 2007, Official Report, columns 314-5W, on religious groups, which (a) Hindu, (b) Sikh and (c) Muslim organisations received funding from the communities capacity building fund in each of the last five years; and how much has been allocated to each organisation for 2006-07. [124538]

Mr. Woolas: The faith communities capacity building fund was established in 2005, with the first round of grants to organisations being made in 2006-07. A list of all those organisations which received funding in the first round 2006-07, including the details of funding amounts for each organisation can be obtained from the community development foundation (CDF) website www.cdf.org.uk. A breakdown of this information by faith group is also available in the House Library.

Council Houses

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many council houses are owned by (a) local authorities and (b) housing associations in each London borough; and how many additional houses have been provided by (i) local authorities and (ii) housing associations in each of the last 10 years. [110615]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the stock of social rent housing by local authority area can be found on the Communities and Local Government website:

Registered social landlords

http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/21/Table115_id1156021.xls

Local authorities

http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/22/Table116_id1156022.xls

The numbers of social rent housing units built or acquired in each London borough in each of the last 10 years are tabulated as follows. The majority of public sector investment for new social housing goes to housing associations as they can lever in around 40 per cent. independent borrowing and deliver more units than local authorities for a given amount of public subsidy. The Government are currently looking at ways for local authorities to play a greater role in building more homes.

Council Housing: Greater London

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many leaseholders in (a) arms length management organisation, (b) council and (c) housing association managed properties there are in London in each borough. [126490]

Yvette Cooper: The Department does not hold this information. A survey undertaken by the former Association of London Government (now London Councils) indicates that the number of leaseholders—i.e. owners of flats that were once owned by the local authority—in the following 19 boroughs is:

Borough	Number of leaseholders (approximate)
Barking	2,802

Council Tax

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment her Department has made of the causes of changes in the average level of council tax in England between 1997-08 and 2006-07. [128605]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Newbury (Mr. Benyon) on 27 February 2007, Official Report column 1272.

Council Tax: Valuation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many photographs of domestic properties in (a) England and (b) Wales the Valuation Office Agency holds on its photograph database. [120819]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the VOA website:

www.voa.gov.uk.

Councillors: Disciplinary Proceedings

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what the longest period of time is for which the Standards Board can suspend a councillor; and how many cases have involved this penalty; [126287]

(2) what powers (a) a local authority and (b) the Standards Board has to suspend a councillor who is subject to criminal charges not connected to their work as a councillor. [126288]

Mr. Woolas: The Standards Board has no remit to impose sanctions on local councillors; this is a matter for either local standards committees or, in the most serious cases, the Adjudication Panel. Local standards committees are empowered to impose suspensions of up to three months; the Adjudication Panel may impose suspensions of up to one year and disqualifications of up to five years.

From 2003-04 to date, the Adjudication Panel has imposed a sanction of five years disqualification in three cases, and a sanction of one year's suspension in 12 cases. For the same period, local standards committees imposed a sanction of three months suspension in 82 cases.

Following the High Court judgment in the case of the London Mayor last October, doubt has been cast on the extent to which the remit of the code of conduct can extend to behaviour by a councillor which is not directly related to his or her role as a member. We are therefore seeking, in the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill, to amend the Local Government Act 2000 to allow the remit of the model code of conduct to include the behaviour of members in their private capacity, if it involves criminal activity, as well as official capacity.

Departments: Conferences

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which conferences were funded (a) in whole and (b) in part by (i) her Department and (ii) its predecessor Department in the last 12 months; how many people attended each; and what the cost was of each conference to her Department. [127056]

Ruth Kelly: The figures requested are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which postal companies handle mail dispatched by her Department and its agencies. [128248]

Angela E. Smith: Communities and Local Government and its agencies currently use Royal Mail and Royale Research Ltd. who are licensed by Postcomm for the distribution of mail. The Department also uses the Government Mail service provided by the Government Car and Dispatch Agency.

Electronic Government

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what assessment has been made of the reasons for the levels of take-up of Government Connect by local authorities; [127044]

(2) if she will place in the Library a copy of the business case model for Government Connect provided to local authorities; [127045]

(3) what the timetable is for the rollout of Government Connect to local authorities. [127046]

Ruth Kelly: Copies of the business case have today been placed in the Libraries to the House.

Government Connect has been collecting information on the willingness to adopt the solutions being provided by the programme. This research indicated that around 200 local authorities may be ready to sign up to Government Connect by the end of 2007. Currently 198 councils have signed a pre-contractual notice with Government Connect. We aim to have connected all local authorities by March 2008.

Research indicates that councils are signing up to Government Connect as they recognise that the programme has the potential to offer the wide range of service transformation possibilities around secure working with other local authorities and central Government Departments which they see as supporting efficiency and improved customer service.

Empty Property: Calderdale

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how the estimate for the number of empty properties in Calderdale was calculated; and how many of these properties are (a) flats and (b) houses. [124635]

Yvette Cooper: Estimates for the total number of empty dwellings are based on council tax returns. Information is reported by local authorities to Communities and Local Government through the Council Tax Base (CTB1) return.

Estimates for empty dwellings by tenure are based on two further returns:

1. Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) as reported by local authorities;

2. Regulatory Statistical Return (RSR) as reported by registered social landlords.

Information on the vacancy split by flats and houses is not available centrally.

Greenbelt: M25

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent representations she has received on the creation of a green arc around the M25 motorway; and if she will make a statement. [124694]

Yvette Cooper: At present, we are not aware of any specific recent representations on this matter as public consultation is still under way on the Secretary of State's Proposed Changes to the Draft East of England Plan. But this is an issue where we would expect the public to express an interest in.

The Proposed Changes are that "areas and networks of green infrastructure should be identified, created, protected and managed to ensure that an improved and healthy environment is available for the benefit of present and future communities". Assets of particular regional significance proposed for the retention, provision and enhancement of green infrastructure include green infrastructure projects around the fringes of Greater London.

Public consultation on the Proposed Changes ran until 9 March. The Secretary of State will then consider the representations received.

Home Information Packs

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the likely effect of the introduction of Home Information Packs on the operation of the housing market. [126553]

Yvette Cooper: The home buying and selling process is slow, expensive and uncertain, as housing market research carried out over a number of years has consistently found. By making key information available to both buyers and sellers early in the transaction process it is expected that HIPs will lead to reduced transaction times, a reduction in wasted costs and more certain and transparent transactions. It is also anticipated that HIPs will pave the way for further, market-led changes that will bring substantial further benefits to consumers.

Housing: Disabled

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department is taking to provide accessible housing mobility services for social housing tenants; and if she will make a statement. [123519]

Yvette Cooper: Mobility was identified as one of the key issues in the Hills review of Social Housing. The Government are currently looking at these issue as part of responding to the review. The social housing pages on the Directgov website (www.direct.gov.uk/socialhousing), provide information on the recent changes to social housing mobility and easy access to information and services; and signposts facilities for tenants to approach and apply to social housing landlords directly.

Other services providers offer access to services to exchange social housing and we have also listed 10 of these direct access "homeswap" services and are reviewing the market in order to add to the schemes listed to offer the widest choice to tenants.

The new social housing pages on Directgov also link to other Government services such as the "Looking for Work" facility which links to the Jobcentre Plus database with job vacancies throughout the UK; a variety of pages relating to local information i.e. schools, hospitals and care services; and information on benefits. Users can also access the full range of other Government services available on Directgov.

We are in discussions with London councils on providing a transitional service for the seaside and country homes (SSCH) and the LAWN mobility schemes, on a medium term basis under grant agreement. These arrangements are currently being developed. In the meantime, London councils are providing an information service to customers as arrangements are put in place.

The Department has also funded 26 local and sub-regional choice based lettings schemes, as well as one regional scheme for London, which will provide additional mobility services and the facility for social housing tenants to move home within areas and regions. Once operational, these will also be accessible through the social housing pages on Directgov. The first of these schemes (High Peak and Derbyshire Dales) is due to go-live next month.

Housing: Durham

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes in the City of Durham have reached the decent homes standard. [123653]

Yvette Cooper: At 1 April 2006 Durham city council reported that 2,486 of the 6,334 homes they owned were up to a decent standard.

Registered social landlords operating within the city reported that they had 1,498 homes of which 1,414 were decent. We do not hold data on private sector housing decency at a local authority level.

Housing: Energy

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2040W, on housing: energy, if she will place in the Library a copy of the summary of overall benefits published in April 2003. [128538]

Ruth Kelly: The summary of overall benefits expected to arise from EU Directive 2002/91/EC, the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive, is contained within the "Second European Climate Change Programme Report: Can we meet our Kyoto targets" published in April 2003. This is a European Commission report that can be found on the European Commission website.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many local authority houses were (a) demolished, (b) built and (c) sold under Right to Buy in 2006. [116942]

Yvette Cooper: During the financial year 2005-06 an estimated 6,245 local authority houses were demolished, and 26,654 were sold through the right-to-buy scheme. Information on local authority stock is reported by the local authorities. The aforementioned figures include estimates where individual local authorities have not provided any data.

In 2005-06 around 299 homes were built by local authorities. Increasingly social rent housing units are provided by registered social landlords who can lever in additional borrowing. By 2007-08 the annual provision of new social rent homes is set to reach 30,000 of which 28,000 will be delivered through Housing Corporation funding to RSLs and other developers.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the effect of the proposed right to manage on local authority finances. [124419]

Ruth Kelly: Groups of tenants of local authorities have had a right to manage their homes since the introduction of The Housing (Right to Manage) Regulations 1994. A local authority is required to provide reasonable support to the group to assist it to set up a tenant management organisation. The tenant empowerment programme (TEP), now administered by the housing corporation, provides financial support to developing tenant management organisations. In the main stage of development, the local authority is required to contribute 25 per cent. of the TEP funding. Typically a local authority will contribute about £28,000 towards the development, spread over three or four years.

Once a tenant management organisation is up and running, its activities are funded from management and maintenance allowances paid for the functions for which they are responsible. These allowances are based on the local authorities' own level of expenditure for those functions.

We are currently reviewing the right to manage regulations with a view to simplifying the process. A simpler process will reduce both the time and the cost of developing a tenant management organisation, though it may also encourage more tenants groups to explore the option. As part of the review we will assess the impact of proposed new regulations, including the impact on local authorities.

Local Government: Equal Pay

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on the implementation of single status and equal pay in local government; and what estimate she has made of the number of local authorities which have not yet fully implemented equal pay. [128598]

Mr. Woolas: The Government are fully committed to equality for all in the workplace, including the principle of equal pay for work of equal value. It is for local authorities, as employers, to tackle equal pay proactively and in an affordable manner. The Local Government Employers are currently conducting a survey of their members to identify how many have implemented the Single Status Agreement and when the remainder expect to do so.

Local Government: Standards

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which (a) regulators and (b) other public sector bodies will have responsibilities for (i) regulating and (ii) auditing, inspecting or otherwise monitoring local authorities following the merger of the Benefits Fraud Inspectorate and the Audit Commission. [127093]

Ruth Kelly: Under proposals set out in the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill, the Audit Commission will oversee the inspection of all local services and will continue to appoint and assign auditors to local authorities. The Audit Commission will manage the overall programme of inspection and external assessment of local authorities. Other regulators and inspectorates with responsibilities in this area are the new Ofsted, the Adult Social Care Inspectorate which will replace the Commission for Social Care Inspection, and the existing five criminal justice inspectorates where they have an interest in local authority services.

Maps: Databases

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether Ordnance Survey's MasterMap Address Layer 2 includes information on the council tax bands of individual properties. [128447]

Mr. Woolas: No.

Neighbourhood Wardens

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many new neighbourhood (a) warden and (b) manager schemes have been established since January 2006. [128219]

Mr. Woolas: Support for neighbourhood management and warden schemes has now been pooled within local area agreements, which focus on achieving a series of public service outcomes agreed between central and local government—in this instance safer and stronger communities. Information is no longer collected at the centre about the number and type of schemes (outputs) that local authorities and their partners choose to adopt to deliver their LAA outcomes.

Non-Domestic Rates

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average business rates bill in England was in each year since 1997-98. [124479]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her by the Minister for Local Government of 13 March 2007, Official Report, column 238W.

Non-Domestic Rates: Safety Measures

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what account is taken of the presence of (a) anti-fire sprinklers and (b) CCTV cameras by the Valuation Office Agency when calculating the rebate value of business premises for business rates valuations or revaluations. [128502]

Mr. Woolas: Anti-fire sprinklers and CCTV camera systems are both rated in accordance with The Valuation for Rating (Plant and Machinery) (England) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000 No. 540). However, the Valuation Office Agency makes no addition to the rateable value in cases where fewer than four CCTV cameras are installed, taking the pragmatic view that such cases do not constitute a "system".

Planning

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many planning authorities have adopted a statement of community involvement. [126459]

Mr. Woolas: There have been 224 adopted statements of community involvement as at 28 of February 2007. This represents 56 per cent. of all local planning authorities in England.

Planning Obligations: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what facilities were provided in Lancashire from agreements made under section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 in each of the last 10 years; and what the value was. [125314]

Yvette Cooper: Information on individual section 106 agreements is held by local planning authorities and not collected centrally. The Town and Country Planning (General Development Procedure) (Amendment) (England) Order 2002 (Statutory Instrument 2002 no. 828), which came into effect on 1 July 2002, requires details of planning obligations to be recorded in both Parts I and II of the local planning authority's planning register, which should be available for public reference.

Public Houses

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what advice she has given to local councils on the criteria to be used in determining change of use of public houses. [125071]

Yvette Cooper: It is up to Local Planning Authorities to determine whether a change of use has taken place. ODPM Circular 03/2005 "Changes of Use of Buildings and Land: The Town and Country Planning (Use Classes) Order 1987" provides a guide to the Use Class Order as amended by SI2005/85. Copies have been placed in the House Libraries.

Public houses where the primary purpose is the sale and consumption of alcoholic drink on the premises now fall within the A4: "Drinking Establishments" class. Premises in this category have a permitted change of use to A3: "restaurant and café" premises, as well as to both the A1: "Shops" and A2: "Financial and Professional Services" uses. Any other change of use would require planning permission.

The existing primary use will be crucial in determining the appropriate classification. In making a determination as to the correct classification, some account may be taken of factors such as: whether the majority of customers on the premises are consuming alcoholic liquor exclusively; whether there is a public house licence; and whether there is any obligation or expectation for customers to consume a meal. Where it is evident that the primary use of the premises is the purchase and consumption of alcoholic liquor on the premises, the use class will normally be A4, irrespective of the square footage which may be given over to dining as an additional service, or the revenue derived from that function.

Regeneration: Lower Lea Valley

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much her Department has spent on non-Olympic regeneration in the Lower Lea Valley since July 2005; what plans her Department has for such spending; and if she will make a statement. [128408]

Angela E. Smith: To date, since 2005, the Department for Communities and Local Government have spent £37,941,704 on non-Olympic regeneration in the Lower Lea Valley. Regenerating the Lower Lea Valley was a priority, under the Thames Gateway programme, before the announcement of the 2012 Olympic Games coming to London and continues to be a priority as part of the Thames Gateway. The future regeneration of the Lower Lea Valley will be undertaken by the London Thames Gateway Development Corporation. The Development Corporation's vision for the Lower Lea Valley includes the building of 35,000 homes and the creation of 50,000 jobs by 2016.

Regional Planning and Development: Eastern Region

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what meetings (a) she and (b) officials in her Department had with Arlington (i) in the period between the Government inspectors report into the East of England Plan and the launch of the consultation and (ii) since the consultation was launched; and if she will make a statement. [128512]

Meg Munn: Ministers have not met with representatives of Arlington in either of the periods in question. Officials have checked their diaries and can find no record of any official-level meeting during these periods either.

Social Rented Housing

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average length of stay was for tenants in (a) local authority and (b) registered social landlord accommodation in (i) 1997, (ii) 2001 and (iii) the last year for which figures are available. [126506]

Yvette Cooper: Reliable estimates of how long social housing tenants remain, on average, in the same accommodation are not available. However, estimates of the lengths of uncompleted residence based on the time that existing tenants have spent in their current accommodation are as follows:

Lengths of uncompleted residence (in years) reported by existing social housing tenants

Number of years

	Council tenants		RSL tenants
	Mean	Median	Mean	Median
1997-98	12.4	8.1	8.2	4.5
2001-02	12.8	8.2	9.3	5.2
2005-06	13.6	8.8	10.3	5.9

Source:
Survey of English Housing

It is important to note that since these figures are based on uncompleted lengths of tenure, they are likely to be significantly below the equivalent figures for completed lengths of tenure.

Social Rented Housing: Standards

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many and what proportion of homes (a) in the private sector, (b) rented from local authorities and (c) rented from registered social landlords fell below the decent homes standard in each year since its introduction. [126507]

Yvette Cooper: Since 1997 the Government have been committed to improving the condition of homes, especially in the social sector. The decent homes public service agreement was introduced in the 2000 Spending Review. The condition of the housing stock is monitored by the English House Condition Survey.

	All non-decent		All LA non-decent		All RSL non-decent		All private sector non-decent

Source:
English House Condition Survey

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether local authorities are required to conduct housing condition surveys of social housing. [127012]

Ruth Kelly: Section 605 of the Housing Act 1985 requires a periodic inspection of housing within its boundaries by the local housing authority.

The publication 'Decent Homes: Capturing the standard at the local level', published in 2000, states it will be necessary to repeat stock surveys periodically, or on a rolling stock survey format to assess the condition of homes that it owns.

Temporary Accommodation

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homeless households in temporary accommodation there were in each year since 2002-03. [128477]

Yvette Cooper: Information about local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly at local authority level.

The duty owed to a household accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need is to secure suitable accommodation. If a settled home is not immediately available, the authority may secure temporary accommodation until settled accommodation becomes available.

Information on the number of households in temporary accommodation at the end of each quarter is available from 1997 onwards in Table 6 of our most recent statistical release on statutory homelessness. The release is placed in the Library each quarter, and is also available on our website:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1002882&PressNoticeID=2309.

Note that these figures include both those households who have been accepted as owed the main homelessness duty, and those for which enquiries are pending.

Unitary Councils

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether councils which are preparing for unitary status will have elections pending in (a) 2007 and (b) 2008 postponed or cancelled. [128503]

Ruth Kelly: The 2007 elections will go ahead. We will be considering the implications for the 2008 local elections for any council that is affected during that year by the implementation of a move to unitary structures which has been approved by Parliament.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2006, Official Report, column 474W, on the Valuation Office Agency, from which sources the agency obtains information on the presence of bathrooms in new or altered properties. [114456]

Ruth Kelly: This information might be obtained from a variety of sources, including the house builder and the occupier.

HEALTH

Accident and Emergency departments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency departments there are in each strategic health authority, broken down by type. [126549]

Andy Burnham: National health service trusts self-report the number of accident and emergency (A and E) services they provide against definitions provided by the Department. Trust information can then be grouped together to provide information for strategic health authorities.

The information is shown in the following table and was the position at the end of December 2006.

Alcohol Misuse

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2007, Official Report, columns 931-2W, on alcohol drinks: misuse, if she will break down the figures for admissions by primary care trust; and if she will make a statement. [125160]

Caroline Flint: The information requested by the hon. Member has been placed in the Library.

The Government are concerned by the growing number of people being admitted to hospital as a result of alcohol misuse, and is determined to tackle this. As stated in the 2004 Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy for England, the Government are committed to reviewing the current strategy this year. We intend to identify what future action is required to help the majority of the population to stay within sensible drinking limits and to make those drinking at levels likely to cause harm to their health more aware of the risks. The responsibilities of the alcohol industry, consumers, and Government will each be part of the review.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage the £15 million earmarked to improve alcohol interventions in 2007-08 represents of the total uplift in revenue for NHS primary care trusts (PCTs) for that year; and how much each PCT received of that £15 million. [126262]

Caroline Flint: The 2006-07 and 2007-08 primary care trust (PCT) revenue allocations separately identify £342 million funding in support of public health initiatives, including £15 million for alcohol interventions in 2007-08. £15 million is 0.25 per cent. of the £6 billion uplift in 2007-08 PCT allocations. PCTs have been encouraged to invest additional funding to improve their local arrangements for commissioning and delivering alcohol treatment services based on local need.

PCTs were informed of their shares of the £342 million funding but not their shares of each initiative.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to persuade primary care trusts to give alcohol reduction strategies a higher priority in their funding. [117969]

Caroline Flint: "Alcohol Misuse Interventions—Guidance on developing a local programme of improvement" was published in November 2005. This document provides the policy context, evidence of associated harm and presents strong economic reasons for primary care trusts to give alcohol harm reduction strategies a high priority. It also outlines practical steps to support local delivery of alcohol interventions.

Alcohol specific commissioning guidance for local healthcare organisations will be developed and consulted on in 2007.

The Department is exploring the possibility of developing an alcohol interventions assessment and benchmarking framework that would encourage local investment in preventive interventions and treatment. The regulatory bodies are considering how they can support the development of such a framework.

Animal Feed: Additives

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Additives for Use in Animal Nutrition (England) Regulations 2003 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126669]

Caroline Flint: One-off costs will be borne by feed additive manufacturers in relation to changes in information required on labels. Detailed figures are not available from the industry, but these are unlikely to be significant.

Recurring costs for businesses will relate mainly to authorisation or re-authorisation of feed additives. The additional cost of authorisation for new feed additives is estimated by the industry to be in the range £10,000 to £100,000 depending on the complexity of the dossier. It is not possible to provide estimates for the cost of re-authorisations as this is dependant on guidelines yet to be issued by the European Commission.

Costs to regulators will be negligible.

Blood: Contamination

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects Lord Archer of Sandwell's enquiry into contaminated NHS blood and blood products to be completed. [128387]

Caroline Flint: This is an unofficial independent public inquiry, therefore it is not a matter for the Department.

Cancer: Drugs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ask the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to reconsider its decision on Gliadel; and if she will make a statement. [125233]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence is currently carrying out an appraisal of Gliadel Wafers (carmustine implants) for the treatment of newly diagnosed high-grade glioma. The institute has not yet issued final guidance to the national health service but expects to do so by summer 2007.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have been issued with the cancer drug Tarceva since March 2006; and which NHS trusts have (a) funded and (b) prescribed the cancer drug Tarceva since September 2005. [127019]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not hold the data requested for individual hospitals. Hospitals have been the main users of Tarceva (Erlotinib) with low usage by primary care trusts (PCTs). In the period September 2005 to June 2006, hospitals in at least 25 of the 28 former strategic health authorities had used Tarceva. In the period September 2005 to December 2006, six of the former 303 PCTs had prescribed the drug. To provide details of individual PCTs could potentially disclose the identity of the patients involved as prescribing has, so far, been minimal.

Cancer: Medical Treatments

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to record how many new cancer treatments developed through basic research (a) go forward to clinical trials and (b) become treatments for patients. [121934]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not collect the information from which an analysis of this sort could be made.

The report of the review of UK heath research funding undertaken last year by Sir David Cooksey[1] discusses drug development and the translation of health research into practice. The Government will take forward the associated recommendations made in the report.

[1] The report "A review of UK health research funding" is available at hm-treasury.gov.uk

Cancer: Research

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research she has examined on the use of eggs from genetically modified hens in research into treatment for cancer; and if she will make a statement. [124150]

Caroline Flint: None.

Cervical Cancer: Vaccination

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) (a) to come to a conclusion and (b) to publish its findings on the effectiveness of a vaccine against human papilloma virus; and when she expects to make a recommendation following the JCVI's consideration; [128797]

(2) what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the human papilloma virus vaccine. [128801]

Caroline Flint: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) is in the process of thoroughly examining the vaccine safety, efficacy and cost-effectiveness evidence concerning human papilloma virus vaccines. The work is being taken forward by a sub-group of JCVI, with further work ongoing to evaluate whether the vaccine is considered to be a cost-effective prevention of cervical cancer; and the impact that HPV vaccine may have on genital warts.

The sub-group's advice will be reported to the main JCVI committee for further discussion.

No decisions will be taken on introducing these vaccines into the immunisation programme until JCVI has presented its advice to Ministers for their consideration.

Clostridium Difficile

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the possibility of transmission of Clostridium difficile by airborne means. [124527]

Caroline Flint: Clostridium difficile forms spores and patients suffering from C difficile associated disease shed spores in their faeces. These spores settle onto environmental surfaces such as floors and toilets rather than remaining in the air and air borne exposure is not a significant transmission route. Spores can survive in the environment for long periods and infect others as a result of cross contamination, often by the faecal-oral route, through contaminated surfaces. Transmission is prevented by isolating affected patients and enhanced environmental cleaning to remove Clostridium difficile spores.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people contracted clostridium difficile from hospitals in Lancashire in each of the last five years. [125169]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available as requested. The Health Protection Agency (HPA) receives reports from microbiology laboratories of cases of Clostridium difficile associated disease (CDAD) under the mandatory surveillance scheme. All acute NHS trusts in England are obliged to report all cases of CDAD in patients aged 65 years and over.

The infections included in the table may not all have been contracted in hospitals in Lancashire. This is because the protocol asks trusts to report all positive samples detected in their laboratories, including samples sent to that acute trust from community hospitals, primary care trust hospitals, general practitioners, nursing homes and other NHS-run health care facilities.

Mandatory surveillance began in January 2004 and the figures for 2004 and 2005 are shown in the table and on the HPA's website at:

www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/hai/mandatory_report_2006.htm

Quarterly publication of mandatory surveillance data for CDAD started on 30 January 2007 and data for January to September 2006 is available on the HPA website:

Complementary Medicine: Channel Islands

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints about food supplements and herbal remedies being marketed in the United Kingdom with health claims illegal in the UK by companies based in the Channel Islands have been referred by the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency to the appropriate agencies in Guernsey and Jersey in the last two years; and what information the Agency has received about the subsequent investigation of such complaints and the outcomes. [123911]

Caroline Flint: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), an Executive Agency of the Department of Health has referred nine complaints to the Guernsey Authorities and seven to the Jersey Authorities; since 1 January 2005. The MHRA received feedback from the Guernsey Authorities on three cases. In two cases there were no offences under Guernsey law and in the third case the company was not actually based in Guernsey. The MHRA received feedback on three cases from the Jersey Authorities. In all three cases the companies were not actually based in Jersey.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date and for what reasons it was made illegal to offer (a) melatonin and (b) kava kava for sale in the United Kingdom; and what assessment she has made of (i) the implications for public health and (ii) the legality of the continued marketing of products containing (A) melatonin and (B) kava kava for sale to UK consumers by mail order from the Channel Islands. [123912]

Caroline Flint: A prohibition order on the: sale, supply and importation of kava kava in unlicensed medicines, other than for external use, came into force on 13 January 2003. The order was made following advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines and the Medicines Commission that kava kava poses a rare but serious risk of liver toxicity. Similar action was taken in relation to kava kava in foods. The Guernsey authorities have investigated the supply of kava kava by a company apparently based on that island. The investigation showed that the product was not actually being distributed from Guernsey but from Cyprus. A complaint has been referred to the authorities in Cyprus by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA).

There are no special legislative restrictions on the sale or supply of the hormone melatonin. Unless it is being supplied as an unlicensed medicine in accordance with the relevant statutory controls, a medicinal product containing melatonin requires a marketing authorisation before it may be lawfully sold or supplied. The status of melatonin under medicines legislation was first considered in 1989. The MHRA is unaware of any implication for public health by the classification of melatonin as a medicinal product. The MHRA refers complaints about the sale and supply of melatonin from the Channel Islands to the relevant regulatory authority.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to stem the flow of direct mail advertising from the Channel Islands offering products banned in the UK and products for which promotional health claims are made that would be illegal in the UK and EU; and if she will make a statement. [123913]

Caroline Flint: There are no specific powers in the medicines legislation administered by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency, an executive agency of the Department or in the Postal Services Act (2000) to control direct mail advertising from the Channel Islands. The legislation administered by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency does not apply to the Channel Islands. The islands have their own legislative assemblies and are responsible for the regulation of activities relating to medicinal products which take place from those Islands. Therefore, any suspected illegal activity is referred to the relevant authority in the Channel Islands for investigation. Advertisements issued from within the Islands would be the responsibility of the relevant authorities within those Islands.

Departments: Business Plans

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department expects to publish its business plan for 2007-08. [124926]

Caroline Flint: The Department of Health intends to publish its Business Plan for 2007-08 by 30 March 2007.

Departments: Databases

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what databases are controlled by her Department and its agencies; and what percentage of the data in each database she estimates is inaccurate or out of date. [124033]

Caroline Flint: Information relating to the number of databases held electronically and controlled by the Department and its agencies is contained in the following table and is listed by:

Department/agency name; and Number of databases controlled.

Databases controlled by Department of Health and its agencies

Department/agency name	Number of databases controlled
Department of Health	974
Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency	47
NHS Connecting for Health	150
NHS Purchasing And Supply Agency	35

The accuracy and currency of the data contained in the Department and its agencies' databases varies according to the business requirement the database is designed to meet. Where the output from a database is intended for publication as a matter of public record (for example, as a report to Parliament or a press statement), every precaution is taken to ensure that that data within the database has been fully validated to ensure the highest achievable levels of accuracy. However, where the data contained is intrinsically dynamic and is not intended for public record (for example, the Department's internal staff location database), a lower degree of accuracy and currency is acceptable to meet business needs.

It is not possible to undertake an estimate for the accuracy and currency of the data contained in each database because of disproportionate cost.

Departments: Marketing

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers she has to examine the (a) veracity, (b) legality and (c) acceptability of claims made by companies outside the UK in their direct marketing to UK consumers; and if she will make a statement. [125351]

Caroline Flint: There are no powers in United Kingdom medicines legislation to require companies using direct marketing to have the claims they wish to make examined by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA). Reports of illegal medicinal products made to the MHRA are investigated regardless of the country of origin. The MHRA examines claims to see whether the product in question is thereby brought within the definition of a medicinal product. The MHRA does not assess the veracity of a claim unless an application for a marketing authorisation is made for a product. If the company is outside the MHRA's jurisdiction it is referred to the relevant regulatory authority.

Diamorphine

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure the safe and secure availability of diamorphine for the treatment of patients with serious or terminal conditions; and if she will make a statement. [122909]

Caroline Flint: Both suppliers of diamorphine to the United Kingdom are working to their full available capacity, and are supplying the market on a regular and frequent basis. They are currently unable to produce enough to meet historic demand, although that demand may have changed due to changes in prescribing practice. We expect the situation to improve during 2007, and in the meantime we believe that through careful prescribing and use of available stocks, patient care is not being compromised. This is in part because we arranged for the increased production and availability of alternative drugs such as morphine when the problem arose in December 2004.

The amount of diamorphine held in the supply chain at any one time varies, according to a number of factors including the manufacturers' production schedules. All presentations are currently available.

Drugs: Misuse

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will (a) increase the number of tier 4 interventions for young people with drug addiction and (b) increase access to services on a regional basis. [121272]

Caroline Flint: The young people's partnership grant for substance misuse has increased significantly year on year since its introduction in 2001. The grant is allocated by the Home Office to local authorities in addition to local mainstream funding for all aspects of the prevention and treatment of substance misuse by young people. A condition of the grant is that local drug partnerships show that they have referral pathways into tier 4 provision for young people. This is performance monitored by Government Office regional teams supported by the National Treatment Agency (NTA).

To support improvements in commissioning tier 4 services the NTA, with the Department and the Home Office, will facilitate the development of regional and sub-regional commissioning models for tier 4 services in 2007-08.

Family Planning

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist family planning clinics there were in each of the last five years. [124019]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

The Department only currently collects aggregate data at primary care trust (PCT) and national health service trust level. As such we cannot identify data on numbers of individual clinics (of which there are many) within these organisations.

Data at PCT and NHS trust level is published in "NHS Contraceptive Services, England 2005-06" and a copy of the latest bulletin has been placed in the Library. The information is also available at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/nhscontraceptiveservseng2005to06

Food: Advertising

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what criteria the Government will use to assess whether the change in the nature and balance of food advertising to children has altered enough to avoid legislation, as set out in the 2004 Choosing Health White Paper; and when she expects that assessment to be published; [126327]

(2) what data the Government hold on the change in the number of advertisements for foods high in fat, salt and sugar seen by children at all times of the day since 2003. [126328]

Caroline Flint: Following Choosing Health, the Government will be assessing whether the new measures introduced in broadcast and non-broadcast media have brought about a real change in the nature and balance of food promotion. An interim review will be conducted in autumn 2007, and we will work with Ofcom and our industry partners on a more detailed review in 2008. On that basis, the Government will decide whether further action, such as legislation, is required.

The Department has commissioned Thompson Intermedia to collect and analyse impact and expenditure data across a broad range of media. This is an ongoing process and the information that we collect will be used to inform the interim review. We are keen to see what measures the food and drink and advertising sectors are taking on a voluntary basis to effect a change in the nature and balance of high fat, salt and sugar product advertising before, and in response to, the interim review.

Food: Hygiene

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Food Hygiene (England) Regulations 2005 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126647]

Caroline Flint: The Food Hygiene (England) Regulations 2005 were replaced from 11 January 2006 by the Food Hygiene (England) Regulations 2006.

The costs arising from the introduction of the European Union (EU) food hygiene regulations on 1 January 2006, to which the Food Hygiene (England) Regulations 2005 gave effect, were detailed in a full Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA), a copy of which is available in the Library.

Subsequent to the publication of the full RIA, it was agreed that enforcement of the EU regulations at farm level will be undertaken in England by local authorities, for which the Food Standards Agency (FSA) has made funds available. The funding arrangements are detailed in a draft RIA, which can be found on the FSA's website at:

www.food.gov.uk/multimedia/pdfs/farmhygieneria.pdf

Food: Labelling

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the (a) one-off and (b) ongoing costs of implementing the Food Labelling (Amendment) (England) (No. 2) Regulations 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126662]

Caroline Flint: The regulatory impact assessment compiled at the time that this regulation was implemented did not identify any additional costs. There was a transitional period of 12 months following the coming into force of the regulations to give businesses time to incorporate any changes needed into the normal commercial re-labelling cycle.

Departmental costs for negotiating, consulting and implementing particular regulations are not broken down. Legislation is enforced by local authorities and the regulatory impact assessment identified possible costs for local authorities of £100,000 per annum.

Health Visitors: Manpower

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitors there were in each English primary care trust in each quarter from Q1 1997 to Q1 2007; and if she will make a statement. [125077]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information has been placed in the Library. Primary care trusts (PCTs) were first introduced in 2001 so we have produced two tables showing health visitors by PCT since 2001 and health visitors by strategic health authority since 1997.

Health visitors are central to a number of Government initiatives and these will act as drivers on the demand for an increased health visitor workforce.

Health: Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the progress in implementing the commitment in her Department's White Paper 'Choosing Health' for health to be a component in regulatory impact assessments of proposed legislation. [127828]

Caroline Flint: As part of the commitment in 'Choosing Health: making healthier choices easier' for health to be a component in regulatory impact assessments (RIA), the Department has successfully provided guidance on health screening and health assessment which is included in the Cabinet Office RIA guidance.

An assessment of the success in implementing this commitment has been made by both the regional directors of public health and the council for science and technology (CST) which show that, while there has been some successful consideration of health, there is still a need for greater consistency. The CST report provides a framework for this.

In May 2006, the Department published the first report showing progress against all choosing health commitments, which is available from its website at www.dh.gov.uk/ChoosingHealth.

The second choosing health progress report will be published in spring 2007.

The Department is continuing to develop relationships with other Government departments to build health into all relevant future legislation.

Herbal Medicine: Regulation

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) discussions she has had with and (b) representations she has received from (i) the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency and (ii) other relevant public bodies on her plans for the future regulation of herbal practitioners. [125369]

Caroline Flint: The Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) is an executive agency of the Department. Ministers have had ongoing discussions with them, as with any other part of the Department.

We have received advice from the independent Herbal Medicines Advisory Committee recommending that statutory regulation of the herbal medicine profession be progressed in order to permit effective reform of the arrangements under s12(l) of the Medicines Act 1968 whereby practitioners prepare unlicensed herbal remedies for use in meeting the needs of individual patients.

We have established a working group chaired by Professor Mike Pittilo to look at the practicalities of regulation of acupuncturists, herbal medicine practitioners and traditional Chinese medicine practitioners. We are awaiting the working group's report and in the light of that we will consider next steps for the way forward.

Heroin

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the potential effect on the health of long-term heroin users of prescription of heroin on the NHS. [126625]

Caroline Flint: In consultation with the Department and other experts in the field, the National Treatment Agency for substance misuse (NTA) published 'Injectable heroin (and injectable methadone), Potential roles in drug treatment' (May 2003), which provides guidance for drug treatment practitioners on injectable heroin in local drug treatment systems.

Substitute prescribing using methadone and buprenorphine is recognised as the recommended treatment for the majority of individuals requiring opiate substitution treatment. For a small number of heroin users who do not respond to other types of substitute prescribing, it is appropriate, when clinically assessed to be the case, to prescribe heroin. Doctors who prescribe heroin to drug misusers require a Home Office licence.

The Home Office is currently funding pilot trials relating to the prescribing of heroin for drug misusers. Full analysis and evaluation of these trials is due to be completed in 2008.

Homeopathy

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimates she has made of the effect on costs to the NHS in 2005-06 of the referral of patients to NHS homeopathic facilities; [125808]

(2) which London primary care trusts fund GP referrals to NHS homeopathic facilities. [125809]

Caroline Flint: Provision of complementary and alternative therapies on the national health service are a matter for primary care trusts and local NHS service providers. The Government considers that decision making on individual clinical interventions, whether these are conventional, complementary or alternative, are for local determination. The cost-effectiveness, efficacy, safety and availability of suitably qualified practitioners are all factors that have to be considered when these decisions are being made.

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance she has issued to primary care trusts on provision of the option of access to homeopathy care and treatment in the NHS; and what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the use of homeopathic treatment to control rheumatoid arthritis. [127229]

Caroline Flint: The Government consider that decision-making on individual clinical interventions, whether conventional or complementary/alternative treatments, have to be a matter for local national health service providers and practitioners as they are best placed to know their community's needs. In making such decisions, they have to take into account evidence for the safety, clinical and cost-effectiveness of any treatments, the availability of suitably qualified practitioners, and the needs of the individual patient. Clinical responsibility rests with the NHS professional who makes the decision to refer and who must therefore be able to justify any treatment they recommend. If they are unconvinced about the suitability of a particular treatment, they cannot be made to refer.

To support policy and the delivery of effective practice in the NHS, research is commissioned through a number of national programmes that are open to everyone and priorities are set through widespread consultation.

Hospital Beds: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many respite beds are available in each London borough; and what the (a) average and (b) maximum waiting period is for respite beds in each London borough. [125857]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Hospitals: Admissions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were admitted to NHS hospitals for (a) drug-related and (b) alcohol-related illnesses and injuries in each strategic health authority area in each year between 2002 and 2006. [126075]

Caroline Flint: It is not possible to identify the exact number of patients admitted to national health service hospitals for alcohol and drug related illnesses. Illnesses can be caused by or can be affected by drug and/or alcohol misuse but we are not able to indicate this with all cases. Drug and alcohol misuse related illnesses are not defined within one specific hospital diagnosis code.

National data from codes of primary diagnosis, which indicate the reason for a patient's admission to hospital is either drug or alcohol related are in the following tables.

Notes:
Finished admission episodes
A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
Diagnosis (Primary Diagnosis)
The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (7 prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episodes Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
Ungrossed Data
Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).
Data Quality
Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) are compiled from data sent by over 300 NHS trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) in England. The Information Centre for health and social care liaises this brings about improvement over time, some shortcomings remain.

Hospitals: Infectious Diseases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of a link between contract cleaning services and levels of hospital-acquired infections in hospitals; when the assessment was made; and if she will make a statement. [123066]

Caroline Flint: Recent information suggests that there is currently no difference between in-house and out-sourced cleaning.

We have also studied the link between cleanliness and healthcare associated infections (HCAI) as measured by Metcillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) and Clostridium difficile rates. Again, we found no evidence of a relationship with out-sourcing.

Current contract guidance makes it clear that quality must be considered alongside cost when deciding how to provide cleaning services.

Hyperactivity: Drugs

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions for drugs to treat attention deficit hyperactivity disorder were issued in each year since 1997-98. [127831]

Caroline Flint: We do not hold data on the total number of prescriptions for drugs used to treat attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). Information on the number of prescription items relating to drugs mainly associated with the treatment of ADHD and dispensed in the community in England is in the following table.

	Number of prescription items (000)

In Vitro Fertilisation

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department gives to primary care trusts on the implementation of National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines in relation to the number of IVF cycles that should be made available and funded through the NHS. [128434]

Caroline Flint: The primary responsibility for the provision of fertility services rests with the national health service at the local level. In welcoming the clinical guideline published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence in 2004, we advised that the Department would be looking to primary care trusts (PCTs) who provide no in vitro fertilisation (IVF) treatment to provide a minimum national level of provision of one cycle of IVF by April 2005, and to make progress to the full implementation of the guideline in the longer term. We are funding the patient support organisation Infertility Network UK to help PCTs share best practice in the provision of fertility services and engage with fertility patients in the planning and prioritisation of services.

Insulin

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to submit a request to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to undertake a comparison of the different types of insulin in its future work programme. [122679]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has issued technology appraisals of inhaled insulin, insulin pump therapy and long acting insulin analogues in the management of diabetes. NICE has also published a clinical guideline on the management of type 1 diabetes and a guideline on the management of type 2 diabetes—blood glucose. These guidelines include advice on the role of insulin in managing those conditions. NICE is currently reviewing its published clinical guidelines on type 2 diabetes and expects to publish a revised guideline in early 2008.

We have no plans at this time to ask NICE to undertake a comparison of different types of insulin, but the need for further NICE guidance on aspects of the management of diabetes will be kept under review.

Local Government Targets

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets her Department sets for local authorities. [104907]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "National Standards, Local Action; Health and Social Care Standards and Planning Framework 2005-06 to 2007-08", published in July 2004, set out a standard-based planning framework for health and social care and standards for national health service health care to be used in planning, commissioning and delivering services.

The standards set out are focused on the provision of NHS health care, but recognise the need to develop services in a co-ordinated way, taking full account of the responsibilities of other agencies in providing comprehensive care. In particular the statutory duties of partnership on all NHS bodies and local authorities established under the Health Act 1999 and the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003. This introduced requirements on both the NHS and local authorities to work together to achieve the co-operation needed to bring about improvements in health care.

The following specific targets for 2005 to 2008 were set for local authority social services and social services in partnership with the NHS:

> improve the quality of life and independence of vulnerable older people by supporting them to live in their own homes where possible by:
> increasing the proportion of older people being supported to live in their own home by 1 per cent. annually in 2007 and 2008; and > increasing by 2008 the proportion of those supported intensively to live at home to 34 per cent. of the total of those being supported at home or in residential care.
> increase the participation of problem drug users in drug treatment programmes by 100 per cent. by 2008 (from a 1998 baseline); and increase year on year the proportion of users successfully sustaining or completing treatment programmes; and although measured through NHS indicators, social services provide a major contribution to > improve health outcomes for people with long-term conditions by offering a personalised care plan for vulnerable people most at risk; and to reduce emergency bed days by 5 per cent. by 2008 (from the expected 2003-04 baseline), through improved care in primary care and community settings for people with long-term conditions.

Maternity Services

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many episodes of maternity care there were in (a) consultant-led units with more than 3,000 live births per year, (b) consultant-led units with fewer than 3,000 live births per year, (c) midwife-led units in acute hospital settings and (d) midwife-led units in community settings in each of the last three years; [126388]

(2) how many deaths of women in the care of NHS maternity services there were in each of the last three years; and how many occurred in (a) consultant-led units with more than 3,000 live births per year, (b) consultant-led units with fewer than 3,000 live births per year, (c) midwife-led units in acute hospital settings and (d) midwife-led units in community settings. [126390]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 9 March 2007]: This information is not collected centrally in the form requested. Data from the Office of National Statistics shows that in 2002, the last year for which information is available, there were 596,122 live births, of which 582,569 took place in hospital, 12,684 took place at home and 869 took place elsewhere.

Confidential enquiry into maternal and child health (CEMACH)'s report on maternal death for the three year period 2000 to 2002 showed that there were 106 direct maternal deaths in that period, representing 5.3 deaths per thousand of the two million births. It is not possible to break these figures down by place of delivery.

Medical Records: Databases

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many electronic patient records she expects there to be; and how many she expects to have (a) sealed and (b) sealed and locked data on them. [119873]

Caroline Flint: In the future, each person using the national health service will have an electronic NHS care record which will be made up of detailed care records, held locally by the NHS body that provides care to the patient, and a summary care record. At the local level detailed care records will be built up over time into a comprehensive health and care history.

The objective of sealing, and sealing and locking information is to reduce the number of people who might otherwise feel the need to opt-out completely of having a summary care record because of their concern about only a small amount of sensitive information in their record. It will be open to any patient to ask to limit access to such information, including to request that specific sensitive information is accessible only with their consent. The sealed envelopes approach has the confidence of the professions in being able to provide appropriate controls for the support of patient confidentiality.

It is not possible to predict with any certainty how many people may in future choose to exercise this option as this will be the first time such an approach has ever been used. However, there is ample evidence to suggest that only a small minority would have concerns about the content of their medical records that would lead to their choosing to seal information. In response to a Consumer Association Survey (October 2002) question on this subject 60 per cent. of respondents said that they would remove nothing, around a quarter (24 per cent.) said they would remove a little, and around four per cent, said they would remove "a lot" or "all".

This is paralleled by the available evidence about the likelihood of people to opt out of having a summary care record at all. The Scottish emergency care summary, which extracts data from general practitioners' records and hospital notes, currently contains records for nearly 4.93 million patients and less than 500 have opted out. Similarly, in the course of a consultation on establishing an electronic health record in the Wirral, of patients invited to opt out if they had concerns, only 25 opted out whilst 350,000 records were uploaded. And of the 1.3 million patients likely to be affected by a similar proposal in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, only some 1,150 decided not to have their records included in the data repository.

Midwives: Training

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many training places there were for midwives in each health region in England in each of the last three years. [124384]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information has been placed in the Library.

Missing Persons

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2007, Official Report, column 428W, on missing persons, what bilateral contact her Department has had with other stakeholders represented on the missing persons strategic oversight group in the last two years; on what dates these contacts took place; and with whom they took place. [128783]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 20 March 2007]: Departmental officials have met with representatives of the police, the Home Office and the National Missing Persons Helpline a number of times over the past year. Most recently, officials met with representatives of the National Missing Persons Helpline on 22 November 2006. Details of other meetings are not centrally available.

MRSA

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library information she has on the incidence rates of MRSA in other (a) EU and (b) World Health Organisation member states; and what comparative assessment she has made of rates in those countries and in the UK. [126514]

Caroline Flint: The best European data are from the European antimicrobial resistance surveillance system (EARSS) database. This provides information only as a proportion of Staphylococcus aureus bloodstream infections that are resistant to meticillin.

A copy of the 2005 EARSS annual report has been placed in the Library and is available at:

It is difficult to compare different European countries as health services and surveillance systems differ. There is no overall trend but increases have been seen in some member states. However, our figures show that we need to reduce meticillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) cases and tackling MRSA and other healthcare associated infections (HCAIs), continues to be a priority. We have introduced a number of interventions to help the national health service. Between April 2003 and March 2004 and October 2005 to September 2006, there has been a 10.2 per cent. reduction in the 12-month rolling total. This shows that our actions are having a significant effect.

The World Health Organisation does not compile information on MRSA.

MRSA: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people contracted MRSA in hospitals in Lancashire in each of the last five years. [125168]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available as requested

The best available information is from the mandatory methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections surveillance that began in April 2001 and covers acute trusts in England.

The number of reported MRSA blood stream infections for national health service acute trusts within Lancashire is shown in the following table. The surveillance protocol requires all trusts to report MRSA positive blood cultures detected in their laboratories, whether acquired in the trust or elsewhere and these should include samples sent to the trust from other NHS run healthcare facilities. The cases recorded in the tables may not therefore have all been contracted in hospitals in Lancashire.

The departmental figures relate to national research programme expenditure. They do not include expenditure in the areas of human health concerned from the research and development allocations made annually to national health service providers. That information is not held centrally.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is one of the main agencies through which the Government support biomedical research. The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Innovation.

NHS: Drugs

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medicines were reclassified from prescription-only status to over-the-counter status in each year since 2002-03; and whether it remains her policy to aim for 10 such reclassifications to take place in any given year. [123131]

Caroline Flint: The NHS plan committed the Government to making more medicines available over-the-counter, where it is safe to do so. In response, the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) implemented a new streamlined reclassification procedure in April 2002 and took forward an agenda on switching to encompass not just acute, short term, self limiting conditions but to new areas of chronic disease management.

Over-the-counter medicines include both those supplied by a pharmacist and those on general sale (GSL) available through outlets such as supermarkets. The number of marketing authorisations where the legal status has been changed from POM (prescription-only medicine) to pharmacy or from pharmacy to GSL for each complete year since 2002-03 is presented in the following table. It is noted there may be more than one new switch application for the same substance. Also many applications follow on from the initial change of legal status of the medicine.

	POM to pharmacy	Pharmacy toGSL	Total
2002-03	2	7	9
2003-04	5	12	17
2004-05	2	9	11
2005-06	3	6	9

Recent significant switches into new therapeutic areas include the first statin (simvastatin) to reduce risk of heart disease, a triptan (sumatriptan) for migraine, and an eye drop treatment (chloramphenicol) for infection. A consultation to extend reclassification to the eye ointment has also completed, and there is progress with new consultations into further therapeutic areas.

In February 2007, the MHRA led an important initiative to move forward the debate on widening access to medicines for women's health. A seminar supported by stakeholders and experts in the field of women's health explored the benefits and challenges associated with switches in this area. An important consultation on the reclassification of tranexamic acid for treatment of heavy menstrual bleeding was announced at this meeting.

It remains Government policy to promote widening the availability of medicines within the patient choice agenda, recognising the challenges ahead with moves into new areas, and the aim for such classifications to take place each year is reflected within the MHRA business plan.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) drugs and (b) treatments are not available on NHS prescriptions in England that are available in other parts of the UK. [123590]

Caroline Flint: English general practitioners are able to prescribe any drug/treatment on the national health service unless it is listed in Schedules 1 or 2 to the national health service (General Medical Services Contracts) (Prescription of Drugs etc.) Regulations 2004.

These lists are replicated in Parts XVIIIA and XVIIIB of the drug tariff, copies of which are available in the Library.

Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales have similar arrangements backed up by their own legislation. A detailed comparison of the content of the respective lists could be possible only at disproportionate cost.

When a patient is being treated in hospital a consultant can arrange for the supply of any drug or other substance, even one not normally available on NHS prescription, provided the primary care trust or NHS trust: agree to supply it at NHS expense.

NHS: ICT

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statutory responsibilities (a) she and (b) the NHS Director of IT has in the sale of (i) any NHS IT supplier and (ii) iSoft. [119555]

Caroline Flint: There are no specific statutory responsibilities attaching to the role of Director General for National Health Service Information Technology (NHS IT). Those of my right hon. Friend do not extend to the sale of commercial information technology companies.

However, contracts let under the national programme for IT, for which the Director General for NHS IT is responsible within the Department, contain contractual rights covering, for example, adverse changes in control which allow the NHS to refuse to continue to use those services if the purchaser of an existing NHS IT supplier were deemed inappropriate.

Through the national programme contract with its local service provider CSC, these provisions also apply in respect of iSoft as a subcontractor to CSC. The position of iSoft is being monitored both directly and in concert with CSC.

These provisions represent a considerable improvement on historic contracting arrangements for protecting the interests of the NHS in its procurement of IT goods and services.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which clinical specialists have been removed on a temporary basis as options on the Choose and Book IT system for general practitioners in Bedfordshire in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [122827]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her statement whether her Department has had to revise any of the (a) costs incurred and (b) total expected contract cost over five years of the choose and book computer systems referred to in the answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, columns 63-64W, on the choose and book system. [123753]

Caroline Flint: The expected core contract costs have not changed, and no revision has been required. The total of costs incurred naturally increases over time as the choose and book system continues to be rolled out across the national health service. As at the end of January 2007,these were £34.6 million for core contract system development and related service charges. A further £39.7 million has been spent on the additional services and additional functionality that the original choose and book business case envisaged were likely to be required as the system is rolled out.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the national programme for IT in the NHS will be launched; [123970]

(2) what projection she has made of the total implementation cost of the national programme for IT in the NHS. [123117]

Caroline Flint: The first elements of the national health service care records service, to provide a transaction messaging service, a personal demographics service, a spine directory service and secure access controls via smartcards, went live on time and to budget in July 2004. Since then very substantial progress has been, and continues to be, made and the NHS is already effectively dependent on systems and services delivered through the national programme for the diagnosis and treatment of patients. Over 38 million patients can now benefit from Choose and Book, and over 2.7 million bookings have been made to date, with daily bookings now exceeding 18,000. Over 13.5 million prescription messages have been issued electronically, with the daily count exceeding 100,000. 73 picture archiving and communications systems have been implemented, and around 160,000 patients are treated each week using the technology. Through the new national broadband network (N3), 98 per cent. of general practitioners practices now have a broadband connection. NHS mail currently has over 230,000 registered users, each with an email address for life, sending a million e-mails per day.

The national programme is being delivered by the Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency. The value of contracts let for the core components of the programme amounts to £6.2 billion over 10 years. The National Audit Office have calculated that the full gross cost of the programme including national contracts and legitimately approved additions, other central expenditure, and local implementation costs is some £12.4 billion at 2004-05 prices. However, this figure does not take into account anticipated savings in the price paid by the NHS for information technology goods and services due to the central buying power of NHS Connecting for Health, or in NHS staff time saved through using the programme's systems and services. The National Audit Office also acknowledge an independent evaluation that confirms that £4.5 billion has been saved by central rather than local procurement, and also acknowledges a further £860 million of savings achieved through centrally negotiated enterprise wide arrangements.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts have bought new computer services outside the NHS national programme for IT during the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [123989]

Caroline Flint: The information is not collected centrally. In addition to the clinical systems and services being delivered under the national programme for information technology, national health service organisations have always been responsible locally for meeting their wider information technology (IT) needs, including for non-clinical services such as human resources and finance IT systems.

Systems deployed under the national programme are, however, already in place in every NHS trust, supporting access to care when and where it is convenient, reducing the numbers of failed appointments, improving the accuracy and handling of prescriptions and facilitating the capture, storage and transmission of X-rays and digital images so they are available to clinicians when and where needed. In addition, over 16,000 local systems, with well over 300,000 users, have now been delivered across the NHS by the programme's five local service providers supporting accident and emergency units, hospital theatres, mental health and pathology services, and many others.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the costs of (a) the Personal Demographic Service, (b) the Personal Spine Information Service, (c) the Transaction Messaging Service, (d) the Secondary Uses Services, (e) the Clinical Spine Application, (f) the Spine Directory Service and (g) the access control framework; and what the projected costs are in each year until implementation is complete for each. [123997]

Caroline Flint: The spine is the colloquial name given to the national database of key information about patients' health and care. It forms the core of the national health service care records service (NHS CRS). It also supports other key elements of the national programme for information technology, such as choose and book, the electronic prescriptions service (EPS), and 'GP to GP' record transfer, each of them using the spine's messaging capabilities as part of their own services.

The contract to set up and operate the spine under the national programme for information technology in the national health service is held by BT. Accounting information does not separately identify costs incurred in respect of the individual spine applications, and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Up to 31 December 2006 total expenditure under the contract amounted to £310.7 million, made up of £232.8 million in set-up costs, and £77.9 million in revenue costs. Set-up (capital) costs are incurred in phases as functionality is added to the spine through staged software releases over the implementation period. The ongoing service (revenue) costs average around £45 million a year, although this will fall in a range between £30-60 million in any particular year. These sums are in line with the contracted value of the work concerned, which is some £620 million over nine years.

On a typical working day the spine database is accessed by around 50,000 authenticated unique users, and processes; approximately 1.3 million personal demographic service queries, 16,000 choose and book bookings, and over 100,000 electronic prescription messages.

Growth in these volumes is rising dramatically with the increase in functionality across the NHS CRS and continuing roll out of the various elements of the system. The spine is already the world's biggest structured healthcare messaging system whose cost represents an investment of no more than about one pound per NHS patient per year over the life of the contract.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the compatibility of the new NHS IT system with hospitals' present IT systems. [124000]

Caroline Flint: Existing national health service information technology (IT) systems and databases are typically incompatible with each other. They have frequently been designed around the specific requirements of individual NHS organisations, and therefore do not support the transfer of information, sometimes even within a single trust, or elsewhere in the NHS. These shortcomings can result in clinical decisions taken on the basis of incomplete or inaccurate information leading to suboptimal quality of care, avoidable inconvenience to patients and doctors, and additional administrative costs.

By contrast, the defining characteristic of the national programme for IT is provision of fully integrated systems that are interoperable, and ensure transmissibility of patient data across organisational boundaries. The national infrastructure will also speed up and make more certain the processes of identifying and contacting patients. This is becoming increasingly important as care becomes de-centralised from hospitals and takes place closer to, and in, patients' homes.

More than 50 existing systems from a range of care settings—general practice, acute hospitals, independent sector providers, and community pharmacies—have already been accredited to interact with national programme services such as choose and book, the electronic prescription service, the secondary uses service, and the general practice electronic records transfer system. The necessary development and upgrading of these existing systems has been coordinated by the existing systems programme of the Department's NHS Connecting for Health Agency.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate has been made of how long it will take hospitals to transfer all information from their present IT systems onto the new NHS IT system. [124001]

Caroline Flint: Deployment of new hospital systems under the national programme for information technology involves several key stages between initial preparation for implementation through to go live, during which a number of important organisational and technical activities have to be completed, including planning, training, testing and clinical safety assessments. All the stages in the run-up to completion of go live involve some transfer of data from legacy systems to local service provider systems, though legacy systems remain live and in service until the process is complete. These arrangements are quite typical of major information technology systems deployments in both the public and private sectors.

The process will normally take several weeks, involving anything between 0.5 million and up to 10 million records. The time scale in each particular case is dependent on a number of factors, largely to do with the size of the trust and any complexities identified during data migration. These might include difficulties in collating data from legacy systems, or the need to incorporate specific local requirements late in the process of implementation.

Systems deployed under the national programme are now in place in every acute trust, and in some 98 per cent. of general practices. Almost 17,000 systems have now been delivered with around 330,000 national health service users. New systems are supplied every week: to support one or more of patient administration, theatre management, accident and emergency and mental health unit, ambulance services, pathology services, and many more.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of their budget each hospital is expected to spend implementing the new NHS IT system; and what assessment has been made of the impact of implementing the new NHS IT system on hospital budgets. [124002]

Caroline Flint: There is no specific numerical target for year-on-year spending by national health service organisations on local implementation of the national programme for information technology. Each NHS organisation is free, and expected, to use its resources in the way that delivers the best possible value for money. However, evidence from the Department's most recent (2006) survey of investment in information management and technology in the NHS shows that the combined total of current and predicted future local NHS and central spending reflects significant progress towards the level anticipated in the 2002 Wanless Report "Securing our Future Health" as being necessary to deliver the breadth and quality of healthcare services envisaged in the report. Detailed information from the 2006 survey is available in the Library.

Any costs associated with implementation of the national programme locally are very significantly outweighed by the savings accrued from participation in the programme. Most notably, an independent industry analysis has concluded that some £4.5 billion has been saved by aggregate central procurement rather than local procurement, a figure confirmed by independent industry analysts. In addition, savings have been achieved in the prices paid by the NHS for information technology goods and services due to the central buying power of NHS Connecting for Health, as well as in NHS staff time saved through using the programme's systems and services. The National Audit Office have acknowledged savings of £860 million achieved through centrally-negotiated enterprise wide arrangements.

The national programme was not mentioned among a list of possible factors contributing to NHS deficits in 2004-05 in the June 2006 joint National Audit Office/Audit Commission report on financial management in the NHS.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made of alternatives to a central database for storing patient records; [123999]

(2) whether an assessment has been carried out of (a) the implications and cost of removing the NHS spine system and (b) the impact of doing so on existing (i) patient care and (ii) patient records. [123998]

Caroline Flint: The alternative to a central database for patient records has existed and continues to exist in the status quo prior to the inception of the national programme for information technology. It is characterised by information technology (IT) that does not support the transfer of information between systems, encourages the creation of multiple records for the same patient within a single organisation, tolerates the loss and delay of records during their slow transit by hand, the unavailability of key information when needed, and the compromise of security and confidentiality of patient data. These shortcomings regularly result in clinical decisions taken on the basis of incomplete or inaccurate information, suboptimal quality of care, avoidable inconvenience to patients and doctors, and additional administrative costs.

Running the national health service on that basis would have an enormous negative impact on both the quality and cost of care including medication errors; patient procedures being cancelled due to lost X-ray films; out-patient appointments not being kept because patients have little or no say over their date and time; and, because records cannot be located, countless patients being subjected to unnecessary repeat diagnostic procedures, and hundreds of millions of pounds a year to be wasted on uncontested clinical negligence claims.

As for costs, as a result of the national programme some £4.5 billion has been saved by aggregate central procurement of systems rather than local procurement, and a further £860 million of savings achieved through centrally negotiated enterprise-wide arrangements. Before the national programme, money was devolved locally for investment against agreed national targets for electronic health records systems, an arrangement which both the National Audit Office and the Public Accounts Committee have severely criticised because the money was often not spent as intended, but diverted to meet other NHS priorities.

The national programme, with the spine database at its core, is not just about IT. It is a transformation programme for the NHS that will underpin system reform. Only a ubiquitous, effective, national IT system of the kind it is putting in place across the NHS can deliver key reforms such as patient choice, the 18-week referral to treatment patient pathway, whilst at the same time retaining flexibility to adapt to, and adopt, future policy.

NHS: Negligence

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many claims for clinical negligence there were against the NHS in each year since 1995; and what percentage of these claims were successful in each year; [123145]

(2) what the total cost to the NHS was of successful claims for clinical negligence in each year since 1995-96 in (a) nominal and (b) real terms. [123146]

Andy Burnham: The following table shows how many claims there have been under the clinical negligence scheme for trusts (CNST) in each year since 1995, what percentage were successful , and the amounts paid out to date in nominal and real terms. The year is based upon the year that the incident was reported to have occurred.

[1] Category A claims are those that fell within the excess claim limit and were handled by individual trusts before the excess was removed in 2002.

[2] Claims have been considered in the year that the incident occurred Additional points to note:

Claims may still be made for incidents that have yet to be reported within the stated years.

Successful claims are those claims that have been settled with damages, including claims which are still open due to legal costs being unresolved or where periodic payments are being made. This means that the costs for those claims will rise over time and therefore the figure will increase.

Category A claims were handled by individual trusts and reported to the NHS Litigation Authority. Therefore, the NHS Litigation Authority cannot 100 per cent. validate the accuracy of the data around these claims as the data were not: produced by the NHS Litigation Authority.

NHS: Pay

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what average pay per head of NHS staff in England was in each year since 1997; and what the average paybill per head was for each NHS organisation in England in the latest year for which figures are available. [123147]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information has been placed in the Library.

Table 1 shows average paybill per full-time equivalent and average earnings per full-time equivalent for national health service staff in England between 1996-97 and 2005-06. Tables 2a to 2c show average paybill per full-time equivalent by NHS organisation in 2005-06.

NHS: Pensions

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated total staff pensions liability is of the NHS Pensions Agency. [123375]

Caroline Flint: Total long-term liabilities of the NHS pension scheme accrued to date, and projected until the death of the last current contributing, deferred and pensioner members, were estimated at £165.4 billion pounds in the resource accounts for 2005-06, spread over approximately 80 years. Gross expenditure on benefits in 2005-06, met through scheme employer and member contributions was £3.78 billion.

Nitrous Oxide

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prosecutions there have been since 1977 under section 52 of the Medicines Act 1968 for the sale of nitrous oxide; and if she will make a statement. [124761]

Caroline Flint: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency reports that since 1995 there has been one prosecution involving the sale of nitrous oxide.

There are no records held prior to this date.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the availability of nitrous oxide for recreational use in nightclubs and bars; and what assessment she has made of the health effects of inhalation of nitrous oxide. [126628]

Caroline Flint: Inhaling nitrous oxide produces a rush caused by oxygen starvation which may result in unconsciousness. There are also thought to be long term effects on the nervous system. All of these risks are likely to be exacerbated if the drug is combined with alcohol or other narcotics. The risks are particularly severe for pregnant women.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) has been alerted to increasing reports that nitrous oxide is available for sale in pubs and nightclubs. A number of reports have come from Trading Standards departments within local councils. Local authorities are responsible for the licensing of premises in the pub and nightclub sector.

Officials from MHRA have met with representatives from Local Authority Co-ordinator of Regulatory Services and Trading Standards (LACORS) to discuss the extent of the problem and to explore ways of tackling it. A strategy has been agreed involving joint action by MHRA and Trading Standards.

MHRA is also contacting manufacturers of nitrous oxide and investigating how supplies come to enter the recreational market.

Nutrition

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to revise the nutrient profiling model used by the Food Standards Agency. [126261]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency will review impact of agency nutrient profiling model after one year of use. The review process will include a consultative stage.

Obesity: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in Lancashire under the age of 12 years were classified as (a) obese and (b) overweight in each of the last five years. [126220]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the format requested. Data on obesity and overweight prevalence by Government office region (GOR) are available from the Health Survey for England (HSE). However, due to small sample sizes in each year, data cannot be provided for each of the last five years. The most recent available information which can be provided by GOR combines information from the 2002, 2003 and 2004 HSE to achieve a sufficiently large sample for analysis at this level.

Prevalence of overweight and obesity among children in the North West Government office region (GOR), by age, 2002-04

Percentage/number

	Overweight including obese	Obese
Aged 2-10	27.2	14.4
Aged 11-15	35.6	20.8
Aged 2-15	30.4	16.8

Aged 2-10	1,021	1,021
Aged 11-15	634	634
Aged 2-15	1,655	1,655

1. Data are aggregated over the three years, 2002, 2003 and 2004 to achieve a sufficiently large sample for analyse at this level.
2. Unweighted figures are raw unadjusted figures.
3. Weighted figures are adjusted for child selection only and not non-response.

Patients: Databases

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the security implications of housing patient data in a central database. [123990]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my right hon. Friend the Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith) on 13 December 2006, Official Report, column 1178W.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which (a) Government agencies and (b) other public bodies will have access to a centrally held NHS patient database; [123991]

(2) what arrangements are being put in place to ensure that patients have access to their records for the purpose of allowing mistakes to be discovered and corrected. [123993]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Lynne Featherstone) on 29 November 2006, Official Report, column 799W.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are in place to allow patients to opt-out of the centrally held NHS database; and what the conditions for opt-out are. [123992]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. O'Brien) on 14 March 2007, Official Report, column 441W.

Plastic Surgery

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to regulate the use of dermal fillers. [117965]

Caroline Flint: Most dermal fillers used in the United Kingdom are regulated as medical devices under the Medical Devices Regulations 2002, as amended. CE-marking of a product under the Medical Devices Directive denotes that the risks are outweighed by the benefits expected from its use for the medical purpose intended by the manufacturer.

Prescriptions: Fees and Charges

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish the findings of her Department's review of prescription charges; who is undertaking the review; whether third-party organisations are contributing to the review; whether she plans to consult on the results of the review; and if she will make a statement. [124981]

Caroline Flint: The Government said in its response to the Health Select Committee's Report on national health service charges, that the Department would undertake a review of the current exemptions for prescription charges and put forward options that would be expenditure neutral for the NHS. We have undertaken to report the outcome of the review to Parliament before the summer recess 2007.

The Department welcomes comments on possible options for changing the current prescription charge arrangements from all organisations that wish to make representations. We will consider the next steps once the outcome of the review has been submitted to Parliament.

Smoking: Housing

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Smoke Free (Exemptions and Vehicles) Regulations 2007 will apply to privately owned houses (a) when they are being used for public purposes and (b) when in private use. [127250]

Caroline Flint: Where a privately owned house is used as a private dwelling, regulation three will exempt the dwelling from the smoke-free provisions of the Health Act, except any part of it which is shared or used exclusively for work in the circumstances set out in that regulation.

However, regulation three needs to be considered in the context of Section 2 of the Health Act 2006. That section requires only public and work places to be smoke-free and it provides that where public places are not also work places, they are only required to be smoke-free when they are open to the public. Work in this context includes voluntary work.

Sunitinib

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the licensed drug Sunitinib is available on NHS prescription. [126264]

Caroline Flint: Sunitinib (sutent) is licensed for use in the treatment of renal cell carcinoma and gastrointestinal stomal tumour and is available on national health service prescription.

The Department is currently considering referring Sunitinib to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) for appraisal. Guidance issued by the Department makes it clear that it is not acceptable for NHS organisations to refuse to fund a treatment simply because if has not been appraised by NICE.

WALES

Departments: Consultants

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Department and its agencies have made payments to (a) Solutions in Staffing and Software and (b) SThree in each year since 1997. [129330]

Mr. Hain: No.

DEFENCE

Ammunition

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much ammunition was allocated on all courses involved in the training of artillery personnel and forward observation officers to call in fire in each year since 2001; what the cost of this ammunition was; and if he will make a statement. [128190]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The quantity and cost of the 105 mm and 155 mm artillery ammunition allocated and fired at the Royal School of Artillery, Larkhill, and the number of personnel trained, in Support of Phase 3 training is as follows:

Year[1]	Quantity	Cost (£ million)
2001-02	35,887	23.2
2002-03	22,266	15.2
2003-04	20,541	16.5
2004-05	19,268	16.5
2005-06	19,169	16.1
2006-07[2]	19,979	14.0

[1] The year runs from 1 April to 31 March.

[2] The 2006-07 figures include approximately 1,000 rounds remaining this financial year which will be fired before 1 April 2007 and 6,000 marker rounds which were at the end of their shelf life. These marker rounds were fired in lieu of being destroyed and as a result, £3.1 million was saved from the initial budget allocation of £17.1 million.

Armed Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people working in his Department previously served in the armed forces. [128325]

Derek Twigg: A total of 600 (rounded to the nearest 10) retired officers were working for the Department as at 1 January 2007. This figure is the best estimate available from centrally held records, but may not include all ex-service personnel working for the Department.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people working for his Department are members of the territorial forces. [128326]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which companies financed the Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme in each of the last five financial years; and how much was contributed by each. [128643]

Derek Twigg: We are profoundly grateful to the sponsors of the Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme (BAE Systems, Rolls-Royce, AugustaWestland and their predecessors). Since 2002 each has contributed an average of £40,500 per year to the scheme. We are also grateful to Sir Neil Thorne for the very considerable moral and financial support he has lent the scheme since its inception in 1989.

Armed Forces: Cadets

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cadets there were in (a) the Army Cadet Force and (b) the Air Training Corps in each year since 1999-2000. [128824]

Derek Twigg: The following table provides the number of cadets[1] in the Army Cadet Force and Air Training Corps from 1 April 1999 to 1 April 2006.

[1] Figures are for Army and Air Cadets only. Figures do not include officers/instructors or single service elements of the Combined Cadet Force.

As at 1 April each year	Army Cadet Force	Air Training Corps
1999	40,530	33,300
2000	42,760	34,280
2001	40,570	33,180
2002	40,700	34,050
2003	43,550	34,650
2004	44,240	33,190
2005	44,050	31,470
2006	44,390	30,170

Armed Forces: Complaints

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in setting up an independent complaints commissioner for the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [128275]

Derek Twigg: The recruitment process for the position of Service Complaints Commissioner will begin shortly.

Armed Forces: Dogs

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military dogs are in service in the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy, (c) Royal Air Force and (d) Ministry of Defence Police; and what the annual cost is of feeding those dogs. [127983]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: There are currently 998 operational military working dogs in the armed forces and military police, comprising 467 in the Army, 272 in the RAF, none in the Royal Navy, and 259 in the Ministry of Defence Police.

The annual cost of feeding the dogs is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces: Fire Services

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training members of the armed forces are receiving to use modern fire appliances in the event of a fire-fighter strike. [129240]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1539W, to the hon. Member for Newark (Patrick Mercer).

Armed Forces: Officers

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many senior (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force officers who attended the higher command staff course in each year from 2003 to 2006 remained in service 12 months later. [127717]

Derek Twigg: In each service, all the officers attending the higher command staff course in 2003, 2004 and 2005 remained in service 12 months later, with the exception of army officers attending in 2003, when fewer than five officers left within 12 months.

Of the attendees in 2006, all remain in service nine months later at 1 January 2007.

Armed Forces: South Africa

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel serving in the armed forces are UK-South African dual nationals. [128181]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: On 6 October 2006 there were 35 UK regular naval service personnel with UK/South African dual nationality.

At 6 March 2006 there were five UK Regular RAF personnel with UK-South African dual nationality.

The number of Army personnel with UK-South African dual nationality is not known.

Armed Forces: Training

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of his Department's rules and regulations which govern the operation of the safety for joint service adventurous training scheme. [128811]

Derek Twigg: Yes. A copy of Joint Service Publication 419 will be placed in the Library of the House. The publication includes the rules and regulations for the safe operation of the joint service adventurous training scheme.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128245]

Des Browne: The MOD dispatches relatively little mail externally. Official mail within the Department is primarily distributed by the internal Defence Mail Service, provided by the British Forces Post Office, while mail for personnel serving overseas is usually distributed by RAF air transport. Most external mail is sent through the Royal Mail Group, or, exceptionally through other approved carriers. The names of these carriers are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ex-servicemen

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department takes to assist service personnel discharged from the three armed forces on medical grounds to (a) achieve the maximum fitness and mobility possible and (b) assist in securing alternative employment. [127363]

Derek Twigg: Health care for service personnel is provided by Defence Medical Services. Treatment aims to assist injured service personnel to recover the best level of fitness and mobility possible. If medical discharge is appropriate, it will only be used as a last resort. Once they leave the armed forces, responsibility for their health care passes to the NHS and there are processes in place to assist the smooth transition from DMS to NHS treatment. If a veteran is also a war pensioner, he or she will be entitled to priority NHS treatment for the accepted condition(s). priority is decided by the clinician in charge and is subject to clinical need.

Those who are medically discharged from the armed forces are entitled to the full resettlement programme (FRP) offered within the MOD's resettlement package, provided by the Career Transition Partnership (CTP), irrespective of their length of service[1]. The FRP includes briefings, workshops, individual counselling, coaching, CV preparation and analysis of transferable competences, job finding, and conversion and skills enhancement training. All discharged personnel remain on the CTP books for two years after discharge. Thereafter, the Regular Forces Employment Association (RFEA) and the Officers' Association (OA) offer ex-service personnel support for the rest of their working lives. The RFEA and OA are particularly concerned with job-finding activities, and are sub-contractors on the CTP contract.

To help achieve the Department's aim of a successful return to civilian life for ex-service personnel, whether medically discharged or not, the CTP offers at its resettlement training centre (RTC) at Aldershot around 40 job-related courses. Many courses result in recognised qualifications while others can lead to employment with companies which have established close links with the RTC. Such training is not mandatory for service leavers. Service leavers who do not choose the RTC route may make use of the individual resettlement training costs (IRTC) grant, currently a maximum of £534, for training courses not offered by the RTC but available in the wider training market.

[1] The FRP is normally only available to those who have served at least five years with the armed forces.

Hilsea

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to require the selection of bids for the MOD site at Matapan Road, Hilsea to be based on best value criteria. [128355]

Derek Twigg: The selection of bids for the sale of the MOD site at Matapan road, Hilsea was made at formal tender held on 2 March 2007. At this formal tender Defence Estates (DE) accepted the highest compliant bid. This bid was received from a national house builder with a proven track record for delivering a wide range of residential development schemes on surplus Government sites.

Formal tender is an Office of Government Commerce recognised method of selling surplus public sector assets. DE and its agent Drivers Jonas are confident that best value was achieved in this sale through formal tender.

Land: Sales

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) under what circumstances Defence Estates does not follow the Treasury Guidelines (Green Book) when disposing of (a) sites and (b) contaminated sites; and if he will make a statement; [128353]

(2) at what level in his Department decisions are made about whether or not to apply the Treasury Guidelines (Green Book) to disposals of contaminated land. [128354]

Derek Twigg: In common with all other Government Departments, the MOD is bound by the Treasury Guidelines as set out in Government Accounting, the Green Book and the accompanying Guide for the Disposal of Surplus Property published by the Office of Government Commerce. These will always be followed unless there are exceptional circumstances, for example, when it has been decided to gift a property, which would require individual approval by an appropriate authority.

The Chief Executive of Defence Estates (DE), the Ministry of Defence (MOD) agency responsible for the defence estate, has full authority to act within the delegated authority from the MOD Accounting Officer in the disposal of land and buildings.

In the case of contaminated land, it is normal, unless the land is remediated by the Ministry of Defence, to sell with the benefit of a Land Quality Assessment (LQA) and therefore transfer the risk to the private sector. The LQA will usually include an evaluation of the potential types and level of contamination, together with a Collateral Warranty, which should allow prospective purchasers to make an informed bid.

Territorial Army: Pay

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Territorial Army were employed and paid under the provision of section 29 of the Reserve Forces Act 1996 in each of the last three years; how many earned (a) under £5,000, (b) under £10,000 and (c) under £20,000; and how many have been exempted from paying maintenance for their children through the Child Support Agency as a consequence. [128194]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 20 March 2007]: No members of the Territorial Army have been employed under section 29 of the Reserve Forces Act 1996, which can authorise, among other things, the High Readiness Reserve. Were any personnel to be employed in this manner they would be paid according to their rank, seniority and trade group. There are no exemptions for such personnel from existing CSA procedures.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Members: Age

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Leader of the House (1) what percentage of hon. Members were under 45 years of age in (a) 1985, (b) 1997 and (c) 2006; [127507]

(2) what the average age of hon. Members was in (a) 1985, (b) 1997 and (c) 2006. [127508]

Mr. Straw: The House of Commons Library Members database indicates the following:

	Percentage of hon. Members under 45 years of age	Average age of hon. Members (Years)
1985	33.2	50.1
1997	32.6	49.3
2006	23.5	51.8

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

1 Parliament Street: Lifts

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, what the cost has been of the modernisation of the lift system within the 1 Parliament Street building; how long this work has been running; and when he expects work to be completed. [128778]

Nick Harvey: The modernisation of the lifts in 1 Parliament Street has cost £337,000.

The work commenced in August 2006 and is due for completion in September 2007.

The lifts have been upgraded to accommodate an evacuation lift to comply with the Disability Discrimination Acts and refurbished in line with the lift refurbishment programme. This project was planned over two summer recesses to ensure continual availability of lifts during the refurbishment programme.

Energy Usage

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to his answer of 30 January 2007, Official Report, column 147W, on energy usage, what the energy consumption of each building on the parliamentary estate was in each of the last three years. [120472]

Nick Harvey: The energy consumption of each building on the parliamentary estate in each of the past three years is given in the following table. Please note that 2 Millbank is heated from boilers located in 1 Millbank and its heating energy consumption is not metered separately.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Birds: Conservation

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many of the individuals and organisations consulted in the current review of Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 are (a) bird keepers, (b) bird watchers, (c) bird keeping clubs, (d) bird watching clubs, (e) falconry centres or zoos, (f) raptor study groups (field ornithologists), (g) bird keeping magazines, (h) bird watching magazines and (i) conservation organisations. [126924]

Barry Gardiner: It is impossible to state with any accuracy the percentages of individuals and organisations consulted. In accordance with best practice for such public consultations, my officials aimed the distribution at the major organisations which represented all of the groups of bird watching, bird conservation, rescue centres, bird keepers, zoos and enforcement authorities. These in turn were able to use their membership lists to circulate the details of the consultation more widely. The consultation document was also available via the DEFRA website.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (a) the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) controls and (b) bird registration under section 7 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in tracing and reliably identifying the provenance of individual birds. [126925]

Barry Gardiner: The convention on international trade in endangered species (CITES) controls and bird registration controls relate to different activities and species. Where the controls are duplicated, as is the case with many species of diurnal birds of prey, assessing their relative effectiveness in tracing and identifying the provenance of individual birds is very difficult.

In general terms, bird registration achieves nothing in identifying the provenance of individual birds as there are no legal powers to assess the captive bred status under section 7 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. It does however give powers to trace where individual birds are kept.

CITES controls provide the powers needed to inquire into breeding status, but do not enable the tracing of individual birds, unless there is a specific conservation reason to do so and an element of commercial activity is involved.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria and methodology are used to assess the sustainability of wild bird species levels. [126926]

Barry Gardiner: In England, the principal method used to assess wild bird population levels is the analysis of trends for the wild bird indicators compiled for the England biodiversity strategy (EBS) and the farmland bird public service agreement (PSA).

Indices for individual bird species are based on the annual field counts of breeding birds compiled by the British Trust for Ornithology (BTO), Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) and the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC). These individual indices are then compiled to show the average population trends with separate indicators compiled for farmland, woodland, wetland and sea birds. The EBS indicator compiles indices for 96 species, 19 of which are used in the farmland bird PSA indicator.

The assessment for the EBS indicator is based on the percentage change in the combined index since 2000 (and is currently assessed as stable). The assessment for the PSA indicator is based on the annual rate of change in the long-term trend—to which is applied a statistical technique that removes short-term peaks and troughs due to weather or gaps in the data. The farmland birds target will be met when the annual percentage change in the 'smoothed' long-term trend is positive. As with the EBS indicator, the trend was assessed as stable in 2006.

Further information on the methodology and criteria used in the assessment for farmland bird PSA targets can be found in the following report: "Freeman, S.F., Baillie, S.R. and Gregory, R.D. 2001. Statistical Analyses of an Indicator of Population Trends in Farmland Birds".

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of bird rings used by keepers of birds listed on Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 were supplied by (a) keepers and (b) his Department. [126931]

Barry Gardiner: There are 9,584 registered birds, of which 280 are registered with rings not supplied by my Department. The latter figure includes birds which have had rings fitted in other countries before they were imported into the UK. Under current regulations, only keepers in Wales may supply their own rings. There are approximately 60 birds registered in this way.

Carbon Dioxide: Aviation

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his estimate is of the proportion of carbon emissions in the UK which is due to aircraft taking off and landing at UK airports; and what his estimate is of the likely change in this proportion over the next (a) 10 and (b) 50 years. [127980]

Ian Pearson: Carbon dioxide emissions from UK domestic aviation (which includes emissions from the UK Crown Dependencies, and excludes emissions from the Overseas Territories) were 2.5 million tonnes of carbon dioxide ($MtCO_2$), and for international aviation were 35.0 $MtCO_2$ in 2005. Greenhouse gas emissions from international flights do not currently count in the UK Greenhouse Gas Inventory because there is no internationally agreed way in which to allocate those emissions. UK CO_2 emissions (excluding international aviation and shipping) were 554.2 $MtCO_2$ in 2005.

Emissions from domestic aviation were around 0.4 per cent. of total UK CO_2 emissions in 2005. If international aviation CO_2 emissions are included, aviation contributed around 6.4 per cent. of total UK CO_2 emissions in 2005. The proportion in 2030 and 2050 would be around 15 and 21 per cent. of UK CO_2 emissions (including international aviation) respectively. These are based on the assumptions of continued strong growth in aviation using central projections in 'Aviation and Global Warming' (2004), and the assumption of attainment of the 60 per cent. CO_2 emissions reduction target in the rest of the economy as outlined in the 2003 Energy White Paper.

Common Agricultural Policy

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the £305 million claim on the reserve to cover provision for disallowance arising from Common Agricultural Policy schemes; and when he was informed of the amount of the claim required. [128048]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA Ministers and officials discuss a wide range of issues with their colleagues in the Treasury as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

Energy: EC Law

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further consultation his Department plans to undertake with stakeholders on the Energy Services Directive and its timetable for implementation. [128706]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA continues to make progress towards implementing the Energy End-Use Efficiency and Energy Services Directive by 17 May 2008. We have already consulted on aspects of the directive which impact on the wider public. The Department's consultation on billing and metering provisions ended on 6 February.

DEFRA expects to consult stakeholders further on our implementation plans in summer. We will also use the opportunity provided by the forthcoming energy White Paper, and June's energy efficiency action plan—itself a requirement of the directive—to keep stakeholders informed of progress.

Falcons: Conservation

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what account he has taken of the examples of captive Eleanora's falcons appearing in the UK following the delisting in 1994 of the species from Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in his review of wild bird registration under section 7 of the Act. [126923]

Barry Gardiner: The public consultation exercise on Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 closed on 16 February 2007. Over the coming weeks we will consider the situation of both captive and wild population changes of all species delisted in 1994.

Flood Control

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Environment Agency's capital programme is for flood defence works in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08, broken down by region. [128236]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency's capital programme for flood defence works in 2006-07 and 2007-08, by region, are set out in the following tables.

Capital programme budget—flood defence grant in aid

Region	2006-07 budget (£ million)	2007-08 budget (£)

Fuel Poverty

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of (a) people and (b) households in fuel poverty in each year since 1995; and what Government target on fuel poverty applied in each such year. [128113]

Ian Pearson: Fuel poverty is a factor of three elements—a home's energy efficiency, household income and the cost of fuel. As such, fuel poverty is measured by household and not by individual.

Fuel poverty figures were first calculated in 1996 and are based on information provided in the English House Condition Survey (EHCS). Fuel poverty figures in England from 1996 for each year a survey was completed are set out in the following table. The collation of the EHCS has a time lag so the latest available figures are for 2004.

	Number of households in fuel poverty in England	Million Number of vulnerable households in fuel poverty in England
1998	3.4	2.8
2001	1.7	1.4
2002	1.4	1.2
2003	1.2	1.0
2004	1.2	1.0

A vulnerable fuel-poor household is defined as one containing an elderly person, a family with young children, a disabled person or someone suffering a long term illness.

The Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000 mandated the Government to produce a strategy and set targets to ensure that no household should live in fuel poverty. The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy, published in November 2001, sets out the Government's targets for the eradication of fuel poverty in England:

to eradicate fuel poverty, as far as reasonably practicable, in vulnerable households by 2010 that no household will remain in fuel poverty, as far as reasonably practicable, by 2016

Similar targets exist in the devolved administrations.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many homes in the Peterborough constituency used the Warm Front scheme in each year since 2001. [128199]

Ian Pearson: In the first phase of the Warm Front Scheme, from June 2000 to June 2005, 2,562 households were assisted in the Peterborough constituency.

In the current phase of Warm Front, for Peterborough, 121 households were assisted between June 2005 and March 2006, and 404 households were assisted between April and December 2006.

Insulation

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the average installation charge levied on householders for (a) cavity wall insulation and (b) full loft insulation was by councils participating in a British Gas council tax discount scheme for energy-saving measures; [128658]

(2) what the average payment made to householders participating in a British Gas council tax discount scheme for energy-saving measures was in 2005-06; and whether such payments (a) reflect the council tax banding of the property, (b) are one-off or repeated payments and (c) are paid by cheque or by council tax bill credit. [128662]

Ian Pearson: On the basis of the British Gas press release on 12 March, I understand that the average installation charge levied on householders participating in the British Gas council tax discount scheme for insulation measures is £250 for cavity wall insulation and £274 for full loft insulation.

The average payment to householders participating in the scheme for insulation measures across the 44 current participating local authorities in 2005-06 was between £50 and £100, averaging £61.

British Gas or the appropriate local authority can provide further information on the further details of the scheme.

Metals: Recycling

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking to protect the trading interests of metal recycling companies from the requirements to disclose commercially confidential information under the revised Transfrontier Shipment of Waste Regulations, to be introduced in July 2007. [127961]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 March 2007]: The revised EC Waste Shipments Regulation (EC No. 1013/2006) introduces certain requirements for shipments of 'Green List' waste for recovery (recycling). These include an obligation on anyone shipping such waste to complete certain information on a form (Annex VII to the Regulation), and to ensure that this information accompanies the waste from the start of the shipment until it reaches its destination. The information on the form includes details of the producer of the waste and the broker or dealer involved in the shipment, when these are involved. This information is passed on to the facility receiving the waste when the waste is delivered.

The UK has raised with the European Commission the issue of the potential commercial confidentiality of some of the information on the form. The Commission is currently working to establish whether it is possible, while ensuring compliance with the legal requirements of the revised EC Waste Shipments Regulation (WSR), for any of the information that should accompany shipments of 'Green List' waste to be withheld or partially withheld.

My officials are in contact with representatives of the metal recycling companies in the UK about this issue and will keep them informed of developments.

Pesticides

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the objectives are of the Pesticides Safety Directorate's voluntary pilot scheme underway in the Midlands on the disclosure of information on pesticides being sprayed; when it is expected to report; and if he will make a statement. [128416]

Barry Gardiner: The objective of this pilot study is to run a small scale trial of a system for public disclosure of farmers' spray records with a view to:

investigating the practicalities of handling 'third party' requests, including locating farms and identifying and contacting the individuals responsible for pesticide spraying in each case; determining the probable level of public interest and hence establishing whether there is a significant need for Government to act in a 'third party' role if it is not feasible for members of the public to get this information directly from farmers; determining the practical implications and estimating the likely cost of setting up and running a Government scheme on a national basis.

The study is expected to run from 1 March to 31 August 2007. There will then need to be a period of analysis which may include some follow-up survey work involving inquirers and farmers from the study area. Officials aim to report the outcome of the study to Ministers by the end of the year. Once Ministers have considered all the relevant information a decision will be made on the way forward and a public announcement will be made.

TRANSPORT

Aviation: Safety

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what responsibilities for aircraft safety are under the remit of the Civil Aviation Authority. [128798]

Gillian Merron: The CAA's functions in relation to aircraft safety are the registration of aircraft, the safety of air navigation and aircraft (including airworthiness), the certification of operators of aircraft and the licensing of aircrews and aerodromes.

Car Sharing

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many kilometres of high occupancy vehicle lanes have been built or designated since 1997. [125972]

Dr. Ladyman: A total of 4,715 lane kilometres of high occupancy vehicle lanes have been built or designated since 1997.

Departments: Internet

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost to his Department was of the Act on CO_2 website. [128591]

Gillian Merron: The cost of the design and production of the Department's Act On CO_2 micro-site was £110,270. The site is an integral part of the Act On CO_2 campaign and all the advertising directs consumers to the site.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on its revised website launched in February 2007. [128593]

Gillian Merron: The new DFT website was launched on 26 January this year. A new Content Management System has been implemented and the project costs are £1.5 million.

These costs include accessibility and usability testing; design of a new information architecture based on user feedback and testing; development of a new visual design; the design and build of the system; migration of content; and the purchase of an enterprise software licence. The enterprise software licence allows the Department to migrate other DFT sites to the same Content Management System without incurring further licence costs. This will help to reduce hosting and maintenance costs across the Department.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings (a) he and (b) his Department's Ministers held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128766]

Gillian Merron: Ministers and civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and advice. It is not normal practice to disclose details of such meetings.

Driving Offences: Cellular Phones

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of (a) deaths, (b) serious incidents and (c) other accidents caused by persons driving while using hand-held mobile telephones in each police force area in 2006. [128889]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested for 2006 will be available in summer 2007.

Gatwick Airport: Safety

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the Civil Aviation Authority's decision to allow a fifth ground handler on the operation and safety of Gatwick Airport. [128800]

Gillian Merron: The responsibility for determining any limits on the number of companies permitted to provided ground handling services at a UK airport rests with the Civil Aviation Authority under the Airports (Groundhandling) Regulations 1997. The CAA's assessment of the impact of revoking the limit on the number of ground handling service providers at Gatwick airport is set out in the CAA Official Record Series 2, number 1786, which was published on 20 February 2007.

In-flight Refuelling: Safety

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the safety implications of increasing the amount of in-flight refuelling in the aviation industry. [129021]

Gillian Merron: In-flight refuelling is not undertaken within any UK public transport aircraft operation, and the Civil Aviation Authority is not aware of any such activity within the wider civil aviation community. The authority has not received any proposition for civil aircraft to engage in in-flight refuelling, and no safety assessment has been made.

Public Transport: Rural Areas

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is on improving public transport in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [125973]

Gillian Merron: Local and central Government support for local bus services is now around £2½ billion a year. This total includes rural bus subsidy grant (RBSG) specifically to support rural bus services. Since RBSG's introduction in 1998, a total of over £440 million has now been allocated to authorities by means of this grant.

In addition, a total of £110 million has been awarded to authorities successful in rural bus challenge (RBC) competitions held from 1998 to 2003 to encourage innovative solutions to meeting rural transport needs. Many of the 300 projects initially supported by RBC funding are now continuing with mainstream funding from local authorities and other sources.

We have also changed the route registration rules to encourage flexibly routed, demand-responsive bus services and made these services eligible for bus service operators grant (BSOG) from the Department.

Our bus policy document 'Putting Passengers First', published in December, includes a range of proposals which we are now taking forward to improve bus and community transport services in rural and urban areas.

We have also implemented the community rail policy on many rural routes, particularly branch lines. In recent years, some lines have seen patronage increase by over 150 per cent. as community rail principles are implemented.

Roads: Accidents

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road accidents resulting in (a) fatalities and (b) serious injury for (i) drivers, (ii) passengers and (iii) pedestrians there were in each police authority in each of the last five years. [128920]

Dr. Ladyman: Tables showing the number of reported personal injury road accidents resulting in (a) fatalities and (b) serious injury for (i) drivers/riders, (ii) passengers and (iii) pedestrians in Great Britain: 2001-05 (the latest year for which figures are available), broken down by police force, have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Tolls: Greater London

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) speeding fines, (b) London congestion charge fines and (c) parking fines were incurred by the Government Car and Despatch Agency in each year since 1997; what the value was of fines incurred in each category; and if he will make a statement. [126915]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) has paid the following fines:

	Total parking fines (£)	Congestion charge fines (£)
1999-2000	2,610	n/a
2000-01	1,820	n/a
2001-02	2,760	n/a
2002-03	4,900	n/a
2003-04	7,570	n/a
2004-05	5,610	205.00
2005-06	7,470	350.00

n/a = Not applicable.

Figures prior to 1999 could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The Agency has paid no speeding fines.

Parking restrictions within central London may make it impossible sometimes to deliver secure or sensitive documents to buildings or allow people with a high public profile to attend or leave buildings without putting themselves or secure documents at risk. In these cases, GCDA will pay the fine and recharge these costs to the customer as appropriate.

Tolls: Scotland

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive on ensuring that Scottish stakeholders participate in discussions on a national system of road pricing. [128345]

Dr. Ladyman: Department for Transport officials and I are working very closely with the Scottish Executive as proposals for local road pricing schemes are being developed and as we take forward the debate on national road pricing.

The Secretary of State met the Scottish Minister for Transport in October to discuss road pricing, and they have exchanged correspondence since.

The Scottish Executive have a standing invitation to the Department's road pricing local liaison group through which we work with local authorities that are considering introducing local road pricing schemes.

Transport: Southern Region

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much funding the local transport authority in (a) Suffolk, (b) Bedfordshire, (c) Cambridgeshire, (d) Essex, (e) Hertfordshire and (f) Norfolk received (i) in total, (ii) per mile of road and (iii) per head of population in each year since 1997. [128015]

Gillian Merron: Tables 1 to 6 show the total local transport funding allocated to the aforementioned authorities for each year since 1997 (i) in total, (ii) per mile of road and (iii) per head of population.

Total local transport funding, as included in the tables, comprises capital for the delivery of local transport plans (and for up to 1999-2000, the Transport Policies and Programmes submissions that preceded them), including for major local authority schemes, (which can vary substantially from year to year and between authorities); specific grants to local authorities for bus services;

the Community Infrastructure Fund.

The Government also support local transport authorities through the general revenue support grant, and councils spend some of this support on highways and transport services according to their own priorities.

Transport: Transpennine Corridor

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate he has made of the levels of (a) road transport and (b) rail transport in the Transpennine corridor. [125776]

Gillian Merron: The current levels of road traffic on the Transpennine routes at their busiest sections taken from the 2005 Traffic Monitoring-Data Analysis Report are:

M62 Junction 25 (Huddersfield) and J27 (Leeds)—134,500 Annual Average Daily Traffic flow (17 per cent. of which is heavy goods vehicles)

A66—15,000 AADT (28 per cent. HGV)

A69—47,000 AADT (24 per cent. HGV)

M67/A628/A616 (at M67 Jct 0-1)—52,100 AADT (13 per cent. HGV).

The current level of rail traffic between Manchester and Leeds, using Huddersfield as a central measurement point, is an average of 104 trains in each direction on any weekday. Capacity on the core Leeds-Manchester section of the north Transpennine route was stepped up in December 2004 from three trains per hour to four trains per hour.

The current level of rail traffic between Manchester and Sheffield, using Edale as a central measurement point, is an average of 44 trains in each direction on any weekday.

West Coast Railway Line

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce a decision on the procurement of extra carriages for the Pendolino trains operating on the West Coast Main Line; and if he will make a statement. [129039]

Mr. Tom Harris: Negotiations continue to take place with Virgin Trains and their partners over the provision of additional cars for the Pendolino trains. I cannot give any specific time scales at this stage.

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to assist in the procurement of extra carriages for the Pendolino trains operating on the West Coast Main Line; and if he will make a statement. [129040]

Mr. Tom Harris: Officials from the Department for Transport are actively working with Virgin Trains and their partners over the commercial and operational issues relating to the provision of additional accommodation on the Pendolino trains.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Trooper Williams

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Solicitor-General what the cost was of the (a) defence teams, (b) prosecution teams and (c) other costs related to the prosecution of Trooper Williams for alleged crimes in Iraq in 2005. [129154]

The Solicitor-General: The total prosecution costs in this case were £28,195.24. I have been told by the Legal Services Commission that the total Crown court legal aid costs were £151,526. I am not aware of other costs. The costs of the investigation are not kept by my Department.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Budget and Revenues Sub-Group

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list attendees of the Budget and Revenues Sub-Group between February to July 2004. [127977]

Tessa Jowell: The Budgets and Revenue Sub-Group included representatives from the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, HM Treasury, the Greater London Authority (GLA), London 2012 Ltd., Government Office for London, the London Development Agency and the British Olympic Association.

Casino Advisory Panel

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what evidence the Casino Advisory Panel received on the economic multiplier effect of situating a regional casino licence (a) in a large city and (b) elsewhere. [128464]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 19 March 2007]: In its call for proposals published on 31 January 2006, the Casino Advisory Panel asked all local authorities as part of their proposals to explain how and why they expected that the "multiplier effect" of the additional economic activity to be created by the proposal would outweigh the potential leakage of money from the local economy.

When relevant evidence was received it was taken into account by the panel and published on its website. The panel was also able to draw on its own extensive expertise in similar economic impact assessments.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make the transcripts of the evidence in public sessions held by the Casino Advisory Panel available to the public. [128821]

Mr. Caborn: Transcripts of the recordings made of all seven of the Casino Advisory Panel's examinations in public are currently being prepared, and will be published shortly.

Gambling: Finance

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has held with the Responsibility in Gambling Trust on industry funding and the implications for a statutory levy under section 123 of the Gambling Act 2005. [128748]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has met representatives of the gambling industry and the Responsibility in Gambling Trust on many occasions, and discussed industry contributions to problem gambling research, education and treatment. If more is needed, and not delivered by the industry, the Act has powers to impose a statutory levy. We will use those powers if necessary.

Gaming Clubs

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the differences are in (a) scale and (b) nature of operation between regional casinos, large casinos and small casinos under the 2005 legislation. [128847]

Mr. Caborn: The following table sets out the scale and nature of the operation of the three new categories of casinos permitted under the Gambling Act 2005.

	Type of casino
	Small	Medium	Large
Minimum area (sq m)	750	1500	5000
Minimum number of gaming tables	1	1	40
Category of gaming machines permitted	Up to B1	Up to B1	Up to A
Maximum number of gaming machines	80	150	1250
Machine table ratio	2:1	5:1	25:1
Bingo permitted	no	yes	yes
Betting permitted	yes	yes	yes

Gaming Clubs: Licensing

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to publish the detail of her Department's consideration of (a) the Casino Advisory Panel's (CAP) report on the location of the new casinos and (b) the representations she has received about the CAP's recommendations. [128280]

Tessa Jowell: I made clear in my statement to the House on 30 January that I wanted to take time to consider the panel's report carefully. The outcome of this period of consideration is reflected in the draft order which I laid in the House on 1 March. I have concluded that the panel has taken its terms of reference seriously, has applied them in a balanced and consistent way and has tested its results back against the original terms of reference. I am satisfied that the panel has arrived at robust recommendations as a result.

As required by the Gambling Act 2005,I have consulted Scottish Ministers and the Welsh Assembly on the draft order, and they were content that the draft order should reflect the panel's recommendations in full.

On 20 February I met a delegation of Members and Peers who were sympathetic to Blackpool's proposal to the panel, and have received written representations from members of this group. The Department has also received around 270 letters from members of the public.

Leasehold

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 26 January 2007, Official Report, column 2057W, on departmental fixed assets, what the length of any lease outstanding on those properties was. [125894]

Mr. Lammy: Pursuant to my answer to the hon. Member on 26 January 2007, Official Report, column 2057W, on departmental fixed assets, the length of any lease outstanding on those properties at the point of sale was as follows:

	Years
30 Park Street	71
31 Park Street	71
32 Park Street	72

National Lottery: Grants

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Big Lottery funding went to (a) statutory and (b) voluntary organisations in each year since the Big Lottery Fund's establishment; and how she expects the balance of funding for such organisations to be affected as a result of the 15 March 2007 decision to divert lottery funding to the London Olympics. [129156]

Mr. Caborn: The Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund were administratively merged on 1 June 2004 to create the Big Lottery Fund, which became a legal entity on 1 December 2006. Since 2004-05, the total annual Community Fund budget and approximately 40 per cent. of the New Opportunities Fund budget were allocated to the voluntary and community sector. From 2006-07, the Big Lottery Fund made a new undertaking to allocate 60-70 per cent. of its total budget to the voluntary and community sector. It will be reporting on its performance against this target in its annual report.

The Big Lottery Fund does not expect the balance of funding, on current commitments, between statutory and voluntary and community sector organisations to be affected following the statement by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 15 March 2007.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will break down by lottery distributor the money transferred from the Lottery to fund the Olympics. [129188]

Mr. Caborn: We will, subject to parliamentary approval, transfer £1,085 million from non-Olympic lottery proceeds to the Olympic funding package. Of this, approximately £638 million will be transferred from the Big Lottery Fund. The remainder will be shared between 11 of the other 12 non-Olympic lottery distributors in proportion to their fixed shares of income from the lottery. However, no transfer will be made from UK Sport.

The amounts to be transferred from each non-Olympic distributor to make up this amount, rounded to the nearest £0.1 million, are detailed in the following table.

In addition, £750 million will be raised from Olympic lottery products and the five sports lottery distributors will distribute a further £340 million to maximise the benefit to British sport of hosting the games.

	£ million
Arts Council England	112.5
UK Film Council	21.8
Arts Council of Northern Ireland	4.5
Scottish Arts Council	12.5
Scottish Screen	1.8
Arts Council of Wales	8.1
Big Lottery Fund	638.1
Heritage Lottery Fund	161.2
Sport England	99.9
Sports Council for Northern Ireland	4.1
SportScotland	13.1
Sports Council for Wales	7.3
UK Sport	0
Total	1,085

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the Government intends (a) to define and (b) to audit and report on the pledge that the voluntary sector will get the same level of resources from the Big Lottery Fund that it would otherwise have received. [129191]

Mr. Caborn: The Big Lottery Fund will monitor its undertaking that 60-70 per cent. of its funding up to 2009 will go to the Voluntary Sector Scheme (VCS). It will report on progress towards this undertaking in its annual report. Following wide consultation, the Big Lottery Fund uses the HM Treasury definition of the "third sector", which encompasses voluntary and community organisations, charities, social enterprises, mutuals and co-operatives in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland. In Wales it used the definition adopted by the VCS and the Welsh Assembly Government as part of the Voluntary Sector Scheme.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps have been taken to audit the (a) tender and (b) construction phase of the Olympic build; and what further steps are planned. [126277]

Tessa Jowell: There is an established framework for internal auditing within the ODA. This covers all aspects of procurement from process to specific contract audits. The National Audit Office is also about to start its review, which will include the procurement process.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the adequacy of procedures in place to audit the (a) tender and (b) construction phase of the Olympics build. [126278]

Tessa Jowell: The ODA has a thorough internal audit system in place. The internal audit programme is reviewed monthly by the ODA's Audit Committee. Both the DCMS and the National Audit Office attend the Audit Committee as observers and are able to raise any matters of concern.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of the Olympic Park is owned by or under the control of (a) the Love Lea Valley Park Authority, (b) the Olympic Delivery Authority, (c) the London Development Agency and (d) other public bodies. [126569]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 9 March 2007]: Ninety-three per cent. of the freehold of land required for the Olympic Park is now in public sector control.

This 93 per cent. represents approximately 290 hectares of the 312 hectares of land required for the development of the Olympic Park. The vast majority of this land is either owned by the LDA or controlled through a series of agreements with other public sector bodies such as the Lee Valley Regional Park Authority. The 312 hectares also includes 87 hectares of land comprising the Stratford city development that is controlled by the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA).

The remaining land required for the Olympic Park will be acquired through negotiation or using the LDA's approved compulsory purchase powers.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the date was of the Cabinet meeting at which the London 2012 Olympic Budget as it appeared in the London 2012 Candidate File was agreed. [128152]

Tessa Jowell: Information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet committees is generally not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 99W, on Olympic Games: Greater London, what the date was of the meeting at which the London 2012 Olympic Budget was agreed by the Government; and who attended that meeting. [128153]

Tessa Jowell: Information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet committees, including when they meet, is generally not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will assess the feasibility of holding the Olympic shooting events at Southern Counties Shooting at Evershot. [128352]

Mr. Caborn: The Royal Artillery barracks at Woolwich were agreed as the venue for the shooting events after the International Olympic Committee (IOC) gave feedback to the London bid organisers on the venue portfolio submitted for London as an Applicant City in 2004. The Royal Artillery barracks are, therefore, part of the Host City Contract agreement with the IOC. There are currently no plans to move the Olympic shooting events to an alternative venue.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings her Department (a) had before and (b) has had since the Olympic Games 2012 budget was submitted to the International Olympic Committee with representatives of the Metropolitan Police on security (i) provision and (ii) costs; and whether HM Treasury representatives (A) were invited to and (B) attended such meetings. [128385]

Tessa Jowell: Before and after submission of the London 2012 bid, there have been various meetings involving representatives of my Department and the Metropolitan Police, both about the security planning and potential costs. Treasury representatives have been invited and involved where appropriate.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will estimate the cost of (a) demolishing and (b) rebuilding facilities for shooting sports for the 2012 Olympic games; and if she will make a statement. [128506]

Mr. Woodward: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 62W.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure that the 2012 Olympic games leave a positive legacy for shooting sports in the UK. [128510]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are working hard with the London 2012 Organising Committee and the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) to ensure a lasting legacy for all Olympic sports, including shooting, for London and the UK as a whole. The ODA and the Organising Committee venues team are looking carefully at the post-games uses of all proposed facilities being developed for the shooting competitions at Woolwich.

The biggest legacy that we aim to achieve for shooting, working with the National Governing Body and International Federation, is for more people to have experienced the sport in person. Hosting the games in the UK gives us a unique opportunity to open up Olympic and Paralympic sports to new audiences and thus increase interest and participation in them.

Public Houses: Music

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research her Department has carried out relating to the provision of live music in pubs and clubs. [128328]

Mr. Woodward: In 2004, DCMS published a baseline survey of live music staged in England and Wales. This looked at premises, including pubs and clubs, where live music performances typically take place in addition to the main business of the establishment. This research is available in the Library of the House and on the DCMS website:

<http://www.culture.gov.uk/Reference_library/Publications/archive_2004/livemusic_in_england_wales.htm>.

A follow-up to this survey will take place later this year.

Separate research, focusing on the experience of smaller establishments in applying for live music licences under the new licensing regime, was published in 2006. This is available in the Library of the House and on the DCMS website:

www.culture.gov.uk/Reference_library/Research/research_by_dcms/live_music_exec_summary.htm

In 2006, the DCMS also commissioned a study to look at the feasibility of investigating the economic impact of live music in local areas. The results will be published on the Department's website and will be placed in the Library of the House shortly.

In addition, the independent Live Music Forum has been monitoring the early effects of the Act on the live music sector. I look forward to receiving its report in the spring.

Public Libraries: Standards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Government plan to reduce the number of public library service standards that local authorities must report. [129239]

Mr. Lammy: The Public Library Service Standards are currently under review. Consideration of the number of indicators in the replacement model, which will have a discretionary base, continues. The new model will be in place by April 2008.

Sports: Schools

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what basis cities were selected to host the UK School Games which she announced on 7 March 2007. [128368]

Mr. Caborn: The criteria issued by the Millennium Commission for applications from bidders wishing to host the UK School Games in 2007-11 were deposited in the Libraries of both Houses on 14 November.

This guidance specified that selection of the successful bids would be made by Ministers on the basis of those criteria and the recommendations of the assessors. Following the winding up of the Millennium Commission on 30 November 2006, its responsibilities were transferred to the Big Lottery Fund.

Television: Telephone Services

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what powers are available to (a) Ofcom and (b) the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information Services to take action against broadcasters found to have misled the public over their use of premium-rate phone-in lines. [129116]

Mr. Woodward: Ofcom has a range of statutory sanctions that it may impose on broadcasters found in serious breach of its broadcasting code. Depending on the severity of the breach, these can include a direction to broadcast a summary of Ofcom's adjudication, a financial penalty and, in the most serious of cases, the shortening or revocation of a licence. ICSTIS also has a range of powers to take action against premium rate service (PRS) providers found in serious breach of the ICSTIS code. These include the power to fine PRS providers up to £250,000, barring access to individual services and banning named individuals from operating services for set periods.

Terrorism: Compensation

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether it is intended that the charitable fund to help British citizens affected by terrorism abroad will cover the spouses of British service personnel killed by terrorist action. [128815]

Tessa Jowell: Service personnel and their spouses currently receive compensation from the Armed Forces Compensation Scheme, which offers financial support for personnel who have been killed or injured in the line of duty. Spouses of those who died in service are also entitled to receive payments from the Armed Forces Pension Scheme.

The charitable fund is primarily intended to assist UK residents who are travelling overseas or on holiday. Applications would not normally be accepted from victims who are in an affected area as part of their employment and for whom assistance packages are already in place.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when further details will be announced concerning the charitable fund to help British citizens affected by terrorism abroad that was announced in the March 2006 budget. [128816]

Tessa Jowell: We will be announcing further details of the charitable fund for British victims of overseas terrorism shortly.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcoholic Drinks: Young People

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been allocated to the Tackling Underage Sales of Alcohol campaign to be launched in May. [128217]

Mr. Coaker: Total funding available for allocation to the Tackling Underage Sales of Alcohol Campaign is £1.2 million. Police basic command units that intend to participate (in partnership with Trading Standards) must complete a bid form to be entitled to funding, payable on proof of completion of the operations undertaken.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what performance measures he plans to use to assess the Tackling Underage Sales of Alcohol campaign. [128218]

Mr. Coaker: The Tackling Underage Sales of Alcohol campaign is likely to result in the issuing of penalty notices for disorder and additionally licence reviews and prosecutions for the illegal sale of alcohol to minors. Details of these will be recorded and analysed centrally. Informal qualitative feedback will also be considered. Test purchase failure rates will not be used as an overall generic indicator of performance, as the campaign specifically aims to target problem premises, selected at the discretion of local enforcement agencies. Local police commanders and partnerships will use the results of the activity to focus their efforts and resources on key local hot spots.

Antisocial Behaviour

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1351W, on anti-social behaviour; what criteria the Government plan to use to determine whether an area is eligible for respect zone funding. [128663]

(2) how much has been allocated to respect zones for 2006-07; and how much each participating Government Department contributed towards such funding. [128667]

Mr. Coaker: Respect Areas were confirmed on 22 January 2007. The only additional funding which is currently available in return for securing Respect Area status, is access to up to £125,000 from the Department for Education and Skills to help improve parenting programmes linked to tackling antisocial behaviour. This funding is available for 2007-08 only.

Respect Areas have been identified from a longer list of 77 areas with significant challenges, based on an index of data covering rates of deprivation, public perceptions of antisocial behaviour, teenage pregnancy, truancy and use of antisocial behaviour orders. The 40 Respect Areas have been identified as having a track record in taking action to tackle antisocial behaviour and have demonstrated a commitment and capacity to do more.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders: Custodial Treatment

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many breaches of antisocial behaviour orders occurred in 2006; and how many of these ended in custodial detention. [122462]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 22 February 2007]: ASBO breach data are currently available up to 31 December 2005 only. Data for 2006 are expected to be available later this year.

Asylum

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the number of failed asylum seekers (a) living in the UK and (b) who were living in the UK in each of the last five years. [124070]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 28 February 2007]: As the Home Secretary set out in his evidence to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 23 May 2006, no Government have been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of people who are in the country illegally, and that remains the case.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time was between final refusal and deportation for asylum seekers who exhausted all avenues of appeal in the latest period for which figures are available. [110846]

Mr. Byrne: Since the abolition of embarkation controls in 1994 we cannot assess with any certainty the numbers of people who remain in the UK. In this context it is very difficult to provide an accurate average time it may take to remove those who have no right to remain here.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers his Department has recorded as missing from their last registered address in each of the last five years. [111220]

Mr. Byrne: The information could be provided only by individual examination of case records and the cost of obtaining it would therefore be disproportionate.

Asylum: Deportation

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to which countries failed asylum seekers were returned in 2006; and how many were returned in each case. [124854]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows provisional figures rounded to the nearest five of persons who had claimed asylum at some stage who were removed from the United Kingdom in 2006, by destination.

Information on asylum removals, including and excluding dependants, is published quarterly and annually. Copies of these publications are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics website at:

Azal Mohammed Ibrahim

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to deport Mr. Azal Mohammed Ibrahim, an Iraqi Kurd convicted of causing the death of a child by careless driving. [125472]

Mr. Byrne: I am not able to comment publicly on individual cases within the House.

British Nationality

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people living in the United Kingdom were not UK citizens in each of the last five years. [124069]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 28 February 2007]: The requested information is not available.

However, the labour force survey has been used to estimate take-up rates of British citizenship and these entail some estimates of the number of non-British citizens in the UK; these are published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Persons Granted British Citizenship United Kingdom, 2005", which may be obtained from the Library of the House and from the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

From the court proceedings database it is not possible to identify those offenders in the Jarrow constituency, as the data are not collected at this level of detail.

[121397]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Deportation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time was between (a) tribunal rejection of applications to remain by asylum seekers and (b) rejection of human rights appeals and deportation or departure. [118291]

Mr. Byrne: Since the abolition of embarkation controls in 1994 we cannot assess with any certainty the numbers of people who remain in the UK. In this context it is very difficult to provide an accurate average time it may take to remove those who have no right to remain here.

Entry Clearances

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when George Barango, Ref: B4016!0, a constituent of the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, will receive a notice of decision on his application made on 8 October 1999. [124764]

Mr. Byrne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to my hon. Friend on 6 March 2007 with the information requested.

Fraud: Internet

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the procedure is for reporting cases of suspected fraudulent sales on the internet; how many investigations have taken place into allegations of such fraud; how many prosecutions in which all proceedings are complete have taken place; and what the outcome was of such prosecutions. [128733]

Mr. Coaker: The National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) and Home Office Counting Rules (HOCR) govern the recording of crime in England and Wales. These are publicly available documents and can be found at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/countrules.html

The police deal with reports of incidents in accordance with the General Principles of NCRS which state:

"All reports of incidents, whether from victims, witnesses or third parties and whether crime related or not, will result in the registration of an incident report by police".

Following the initial registration, an incident will be recorded as a crime (Notifiable offence) if, on the balance of probability:

(a) the circumstances as reported amount to a crime defined by law (the police will determine this, based on their knowledge of the law and counting rules), and (b) there is no credible evidence to the contrary.

Once recorded, a crime would remain recorded unless there was additional verifiable information to disprove that a crime had occurred."

The Counting Rules also include specific instructions that relate to the recording of crime in connection with goods ordered over the internet which are as follows:

Location of crime: Goods ordered over the internet:

If goods ordered over the internet (or by phone, mail etc.) do not arrive due to a fraudulent operation, then the following rules apply in order of priority:

If the location of the suspect(s) is either unknown or outside England and Wales, then the crime should be recorded in the force/BCD in whose area the victim is located when they place the order.

If the location of the suspect(s) becomes known and is within England and Wales, then record in the force/BCU area covering that location.

If payment is made electronically then the venue will be the address of the account holder into which the money is transferred or if no address then the address of the bank, provided this is not at headquarters or the site of a computer server.

With regard to the number of investigations, prosecutions and outcomes of frauds directly relating to the internet, this information is not available centrally.

Immigrants: Somalia

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many Somali nationals have been returned to Somalia from the UK over the last two years, broken down by (a) those who voluntarily returned to Somalia and (b) those who were forcibly removed to Somalia; [119890]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of Somali nationals in the UK who do not have leave to remain. [119891]

Mr. Byrne: No estimate has been made regarding the number of Somali nationals in the UK who have no leave to remain. As the Home Secretary set out in his evidence to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 23 May 2006, no Government have been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of people who are in the country illegally, and that remains the case.

The following table shows the number of Somali nationals removed from the UK in 2004 and 2005, broken down by type of applicant and type of removal.

The information provided comes from published statistics. Information on removals in 2006 will be published in the summer on the Home Office's research development and statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

[128871]

Joan Ryan: Consultation on the proposed location of passport remote interview facilities in sparsely populated parts of the UK, as defined by the Office for National Statistics (ONS), was undertaken with local and regional bodies in those areas. A revised service level agreement (SLA) came into effect in April 2006 between the CRB and the 43 police forces of England and Wales. This new agreement, which was agreed by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) places an additional focus on delivery and the responsibility of Chief Officers and ACPO to ensure that the obligations within the SLA are met. Monthly performance figures since April 2006 are now published on the CRB website at:

Mr. Coaker: These statistics are not collected centrally.

The Government recognise the seriousness of Cash and Valuables in Transit (CVIT) robbery and the impact these attacks have on both victims and witnesses. We are therefore working with stakeholders to establish a Government and cross-industry response to the problem.

Sherhan Yildrim

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the circumstances were of the release from prison of Mr. Sherhan Yildrim. [123684]

Mr. Byrne: I am not able to comment on individual cases within the House.

[126646]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is as follows.

(i) The total costs of implementing the Control of Noise at Work Regulations 2005 in the first year were estimated to be between £117.0 million and £202.6 million. Costs were estimated, in present value terms, to be between £477.6 million and £676.3 million over the first 10 years. Costs were estimated to be £1.13 billion to £1.94 billion over 40 years, in present value terms[1].

The additional costs to health and safety regulators were not considered to be substantial. There were pre-existing regulations, implemented in 1989, and ensuring compliance with the new requirements would be subsumed into current inspection activities.

(ii) The first year costs of implementing the Control of Vibration at Work Regulations 2005 were estimated to be between £201 million and £358 million. Over the first 10 years, total costs were estimated, in present value terms, to be between £2,377 million and £4,300 million.

The initial costs to regulators were estimated to be around £65,000 for training inspectors (mainly HSE) and around £300,000 for conducting research into whole-body vibration exposures to assist industry by producing generic risk assessments for machines expected to cause higher exposures[2].

Enforcing the regulations is unlikely to increase costs because enforcement action will be absorbed as part of the full range of inspection duties carried out by inspectors.

The information in this reply was drawn from the final regulatory impact assessment for the legislation that is available in the Library or on the HSE website at http://www.hse.gov.uk/ria/index.htm.

The Government and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are committed to meeting the Better Regulation challenge. The HSE is constantly reviewing what can be done better to ensure that people are protected at work while avoiding unnecessary burdens on business.

Carers: Learning Disability

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what Government-funded support is available for carers of people with profound and multiple learning difficulties. [127939]

Mrs. McGuire: Depending on their personal circumstances, carers have access to the full range of social security benefits, including carer's allowance. To qualify for carer's allowance, carers must satisfy a number of eligibility conditions, and the person for whom they provide care has to be receiving either the middle or highest rate care component of the disability living allowance, or attendance allowance.

Departmental Websites

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many user visits were recorded on the National Pensions Debate website in each month in 2006. [118771]

James Purnell: Activity throughout the national pension debate site from January 2006 to May 2006 resulted in 56,648 visits and 23,888 unique visitors.

Activity throughout the pension reform site from June to December 2006 resulted in 187,787 visits and 69,215 unique visitors.

Departments: Renewable Energy

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2007, Official Report, column 1216W, on renewable energy, what plans he has to increase the amount of energy from renewable sources used by his Department. [127120]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions currently sources 53.5 per cent. of its total electricity from renewable sources. This is in excess of the original Government target to source 10 per cent. of electricity from renewable sources by 31 March 2008, which remains mandated within the new targets for Sustainable Operations on the Government Estate.

The Department's estate partner Land Securities Trillium is required to source electricity using competitive tender. Bids are sought on the basis of maintaining current supplies for the Department, which ensures that the Department maintains its own performance while not compromising the ability of the market to supply to others.

In order to increase the volume of renewable energy available, the Department in partnership with Land Securities Trillium is exploring the potential for on-site renewable generation. There are a number of projects where this may be feasible and scoping work is under way. The Department's annual Sustainable Development reports will provide details of progress.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many meetings (a) he and (b) his Department's Ministers held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128764]

Mrs. McGuire: Ministers and civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and advice. It is not normal practice to disclose details of such meeting.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many work permits were applied for by his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years. [127709]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not collated in this Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the cost to public funds of removing the age cut-off from eligibility for mobility allowance; and if he will make a statement. [128017]

Mrs. McGuire: The requested information is not available. Entitlement to the mobility component of disability living allowance can only be established when a claim is made and the actual mobility needs of the individual are assessed. There are no reliable data available on which estimates could be made of extending entitlement to the mobility component of disability living allowance beyond the age of 65 if people were to make a claim.

Financial Assistance Scheme: EC Law

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals have been excluded from the Financial Assistance Scheme on the basis of their age; what assessment his Department's legal advisers have made of the extent to which this policy complies with European Union law; and if he will make a statement. [121446]

James Purnell: We estimate that around 50-55,000 members are more than 15 years from scheme pension age and therefore do not qualify for assistance.

We consider that European Directive 2000/78, which includes non-discrimination on grounds of age, does not apply to FAS.

The Government are carefully studying the ruling by the European Court of Justice of 25 January 2007 relating to Article 8 of the European Directive 80/987/EEC, and in so doing we will have in mind compliance with community law generally.

Full Employment Agency: Costs

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) set-up and (b) annual running costs of the new Full Employment Agency in Scotland. [120312]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Full Employment Agency is a matter which we are discussing with the Scottish Executive. No estimate has been made by the Department for Work and Pensions of the (a) set-up and (b) annual running costs for the proposed Agency at this stage.

Industrial Health and Safety: Asbestos

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125590]

Mrs. McGuire: The answer is as follows:

(i) The cost to business, in present value terms, of complying with the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002 was estimated to be some £1.4 billion in the first year. Recurring costs were estimated to be in the region of £13 million a year over 50 years.

These figures should be balanced against the estimated £3 billion benefits of the regulations. These arise from reducing the risks from asbestos and so preventing an estimated 4,700 asbestos related deaths over 50 years.

(ii) Combining the costs to HSE and local authorities of enforcing the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002, the cost in the first year in which the regulations came into force was estimated to be in the region of £8 million in present value terms. Over a 10-year period, enforcement costs were estimated at £34 million. The information in this reply was drawn from the final Regulatory Impact Assessment for the legislation that is available in the Library or on the HSE website at: http://www.hse.gov.uk/ria/index.htm.

The Government and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are committed to meeting the Better Regulation challenge. The HSE is constantly reviewing what can be done better to ensure that the right balance is struck between protecting people at work and avoiding unnecessary burdens on business.

Industrial Health and Safety: Hazardous Substances

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Dangerous Substances and Explosive Atmospheres Regulations 2002 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125588]

Mrs. McGuire: The cost to business of implementing the Dangerous Substances and Explosive Atmospheres Regulations 2002 was estimated to be £350 million over a 10-year period, of which £150 million was initial costs.

Costs, over the same period, to the health and safety regulators were estimated to be in the region of £6.62 million, of which £75,000 were initial costs.

These figures should be considered against the total losses associated with incidents involving dangerous substances.

The Government and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are committed to meeting the Better Regulation challenge. The HSE is constantly reviewing what can be done better to ensure that people are protected at work whilst avoiding unnecessary burdens on business.

National Insurance: Jobcentres

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what criteria were used to decide which jobcentres will offer interviews for applicants for national insurance numbers; and for what reason some jobcentres cannot conduct such interviews; [123407]

(2) what his policy is on the maximum (a) time and (b) distance that applicants for a national insurance number are expected to travel in order to attend an interview at a jobcentre. [123409]

Mr. Pinskitt: Customers wishing to obtain a new national insurance number are required to attend an interview. The jobcentres providing these services were selected on the basis of historical information on where the largest volumes of applications were made, also taking into account the suitability of premises available. Not all jobcentres have suitable premises to conduct these interviews or have had sufficient demand in the past for this specialist service.

Our policy on travelling time and distance is that a customer should be offered an appointment at the nearest location to their requested postcode (place of abode or place of work). In practice Jobcentre Plus specifically advises the customer if the interview is likely to be more than one hour travelling time each way, or if they are likely to be absent from home for over four hours. To assist the customer in these instances, Jobcentre Plus can offer special interview arrangements at a more suitable Jobcentre Plus site. Customers have the option, and some do choose, to travel for longer than one hour to attend an interview. Travelling time rather than distance is the measure on which the suitability of the appointment is determined as this takes into account local transport arrangements. Jobcentre Plus does have a facility to carry out home visits if customers have mobility problems.

New Deal

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of individuals participating in the new deal for young people are participating in the programme for the (a) first, (b) second and (c) third time. [102157]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is in the following table.

Participants on new deal for young people

	Totals	Percentage of total
Participants as at August 2006	97,360	100
Of which:
Participating for the first time	62,630	64
Participating for the second time	22,440	23
Participating for the third time	8,770	9

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many written parliamentary questions to his Department (a) in the 2005-06 session were and (b) so far this session have been colour-coded (i) red, (ii) amber/yellow and (iii) green since the introduction of the colour coding system; [113303]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of internal department guidance on the system of colour-coding for management of written parliamentary questions in operation in his Department. [113304]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department aims to answer parliamentary questions within the timescales set by Parliament. For the early part of the 2006-07 session, the Department trialled an informal system of colour-coding parliamentary questions to help improve internal processes for answering parliamentary questions. No formal guidance was issued on the operation of the system, nor was any information systematically collected on the number of questions colour-coded as a result. The Department has subsequently decided to discontinue the trial.

Pensioners: Social Security Benefits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of (a) individuals over the state pension age and (b) households with at least one member over the state pension age who would be eligible for an income-related benefit in (i) 2012, (ii) 2015, (iii) 2020, (iv) 2030, (v) 2040 and (vi) 2050 if the earnings link were restored to the basic state pension in (A) 2012 and (B) 2015. [122387]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available. Projections of entitlement for pension credit under the proposed reforms to state pensions are given in the following tables.

The Government have given a commitment to re-link the uprating of the basic state pension to average earnings. Our objective, subject to affordability and the fiscal position, is to do this in 2012, but in any event by the end of the next Parliament at the latest. We will make a statement on the precise date at the beginning of the next Parliament.

The proposed reforms to the state pension system will encourage individual personal responsibility for retirement and provide a solid foundation on which people can save. These reforms will mean that those with a good history of working or caring and saving towards retirement will be taken clear of entitlement to the pension credit standard minimum guarantee, while continuing to provide a safety net for those who have been unable to build up a sufficient state or private pension.

(a) Individuals over state pension age entitled to pension credit

Projections of pension credit entitlement

2030	3.9	36	4.1	37
2040	3.7	32	3.9	33
2050	3.0	28	3.3	30

Notes:
1. Projections incorporate the reforms to state pensions included in the Pensions Bill and are consistent with projections included in the Regulatory Impact Assessment to the Bill.
2. The projections do not include the impact of personal accounts.
3. Robust projections of combined entitlement to pension credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit are not available.
4. Care should be taken when interpreting these projections as they are subject to a margin of uncertainty. The projections are based on long run simulations of the incomes of individuals under a set of assumptions including life expectancy, partnership formation, earnings growth, employment rates, state and private pension accumulation.

Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what processes his Department carries out to stop payment of basic state pension on the death of a claimant; and if he will make a statement. [118800]

James Purnell: Upon receipt of a notification of the death of a customer, the information is recorded on the relevant computer system, and payments of state pension are stopped with immediate effect.

Notifications are typically provided by next of kin or close relatives, by telephone or post. Checks are made to establish the identity of the deceased customer, and when notification is received by phone, verification of customer's identity is obtained through a series of security questions.

The Office for National Statistics provides us with a weekly summary of notifications of death made direct to the DWP from registrars.

From the autumn of 2007, notifications of death will be received on a daily basis from the Office for National Statistics, as opposed to the current weekly basis. This will assist in enabling a prompt cessation of payment following death.

Pensions Education Fund

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the expected total allocation is of funds on Pensions Education Fund contracts; [125531]

(2) how much each of the 26 contracted awards from the Pensions Education Fund has cost; [125470]

(3) with whom further Pensions Education Fund contracts have been agreed since the initial 26 were awarded. [125479]

James Purnell: The total expected allocation of funds to the 26 organisations that made successful applications to the Pensions Education Fund is £5,137,961.

The value of each of the 26 contracts awarded by the Pensions Education Fund is contained in the following table.

Rented Housing

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of (a) the number and (b) the proportion of households renting from (i) local authorities, (ii) registered social landlords, (iii) private landlords and (iv) owner occupiers which are (A) over state pension age and (B) of working age. [126504]

James Purnell: The information is in the tables.

The following estimates have been published from the Family Resources Survey: United Kingdom 2004-05.

	Percentage of households

1. Working age is defined as 16-59 for women and 16-64 for men.
2. 'Council' includes local authority, new town and NIHE rented accommodation.
3. 'Housing Associations' includes co-operative and trust rented accommodation.
4. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which align the FRS to Government office region populations by age and sex. Estimates are subject to sampling error and remaining non-response error.
5. Figures for the number of households have been rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Social Security Benefits: Carers

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of (a) the number of carers working more than 35 hours per week in the UK and (b) the percentage of carers claiming (i) the carer's allowance, (ii) income support, (iii) jobseeker's allowance and (iv) the carer's premium. [127559]

Mrs. McGuire: It is estimated that there are approximately 1.08 million informal carers in Great Britain who provide care for more than 35 hours per week.[1]

Approximately 8 per cent. of the estimated total of 5.7 million informal carers are receiving carer's allowance, 4 per cent. are receiving the carer premium in income support, and 0.1 per cent. are receiving the carer premium in income-based jobseeker's allowance.[2]

[1] Source:

Family Resources Survey 2004-05. It should be noted that the Family Resources Survey generates a lower estimate of the total number of carers than the Census, which is used to answer the second part of this Question. In consequence, the answers to the separate parts of the Question are not directly comparable.

[2] Source:

Figures shown are for Great Britain, not the UK, as the benefits discussed are payable in Great Britain. There are overlaps between those in receipt of carer's allowance and the other premiums.

Social Security Benefits: Disabled

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claiming (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance and (c) income support for incapacity are undertaking permitted work. [127817]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the following table.

Number of incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance (SDA) claimants undertaking permitted work in Great Britain: as at August 2006

		Benefit combination
Permitted work type	All	IB and IS	IB only	SDA and IS	SDA only

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether his Department collects data for tax benefit model tables on the marginal rate of deductions for disabled people; [127910]

(2) if he will place in the Library the tax benefit model tables on the marginal rate of deductions for disabled people for the latest period for which figures are available. [127911]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 19 March 2007]: Data on claimants of disability living allowance and attendance allowance are collected but not used to calculate marginal deduction rates for inclusion in the tax benefit model tables.

Social Security Benefits: Immigrants

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what benefit entitlements are for unemployed A2 and A8 migrants who have previously been in employment in the UK for less than a year. [129014]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave on 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1413W.

Standard Housing Allowance

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact on work incentives of the pilot standard housing allowance. [117575]

Mr. Plaskitt: Evidence from the pathfinder local housing allowance evaluation to date suggests that claimants who are paid their benefit directly are more likely to report that they are looking for work, and the proportion of claimants paid directly has increased from 50 per cent. to 84 per cent. Increased financial inclusion can improve work readiness and 91 per cent. of tenants have a bank or building society account, with around a quarter of claimants saying that they opened an account because of the local housing allowance. Additionally, the transparency of the local housing allowance is reported to make discussions about work between advisers and claimants easier. Some of these effects of the local housing allowance, such as increased financial inclusion, will take time to impact on claimant behaviour.

The final evaluation reports are scheduled to be published in the summer.

State Retirement Pensions: Greater London

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are in receipt of age addition to their state pension in Greater London. [127237]

James Purnell: As at March 2006, there were 234,000 state pension claimants in Greater London in receipt of the 25p age addition.

Notes:

1. Data are taken from a 5 per cent. sample and therefore subject to sampling variation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Business

12. Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the number of Government schemes in place to support small businesses. [128960]

Margaret Hodge: DTI Ministers and Ministers from the Treasury meet regularly to discuss a range of issues.

Businesses: Taxation

13. Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the impact of taxation on businesses. [128961]

Mr. Darling: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Jones).

Research Councils

14. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of the recently announced change in research councils' budgets on the work of individual research councils. [128962]

Malcolm Wicks: There has been no change to the annual budgets of research councils. What my hon. Friend announced on 20 February 2007 were reductions to the stock of accumulated end of year flexibility (EYF).

The research councils are now considering the implications for their planned activities, and are making individual announcements as they make decisions. Four councils have so far made announcements—the Arts and Humanities Research Council, the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council and the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council. The others will follow suit over the course of the rest of March and April 2007.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

15. Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on the Bank of Credit and Commerce International liquidation; and if he will make a statement. [128964]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The conduct of the liquidation of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA is a matter for the liquidators.

The liquidators will shortly be submitting their annual report to the Secretary of State covering the 12-month period to 15 January 2007.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the liquidation of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International to be resolved. [129549]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The liquidators are making every effort to conclude the liquidation and pay final amounts to creditors as soon as possible, however, the English liquidation is one of several worldwide that are closely linked and only when they are all substantially complete will it be possible for a formal conclusion in this country.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions Ministers in his Department have had with creditors in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International case. [129550]

Jim Fitzpatrick: From time to time Ministers have met my right hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) in the company of one or more deposit creditors of BCCI.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has had with counterparts in the Cayman Islands and Luxembourg authorities regarding the Bank of Credit and Commerce International liquidation. [129551]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department has had no discussions with authorities in the Cayman Islands or Luxemburg on this matter; the progress and control of the liquidations are matters for the liquidators, creditors and courts of the various jurisdictions.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to improve administrative processes in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International case. [129552]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The administration of the liquidations is a matter for the liquidators, creditors and courts of the various jurisdictions. The Secretary of State has no role to play in such administration.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the final cost to the public purse of the liquidation of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International; and what proportion of total moneys recovered this represents. [129553]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The cost of the BCCI liquidation will be entirely borne by the company's estate.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the lessons to be drawn from the liquidation process of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International. [129554]

Jim Fitzpatrick: BCCI's has been one of the most complex liquidations ever, which has resulted in exceptional returns to creditors, who will have received 84 per cent. of what they are owed by the end of 2007. This case has shown how the liquidation process can benefit from the close involvement of creditors in assisting liquidators to carry out their functions.

Home Renewable Energy Schemes

16. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will increase his Department's allocation of funds to home renewable energy schemes. [128965]

Malcolm Wicks: The Low Carbon Buildings Programme has two phases with the aim of helping to build a sustainable industry for microgeneration technologies.

Phase 1 (£30 million) was launched in April 2006 and provides several streams of funding for householders. Phase 2, with a £50 million budget announced in Budget 2006, was launched in December. It supports projects in the public and not for profit sectors, with the specific aim of driving down the costs of microgeneration technologies. Both phases continue to make good progress.

Under Phase 1 we have so far committed £7.2 million to 4,550 household projects and £1.1 million to 64 community projects, and we expect to commit around £2.3 million to the 26 Stream 2 projects in the first round of grant awards.

The Low Carbon Buildings Programme is a demonstration not a deployment programme, and we believe that the current funding made available to the household stream will allow us to meet the key objectives of the scheme. We aim to continue funding until June 2008, by which time some of our wider measures to promote microgeneration should be taking hold.

UK and EU Trade Balance

17. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the UK trade balance was with other European Union countries in the latest period for which figures are available. [128966]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK deficit on trade in goods and services with the EU25 was £37.9 billion in 2005 (the latest period for which a complete set of figures is available).

The ONS caution that following a change in the pattern of trade associated with MTIC Fraud, interpretation of the breakdown between EU and non-EU trade is more difficult.

Total UK exports (goods + services) were £326 billion in 2005—up 9 per cent. on 2004.

The stock of inward investment in the UK rose to £483 billion at the end of 2005, a rise of £119 billion over the stock at the end of 2004.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128067]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Figures for broken-down costs of such spending by the Department through the Central Office of Information are available for 2004-05 and 2005-06 but are not readily available for the preceding years and to provide these would incur disproportionate cost.

The figures for 2004-05 and 2005-06 for the cost of advertising on TV, on radio and in the press (including advertising by the Small Business Service) and excluding production costs and VAT are as follows:

The total cost of media spend on advertising and promotional campaigns run by the Department through the Central Office of Information (excluding VAT) in 2004-05 was £2,009,800 and for 2005-06 £3,257,543.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128253]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department and its agencies have arrangements in place with Royal Mail for the despatch of its standard mail. The DTI follows Office of Government Commerce procurement guidance and seeks to ensure value for money when considering which postal operators to use.

EC Grants and Loans

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value was of (a) grants to and (b) related contributions from (i) organisations which are not small or medium-sized enterprises, (ii) large companies and (iii) universities under the EU Framework Programme in each year since 2004 which are not small or medium-sized enterprises. [121384]

Margaret Hodge: I refer the hon. Member to parliamentary questions 120025, 120026 and 120029, answered on 20 February 2007, Official Report, columns 654W, 654-55W and 656-67W respectively.

Energy Supply: EC Law

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps he plans to take to implement Article 13 of the Energy Services Directive following completion of the metering and billing consultation; [128678]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the Department for Communities and Local Government on how smart meters can contribute to the plans for carbon zero houses in 2016. [128679]

Malcolm Wicks: In addition to considering responses to its consultation on metering and billing, including smart metering, the Department has had extensive exchanges with interested parties within and outside Government. The Government will set out its views on metering and billing, including matters arising from Article 13 of the Energy Services Directive, in the forthcoming Energy White Paper.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 547W to the hon. Member for Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Hands) on the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority, what role his Department has in monitoring the spending of public money by that authority. [125053]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 March 2007]: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) is a non-departmental public body (NDPB). My Department sets its budget, which includes grant in aid, and my officials monitor the NDA in line with parliamentary controls set out in Government Accounting—which includes agreeing limits on the NDA's delegated authority. In addition, officials have due regard to compliance with Cabinet Office guidance on the management of NDPBs.

Package Holidays: Safety

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from consumer groups on (a) tour operator liabilities and (b) the adequacy of the protection afforded by current legislation under the Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992 following the fatalities at the Louis Corcyra Beach Hotel, Corfu, in October 2006. [128155]

Mr. McCartney: Since October 2006 I have received no representation from customer groups on the issues listed.

Phoenix Companies: Complaints

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints trading standards officers have received regarding so-called phoenix companies, which liquidate and reform, in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [122985]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Trading standards officers are linked to local authorities and do not report directly to the Department of Trade and Industry. The information requested is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Radio Frequencies: Licensing

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what statutory powers he has to direct Ofcom in the implementation of a decision by the EC Radio Spectrum Committee allowing 2G spectrum to be reframed for 3G use. [127679]

Margaret Hodge: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State can direct Ofcom's management of spectrum for security, international relations and public safety reasons under Section 5 of the Communications Act 2003, or more broadly under Section 156 of the Act.

To invoke Section 156, Ofcom must be consulted, and other Departments would be consulted on the merits of any particular case through the Cabinet Office Official Committee on Spectrum Strategy. Any direction would then be laid before Parliament and subject to an affirmative resolution of each House.

Redundancy

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the compatibility of existing provisions of employer redundancy schemes with age discrimination regulations, with particular reference to his Department's own redundancy scheme. [127585]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 provide exemptions from age challenge for employers that either follow the statutory redundancy scheme or offer enhanced versions of the statutory scheme. These exemptions were discussed with employer groups including the CBI and EEF. However, the Government do not hold details of employers' individual schemes.

If staff of the Department of Trade and Industry are made redundant, they receive benefits as set out in the Civil Service Compensation Scheme (CSCS). The Cabinet Office is reviewing the terms of the CSCS, taking account of various factors including the provisions of the age legislation, and plans to consult the Council of Civil Service Unions about changes to the scheme in due course.

Small Businesses: Females

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to assist female entrepreneurs to set up their own businesses. [128953]

Margaret Hodge: Women entrepreneurs make a significant contribution to the UK economy. Women-owned businesses contribute about £60 billion to the UK economy. Developing women's enterprise is therefore an economic imperative.

That is why I have been working with providers of business support to ensure that women can access the women-friendly advice and help they need. Our key partners in this area are the regional development agencies.

I have set up the Task Force on Women's Enterprise, which has been tasked with driving forward the development of women's enterprise.

To supplement the role of the Task Force, I have also established a network of women entrepreneur ambassadors to inspire other women in starting their own businesses.

Telephones: Digital Technology

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of (a) households and (b) businesses which receive telephone services through a digital access carrier system in each region of the UK. [127257]

Margaret Hodge: I understand from BT that this information is not available on a regional basis. The company estimates that the current number of UK telephone lines delivered through a digital access carrier system is 550,000, a reduction of 100,000 lines since February 2006.

Thomas Cook

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from (a) independent and (b) non-vertically integrated tour operators on the proposed Thomas Cook MyTravel merger. [128154]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not received any representations from tour operators relating to the proposed merger. The regulatory function of investigating mergers is the responsibility of the independent competition authorities.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Energy Supply

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in the provision of electricity networks and supply throughout Afghanistan since 2002; and if he will make a statement. [127152]

Hilary Benn: The latest quarterly progress report issued by the Government of Afghanistan (GoA)states that the Ministry of Energy and Water, in partnership with various donors and governments, has made considerable strides since 2003 to rehabilitate the provision of electricity throughout Afghanistan. It is estimated that 15 per cent. of the population now has access to some electrical power. This includes approximately 378,700 urban and rural households, 33,500 commercial establishments and 5,300 government institutions. However, access remains poor and is often unreliable. Furthermore, figures should be treated with caution as there are serious limitations in ability to measure some of the statistics. DFID is not directly engaged in this sector. Lead donors are the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank.

In October 2002, USAID committed support for a national irrigation and power rehabilitation programme in conjunction with Afghanistan's Ministry of Energy and Water. The programme is focused on the rehabilitation of the south east power system (SEPS), a 100 MW power generation and transmission network. It aims to provide low cost and reliable power to 1.7 million residents in Helmand and Kandahar provinces by the end of 2009. Central to this initiative is a commitment to rehabilitate the Kajaki multi-purpose dam, built by USAID in 1953 on the Helmand river.

The programme is split into phases and will include rehabilitating and upgrading the dam, its power plant and associated transmission network by 2009. The first phase will increase Kajaki's generation capacity to 51 MW. Funding of $150 million has already been allocated for this work. The UK Government, through DFID, may fund smaller projects in the vicinity of the dam as part of a stabilisation programme.

Afghanistan: Reconstruction

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding for the reconstruction and development of Afghanistan was channelled through the Asian Development Bank in each year since 2001. [127974]

Hilary Benn: Since 2001, DFID Afghanistan has channelled £335,000 to the Asian Development Bank for reconstruction and development. This support was divided equally between 2005-06 and 2006-07. This funding provides technical assistance to help the Afghan Government address key policy and institutional issues in the areas of land policy and land administration.

Africa: Overseas Aid

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what anti-corruption safeguards are in place to ensure that aid given to African countries is used for its intended purpose. [128870]

Hilary Benn: Corruption is a serious problem in much of Africa and the poor suffer most. When deciding how to provide assistance to developing country partners, DFID carefully assesses their commitment to improving public financial management, promoting good governance and transparency, and fighting corruption.

In most countries, DFID delivers aid in a range of ways and the choice of aid instruments depends on the circumstances of each country. DFID takes strong measures to protect our aid programmes from corruption. Strong procurement and management systems have been established to prevent corruption in projects and programmes directly administered by DFID. These systems are subject to independent and systematic audit and evaluation that provide high levels of assurance on the adequacy of systems of control and the processes for safeguarding assets. The external audit for DFID projects is carried out by the UK National Audit Office.

When funds are granted directly to a partner government as Poverty Reduction Budget Support (PRBS), direct responsibility for the use and auditing of those funds is passed to that government. Before a decision is made to provide budget support, DFID carries out a detailed Fiduciary Risk Assessment. This includes a specific assessment of the risk of corruption and enables us to decide whether the circumstances are appropriate for providing PRBS. DFID considers the risk of corruption in the formal public financial management systems, taking into account how these systems operate in practice and the wider governance and institutional context of the country.

Where significant corruption or other fiduciary risks are identified, we consider whether the partner government has a credible programme of reform and whether any additional measures are needed to mitigate the risk. We may require additional measures such as independent audits, Public Expenditure Tracking Surveys or the use of donor procurement systems rather than government ones. Progress is monitored. PRBS is usually accompanied by technical assistance to help the government strengthen its systems.

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what mechanisms are in place to ensure his Department's economical use of paper. [128005]

Mr. Thomas: DFID employs a number of measures to ensure the economical use of paper. All printers and photocopiers wherever possible are set as a default to double-sided printing, and staff are encouraged not to print out internal correspondence sent via e-mail unless absolutely necessary. Our electronic document records management system means that staff have access to a central electronic repository of documents rather than needing to rely on paper files. All used paper is sent for recycling.

DFID currently meets the Government targets for sustainable operations in respect of the reduction of waste generally.

Developing Countries: Rural Areas

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much he has allocated to rural livelihoods in developing countries for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [128472]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's budget for 2007-08 does not make a separate allocation for rural livelihoods. However, in its recent study on tackling poverty in rural areas, the National Audit Office noted DFID's estimate that two-thirds of its bilateral spending directly benefits the rural poor.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which local communities his Department has consulted on the design and operation of country programmes to reach the rural poor. [128792]

Hilary Benn: DFID does not maintain central records of our interaction with rural communities in developing countries. But we are committed to broad country ownership of national development plans and policy making. This includes poor and excluded communities. In many countries we encourage and support mechanisms that enable poor men and women to have a say in national and local planning and to monitor the services that government are providing.

In Ghana, for example, we are supporting the disability movement so that they can influence national poverty reduction plans and budget decisions. In Uganda, the Kabarole Research Centre, with DFID support, monitors the quality of government service provision in rural areas and feeds that information back to local government.

In Tanzania, in the development of poverty reduction plans for the mainland and Zanzibar, we supported consultations with rural communities, including vulnerable groups such as the elderly, on policies to improve service delivery in rural areas. Now, through a grant-making foundation, we are building the capacity of rural organisations such as ageing and disability groups to monitor the quality of service provision. We are funding a 'Views of the People' survey through the Government's poverty monitoring system that will shed light on rural people's views of government performance in tackling rural poverty.

In Nepal, the rural roads programme involves structured consultation with communities to ensure that the needs of everyone—rather than just a vocal few—are taken into account. Communities also identify the poorest families amongst them to take part in road construction. Similarly in Ghana, the Department of Feeder Roads uses a road prioritisation methodology that gives rural communities an opportunity to identify and prioritise their need for rural roads. This approach, developed with DFID support, is being adopted in Ghana to prioritise funding from other development agencies.

In Ethiopia, numerous rural communities from 286 districts were consulted on implementation of the productive safety nets programme. Communities helped identify people who would be eligible for assistance as well as public works programmes that they would engage in.

And in India, the design team for phase 2 of the Madhya Pradesh Rural Livelihoods Project has consulted communities and field staff who work with them about the effectiveness and impact of the first phase.

Inter-American Development Bank

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had on developments at the Inter-American Development Bank and its fund for development. [128276]

Mr. Thomas: I met President Moreno of the Inter-American Development Bank (IADB) twice in the last year, in April 2006 at the IADB annual meetings held in Belo Horizonte, Brazil, and in June 2006 in London. We discussed a range of issues including the use of the fund for special operations (FSO), debt relief for the regional heavily indebted poorer countries (HIPC), the President's "Building Opportunities for the Majority" initiative, and proposed work on climate change. On each occasion I confirmed our support for the President's reorganisation of the Bank, which DFID has been supporting, his work to help borrowing member countries in the Latin American and Caribbean region tackle poverty, inequality and respond to climate change, and work to improve the Bank's performance in making lending available to small enterprises. To date, DFID has approved £18.3 million to support the IADB's work in these areas.

I have also expressed to the President my concern over the details of the current IADB's debt relief initiative to cancel all the outstanding loans of the five HIPC countries in the region. We are concerned that it will constrain the Bank's ability to provide substantial and concessional financing to the poorer HIPC countries to finance the millennium development goals (MDGs). The UK has strongly supported the IADB providing additional debt relief to these HIPCs, but we are concerned about the way the deal is structured and the lack of additional financing for MDGs.

Lebanon

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the priorities of his Department are towards Lebanon. [128776]

Hilary Benn: DFID does not have a bilateral programme in Lebanon. However, the UK responded to the humanitarian crisis last year by contributing £22.3 million at the international donors' conference in Stockholm in August 2006. This money was allocated to humanitarian relief (logistics, food, water, sanitation) delivered through aid agencies (e.g. Red Cross, United Nations (UN)); munitions clearance; bridging (providing and transporting temporary bridges to Lebanon) and funding that is channelled through multilateral funds, e.g. the UN's Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF) and the European Commission (EC).

Over the next four years we will be continuing a further £60 million (approximately) to Lebanon through contributions to the international system. Therefore, a key priority for DFID is to ensure the effective use of funding delivered through multilateral channels.

A difficult problem that we have been addressing in Lebanon is danger to civilians from unexploded bombs. On top of the £1.5 million we had already committed to clearance of unexploded mines, we made available a further £1.2 million to the UN Mines Action Service (UNMAS) and the Mines Advisory Group (MAG) for further munitions clearance work in Lebanon. This means DFID's total contribution to munitions clearance is now close to £2.8 million. We have also asked the Government of Israel to hand over all relevant maps locating unexploded ordnance.

Improving the plight of Palestinian refugees remains a priority for DFID. At the Paris III conference on reconstruction in Lebanon in January 2007, we committed a further £24.4 million to United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) for 2011-12, on top of the £76 million that will be provided to UNRWA over the next four years. Although funds are not earmarked, UNRWA estimates approximately 20 per cent. of these funds will support Palestinians in Lebanon.

The ripple-effect of conflict and instability in Lebanon holds significant risks for our bilateral programmes in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Iraq. We therefore have an interest in addressing the causes of conflict in Lebanon and seeing a stable and prosperous state. In partnership with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and the Ministry of Defence (MOD) we work through HMG's Global Conflict and Prevention Pool (GCPP) to support the implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 1701 and to contribute to peacebuilding.

With the UK embassy in Beirut we are also monitoring initiatives to promote democratic oversight of reconstruction spending and planning. This has the potential to address some of the issues underlying the internal conflict in Lebanon.

Sudan: Armed Conflict

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the measures necessary to ensure the safety of aid workers operating in Darfur. [129005]

Hilary Benn: Humanitarian agencies in Darfur are struggling to deliver in an increasingly difficult environment. Part of this is due to the general insecurity and targeted attacks on humanitarian vehicles, staff and assets and it is partly due to the bureaucratic impediments that undermine the ability of agencies to operate effectively.

With the UN and other international actors, we are urging all sides, including both the rebels and the Government of Sudan, to respect the neutrality of humanitarian agencies and cease all harassment and attacks on their staff. We are also lobbying hard for the Government to ease restrictions on humanitarian agencies particularly on accessing those in need, recruitment, importing supplies, visas and permits for staff.

Through the Common Humanitarian Fund (UK contribution £40 million in 2007) we are also strengthening the ability of the UN to monitor, report and respond to security incidents involving humanitarian workers.

UN Commission for Sustainable Development

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what matters the Government plan to raise at the UN Commission for Sustainable Development in New York in April. [128143]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The 15th Session of the UN Commission on Sustainable Development (CSD) takes place in New York from the 30 April to 11 May 2007. The topics under discussion were agreed in the 2003 multi-year programme of work, which operates in two-yearly cycles, with one review year and one policy year. We are currently in the second, policy year, of discussions on the cluster of climate change, industrial development, energy for sustainable development, and air pollution and atmosphere.

The UK will be working, through the EU, to secure action-oriented outcomes in each of the thematic sectors. In particular, the EU is looking to foster a transition to a global low-carbon economy, with diversified energy policies included in national sustainable development strategies and plans by 2010, and with priority to energy efficiency, renewable energies and improved access to sustainable and affordable energy services for all. The EU has also called for a basket of voluntary commitments on access to energy, energy efficiency and renewables, and a review mechanism to assess progress.

We are also working to ensure an integrated approach through including these issues in national sustainable development strategies, poverty reduction strategies and national development plans. We believe that full consideration of the interlinkages and cross-cutting issues is fundamental to good policy-making.

In addition, we want to ensure that the work of the CSD is complementary to and supports, rather than cuts across, the discussions and negotiations under the United Nations Forum Convention on Climate Change and its associated Kyoto protocol.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether he plans to attend the 15th UN Commission on Sustainable Development in New York in April. [128144]

Mr. Thomas: The 15th Session of the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development will take place in New York from 30 April to 11 May 2007. The four main themes this year are Energy for Sustainable Development, Air Pollution/Atmosphere, Industrial Development and Climate Change. We are currently considering ministerial attendance with DEFRA.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Baby Care Units

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many babies were transferred to hospitals outside Northern Ireland in each of the last six years because of the lack of suitable intensive care facilities in Northern Ireland. [128645]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of babies transferred to hospitals outside Northern Ireland in 2001 is not available within the timeframe provided. Information on the number of babies transferred to hospitals outside Northern Ireland for the years 2002 to 2006 inclusive are provided in the following table:

Dogs: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many convictions for the ownership of a dangerous dog there were in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years; and what the (a) penalty imposed and (b) breed of dog was in each case. [120441]

David Cairns: Local councils provide statistical information to the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) with respect to enforcement of the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1983 (as amended), including the number of prosecutions taken for offences under the legislation. However, prior to 2006 these returns did not specifically distinguish prosecutions for ownership of banned dogs from other prosecutions taken under the legislation.

Since January 2006, figures provided to DARD by local councils show that there have been five successful prosecutions, details of which are set out in the following table. There are also a further 11 prosecutions pending, all of which are with respect to possession of pit bull type dogs. To date, DARD has received statistical information for the final quarter of 2006 from 25 of the 26 local councils.

Successful prosecutions for possession of prohibited dog types during 2006[1] (from information provided to DARD by local councils)

Type of dog	Order	Penalty (£)
Pit bull type dog	Destruction order	50 fine
Pit bull type dog	No destruction order as dog died	200 fine plus a 2 year disqualification order
Pit bull type dog	Destruction order	50 fine plus 169 costs
Pit bull type dog	Destruction order	200 fine plus 94 costs
Pit bull type dog	Destruction order	100 fine plus 181 costs plus costs for the destruction of the dog

[1] To date DARD has received statistical information for the final quarter of 2006 from 25 of the 26 local councils.

Inquiries: Northern Ireland

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the (a) Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland Office inquiries, (b) Bloody Sunday inquiry, (c) hosting the St. Andrew's talks, (d) Rosemary Nelson inquiry and (e) the Finucane inquiry cost to date. [121664]

Mr. Hain: The costs to the end of January 2007 are set out in the following table. The Patrick Finucane inquiry has not yet been established.

	Costs (£ million)
Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland	[1]47.2
Bloody Sunday inquiry	176.2
St. Andrews agreement talks	[2]0.39
Rosemary Nelson inquiry	11. 6

[1] The Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland does not conduct inquiries, her role being one of investigating complaints made against the police. In fulfilling this function, expenditure for the Police Ombudsman over the period 6 November 2000 to 31 March 2007 is detailed in the table. The figure for expenditure for the current financial year is an estimate based on the budget allocated to the Ombudsman for 2006-07.
[2] This represents a total figure. Costs of hosting the talks are to be jointly shared with the Irish Government.

Water Charges

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) average standing charge and (b) average effective tax rate to be levied as part of the house price tax element is under the new system of water rates from April. [119552]

David Cairns: When domestic water and sewerage charges are introduced on 1 April 2007 they will be phased in over three years. Consequently, customers will only pay one third of the full charges in 2007-08.

The standing charges for water and sewerage will be the same for all domestic properties and are currently estimated at around £17 each. The variable charges for water and sewerage are expressed as a rate per £1,000 of capital value and are both currently estimated at around 30p per £1,000 of capital value. The average combined charge for water and sewerage is, therefore, estimated at around £100 in 2007-08.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in the Human Rights and Good Governance team of her Department are tasked with monitoring export licences for compliance with criterion 2 of the EU Code of Conduct; and how many licences that team was sent in 2006. [129029]

Mr. McCartney: There are three officers within the Human Rights Democracy and Governance Group (HRDGG) who dedicate approximately 40 per cent., 40 per cent. and 15 per cent. respectively of their time ensuring that the respect of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the country of final destination is brought into the export licensing process. In doing so, they regularly consult other interested departments and overseas Posts.

HRDGG were consulted on 631 licences in 2006.

Gibraltar: Spain

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Spanish Government on Gibraltar in 2007. [126978]

Mr. Hoon: I have had discussions with Spanish counterparts on a number of issues, including Gibraltar, in 2007. Most recently, issues relating to the Gibraltar Trilateral agreements were raised during conversations with State Secretary Leon in February and March, and EU-related matters were discussed during a meeting with State Secretary Navarro in January.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Gibraltar, among other issues, with the Spanish Foreign Minister on 19 March.

British and Spanish officials also hold regular discussions on a range of issues, including issues related to Gibraltar.

Kashmir

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her Indian and Pakistani counterparts on Kashmir. [128867]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed India-Pakistan relations, and the situation in Kashmir, with the Government of Pakistan during her visit to Islamabad in February, and with the Government of India during her visit to New Delhi in November 2006.

We welcome India and Pakistan's continuing commitment to the dialogue process, and hope that this will lead to a lasting resolution of all outstanding issues, including Kashmir.

Mr. McCartney: There are currently no plans for the President of Namibia to undertake a state visit to the UK. However, plans are under way to invite His Excellency President Pohamba to the UK as a guest of the Government later this year.

Whales

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1205W, on whales, which other foreign Governments she intends to lobby before the 2007 International Whaling Commission meeting; [128620]

(2) on whaling, whether she has approached the Government of any foreign country which voted in favour of lifting the moratorium on whaling at the 2006 International Whaling Commission (IWC) meeting to lobby them to vote to maintain the international moratorium at the 2007 IWC meeting; [128623]

(3) which seven foreign Governments her Department has approached; which two expressed the intention of joining the International Whaling Commission and voting with the UK; what the intentions of the other five countries are; and if she will make a statement. [128625]

Mr. McCartney: Foreign and Commonwealth Office posts continue to lobby in the run-up to the next International Whaling Commission (IWC) meeting in May. 17 countries have now been approached since the last IWC meeting in June 2006: Andorra, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Croatia, Cyprus, Estonia, Greece, Guatemala, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Macedonia, Mongolia, Montenegro, Serbia, Turkey and Uruguay.

Croatia and Cyprus have now joined the IWC. Estonia, Greece, Latvia, Romania and Turkey have committed themselves to joining as soon as domestic legislative procedures allow. Guatemala is a member but is undecided whether it will participate this year. Uruguay is a lapsed member and has not made a decision about re-joining. Andorra and Liechtenstein will not join due to lack of administrative capacity. Other countries listed, apart from Mongolia, have yet to make a final decision on joining.

Mongolia is an IWC member which voted to lift the moratorium on commercial whaling at last year's IWC meeting. The Mongolian Ministry of Foreign Affairs has not confirmed how it will vote this year, or if it will attend.

Future lobbying plans are under discussion.

I also regularly meet groups of businesswomen and individual entrepreneurs, as well as those who advise and assist them.

Meg Munn: Since the end of the consultation phase we have received over 4,000 letters, from a wide variety of individuals and organisations, and the Secretary of Sate has continued to hold meetings with representatives from a broad spectrum of stakeholder groups. We have recognised and listened to the strongly held beliefs on this complex issue, and are confident that the Regulations (approved by Parliament) strike a balance which uphold the rights of all.

Crimes against the Person: Females

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what recent discussions she has had with Home Office colleagues on violence against women; and if she will make a statement. [128972]

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Community Development: Safety

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much each local authority in England and Wales spent on community safety in 2005-06; and what proportion of each authority's total expenditure this represented. [128908]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 20 March 2007]: Information on how much each local authority in England spent on community safety in 2005-06 has been made available in a table which has been placed in the Library of the House. The data are as recorded on revenue and capital outturn returns submitted to this Department by each local authority.

Information for Welsh local authorities is a matter for the Welsh Assembly Government.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average expenditure was on community safety by local authorities in 2005-06, broken down by type of local authority; and what proportion of total expenditure this represented. [128909]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 20 March 2007]: The information requested for English local authorities is shown in the following table.

Expenditure on community safety, police and fire services by type of local authority: 2005-06

	Average expenditure (£ million)	Proportion of total expenditure (Percentage)
London boroughs	5	1
Metropolitan districts	3	0
Unitary authorities	2	1
Shire counties	11	1
Shire districts	0	2

Communities and Local Government Revenue Outturn and Capital Outturn Returns

Community safety is defined as the whole of expenditure on police and fire services plus the revenue spending on crime reduction and safety services and capital spending on community safety. These categories capture spending on community safety which authorities cannot clearly or properly allocate to a specific service.

Departments: ICT

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what Gateway reviews (a) have been produced and (b) are under way for projects under the responsibility of her Department and its agencies. [127102]

Ruth Kelly: Office of Government Commerce (OGC) gateway reviews have been carried out on the following Communities and Local Government projects and programmes since the Department was created on 5 May 2006:

Home Information Packs
Fire Service College E-Learning
Transactional ERDF and State Aid
Pan-Government Agreement on Geographical Information
Government Office IT Outsourcing Project
Open Space Works

Thames Gateway
Housing Corporation ICT Infrastructure Management
Local Area Agreements

New Dimension (Long Term Capability Management).

Local Government: Reform

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether a full council could overturn the (a) decisions and (b) budget of a directly-elected executive under her proposals for reform of local government. [127010]

Ruth Kelly: The Local Government Act 2000 provides that all decisions in the authority are the responsibility of the executive unless otherwise provided for in regulations made under that Act. This applies to a directly elected executive as to any other executive. Those regulations provide for the authority to adopt its annual budget based on the executive's proposals, with or without amendment. In the case of a mayoral executive, the council can amend the executive's budget proposals only on a two-thirds majority, and we intend to apply this same provision to elected executives.

Social Services: Grants

Mr. Nell Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much central Government grant each local authority delivering social services would have received if (a) floors and ceilings had not been applied and (b) if damping had not been applied to the children and young adults element of the grant. [112523]

Mr. Woolas [pursuant to the reply, 8 February 2007, Official Report, c. 1162W]: A corrected table has been placed in the Library of the House showing how much formula grant, which comprises revenue support grant, redistributed business rates and principal formula police grant, would have been received in 2007-08 (a) if damping had been applied to the Children's Social Care Relative Needs Formula and the Younger Adults' Personal Social Services Relative Needs Formula but floor damping had not been applied and (b) if damping had neither been applied to the Children's Social Care Relative Needs Formula and the Younger Adults' Personal Social Services Relative Needs Formula nor had floor damping been applied.

It is not possible to say how much grant authorities would have received in 2007-08 had damping not been applied to the Children's Social Care Relative Needs Formula and the Younger Adults' Personal Social Services Relative Needs Formula but floor damping had been applied, since we might have taken different decisions on the level of floor damping to ensure that every authority would have received a reasonable increase year-on-year on a like-for-like basis, i.e. after adjusting for changes in funding and function.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Candidates

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will amend electoral legislation to allow the words 'the' and 'candidate' to be used within the description of any political party candidate without an additional, specific description having to be registered under the Electoral Administration Act 2006. [128878]

Bridget Prentice: The Electoral Administration Act 2006 amended the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 so as to make new provision for political parties to register up to 12 descriptions of no more than six words for use on its nomination papers or ballot papers.

The Government have no plans to amend electoral legislation in the way suggested.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many election petitions have been heard in courts in England and Wales since 2000; what the outcome was of each case in which no proceedings remain active; which election each concerned; and what the nature was of each petition. EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoption

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) placement orders and (b) adoption orders were made in 2006. [118648]

Mr. Dhanda: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Mid-Dorset and North Poole (Annette Brooke) on 6 February 2007, Official Report, column 832W.

Correspondence

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of letters from outside organisations his Department answered within its target time, broken down by (a) directorate and (b) unit of his Department in the latest period for which figures are available. [117673]

Mr. Dhanda: For statistical purposes the Department does not differentiate between letters and emails, or whether the correspondence is from an individual or an organisation. For general correspondence (excluding freedom of information requests) our performance for the first three quarters of this operational year (1 April 2006 to 31 December 2006) is as follows:

Directorate	Answered within target (Percentage)
Children Young People and Families	86
Communications Directorate	49
Corporate Services and Development	97
Finance and Analytical services	92
Higher Education Directorate	90
Lifelong Learning and Skills	82
Private Office	96
Schools Directorate	94
Chief Information Officer Group	93
Emails not assigned to a Directorate	100
Overall	93

Freedom of information (FOI) requests are not available by directorate. The total FOI inquiries answered within the deadline for the period 1 April 2006 to 30 September 2006 is 89 per cent. The figures for the following quarter 1 October 2006 to 31 December 2006 are not yet available as the 20-day deadline for reporting did not end until 26 January 2007.

Curriculum: Expenditure

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1702W, on curriculum expenditure, what exact amount his Department spent in 2005-06 on the delivery of the free entitlement for three and four year olds; what the exact level of funding has been in each of the last five years; and in relation to which duties set out in the Childcare Act 2006 each local authority spent the budget in 2005-06. [128747]

Beverley Hughes: The information available on expenditure for three and four year olds is shown in table 8.3 in the Departmental Report 2006. The estimated outturn for 2005-06 is £3.443 billion. This includes expenditure on under fives in nursery schools, in primary schools and in the private, voluntary and independent sectors. For the outturn figures for the previous five years, I refer the hon. Member to row (c) of the answer I gave on 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1396W.

The Childcare Act 2006 received Royal Assent on 11 July 2006 and, therefore, none of the duties contained in it were in force in 2005-06.

Departmental Office Space

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what area of office space his Department and its agencies used in central London in (a) 2004 and (b) 2006; and if he will make a statement. [112187]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills used 36,840.20 sq m of leased office space in central London in 2004 and 35,663.20 sq m in 2006. The Department used no freehold office space in central London in 2004 or 2006, and had no agencies in central London in those years.

The Department aims to further reduce its central London office space by over 13,000 sq m by the end of 2008.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether people employed (a) through employment agencies and (b) on a consultancy basis are included in the calculations for the full-time equivalent staff mentioned in his Department's annual report. [102998]

Mr. Dhanda: People employed through employment agencies and on a consultancy basis are not included in the numbers of full-time equivalent staff mentioned in the Department's annual report. Office for National Statistics guidance to Departments provides that self-employed contract workers and agency workers not paid directly from the payroll should be excluded from counts measuring the number of employees in the public sector and that only employees with an employment contract who are being paid by the organisation should be included.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many work permits were applied for by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [126799]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department has not applied for any work permits during the last five years and has not had any agencies since 2001.

Entry to Employment Programme: Gloucestershire

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people joined the E2E programme in Gloucestershire in each year since its inception; and if he will make a statement. [129288]

Phil Hope: Entry to Employment (E2E) is the main programme for young people not yet ready for an apprenticeship, a job or further learning. The number of young people joining E2E since it began for each funding year (August to July) in Gloucestershire is as follows:

	Number
2003/04	1,051
2004/05	741
2005/06	597
2006/07 (First six months)	309

Since 2005/06, additional pre-level 2 provision has been available locally through European social funds. Take-up of such programmes continues to rise in 2006/07. To date, 367 young people have started on this type of provision in Gloucestershire. This is aimed at young people who are not immediately ready to undertake E2E or the minimum attendance of 16 hours per week that E2E demands so offering a wider choice of provision at this level.

E2E has been successful. We will be looking to absorb its good practice into the new system we will be introducing in the next couple of years.

Nurseries: Qualifications

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to increase the number of individuals possessing level three and level two qualifications for running play and child care groups. [129290]

Beverley Hughes: In our 10-year strategy for childcare, 'Choice for parents, the best start for children' published in December 2004 and in our response to the Children's Workforce Strategy consultation published in February 2006, we set out our commitment to establishing a better qualified and more professional early years workforce. To help achieve this, we have introduced a £250 million Transformation Fund aimed at improving the quality of early-years provision without the cost of doing so being passed on to parents.

Between 2006 and 2008, a significant part of this Transformation Fund is being spent on increasing the number of early-years workers with at least a level three qualification. This fund adds to existing funding to local authorities and the Learning and Skills Council being used to increase the number of those with level 2 qualifications and to develop the early-years workforce more generally.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will take steps to ensure that playgroup qualification courses place appropriate emphasis upon work-based training. [129291]

Beverley Hughes: It is for the appropriate Sector Skills Council to specify the content of training courses. However, I can give an assurance that most of the courses available to those working in playgroups do involve work-based training.

Overseas Students: English Language

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students undertook English for Speakers of Other Languages courses in each year between 2000 and 2005, broken down by nationality of students. [128808]

Phil Hope: The number of enrolments to ESOL courses in each year between 2000 and 2005 is as follows:

	Number
2000/01	159,000
2001/02	302,000
2002/03	413,000
2003/04	488,000
2004/05	484,000
2005/06	[1]504,000

[1] Based on data up to October 2006, both confirmed and estimated.

Data on learners is gathered through the individualised learner record (ILR). Its primary function is to capture learner suitability to a learning aim and ensure correct payment to the provider of learning, and as such, there is no field on the ILR designed to capture a learner's nationality.

Runaway Children

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance is given to local authorities on children in their area who have run away or are missing from home, specifying in each case the (a) document, (b) paragraph and (c) line references; and whether each has statutory status. [128741]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 20 March 2007]: Government issued "Children Missing from Care and Home—a guide to good practice" in tandem with the social exclusion unit's report "Young Runaways" in 2002. This includes information for local authorities and their partner agencies on responding to children in care who go missing from their placements and to children who go missing from their homes.

Sections 1 to 7 of this guidance from pages 5 to 19 set out the issues to be considered and the processes to be followed so that local authorities respond effectively to children who go missing from their care placement. Sections 8 to 10 from pages 23 to 29 set out the issues and processes to be followed for those who run away from home.

This guidance and its related circular, LAC(2002)17, were issued under section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 which means that, except in exceptional circumstances, councils must follow its advice.

We are currently working with the Children's Society to review how local authorities are meeting the needs of runaways under the Every Child Matters framework, and will consider the case for fresh guidance on runaways when that work is completed.

Schools: Coventry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in Coventry offer extended hours; and if he will make a statement. [118999]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 7 February 2007]: There are currently over 3,800 extended schools in England. This includes 18 extended schools in the Coventry local authority area (15 primary and three secondary).

All these schools are providing a core offer of extended services. This is comprised of a varied menu of study support activities and high quality child care 8 am to 6 pm all year round in primary schools. These services will be provided on the school site or in partnership with local private, voluntary and independent providers. They will also offer parenting support; swift and easy referral to a wide range of specialist support services such as health and social care; and wider community access to ICT, sports and arts facilities, on the school site including adult learning.

Special Educational Needs: East Yorkshire

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children in East Yorkshire (a) had special educational needs and (b) were educated in special schools in each year since 2000. [126201]

Training: Parents

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made towards the establishment of the National Parenting Academy. [128270]

Mr. Dhanda: The National Academy for Parenting Practitioners (NAPP) is the working title for what was previously termed the National Parenting Academy. This change of name recognises that the Academy is to be established to support the development and training of all who deliver services to parents.

The process to select the preferred supplier for the Academy is under way. We intend to confirm the supplier and award the grant to deliver the NAPP by the end of April 2007. The official launch for the NAPP is planned for Parents' Week which starts on 15 October 2007.

Youth Opportunity Funds

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been provided to schemes under the Youth Opportunities Fund, broken down by local authority area. [128262]

Mr. Dhanda: The Youth Opportunity Fund (YOF) and the Youth Capital Fund (YCF) were announced in the Green Paper Youth Matters and have been available to local authorities from April 2006. A total of £115 million is available for both funds over the period 2006-08, £61.5 million of which is for YOF, half in each year.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schemes have been funded by the Youth Opportunities Fund, broken down by (a) local authority area and (b) type. [128263]

Mr. Dhanda: The Youth Opportunity Fund (YOF) and the Youth Capital Fund (YCF) have only been available to local authorities from April 2006. A total of £115 million is available for both funds over 2006-08.

We do not hold centrally information on the types of schemes the Youth Opportunity Fund is funding. We are currently in the process of collating data on the numbers of projects and the young people involved in the funds for the first year of funding 2006-07. This information will be available after the end of the financial year, when reports have been received from LAs.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much of the Youth Opportunities Fund remains (a) uncommitted and (b) unspent for (i) 2006-07 and (ii) 2007-08. [128264]

Mr. Dhanda: A total of £115 million is available through the Youth Opportunity and Youth Capital Funds over the period 2006-08. A total of £57.5 million is available in each of the years 2006-07 and 2007-08. All the funds for 2006-07 and 2007-08 have been allocated to local authorities. In 2006-07, £170,179 was withheld at the request of four authorities who indicated they would not be able to spend their full allocation.

It is not possible for the £170,179 under spend to be reallocated at this stage of the year.

Child Trust Fund

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2032W, on the Child Trust Fund, how many children born in each quarter since April 2005 are in receipt of child benefit, live in the UK and are not subject to any immigration restrictions. [128452]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table shows the number of children for whom child benefit was claimed at 30 November 2006, who live in the UK and are not subject to any immigration restrictions, by the quarter and year in which they were born.

Insurance Companies: Ethics

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what complaints his Department has received on the ethical standards of the insurance industry. [128956]

Ed Balls: The Treasury receives correspondence relating to a wide range of issues. I am not aware of any recent letters to the Treasury on the ethical standards of the insurance industry.

The Financial Services Authority (FSA) is responsible for regulating the insurance industry. The FSA's Principles for Business place high-level responsibilities on regulated firms to, among other things, act with integrity and to treat their customers fairly. Additionally, the FSA's Threshold Conditions set down the minimum standards for becoming and remaining authorised, including that the firm is 'fit and proper' to conduct authorised business.

Planning Gain Supplement

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of revenue from planning gain supplement from developments in London he plans to be allocated to the Greater London Authority. [128637]

John Healey: Budget 2007 announced that the Government propose that either the Mayor of London or one of his functional bodies would directly receive the regional share of PGS revenues for infrastructure to deliver the objectives identified in the London Plan. As in other regions, the expectation is that transport would be the focus of spending in the short term.

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of home buyers in 1996-97 paid (a) nought and (b) 1 per cent. stamp duty; [128641]

Mr. Timms: The following table gives the estimated numbers and percentage of residential property transactions in England and Wales falling into each stamp duty band in 1996-97. Figures for the UK are not available for this year.

Price range (£)	Stamp duty rate (percentage)	Number of residential property transactions (000)	Percentage of residential transactions

The following table gives the estimated percentage of residential property transactions in the UK falling into each stamp duty band in 2005-06:

0	784	48
1	640	39
3	179	11
4	39	2

The 0 per cent. band includes residential transactions involving considerations over £120,000 which were relieved from stamp duty land tax due to disadvantaged area relief.

(8) pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2236W, on the Treasury Board, if he will place in the Library full minutes of the four meetings of the Treasury Board that have taken place in 2006-07 and of which summaries have been placed on his Department's website. [128456]

John Healey: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Rayleigh on 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2236W.

No changes have been made to the Treasury Board since 1 February 2007.

Managing Directors attend Treasury Board meetings as a matter of course. Managing Director posts have always been at board level. The post of Director of Operations has attended the Board since its creation. The post of Director of Policy and Planning was created in July 2004 and became a full member of this Board in July 2005.

Details of individual postholders have been provided in the department's annual reports.

There is no body known as the HM Treasury Executive Committee.

Valuation Office

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 29 November 2006, Official Report, column 734W, on the Valuation Office Agency, and the answer to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar of 18 January 2007, Official Report, column 1328W, for what reasons the automated valuation model is not defined as a full computer-assisted mass appraisal system. [128539]

Dawn Primarolo: An automated valuation model is one component of a fully integrated computer-assisted mass appraisal (CAMA) system. The latter would include, for example, a geographic information system, which the Valuation Office Agency does not have.

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the most recent version of the advice given to the Valuation Office Agency staff on health and safety in the field, including guidance on surveying equipment. [128636]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 531W. There has been no update to the document since it was placed in the Library.

Voluntary Work: Young People

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what role his Department plans in the vcashpoint scheme organised by the National Youth Volunteering Organisation. [128894]

Dawn Primarolo: The national youth volunteering organisation, v, is funded with up to £100 million, including a fund available to match contributions from business. As part of the match fund, HM Treasury allocated £0.5 million for v for the vcashpoint scheme in 2006-07, matching the equivalent contribution from HSBC.

HM Treasury plays no other role in relation to vcashpoint.

Welfare Tax Credits

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was written off by the Tax Credit Office in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05 and (c) 2005-06. [128925]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 December 2006, Official Report, columns 1559-60W to the hon. Member for South Holland and The Deepings (Mr. Hayes).

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. McFadden) on Wednesday 21 March, Official Report, column 957W.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister how many meetings he held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128751]

The Prime Minister: My officials and I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Iraq: Casualties

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Prime Minister if he will meet representatives of servicemen and women from Iraq and Afghanistan and the families of the bereaved to discuss their treatment under the military covenant. [129027]

The Prime Minister: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Forest of Dean (Mr. Harper) on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 36W.

In addition, I refer my right hon. Friend to the answers I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) and the right hon. Member for Witney (Mr. Cameron) at Prime Minister's questions on Wednesday 14 March, Official Report, columns 280-81.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many girls in the (a) Peterborough City Council area and (b) the Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust area (i) under 15 years of age and (ii) aged between 15 and 18 years of age had abortions in each year between 1997 and 2005; and if she will make a statement. [128203]

Caroline Flint: The available information is set out in the following tables.

Abortions to women aged under 20[1], residents of Peterborough primary care trusts (PCTs)[2], 2002-05

		under 16	16-17	18-19
2002	North Peterborough PCT	[3]1	27	43

2004	South Peterborough PCT	26	37
2005	North Peterborough PCT	37	41
2005	South Peterborough PCT	27	30

Notes:

[1] Data have previously been published in the above format. We are unable break the data down by age under 15 and 15-18 as this, in turn, would reveal small numbers (0-9 cases). This is in line with ONS guidance published in 2005.

[2] PCTs for North Peterborough and South Peterborough are the nearest available areas to Peterborough city council area and the Peterborough and Stamford hospitals NHS foundation trust as data are published by PCT of the woman's residence. Prior to 2002 there were no data published relating specifically to Peterborough.

[3] Totals less than 10 are already published.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Committee on Toxicity investigating contaminated air events plans to carry out a full scale epidemiological survey of UK airline crews. [127316]

Caroline Flint: The Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment is considering a review of published epidemiological surveys at its meeting on 20 March 2007.

[127620]

Caroline Flint: The following table shows the number of all diagnosis count of finished in-year admission episodes for children aged 17 and under, admitted via accident and emergency (A&E) departments for an alcohol related illness, by patients, primary care trust (PCT)/strategic health authority (SHA) of residence and West Suffolk Hospital NHS Trust covering the period 1997-98 to 2005-06. This is the latest data available.

Notes:
Finished in-year admissions.
A finished in-year admission is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider, excluding admissions beginning before 1 April at the start of the data year. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
PCT and SHA data quality
PCT and SHA data was added to historic data-years in the HES database using 2002-03 boundaries, as a one-off exercise in 2004. The quality of the data on PCT of treatment and SHA of treatment is poor in 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99, with over a third of all finished episodes having missing values in these years. Data quality of PCT of general practitioner (GP) practice and SHA of GP practice in 1997-98 and 1998-99 is also poor, with a high proportion missing values where practices changed or ceased to exist. There is less change in completeness of the residence-based fields over time, where the majority of unknown values are due to missing postcodes on birth episodes. Users of time series analysis including these years need to be aware of these issues in their interpretation of the data.
All diagnoses count of episodes
These figures represent a count of all finished in year admission episodes where the diagnosis was mentioned in any of the 14 (seven prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in a HES record.
Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)
The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (7 prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in the HES data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
Secondary diagnoses
As well as the primary diagnosis, there are up to 13 (6 prior to 2002-03) secondary diagnosis fields in HES that show other diagnoses relevant to the episode of care.
Alcohol related diagnoses: ICD-10 codes
F10 Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol;
K70 Alcoholic liver disease;
T51 Toxic effect of alcohol
Data quality
HES are compiled from data sent by over 200 NHS PCTs in England. The Information Centre for Health and Social Care liaises closely with these organisations to encourage submission of complete and valid data and seeks to minimise inaccuracies and the effect of missing and invalid data via HES processes. While this brings about improvement over time, some shortcomings remain.

Blood: Contamination

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what trials were conducted in the UK between 1984 and 1986 to ascertain the efficacy of heat treatment for (a) commercial and (b) non-commercial VIII blood products; and if she will make a statement. [128427]

Caroline Flint: Heat-treated Factor VIII and Factor IX produced by Bio Products Laboratory (BPL) in the mid 1980s were evaluated in several haemophilia centres in England and Wales. The results from these studies have been published by the investigators in medical journals.

BPL developed 8Y in 1985 and studies on the efficacy of BPL's heat treatment undertaken after 1986 showed that the process was very efficacious. Clinical trials and laboratory studies reported in 1985 had previously demonstrated the safety and clinical efficacy of the heat-treated product made by the Plasma Fractionation Laboratory of Churchill hospital Oxford, which was destined to become the BPL heat treated factor VIII product (8Y).

The report "Self Sufficiency in Blood Products in England and Wales" provides a section on heat treatment which contains information on trials undertaken by a number of commercial companies. The supporting references are all in the public domain.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will place in the Library a copy of the Department's internal audit report referred to in the answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1742W, on destroyed documents/blood products; and if she will make a statement; [128429]

(2) by what date she expects her Department to finish its identification and review of all the documents currently held relating to the safety of blood products between 1970 and 1985; and if she will make a statement. [128430]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The report on the internal review of documents held by the Department relating to the safety of blood products between 1970 and 1985 is being finalised. This report will also take account of missing documents. We expect to complete the report shortly, and a copy will be placed in the Library.

The internal audit report will be referenced in the internal review of documents and we will make all reference documents available.

Cervical Cancer: Vaccination

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she has received on the human papilloma virus (HPV) vaccine Gardasil; whether her Department has conducted an assessment of the effectiveness of new vaccines to tackle HPV; and if she will make a statement. [127518]

Caroline Flint: There have been about 25 representations received regarding the human papilloma virus (HPV) vaccine, Gardasil.

The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) is in the process of thoroughly examining the vaccine safety, efficacy and cost-effectiveness evidence concerning HPV vaccines. The work is being taken forward by a sub-group of JCVI, with further work ongoing to evaluate whether the vaccine is considered to be a cost-effective prevention of cervical cancer; and the impact that HPV vaccine may have on genital warts.

The sub group's advice will be reported to the main JCVI committee for further discussion.

No decisions will be taken on introducing these vaccines into the immunisation programme until JCVI has presented its advice to Ministers for their consideration.

Colorectal Cancer: Screening

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many faecal occult blood testing kit samples have been (a) returned to and (b) analysed by each of the five national bowel cancer screening programme hubs; [129128]

(2) how many people in England have been invited to participate in the national bowel cancer screening programme; and how many have been sent a home testing kit by each of the five national bowel cancer screening programme hubs; [129129]

(3) how many local bowel cancer screening centres have begun providing endoscopy services for patients who have had a positive faecal occult blood test result; [129130]

(4) how many bowel cancers have been diagnosed through the national bowel cancer screening programme; [129131]

(5) when each of the five national bowel cancer screening programme hubs began operation; [129132]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 16 March 2007, the national health service bowel cancer screening programme had sent out 128,993 invitations for screening. Invitations are sent out one week before the testing kits, and people can opt out of receiving a testing kit if they wish.

110,608 faecal occult blood testing kits had been sent out, and 57,280 had been returned and analysed at the five programme hubs. 1,003 positive results had been recorded, and 92 cancers diagnosed. 292 patients were diagnosed with polyps which may have developed into cancer over time. Treating these polyps has reduced their risk of bowel cancer.

The five programme hubs which began operations are shown in the table.

West Midlands and North West (Rugby)	April 2006
Southern (Guildford)	September 2006
London (St. Mark's, Harrow)	October 2006

It is hoped a sixteenth centre will open before the end of March 2007. This will be confirmed if and when quality and capacity criteria have been satisfied.

Departments: Complaints

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff worked in dedicated complaints units in her Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many have there have been in 2006-07 to date. [121676]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department established responsibility for the management of complaints about the Department within its customer service centre in September 2004.

Between 1997-98 and 2001-02 there have been no dedicated staff and complaints have been dealt with at local level.

Since February 2005, there have been two members of staff spending some of their time working on complaints.

Complaints about public consultation exercises and Freedom of Information reviews are carried out by specialist units within the Department.

The NHS Purchasing and Supply Unit (PASA) has no dedicated staff or units for complaints and complaints are handled by its corporate affairs unit.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) had no staff working in dedicated complaints units in the Department and executive agencies in 1997-98, 2001-02, 2005-06 and 2006-07 to date.

However the MHRA has had an independent complaints adviser for the whole period to date. This person has complaints referred to them where they cannot be resolved internally to the complainant's satisfaction.

Departments: Energy

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much energy was used by her Department in each year since 2000, broken down into figures for (a) gas, (b) electricity and (c) vehicle fuel consumption; and what the cost was in each year in each case. [125817]

Andy Burnham: The Department's consumption and cost of energy for each year since 2000 broken down into figures for gas and electricity are shown in the following tables.

Gas: Total expenditure and consumption

	Cost (£)	Usage (kWh)
1999-2000	57,184	6,411,000
2000-01	78,807	6,180,000

2004-05	754,096	14,220,000
2005-06	911,063	13,454,000

The Department does not have a vehicle fleet and does not record details of vehicle fuel consumption.

The Government car service provides vehicles for Ministers but the Department has no record of fuel used for these vehicles.

Departments: Retirement

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many employees from her Department were asked to retire upon reaching 65 years of age as a result of the Department's mandatory retirement policy in each year since 1997. [121738]

Ms Rosie Winterton: From 1 October 2006, two employees have reached age 65 and elected to retire from the organisation. Before then employees retired at age 60.

Drugs: Prisons

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her predecessor's statement of 28 September 2004 on the integrated drug treatment scheme for prisons, what funding has been spent in each year since the annual £40 million budget was announced; how many and what percentage of prisoners have received drug treatment via the programme; and whether the March 2008 target for allocating effective treatment services will be met. [127241]

Caroline Flint: Implementation of the integrated drug treatment system (IDTS) commenced in 2006.

The current year's investment in IDTS totals £17 million. This comprises £12 million from the Department and £5 million from the Home Office. This will fund IDTS implementation in 45 prisons, allowing some 44,000 prisoners to receive treatment via the programme by March 2008.

Eastbourne Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been allocated to Eastbourne District General Hospital for alcohol treatment services in 2007-08. [125470]

Caroline Flint: Funding for alcohol treatment services is not allocated directly to national health service acute trusts.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many casualties were admitted to Eastbourne District General Hospital due to drink-related injuries in 2006. [125492]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Eating Disorders: Research

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for the funding of research into eating disorders. [126805]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is considering whether we can undertake further research into eating disorders through the National Institute for Health Research, about which we hope to make an announcement soon.

Exercise

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much her Department spent on promoting physical activity to (a) children, (b) pensioners and (c) adults in each of the last five years; [129122]

(2) how much public money the Government spent on the encouragement of physical activity among the general population for public health purposes in each of the last five years; and how much is planned to be spent over the next five years. [129126]

Caroline Flint: The Department and the national health service promote the benefits of physical activity in many ways to professionals, the public and other stakeholders.

In particular, primary care trusts are required to have systematic and managed health promotion programmes, including action on exercise, that are responsive to local needs. Spending on the promotion of sport and physical recreation by the NHS is not recorded centrally.

Alongside spending by the NHS to support local delivery of physical activity programmes for adults and children, the Department has funded pilot work to inform interventions. This has included:

the local exercise action pilot scheme (LEAP), which has been jointly funded by the Department, Sport England and the Countryside Agency with an overall cost of £2.5 million between 2003 and 2006. The LEAP pilots included interventions targeted towards children, adults and older people; a joint Department, Department for Education and Skills, and Youth Sport Trust pilot programme Schools on the Move, which includes resource materials for schools, teachers and young people to help integrate pedometers into the life of the school. The Department has invested £100,000 in the pilot during 2005 and 2006; and a contribution of £27,000 by the Department in 2003 to a pilot initiative which distributed 10,000 Step-O-Meters to general practitioner practices in areas of high deprivation and high rates of coronary heart disease. Other funding partners were the Countryside Agency and the British Heart Foundation.

National programmes to promote physical activity arising out of this pilot work include:

the National Step-O-Meter Programme, led jointly by the Department of Health and Natural England, is training health professionals across the country in motivational interviewing and the use of pedometers as a motivational tool, and providing free pedometers for loan to their patients. The Department has invested £650,000 in this programme since 2005; and a £494,000 school pedometer programme, distributing 40,000 pedometers to 250 schools in deprived areas to encourage children to become more active, and enabling all schools to access resources to support increased physical activity.

The Secretary of State for Health, through the section 64 general scheme of grants (s64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968), has power to make grants to voluntary organisations in England whose activities support the Department's policy priorities.

The Department has provided funding to physical activity based programmes under the section 64 scheme to the following organisations:

Sustrans;

Amateur Swimming Association;

English Federation of Disability Sport;

National Heart Forum; and British Trust for Conservation Volunteers.

For the coming year, the Department intends to spend £1.6 million on increasing physical activity. Spending allocations for the years after 2007-08 have yet to be finalised.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the inter-ministerial group on physical activity last met; and what (a) activity it has undertaken and (b) progress it has made. [129133]

Caroline Flint: The inter-ministerial group on physical activity, chaired by Caroline Flint, last met on 5 February 2007. Caroline Flint has also held bilaterals with participating Ministers.

The group has collated information on what each Department has achieved, and reviewed the gaps and obstacles to local delivery.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to encourage and facilitate higher levels of physical activity by people in everyday life. [129134]

Caroline Flint: "Choosing Activity: a physical activity action plan", published on 9 March 2005, sets out 99 actions across Government to promote physical activity among children, in the community, in workplaces, and in the NHS.

Government implementation of Choosing Activity includes:

In December 2006, the Department, Sport England and Natural England published recommendations to support the local commissioning of physical activity interventions. These were based on the findings of the local exercise action pilots (LEAP), which demonstrated that physical activity interventions are cost-effective and can save the NHS money in the long-term by reducing ill-health. LEAP has also shown that it is possible to engage a broad range of people, and to increase physical activity levels.

The National Step-O-Meter Programme, a joint programme across the Department and Natural England, is training health professionals across the country in motivational interviewing and the use of pedometers as a motivational tool, and providing free pedometers for loan to their patients. To date 4,000 primary care health professionals, across 220 PCTs (pre-reconfiguration) have been trained in motivational behaviour change.

To support the above programmes, the Department has developed a simple tool, the general practice physical activity questionnaire (GPPAQ) for routine use in general practice to help health professionals decide when advice and interventions to increase physical activity might be appropriate to offer a patient.

A school pedometer programme, distributing 40,000 pedometers to 250 schools in deprived areas to encourage children to become more active, and enabling all schools to access resources to support increased physical activity.

It is a requirement since 2005 for all schools participating in the National Healthy Schools programme to meet criteria for physical activity.

The Department for Transport are rolling out the new national standard for cycle training, Bikeability, from spring 2007, with the aim that by 2009 half of all year six pupils in England will be trained through schemes awarding the new standard.

Food: Labelling

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require the Food Standards Agency to press for more robust food labelling standards; and what work is being undertaken on standardisation of labelling across the EU. [127579]

Caroline Flint: Food labelling legislation is already largely harmonised within the European Union. The European Commission is currently conducting a review of this legislation, and the Food Standards Agency (FSA) is representing the United Kingdom in preparatory experts' group meetings in Brussels. UK policy lines are being developed by the FSA through consultation with stakeholders and other Government Departments. The Commission does not expect to submit a draft proposal, to Council and the European Parliament, before the end of 2007.

Health Professions: Training

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much it costs to train (a) a nurse and (b) a doctor to the point of full registration. [126539]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information for England on the average cost of training each nurse and doctor for the entire period between entering onto a degree or diploma course until full registration, inclusive of tuition, bursary and salary support costs are given in the following table.

Staff group	2005-06 cost (£)
Nurse diploma (bursaried)	40,225
Nurse degree (bursaried)	28,410
Nurse secondee (salaried)	61,255
Doctor	200,000-250,000

Source:
Financial and Workforce Information Return (FWIR) November 2004 and NHS Student Grant Unit for nurse bursaries.

In the period between entry to medical school and full registration, it is estimated that training a doctor costs between £200,000 and £250,000. Doctors generally continue training after full registration. As the duration and nature of post-registration training varies greatly, and as service and training costs are closely related, it is not possible to provide a meaningful estimate of the total cost of training.

Health Services: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much money was spent in Lancashire on anti-obesity initiatives in each of the last 10 years; [125673]

(2) how much money was spent in Lancashire on anti-alcohol initiatives in each of the last 10 years; [125674]

(3) how much money was spent in Lancashire on anti-smoking initiatives in each of the last 10 years. [125675]

Caroline Flint: Information on spending by national health service organisations on particular areas is not collected centrally. Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for providing health services to meet the needs of their local population, including services to tackle obesity, alcohol misuse and smoking. The 2006-07 and 2007-08 revenue allocations to PCTs separately identify £211 million nationally in 2006-07 and £342 million nationally in 2007-08 to support implementation of the "Choosing Health" White Paper. This funding has been targeted on the most deprived areas to support the delivery of some of the commitments in the "Choosing Health" White Paper. This will enable PCTs to deliver various initiatives including action on diet, activity and obesity, alcohol interventions and NHS stop smoking services. Revenue allocations to commissioning organisations in Lancashire, PCTs and previously health authorities, are shown in the tables.

The tables show the revenue allocations made to PCTs in Lancashire for the two allocations rounds 2006-07 to 2007-08 and 2003-04 to 2005-06.

Health Services: Prisons

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of information and communication technologies infrastructure in the prison medical service with regard to the clinical information and support available; and what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of such infrastructure as compared to that available to doctors working in (a) general practice and (b) elsewhere within the NHS. [127642]

Caroline Flint: Our overall aim is to ensure that national health service professionals working with offenders have access to similar clinical information systems and services as those in the rest of the NHS in order to improve the quality of patient care and support system reform.

The great majority of health professionals working in prisons have no specialist information management and technology support, and the task of developing and providing prison establishments with appropriate clinical information technology (IT) hardware and software has always been recognised as an integral corollary of the transfer of health care responsibility from the Home Office to this Department from April 2006. Within the Department, the provision of strategic IT systems is undertaken by the NHS Connecting for Health (NHS CfH) agency as a part of the wider national programme for IT in the NHS.

Planning is under way to extend compliant primary care systems to support prison healthcare. Mental health and limited secondary care functionality will be added at a later date as applications become available. The first practical step to achieving this goal is in the form of providing the necessary connectivity to the N3 network in the prison estate. This has two aspects: providing broadband connections to prison establishments, and developing a network infrastructure within establishments. In December 2006, £3 million was specifically allocated through strategic health authorities to enhance prison health care IT infrastructure, with the majority of work due to complete this month. NHS CfH is liaising with the prison service and primary care trusts to oversee implementation of this phase of the programme, based on local costed plans.

Health: Finance

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Government has spent on the Small Change, Big Difference initiative. [129123]

Caroline Flint: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 11 January 2007, Official Report, columns 702-03W.

Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the proportion of poultry workers which were immunised against seasonal influenza in the latest period for which figures are available. [123128]

Caroline Flint: The programme to offer seasonal flu vaccine to poultry workers started on 22 January and runs until 31 March.

As of 21 March, preliminary vaccine uptake data indicate 1,000 poultry workers from 42 primary care trusts have been vaccinated.

Final vaccine uptake data will be collected in mid April.

Maternity Services: Manpower

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent (a) midwives and (b) obstetricians were employed in the NHS in each year since 1995. [126169]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following table shows the number of full-time equivalent medical staff in the obstetrics and gynaecology specialities and registered midwives in each year since 1995.

Medicine: Training

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for which NHS positions applicants who are unsuccessful in the ST1-4 application process are subsequently eligible to apply for. [124720]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Applicants who are unsuccessful in securing a place on a specialty training programme may apply for a fixed-term specialty training appointment which may also count towards the completion of training. Doctors are also free to apply for non-training posts as career grade or service doctors which are advertised by individual national health service trusts. Those who do not obtain places in specialty training programmes will be able to re-apply for such programmes as vacancies arise in future.

Mental Health Services: Surveys

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish the findings of the Count Me In Census 2006. [129124]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Healthcare Commission is responsible for publication of the Count Me In Census.

Mid-Essex Hospital Trust: Hospital Beds

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many delayed discharges there were in the Mid-Essex hospital trust area in each month since January 2005. [127984]

Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust: Redundancy

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many compulsory redundancies there have been in financial year 2006-07 in the Mid Essex hospital trust. [127532]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 19 March 2007]: There have been 32 compulsory redundancies in the Mid Essex hospital trust up to December 2006; 25 of these posts were non-clinical.

Midwives

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average case load was of full-time equivalent registered community midwives in each of the last 12 years for which figures are available; [127282]

(2) what assessment she has made of the appropriateness of the size of the caseload of community midwives; and whether her Department has issued advice on the appropriate (a) average, (b) minimum and (c) maximum caseload for community midwives; [127283]

(3) how many (a) full-time equivalent and (b) headcount-registered midwife posts carried the requirement of working in both acute and community settings in each of the last 12 years for which records are available; [127284]

(4) in how many (a) acute trusts, (b) primary care trusts and (c) other NHS trusts have (i) acute and (ii) community midwives been required to work in both acute and community settings. [127285]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally and we have not carried out an assessment of, or provided advice about, the size of case loads. It is for primary care trusts in partnership with local stakeholders to commission midwifery services in order to meet local needs.

Motor Neurone Disease: Research

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she has received on funding for motor neurone disease (MND) research; whether her Department has conducted an assessment into the effectiveness of MND research; and if she will make a statement. [127517]

Caroline Flint: The Department has received a number of representations on this subject, mostly from or prompted by the Motor Neurone Disease Association. The response to them has described the nature and level of Government investment in research into the disease, and the fact that the Dementias and Neurodegenerative Disease Network will give patients from every motor neurone disease clinic in England the opportunity to take part in national clinical trials.

The reliability and validity of outputs from research funded by the Department, including research designed to support policy development, implementation and evaluation, are subject to independent peer review. The national service framework for long-term neurological conditions was informed by specially commissioned research, and its impact is being assessed via a £1 million research initiative.

Note:

Dementias and Neurodegenerative Disease Network was launched in September 2005 as part of the United Kingdom clinical research network.

NHS: Public Participation

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the Race Equality Impact Assessment for local involvement networks. [129127]

Ms Rosie Winterton: An assessment of the impact of local involvement networks on race equality was published as part of the regulatory impact assessment that accompanied the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill. Copies are available in the Library and on the Department of Communities and Local Government website.

NHS: Working Hours

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to defer the final implementation date of the 48-hour working week to 2012 as referred to in the answer of 21 May 2003 to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell, Official Report, column 86?W, on the working time directive. [125027]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The vast majority of national health service staff have been covered by the European Working Time Directive since 1998. The Government negotiated a staged implementation timetable for doctors in training and is funding pilot projects across the NHS to help trusts implement the 48-hour week from August 2009. Approximately 40 per cent. of doctors in training already work a 48-hour week.

We are monitoring evidence of NHS readiness for fully implementing the 48-hour week for doctors in training. This will inform our assessment of whether to approach the European Commission to use the 2012 derogation to support particular services or specialties.

Nurses: Gender

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of those working as nurses in England are (a) female and (b) male. [125863]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The September 2005 national health service workforce census showed 89 per cent. of qualified nurses, midwives and health visiting staff in England were female and 11 per cent. were male.

Nurses: Pay

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses she expects to receive a pay increase of 1.9 per cent. in the next 12 months. [126906]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All nurses employed by the national health service will receive a staged pay award for 2007-08. This will consist of an uplift of 1.5 per cent. from 1 April 2007 and a further 1 per cent. from 1 November 2007. In addition, many nurses will also receive an increase typically between 3 and 4 per cent. during the year as they progress up their pay scales, and others will receive a pay increase on promotion. The 2005 NHS workforce census, published in April 2006, shows that at September 2005 there were 404,161 nursing, midwifery and healthcare visiting staff employed by the NHS in England. The results of the 2006 NHS workforce census will be published shortly.

Nurses: Vacancies

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the numbers of nursing vacancies there are expected to be in the NHS at the end of August 2007. [125861]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not made an estimate of the number of nursing vacancies expected in the national health service at the end of August 2007.

The March 2007 vacancy survey due to be carried out at the end of this month will provide us with a snapshot of the current nursing three-month vacancy situation.

Nutrition

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people are employed by her Department to work on strategies designed to encourage underweight people to eat more; [127843]

(2) how many people are employed by her Department to work on strategies designed to encourage obese people to eat less. [127844]

Caroline Flint: Government advice for maintaining a healthy weight is for people to consume a healthy balanced diet and be physically active. The Department's nutrition and obesity teams, working with the Food Standards Agency and other Government Departments, has a series of initiatives to encourage and support people to eat a diet that is high in fruit and vegetables and lower in saturated fat, salt and sugar.

Obesity is a complex, multi-factorial problem that cannot be attributed to any single factor; it is the imbalance between calories in and calories out. The obesity public service agreement target is jointly owned by three Government Departments covering health, education and sport in recognition that delivery will depend on a concerted, joined-up effort across Government and other key stakeholders.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to discuss with interested parties the decision by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to restrict treatment for osteoporosis to those aged over 70 years; and if she will make a statement. [127581]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has not yet published its final guidance on the use of treatments for primary and secondary prevention of fractures in post-menopausal women with osteoporosis. NICE issued an appraisal consultation document on 5 March 2007 setting out its draft recommendations and inviting comments by 26 March 2007. NICE's appraisal committee will then meet to consider consultation responses and formulate its final guidance.

NICE is an independent body and I have no plans to discuss this ongoing appraisal with interested parties.

Primary Health Care: Bedfordshire

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the Bedfordshire primary care trust and its predecessors to ensure that clinical professionals other than general practitioners receive appropriate training to carry out semi-specialist services at primary care level in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [122831]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally. It is for the primary care trusts in discussion with local general practitioners (GPs) to decide how many GPs with a specialist interest are required and how to fund any necessary training.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases: Tamworth

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) men and (b) women in Tamworth constituency were (i) tested and (ii) treated for a sexually transmitted disease in each of the last five years. [128331]

Caroline Flint: Data on sexually transmitted diseases in residents in the Tamworth constituency are not available or on the number of people tested for sexually transmitted diseases.

Data on the number of all diagnoses in genito-urinary clinics (GUM) in the South Staffordshire primary care trust (PCT), which is within the Tamworth constituency, is given in the table.

	Females	Males
2001	2,733	2,101
2002	2,892	2,007
2003	3,508	2,465
2004	3,921	2,930
2005	4,282	3,078

Notes:
1. Data is presented for the South Staffordshire PCT within which Tamworth constituency falls.
2. Aggregated data from five GUM clinics are presented, of which one falls within the Tamworth constituency.
3. Data is only available to December 2005.
4. The data available are from GUM clinics only, as only diagnoses made in this setting are recorded in the KC60 return. Diagnoses made in other clinical settings, such as general practice, are not recorded in the dataset.
5. The data available are the number of diagnoses made, not the number of treatments provided or testing performed, as those are not available.
6. The data available are the number of diagnoses made, not the number of people diagnosed. For example, individuals may be diagnosed with several co-infections and each diagnosis will be counted separately.
7. The PCT referred to is the PCT where the clinic is based. This is not necessarily the PCT where the patient is resident, as GUM clinics are open access services.

Surgical Dressings

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of maggot debridement therapy in limiting the spread of (a) MRSA and (b) other hospital acquired infections; and if she will make a statement. [127744]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The effectiveness of maggot debridement therapy has not been assessed specifically for meticillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus MRSA) or other healthcare associated infections.

However, as the use of this therapy is reasonably well established for the treatment of chronic ulcers there is no reason why it would not be considered for MRSA infected or colonised ulcers.

This therapy cannot be used for all wounds but when it is it must form part of a team response involving the infection control team (including the clinical microbiologist), the tissue viability nurse, possibly input from plastic surgeons and other clinicians with wound healing expertise. Additional treatment, including relevant systemic antibiotics, may also be necessary.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published Guidance on the use of debriding agents and specialist wound care clinics for difficult-to-heal surgical wounds in 2001. NICE has advised the national health service that the choice of debriding agent, which includes the use of maggots for difficult to heal surgical wounds should be based on comfort; odour control; other aspects relevant to patient acceptability; the type and location of wound, and total costs.

Vaccination

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1978W, on vaccination, whether her Department had a three-month stock of vaccines for the routine childhood immunisation programme on 1 March. [127922]

Caroline Flint: On 1 March, the Department had over three months stock of all vaccines used in the routine childhood immunisation programme apart from one vaccine. A delivery of this vaccine was made in the week commencing 5 March, taking its stock holding to over three months.

TRANSPORT

British Transport Police: Greater London

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Transport Police community support officers were based in each London borough in each of the last five years. [129462]

Mr. Tom Harris: This information is not held by the Department for Transport but by the British Transport Police who can be contacted at: British Transport Police, 25 Camden Road, London NW1 9LN, E-mail: general.enquiries@btp.pnn.police.uk.

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what mechanisms are in place to ensure his Department's economical use of paper. [128002]

Gillian Merron: The Department has a wide range of measures in place to ensure economical use of paper, following the broad policy of "reduce, reuse, recycle" and to meet the new targets for government on sustainable operations.

Information for the public is increasingly available electronically and a higher percentage than in previous years of new documents are web only publications. When documents are printed, then consideration is given to the types of papers used to ensure they are fit for purpose, indicating the weight and type of the paper to minimise paper use. Any printed publications are printed on 75 per cent. recycled paper. The Department for Transport also leads on the pan-Government framework for the provision of recycled paper for printed publications.

Improved IT has resulted in all the major reference manuals from finance, procurement, the staff handbook and other reference guides to be placed on the internal Intranet site with the presumption that all these reference documents are only available electronically.

From February 2003, the Department's weekly internal Bulletin has been available online, resulting in considerable paper saving as well as cost savings of £130,000 a year.

All printers purchased, unless used for specialist processes, are capable of printing on both sides of the paper. Business Units are encouraged to set this facility as the default. Photocopiers used also have this facility.

All internal stationery and printing paper purchased is 100 per cent. recycled and waste paper is recycled.

Increasingly business process, from invoicing of payments through to sickness absence recording, travel and subsistence claims, are being processed electronically.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128252]

Gillian Merron: The central Department and each agency do not keep records specifically identifying companies that only provide mail services. However, listed as follows are the companies that have provided both mail and courier services:

A1 Couriers Ltd.
Amtrak
Apollo Express Services Ltd.
Business Post (Parcels)
Capita Group Ltd.
Central Despatch Service
Dash It
DHL Global Mail
Fast Track Couriers Ltd.
Initial Citylink
Lynx Couriers
Parcel Force
Peters and May Ltd.
Quicksilver Messenger Service
Royal Mail
Streetwise Couriers
TNT Post UK Ltd.
UK Today

Railways: Fares

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the different train companies on proposals to reduce the number of saver fares on the railways; and if he will make a statement. [129009]

Mr. Tom Harris: No discussions have been held on proposals to reduce the number of saver fares. All discussions on a simplified fares structure have involved retaining and in some cases expanding the range of flexible off-peak walk-up fares such as savers.

Railways: Overcrowding

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much of the additional rolling stock being authorised for purchase by his Department to relieve overcrowding he plans to be used on services between Bedfordshire and London; and if he will make a statement. [128727]

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much of the additional rolling stock being authorised for purchase by his Department to relieve overcrowding he plans to be used on services between Worcestershire and London; and if he will make a statement; [128574]

(2) how much of the additional rolling stock being authorised for purchase by his Department to relieve overcrowding he plans to be used on services between Worcestershire and Birmingham; and if he will make a statement. [128772]

Mr. Tom Harris: It is too early to say where precisely the additional rolling stock will be used. The deployment of new rolling stock will be agreed with the industry following the publication of the high-level output specification and the long-term rail strategy this summer, in accordance with the periodic review timetable set out in the Office of Rail Regulation's advice to Ministers published in February 2007.

Railways: Standards

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to encourage (a) Network Rail and (b) South West Trains to improve its performance; and if he will make a statement. [129353]

Mr. Tom Harris: There are regular discussions between Stagecoach South West Trains (SSWT) and Network Rail about performance.

SSWT has a public performance measure (PPM) moving annual average (MAA) of 89.7 per cent. (at February 2007, the last reporting period).

The Department re-let the new South Western franchise from February 2007; the new franchise agreement has an incremental increase in the performance benchmarks that SSWT will have to meet over the franchise period.

I have four-weekly Performance Delivery Group meetings with rail industry representatives to discuss rail performance. At these meetings, current performance, and steps for improvement, are examined to ensure that improving performance remains a high priority throughout the rail industry.

Road Signs and Markings

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the (a) short-term and (b) long-term efficacy of interactive road signage in built-up areas for traffic calming purposes. [128992]

Dr. Ladyman: Vehicle activated signs (VAS) are designed to address the problem of inappropriate speed at locations where conventional signing has not proved effective. The majority of VAS are therefore placed in rural areas where inappropriate speed is a particular problem, such as on the approach to hazards, bends or junctions.

TRL Report 548 "Vehicle activated signs—a large scale evaluation", published in 2002 studied the effectiveness of vehicle activated signs (VAS) at over 60 sites on rural roads with a range of speed limits. This found VAS to be effective at reducing vehicle speeds at the approach to isolated hazards or bends and junctions. There was no evidence that the signs became less effective over the three-year period of the study.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Electricity

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether he expects Afghanistan to increase the amount of electricity available through bilateral power purchase by the end of 2010; what progress has been made; and what progress he expects to be made by the end of the year. [127503]

Hilary Benn: The latest quarterly progress report issued by the Government of Afghanistan (GoA) indicates that considerable steps have been made towards the Afghanistan Compact benchmark of increasing the amount of electricity available through bilateral power purchase by 2010. Details of this progress, extracted from the report, are listed at Annex A. Given this, we would expect the amount of electricity available through bilateral power purchase to increase by the end of 2010.

However, the report also indicates that there are serious limitations to measuring progress in the power sector, and states that it is difficult to measure progress in the shorter-term as nearly all of these projects are long-term activities. DFID is not directly engaged in this sector. The lead donors are the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank.

In October 2002, USAID committed support for a national irrigation and power rehabilitation programme in conjunction with Afghanistan's Ministry of Energy and Water. The programme is focused on the rehabilitation of the South East Power System (SEPS), a 100 MW power generation and transmission network. It aims to provide low cost and reliable power to 1.7 million residents in Helmand and Kandahar provinces by the end of 2009. Central to this initiative is a commitment to rehabilitate the Kajaki multi-purpose dam, built by USAID in 1953 on the Helmand River.

The programme is split into phases and will include rehabilitating and upgrading the dam, its power plant and associated transmission network by 2009. The first phase will increase Kajaki's generation capacity to 51 MW. Funding of $150 million has already been allocated for this work. The UK Government, through DFID, may fund smaller projects in the vicinity of the dam as part of a stabilisation programme.

The UK-led Task Force Helmand (TFH) has been tasked through ISAF with providing security sufficient to enable the resumption and successful completion of the USAID Kajaki Dam project. Security poses a bigger challenge for the UK in Helmand where GoA authority and rule of law is fragile. The UK military is helping to create an enabling environment for development to accelerate, and for training the Afghan National Army.

Annex A—Progress towards increasing Power Purchase

An agreement was signed on 21 February 2006 between Afghanistan and Tajikistan. The agreement increases co-operation between the two countries in power transmission, reducing the purchase rate to minimum, continuity in power purchase and improve regulatory framework.

The Hairatan-Kabul 220 kv transmission line is currently under construction. It is due for completion by the end of 2008. This will be the main line transmitting imported electricity from Uzbekistan and Tajikistan to take care of the immediate needs of Kabul.

A Memorandum of Understanding was signed between Afghanistan and Turkmenistan in April 2006 on further increase of power purchase. Under the agreement

Turkmenistan expressed readiness to increase its electricity export by 300 MW and support the new transmission infrastructure in the North-West (Hirat, Qala-e-Naw, Maimana, Shiberghan and Mazar).

A Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) was signed on 25 June 2006 between Afghanistan and Iran. Part of this MOU covers the provision of electricity to the western border towns of Afghanistan (Farah and Nimroz). I.R. of Iran has agreed to undertake the necessary study of this project.

In August 2006 Afghanistan became an Observer to the Energy Charter Treaty (ECT). The accession report has been prepared by Ministry of Foreign Affairs and ECT. Full accession is expected in May 2007.

In 2006, Afghanistan signed multilateral MOUs on 1,000 MW electricity transit with Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Pakistan and Iran. The four countries will meet in Kabul in June 2007 to evaluate the feasibility study which is currently under way. The Kabul sub-station of this project will allow Afghanistan to increase its power purchase.

In November 2006, Uzbekistan and Afghanistan signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), increasing Afghanistan's power purchase from 70 MW to 300 MW, beginning from October 2008.

The power purchase agreement between Iran and Afghanistan expires by the end of 21 March 2006. During the Second Joint Economic Commission Meeting of the two countries (27 and 28 December 2006), it was agreed to renew and upgrade the agreement. During the meeting the two countries decided to work on the contract of the construction of transmission line (220 to 230 MW) between Zabul and Farah (survey is already complete). They also discussed extending electricity to the rural areas of Robat Sangi, Guiran and Kishk in Hirat Province.

India is ahead of schedule on its $100 million Pul-e-Khumri to Kabul line and substations at Chimtala and Doshi—estimated completion date is October 2008.

The ADB is on schedule for completion of its $75 million Pul-e-Khumri to Shekanbandar line for power from Tajikistan—estimated completion date is March 2009.

The ADB is on schedule for its $62 million Pule-e-Khumri to Hairatan and Naibabad to Mazar lines for power from Uzbekistan.

USAID is planning to launch design and planning on its $24 million Mazar to Sheberghan line and its $48 million Sheberghan to Turkmenistan line. It has sent a mission to Turkmenistan and the border to study the route and it is working on completing its feasibility study.

Germany is on schedule for substations at Mazar and Pul-e-Khumri.

Afghanistan and Tajikistan signed an Inter-Government Agreement in October 2006. It paves the way for the negotiation of the first North Eastern Power System (NEPS) Power Purchase Agreement (PPA).

Afghanistan: Reconstruction

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding for Afghanistan was channelled through United Nations agencies in each year since 2004; and how much each UN agency received in each year. [127275]

Hilary Benn: The following table shows how much funding DFID Afghanistan has channelled through UN agencies in Afghanistan in each financial year since 2004-05.

Bangladesh

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to promote the active role of children and young people in governance programmes (a) in Bangladesh and (b) elsewhere. [128926]

Mr. Thomas: Better governance is a central theme of DFID's work in Bangladesh. Programmes range from activities fighting corruption and supporting reform of the civil service and police, to supporting public debates and protecting human rights. Participation of children and young people has most impact on activities that aim to change values in relation to corruption and political governance.

For example, DFID's support for Transparency International Bangladesh includes a component called "Youth Engagement and Support" (YES). Over 900 young volunteers deliver nationwide debates, competitions, and rallies against corruption. The recent Anti-Corruption Concert in Dhaka attracted 30,000 young people in a bold public statement against corruption.

DFID Bangladesh also supports a series of governance themed programmes and "Question time" debates broadcast in Bangla on BBC World Service radio and local satellite TV. Audiences of 17 million have included around 4 million 16 to 24-year-olds. In 2005, a special live debate went out globally on BBC World TV, with a panel including politicians from both major parties in Bangladesh. Hard hitting governance questions came from audiences of students and young people in both Dhaka and (by satellite) from the British Bangladeshi community in London.

At global level, DFID launched its "Action Plan on Children and Young People's Participation" in 2004 to promote children and young people's participation in decisions affecting them. Part of a UK Government initiative "Learning to Listen", the Action Plan describes how DFID is involving children and young people in its work to reduce world poverty.

DFID continues to promote the active role of children and young people in governance programmes. Our work varies at the country level depending on the context. In Sierra Leone, for example, DFID has supported work to engage young people in dialogue on the implementation of the national Poverty Reduction Strategy and the decentralisation process. Given its history, engaging young people is crucial in creating consensus and relieving tensions.

Reflecting UN initiatives and the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), we also support projects and programmes to advocate for children's rights, either directly or through non-governmental organisations (NGOs). The UK Government are also a major contributor to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); one of UNICEF's roles is to advocate for the rights of children and young people.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what strategies his Department has to ensure protection for the poorest communities in Bangladesh who will be affected by climate change. [128927]

Mr. Thomas: The impact of climate change on Bangladesh from rising sea levels will be gradual; felt over the next 50 to 100 years. However, there is already evidence of more severe and frequent flooding and droughts, as well as coastal salt-water intrusion, negatively affecting poor people.

DFID's draft Country Assistance Plan (2007-12) aims to help Bangladesh respond in a timelier and more effective way to acute emergencies and climate change. DFID is helping the Government of Bangladesh's Climate Change Cell develop different strategies to adapt to climate change, including impacts of migration and resettlement on poor people. It has helped 137 poor communities develop their own risk reduction strategies.

DFID is also helping very poor people living on Chars river islands, which are vulnerable to flooding. We have assisted 107,000 Chars dwellers to raise their houses above the flood line. We have transferred portable assets (such as cows) to almost 11,000 extremely poor Chars women, helping them to make better and more informed decisions about where and when to migrate, together with a compensation grant to those who migrate due to more acute flooding.

DFID will provide £115 million over the next five years to support the very poorest people living in areas most vulnerable to the impacts of climate change. By September 2007, it will develop an action plan to develop further activities, including protection of the poorest people living in the most vulnerable zones in urban areas.

Developing Countries: Insurance

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) funding and (b) other resources his Department (i) has committed to micro-insurance schemes in the developing world and (ii) plans to commit in each of the next three financial years. [128928]

Hilary Benn: The UK's 2006 White Paper on International Development commits DFID to tackling barriers to access to markets and financial services, and supporting microfinance initiatives in partnership with banks and regulators.

DFID's financial sector programmes aim to build stronger and more inclusive financial sectors, which benefit the poor. "Microfinance" incorporates a full range of financial products, which includes micro-insurance as well as savings, credit and remittances.

At 31 October 2006, DFID has spent over £165 million to support microfinance and financial sector projects and had committed 140 million more to ongoing projects. DFID does not disaggregate funding on micro-insurance specifically. It is not possible to give a meaningful breakdown of future commitments by year as new programmes to improve access to finance continue to be designed and implemented.

Examples of microfinance programmes supported by DFID include:

In India, eMegatop received a grant of £850,000 via the Financial Services Deepening Trust, to support them in offering a range of microinsurance products and pension policies to farmers in 9,000 villages in Andhra and Madhya Pradesh using a network of village internet portals to lower costs and expand access.

Since the last review of commitments in October, DFID has approved a £32.8 million seven-year PROSPER programme in Bangladesh, which will support delivery of innovative financial services to the very poor, small businesses and farmers. Around 22 per cent. of these resources will go to a Learning and Innovation Fund which will support projects to test innovative financial services, including microinsurance.

As well as direct support to programmes, DFID also works in coordination with other donors and specialist agencies:

DFID provides core funding to the Consultative Group to Assist the Poor (CGAP), a consortium of 33 public and private development agencies working together to expand access to financial services for the poor. The CGAP working group on microinsurance, in conjunction with the International Labour Organisation, has recently published a Microinsurance Compendium for insurance practitioners and policy makers in developing countries.

DFID is a leading supporter of FIRST, the Financial Sector Reform and Strengthening Initiative, a multi-donor trust which provides advice to developing countries on how to develop their financial sectors. In Mongolia FIRST has worked with the insurance industry, the government and the World Bank to develop a novel livestock insurance scheme that will provide microinsurance to cattle herders at affordable prices.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of micro-insurance schemes in the developing world. [128929]

Hilary Benn: Surveys carried out by the FinMark Trust, a DFID funded programme in Africa, show that poor people already use a wide variety of formal and informal insurance services ranging from insurance provided by multinational companies to membership of traditional burial societies.

DFID has helped support the recent expansion of micro-insurance in developing countries as an effective way to help poor people to cope with shocks and reduce their vulnerability. Poor people need to be able to access a full range of financial services including insurance as well as savings, credit and remittances.

Although it is a relatively young industry, micro-insurance is already demonstrating its potential to provide protection to low-income communities against risks such as sickness and natural disasters. There remain big challenges, however, to the long-term sustainability of microinsurance including making sure that schemes are affordable and ensuring that schemes are appropriately regulated.

Examples of DFID support to micro-insurance include:

In Bangladesh, DFID contributed £100,000 to an access to rural finance study. In conjunction with the World Bank, the study investigated the feasibility of introducing a weather linked insurance product for farmers, where payouts are directly linked to objective monitoring of floods and droughts.

In Africa the FinMark Trust has spent £271,000 over the last three years on programmes aimed at making insurance markets work for the poor and has committed a similar amount over the next three years. The funding has been provided to catalyse change in the insurance market and to leverage private sector investment.

Flowers

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the environmental costs of importing flowers from (a) Ethiopia and (b) Kenya. [129387]

Hilary Benn: Recent research by Cranfield university shows that the greenhouse gas emissions produced by growing flowers in Kenya and flying them to the UK can be less than a fifth of those grown in Holland because they are not grown in heated greenhouses.

Flowers imported to the UK are subject to increasingly rigorous standards that insist on good agricultural practice and prevent overuse of pesticides. In addition to these standards, flower growers may also adopt codes of conduct that require exacting social and environmental standards to be maintained. UK shoppers have played an important role in demanding better standards as have development agencies including DFID and non-governmental organisations. Consumer concern has also encouraged Kenyan flower farms to invest in water conservation and other improvements in their environmental practice. Nonetheless, there is still room for improvement and we welcome efforts to develop similar codes of practice in Ethiopia.

While we encourage shoppers to demand continuing improvements, it is for the Kenyan and Ethiopian people to decide on the best use of their natural resources.

Promoting developing country exports has long been central to UK development and trade policy. Agriculture remains an important source of economic growth and the best means of reducing poverty in most African countries. The Kenyan flower industry has created tens of thousands of jobs on flower farms and the Ethiopian Government have similar ambitions for their flower industry.

Middle East

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total cost has been of (a) setting up and (b) managing the Temporary International Mechanism in the Occupied Palestinian Territories. [129031]

Hilary Benn: In total, €309 million has been committed through the Temporary International Mechanism (TIM) and €181 million has been disbursed to support Palestinian basic needs. The cost of setting up and managing the TIM so far has been approximately €4 million. This total includes all staff-related costs, logistics, office costs, consumables, communication activities, auditing services provided by an international auditing firm and monitoring of fuel deliveries in Gaza. In addition, €5.8 million has been spent on banking charges so far. The total cost of administering the TIM to date amounts to 5.4 per cent. of the total funds disbursed to support Palestinian basic needs.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff have worked at the Temporary International Mechanism office in Jerusalem since it was founded. [129032]

Hilary Benn: There are currently 23 staff members working at the Temporary International Mechanism (TIM) office. This includes European Commission staff and staff seconded by member states. Altogether 32 different members of staff have worked at the TIM office at different times since work began.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Advertising Industry

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received from the advertising industry on the impact of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) regulations; and if he will make a statement. [129782]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 (TUPE) provide certain safeguards for employees in certain circumstances when a business or undertaking changes hands, and can also apply where a contract to provide goods or services is transferred.

The 2006 Regulations were produced after extensive consultation with all sides of industry. A professional services exemption (which might have covered parts of the advertising industry, among others) was considered during that process but most respondents (including the CBI) did not support it.

I met the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Peter Luff) with representatives of the advertising industry to discuss their concerns on 12 March. Our officials are currently considering papers provided by the Institute of Practitioners in Advertising at that meeting, and plan to meet them shortly to discuss this matter further.

Businesses: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Occupation Exposure Limit-Framework Revision to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126616]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

(i) The costs to business of implementing the Occupational Exposure Limit-Framework Revision to businesses was estimated to be £16.2-£69 million one-off costs in the first year of compliance. No recurring costs were expected.

It should be noted that these costs were also included in the answer to a recent question on the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health (Amendment) Regulations 2004, as these regulations implemented the changes to the Occupational Exposure Limit Framework.

These figures should be considered against the benefits of reducing the risks from hazardous substances. The new framework aimed to make it easier for employers to comply with COSHH by reducing the different types of Occupational Exposure Limits for hazardous substances and introducing clear principles of exposure control.

(ii) Costs to the health and safety regulators were not quantified but were considered to be small, with the majority of costs being incurred in the development of guidance and being balanced out by savings in enforcement. The information in this reply was drawn from the final regulatory impact assessment for the legislation that is available in the Library or on the HSE website at:

http://www.hse.gov.uk/ria/index.htm.

The Government and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are committed to meeting the Better Regulations challenge. HSE is constantly reviewing what can be done better to ensure that the right balance is struck between protecting people at work and avoiding unnecessary burdens on business. Reviewing and improving the guidance to help employers comply with COSHH is one of the aims in HSE's simplification plan.

Employment: EC Law

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Biocidal Products Regulations 2001 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125605]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

The cost to business of implementing the Biocidal Products Regulations 2001 was estimated to be between £131 million and £220 million over a 10-year period, of which between £62 million and £151 million were initial costs.

Costs, over the same period, to the health and safety regulators were estimated to be in the region of £2 million of which £343,000 were initial costs. The information in this reply was drawn from the final regulatory impact assessment for the legislation that is available in the Library or on the House website at:

http://www.hse.gov.uk/ria/index.htm.

These figures should be balanced against the health and safety and environmental benefits from the extension of regulatory control to a wide range of biocidal products.

The Government and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are committed to meeting the Better Regulation challenge. HSE is constantly reviewing what can be done better to ensure that people are protected at work while avoiding unnecessary burdens on business.

Heating

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research the Government are undertaking into the long-term merits of electric heating by comparison with other heating sources. [125319]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have committed to putting the UK on a path to a 60 per cent. reduction in carbon emissions by 2050.

As part of the forthcoming Energy White Paper the Government are undertaking a wide range of analysis into the options for reducing carbon emissions.

This analysis includes examining the costs of low carbon electricity generation technologies such as renewables, nuclear and carbon capture and storage as well as measures to improve energy efficiency through measures such as better insulation and draught proofing.

The Energy White Paper is expected to be published soon.

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research the Government plan to carry out on the long-term effect on carbon emissions of electric heating by comparison with other heating sources. [125321]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have undertaken a wide range of analysis of the options to reduce carbon emissions from different sources. This includes the 2003 Energy White Paper and the review of the Climate Change Programme and Energy Review both in 2006.

The analysis of the impact of existing policies on carbon emissions in the UK Climate Change Programme is available at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/uk/ukccp/pdf/syntheticcpolicy-evaluations.pdf

The analysis of the impact of new measures and extensions to existing measures under the programme is available at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/uk/ukccp/pdf/syntheticcpolicy-appraisals.pdf

A summary of the cost-benefit analysis of measures in the Energy Review is available at:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file31928.pdf

The Government have committed to putting the UK on a path to a 60 per cent. reduction in carbon emissions by 2050. Reducing carbon emissions from the use of electricity will make an important contribution to meeting this target.

Industrial Diseases: Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many chronic obstructive pulmonary disease coal health claims have been struck out through failure to meet the claims questionnaire cut-off deadline of 8 December 2006; and how many of those were from Bassetlaw constituency. [128323]

Malcolm Wicks: No claims have been struck out of the Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease scheme because of any missed cut-off date so far. As the cut-off date for the live claims questionnaire (CQ) submission was 8 December 2006, the dispute procedure is still ongoing. However, there are 200 claimants who have submitted a dispute that is still to be resolved.

Some 6,970 claimants have failed to submit a fit for medical assessment process (MAP) CQ before the cut-off date, of which 76 are from the Bassetlaw constituency.

Meters

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that the conclusions of trials of smart enabled meters will be taken into account in plans for the implementation of the Energy Services Directive. [128734]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government will set out their views on metering and billing in the forthcoming Energy White Paper. The trials of smart meters and associated devices will play a key part in future decisions on smart metering as a whole, including implementation of Article 13 of the Energy Services Directive.

Natural Gas

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total UK gas storage capacity was on 1 January in each of the last 30 years for which records are available. [117918]

Malcolm Wicks: Great Britain's gas storage capacity during the period from 1997 is summarised in my parliamentary written answer of 23 January 2007, Official Report, column 1615W, to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison). I regret that only limited information is available for the period prior to 1996-97. The following table shows the start-up date of each of the earliest storage facilities, and their approximate storage space as of 1996-97:

Facility	Start-up date	Approx. space in 1996-97 (GWh)	Approx. space in 1996-97 (bcm)
Glenmavis	1971	600	0.056
Partington	1972	1,200	0.112
Hornsea	[1]1973	2,900	0.270
Avonmouth	1978	900	0.084
Grain	1981	1,200	0.112
Dynevor	1983	300	0.028
Rough	1985	30,300	2.818

[1] Estimated

Notes:

1. Store space can be assessed in numerous ways (e.g. energy, volume, cushion gas determination, liquefied natural gas heel, etc.), so the figures given may differ from other published data.
2. GWh = Giga Watt Hours; bcm = Billion Cubic Metres.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has met British Nuclear Fuels to discuss the shortfall in revenues generated for the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority. [124787]

Malcolm Wicks: No. Discussions about the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's funding—which is a mixture of grant in aid from the Department and income from its commercial operations—have been at official level.

Research Councils: Finance

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 1995W, on research, what methodology was used to ensure that the change to the budgets of the research councils would have minimal impact on the research objective reflected in his Department's public service agreement objective. [127943]

Malcolm Wicks: This part of the overall calculation took account of assessments made by research councils about the impact on their planned activities.

Budget 2007 announces an early CSR settlement for the DTI's ringfenced science budget, alongside a settlement for DFES. Together, these will ensure that investment in the public science base will rise by an annual average rate of 2.5 per cent. in real terms over the CSR period. The Department of Trade and Industry's science budget will increase from £3.4 billion this year (2007-08) to £3.9 billion by 2010-11. These early settlements provide long-term certainty for the research community, and meet the commitments set out in the 10-year investment framework.

In the context of a tight spending review period, this represents a very good settlement for science.

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of the change to the research councils budget. [125339]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cambridge (David Howarth) on 2 March 2007, Official Report, column 1602W.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Cambridge of 2 March 2007, Official Report, column 1602W, on research councils: finance, if he will list the meetings his officials had with the research councils to discuss the likely impact of the reductions in end-year flexibility on the planned activities. [127926]

Malcolm Wicks: Officials have regular and frequent contacts with research councils. In recent weeks there have been discussions between DTI officials and research council staff about end-year flexibility on virtually a daily basis.

Small Businesses

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department will take steps to introduce microfinance schemes for individuals in deprived areas to improve entreprenueurialism in those areas. [124729]

Margaret Hodge: The Government have already taken steps to introduce microfinance schemes to encourage entrepreneurs in deprived areas.

The Phoenix Fund, launched in 1999, was a time limited, £40 million fund which pump-primed the establishment of 63 community development finance institutions that serve disadvantaged communities around the country. 4,545 loans with a total value of £34,475,308 were provided by the Phoenix Fund, which closed in 2006. Future funding of CDFIs rests with the RDAs who have received a further £11 million of post-Phoenix transition funding for the 2006 to 2008 period specifically for the community finance sector.

Further assistance with micro-loans is available through the Local Enterprise Growth Initiative (LEGI) which was announced by the Chancellor in his 2005 Budget. It aims to release the economic and productivity potential of the most deprived local areas across the UK through enterprise and investment—thereby boosting local incomes and employment opportunities, and building sustainable communities.

LEGI is a £300 million programme in the first instance, spread over three years. 15 local authorities have already benefited from the first round. A further 14 local authorities will benefit from the second round. Local authorities that have been successful in securing LEGI funding in rounds one and two may introduce microfinance schemes to encourage entrepreneurship.

Finally, small businesses in disadvantaged areas may seek funding from the Small Firms Loan Guarantee (SFLG). This scheme provides loans from £5,000 upwards to small businesses with viable business plans that are unable to obtain a conventional loan because they do not have collateral or a proven track record. Current monthly usage is around 250 loans with a total value of around £20 million.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances an asylum seeker with exceptional leave to remain is able to leave and return to the UK. [127815]

Mr. Byrne: A person who applies for asylum and is granted leave to remain in the United Kingdom for more than six months is normally permitted to travel abroad and return to the United Kingdom until their leave expires, provided that they are not absent for a continuous period of more than two years. If they remain outside the United Kingdom for more than two years their leave will lapse and they may not be readmitted to the United Kingdom. The policy and the exceptions to it are set out in the Asylum Policy Instruction Travel Abroad, which is publicly available on the IND website at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/asylumpolicyinstructions/

Asylum: Children

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unaccompanied asylum seeking children arriving in the UK in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006 were the subject of an age dispute; and how many of those were subsequently found to be minors. [127535]

Mr. Byrne: Information is not available on how many of those asylum applications lodged in 2005 and 2006 from unaccompanied asylum seeking children (UASCs) were at some time the subject of an age dispute. The number of age dispute cases who were subsequently found to be minors would only be available by examination of individual case-files at disproportionate cost.

Information on UASCs is published on a quarterly and annual basis. Statistics on age disputed applications are published annually. Data on age disputed asylum applications in 2005 and 2006 do not necessarily relate to UASC applications received within the same period. Copies of these publications are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Departmental Computers

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 4 December 2006, Official Report, column 144W, on departmental computers, from which office in his Department each computer was stolen in each year; and what the security classification was of the material on each computer. [123605]

Mr. Byrne: As these records are not held centrally it has not been possible to collate a response to this PQ.

Work Permits: Football

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits were granted to footballers since 1990; and in what situations they were required. [126045]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows how many footballers have been granted work permits in each year since 1995. There are no statistics available for the period before 1995.

Prior to the 1999-2000 season the work permit requirements were:

The player had to have played in approximately 75 per cent. of international matches for a national team that regularly engaged in competitive matches at the top level of world football.

Clubs had to provide evidence that they had made genuine efforts to recruit players from the UK and EEA labour market.

The salary offered had to reflect the current market rates and the club had to indicate the position that the overseas player would take in its salary structure.

In 1999 the criteria were changed and the current requirements were put in place. The requirements are:

The player must have played for his country in at least 75per cent. of its competitive 'A' team international matches he was available for during the two years preceding the date of the application.

The player's country must also be at or above 70th place in the official FIFA' world rankings when averaged over the two years preceding the date of the application.

Where an application does not meet these requirements the club can request a review by an independent panel of the football bodies and three independent experts.

The following table shows how many footballers have been granted work permits in each year since 1995. There are no statistics available for the period before 1995.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Antisocial Behaviour

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to introduce sanctions against people who are evicted for antisocial behaviour who subsequently refuse intensive family support. [128215]

Mr. Pleskitt: I have been asked to reply

In the Respect Action Plan, published on 10 January 2006, the Government announced that they were considering the use of sanctions to ensure that those households who are evicted for antisocial behaviour take up help offered to them. A measure to sanction housing benefit when evicted households have refused offers of help is currently before Parliament as Clause 30 of the Welfare Reform Bill, first introduced in July 2006.

Avian Influenza

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) date and (b) location was of each outbreak of the H5N1 strain of avian influenza in UK poultry; what type of bird was involved in each case; what action was taken to contain each outbreak; and what the source was of the infection in each case. [128999]

Mr. Bradshaw: There have been three confirmed outbreaks of the H5N1 strain of avian influenza in UK poultry.

In 1959, H5N1 avian influenza was detected in a flock of chickens in Scotland. In 1991, H5N1 avian influenza was detected in turkeys in Norfolk, England. In both cases the birds were culled and the disease was confined to a single premises.

On the basis of genetic analysis, the H5N1 viruses discovered in 1959 and 1991 were a different strain to the H5N1 Asiatic strain which is currently circulating. The source of neither outbreak was ever firmly established.

Most recently, on 3 February 2007, H5N1 avian influenza was confirmed at a Bernard Matthews turkey farm in Holton, Suffolk. In accordance with EU legislation, a 3 kilometre Protection Zone, a 10 kilometre Surveillance Zone and a further Restriction Zone around the infected premises were put in place. Extensive guidance was issued to bird keepers in the zones on biosecurity measures to protect their birds from avian influenza. The birds on the infected premises were humanely culled and disposed of according to DEFRA's published Contingency Plan for Exotic Animal Diseases.

Within the area around the infected premises, there were enhanced levels of surveillance of wild birds. While the investigation in the outbreak was under way, 25 wild bird locations comprising 73 sites in the area were regularly patrolled. Laboratory tests were completed on dead wild birds found in the area as well as on live wild bird droppings from the infected premises. All results were negative.

We are currently developing our investigation into what might have caused the outbreak of avian influenza at Holton. The conclusion of the interim report is that importation from Hungary is the most plausible route. However, investigations are still ongoing and nothing can be ruled out at this time. The final epidemiological report will be published in due course.

Birds of Prey: Qatar

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what regulations govern the (a) import from and (b) export to Qatar of hybrid falcons; and what recent representations he has received on the numbers of hybrid falcons imported from and exported to Qatar. [128383]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are two separate sets of regulation governing the import and export of hybrid falcons into and out of the EU.

Imports of all captive birds, including hybrid falcons, from countries outside of the EU into the EU community are currently prohibited by Commission Decision 2005/760/EC (as amended). The only captive birds currently permitted are birds for conservation purposes or for zoos which must have and must meet the conditions of a licence issued by Defra.

For exports of hybrid falcons to Qatar, official veterinary health certificates are required, which are issued by local SVS Animal Health Divisional Offices.

There are also EU regulations which implement the Convention on International Trade in endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES), currently Council Regulation (EC) No. 338/97 and Commission Regulation (EC) No 865/2006.

I have received no recent representations on numbers of hybrid falcons imported from and exported to Qatar.

Bovine Tuberculosis: Compensation

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was paid in compensation to farmers for losses of animals because of (a) TB and (b) other reasons in each of the last five years. [127861]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Compensation paid in Great Britain

Climate Change Bill

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he expects the draft Climate Change Bill to allow emissions reductions attributed to the UK to be achieved overseas; and if he will make a statement. [128112]

Ian Pearson: The proposed Bill would allow, under prescribed conditions, a proportion of emissions reductions achieved overseas and paid for by UK entities, to be counted towards the reduction targets in the Bill. This is fully consistent with (and would be limited by) international law, including the Kyoto Protocol and its Marrakech Accords which state, under the flexible mechanism provisions, that countries are permitted to use credits, so long as they are "supplemental to domestic action", and that domestic action comprises a "significant element" of the efforts made by each country.

The UK fully supports the principle of trading emissions at European level too through the EU ETS. There are significant advantages in allowing international trading as part of the UK's legislative framework: for example, it would encourage the further development of global emission, trading markets which, as the Stern Review showed, will be central to global collective action to tackle climate change. The Committee on Climate Change will have an important role to play in advising Government on the optimal balance between domestic and overseas effort for each budgetary period.

Dangerous Dogs Act 1991

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many destruction orders were made under the (a) Dogs Acts and (b) Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in each London borough in each of the last five years. [128794]

Mr. Bradshaw: Figures for the number of destruction orders made under dangerous dogs legislation are not held centrally.

Energy: Conservation

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when his Department will launch the consultation on the Energy Efficiency Commitment 3. [128725]

Ian Pearson: The Government engaged in discussion with stakeholders throughout 2006 to inform development of proposals for the third phase of the Energy Efficiency Commitment, 2008-11 (EEC3). This included an initial consultation from July to October 2006, for which the summary of responses was published on 12 January 2007. The first draft of the Illustrative Mix of Measures for EEC3 was published on 26 September 2006. Further to this, on 12 January 2007 we published the proposed scores for established EEC3 measures for consultation. On 16 March we published the final scores for those measures, in order to provide early certainty and facilitate the transition to EEC3. Statutory consultation on the EEC3 is planned for May 2007.

Horses: Insurance

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will bring forward amendments to the Animals Act 1971 to mitigate the effects on the cost of insurance for horse businesses of the 2003 House of Lords judgment on the interpretation of that Act. [127595]

Mr. Bradshaw: Decisions about the provision and cost of insurance cover for equestrian businesses are matters for the commercial judgment of the insurance industry.

However, the Government are well aware of the horse industry's view that the Mirvahedy judgment in 2003 had an adverse effect on insurance premiums. My Department has consulted interested parties on the question of whether an amendment to the Animals Act 1971 to allow a defence of reasonable care would be desirable or appropriate. Parties consulted included the British Horse Industry Confederation, the Country Land and Business Association and the Countryside Alliance.

The majority of responses received were in favour of a change, and my Department has accordingly offered the horse industry its support if a suitable vehicle for amending the Animals Act, such as a Private Member's Bill, can be found. That offer remains on the table.

Marine Fisheries Agency

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether any costs will be incurred by changing the name of the Marine Fisheries Agency to the Marine and Fisheries Agency. [128820]

Mr. Bradshaw: The cost is in the region of £5,000 which is to be spent on signs for the offices and document templates. All costs will be met from within the existing Marine Fisheries Agency budget.

Poultry Farming

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with EU ministers about the implementation of the 1999 Laying Hens Directive; and if he will make a statement. [129476]

Mr. Bradshaw: My ministerial colleagues and I have regular discussions with our EU counterparts on a range of issues.

Council Directive 1999/74/EC, which lays down minimum standards for the protection of laying hens, is implemented in England through the Welfare of Farmed Animals (England) (Amendment) Regulations 2002.

Whales: Conservation

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which foreign Governments have responded to his Department's publication "Protecting Whales—A Global Responsibility"; what the nature has been of their responses; and if he will make a statement. [128659]

Mr. Bradshaw: Like-minded members of IWC have praised our initiative in publishing this booklet and are also making use of it in their own recruitment drives. The booklet and the lobbying which has accompanied its distribution has elicited positive responses from non-members (or unpaid-up members) of IWC, including Costa Rica, Cyprus, Greece, Macedonia, Montenegro and others, some of whom are expected to be able to adhere to the International Convention on the Regulation of Whaling before the next IWC meeting. Pro-whaling countries have, of course, been critical but that is no surprise.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 194W, on whaling, to which 57 countries the "Protecting Whales—A Global Responsibility" document was distributed; whether it has been distributed to any further foreign governments; and if he will make a statement. [128616]

Mr. Bradshaw: Copies of the publication "Protecting Whales A Global Responsibility" have been delivered to Bulgaria, Cyprus, Estonia, Greece, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Poland, Romania, Macedonia, Turkey, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia, Montenegro, Costa Rica, Uruguay, Belize, Mauritania, Mongolia, Morocco, Guatemala, Nicaragua, China, Guinea, Germany, Switzerland, Brazil, Slovakia, Belgium, Hungary, Argentina, Australia, Ireland, India, Finland, Peru, Portugal, Slovenia, Luxembourg, Spain, Mexico, Oman, Kenya, Norway, Panama, France, Czech Republic, South Africa, Italy, Chile, Sweden, Israel, Japan, the Netherlands, United States of America, Austria and New Zealand.

Copies will be delivered to all International Whaling Commission (IWC) members before this year's annual meeting of the IWC59 and in future the publication will be used to help encourage other countries to actively engage in the protection of cetacean species around the globe.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Cultural Heritage: Conservation

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 15 March 2007, Official Report, column 455W, on English Heritage: finance, what estimate English Heritage made in its analysis as supplied to her Department of the extra resources needed to fulfil its new responsibilities arising from the Heritage Protection for the 21st Century White Paper. [129343]

Mr. Lammy: My Department is considering English Heritage's estimate of their likely costs to undertake their responsibilities as proposed in the White Paper Heritage Protection for the 21st Century as part of the comprehensive spending review.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many meetings (a) she and (b) her Department's Ministers held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128758]

Mr. Lammy: No Ministers have held any meetings with trade union representatives in 2006. However, DCMS officials meet regularly with them on a wide range of staffing and accommodation issues. The Permanent Secretary also chairs an annual meeting between senior management and local and national trade union representatives to review key departmental issues and the effectiveness of the day-to-day working relationship between the two sides.

Parliamentary Questions

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to answer question (a) 126210 and (b) 126569, on the 2012 Olympics, tabled by the hon. Member for Faversham and Mid Kent. [129380]

Mr. Caborn: I answered question 126569 on 22 March 2007, Official Report, column 1055W. We hope to be able to answer question 126210 shortly.

Television Licensing

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what right of access the Television Licensing Authority has to enter private premises to search for equipment which may require a licence; and if she will make a statement. [129479]

Mr. Woodward: TV Licensing officials may enter premises to check for unlicensed use of a television receiver only with the consent of the occupier or with a warrant issued under section 366 of the Communications Act 2003 by a justice of the peace in England and Wales, a sheriff in Scotland or a lay magistrate in Northern Ireland. Such a warrant may be issued only if the relevant official is satisfied by information provided on oath that there are reasonable grounds for believing an offence of unlicensed use has been or is being committed; evidence of the commission of the offence is likely to be on the premises specified and a number of additional conditions are satisfied. A warrant permits the authorised person or persons to enter the premises at any time and to search, examine and test any television receiver there. It must be executed within one month following its grant.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces: Deployment

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 201W, on the armed forces: deployment, if he will place in the Library a copy of the (a) documentation and (b) conclusions of the review of the data collation process on service personnel deployment. [124797]

Mr. Ingram: The previous answer referred to measures taken to ensure that we provide robust data covering the numbers of military personnel deployed on operations. Administrative procedures for the collection and dissemination of data were examined, and improved where necessary. This did not take the form of a formal review, but we are confident that manpower figures are now being reported that better reflect the position with regard to the numbers of deployed personnel.

Astute Class Submarines

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to place the order for a fourth Astute class submarine. [128579]

Mr. Ingram: Three Astute class submarines are on order with BAE Systems (Submarine Solutions), and further boat orders are currently being considered, subject to affordability. We are working with industry as part of the Defence Industrial Strategy to achieve an affordable and sustainable submarine programme.

Navy: Military Bases

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 1987W, on the Navy: military bases, (1) what factors have led to the delay in awarding this contract; and what steps have been taken to prevent further delay; [128903]

(2) when he expects the contract to be signed. [128904]

Mr. Ingram: Various factors have contributed to the delay in awarding the contract, including an extended time scale for bidders to submit their proposals and protracted negotiations for partnering agreements between the Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service and each of the bidders. In addition, since the announcement of Serco Denholm as the preferred bidder, consideration has been given to a revised proposal from the company to change the bidding entity for the provision of marine services. It also proved necessary to review the technical solution and carry out a re-pricing exercise as a result of changing market forces in the shipbuilding industry.

Good progress is now being made between MOD and Serco Denholm with all outstanding issues now agreed in the form of Heads of Terms. On current plans, the final contract is expected to be awarded to allow service commencement for the work already conducted by Serco Denholm (Vesting Day) by July 2007. Service commencement for the work currently conducted in-house by the Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service is planned for October, to allow sufficient time to meet the TU Consultation requirements.

Senior Officers: Transport

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2007, Official Report, column 1366W, on senior officers: Transport, what the reasons are for the delay in placing a copy of the regulations in the Library; how senior officers are (a) made aware of and (b) given access to these regulations; and if he will make a statement. [128781]

Mr. Ingram: Currently, the MOD establishment responsible for the production of such documents is focusing on supporting urgent operational requirements and the request for a copy of the Joint Service Publication (JSP) 800 Vol. 2 and JSP 341 (re-issued as the JSP 800 Vol. 5) was mistakenly treated as a routine request and as a result has taken longer than expected. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House today.

The existence of JSPs is widely publicised throughout the MOD by means of Defence Instructions and Notices and through letters of instruction where appropriate. JSPs are available on the Defence intranet and, if their unit is an approved holder, senior officers can also access a CD or hard copy version. Additional advice can also readily be obtained from the authors of JSPs.

Trident

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate how many (a) direct and (b) indirect civilian jobs in (i) Scotland and (ii) the rest of the UK rely upon the Trident programme. [107942]

Des Browne: The number of civilian jobs that rely directly on the current Trident programme is estimated to be 859 in Scotland with an additional 7,455 in the rest of the UK. The number of indirect civilian jobs is estimated to be 250 in Scotland and 6,700 in the rest of the UK.

Additionally, a significant number of military jobs in the UK directly support the Trident programme. In Scotland this amounts to some 1,776 jobs. It is not possible accurately to estimate the number of civilian jobs that reply indirectly on these military posts.

Trident Submarines

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Royal Navy's Vanguard class SSBN ballistic submarines; and if he will consider enlarging the UK's current capability by procuring additional vessels. [129770]

Des Browne: There are no plans to enlarge the UK's nuclear deterrent capability by procuring additional Vanguard-class submarines. On 14 March, the House voted to support the Government's plans to maintain the deterrent beyond the life of the Vanguard-class submarines in accordance with the position set out in the White Paper, The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent (Cm 6994) published in December 2006.

Warships: Procurement

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all vessels built under the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability Programme will be (a) classified as military vessels and (b) constructed within the United Kingdom. [128581]

Mr. Ingram: All the ships to be procured under the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability programme will be classified as military vessels.

The Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability project is in its assessment phase, and it is therefore too early to say what the final designs and specifications for these vessels might be and where the work will be carried out. We will use the assessment phase to look into the potential options, taking into account best value for money and wider industrial factors, before any decisions are made at the main gate investment point.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has investigated the feasibility of retrofitting the Bay class landing ship dock auxiliaries with aircraft hangers. [128584]

Mr. Ingram: There is currently no requirement for the Bay class landing ship dock auxiliary vessels to be fitted with an aircraft hangar and the feasibility of doing so has not been investigated.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Slavery Remembrance Day

Ms Butler: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to implement a slavery remembrance day. [129790]

The Deputy Prime Minister: As I said in the House on 20 March 2007, Official Report, column 688, the Government are encouraging a debate about how we can commemorate the slave trade in the future. We are aware of the strong calls for a national day for the remembrance of the slave trade and its abolition as well as highlighting the problem of modern day slavery, and are actively considering the issue.

As the House is aware, events and activities are taking place throughout this bicentenary year but with a special focus on both 25 March (the date Royal Assent was given to the Abolition of the Slave Trade Act in 1807) and 23 August (the UNESCO international day for the remembrance of the slave trade and its abolition). The House will be aware, however, that other dates have been suggested: the European Commission, for example, supports 11 June as a possible European day against human trafficking. As I made clear in the House on 20 March 2007, Official Report, column 722, we are approaching the issue from a very positive perspective and Ministers are keen to listen to the views of our local communities as this year progresses on whether there should be a remembrance day and, if so, on what date it should fall.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Office of the Third Sector

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many staff work in the Office of the Third Sector, broken down by grade; and how many in each grade have (a) left and (b) joined the Office since its formation. [129771]

Edward Miliband: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 28 November 2006, Official Report, column 593W.

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which outside consultants have been commissioned to work on the review of the Office of the Third Sector; what their role is in the exercise; and how much they are being paid for their services. [129783]

Edward Miliband: Following its establishment in May and the appointment of a new Director General, the Office of the Third Sector is being restructured to enable it to deliver its objectives, reflecting the needs of third sector organisations.

There are no outside consultants working on this programme. An individual has been seconded from the Big Lottery Fund to lead the programme and support the Director General with implementation. It would not be appropriate to provide details of how much they are being paid for their services as to do so could reveal the individual's salary, which is personal information.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many benefit fraud referrals were accepted for investigation in each year since 1999; in how many of these referrals fraud was detected in each year; and how many (a) sanctions were imposed, (b) prosecutions were made and (c) prosecutions resulted in a conviction in each year. [116583]

Mr. Plaskitt: Figures for detected fraud by local authorities are not available. The available information is in the following table.

Benefit fraud investigations, detected fraud, prosecutions, convictions and sanctions by DWP and local authorities

	Referrals accepted for investigation	Detected fraud (DWP only)	Prosecutions	Convictions	Sanctions
1999-2000	[1]564,543	198,467	[1]9,272	10,029	[1]20,286
2000-01	[1]441,368	182,569	[1]11,584	12,503	[1]27,139

2004-05	505,944	150,651	14,299	13,204	44,091
2005-06	538,492	161,172	16,852	15,088	54,097

[1] These figures are for DWP cases only. Referrals accepted for investigation, sanctions and prosecution are not available for 1999-2000 and 2000-01.

Notes:

1. Sanctions are defined here as the sum of 'prosecutions', 'admin penalties' issued, and 'cautions' issued.
2. The figures for cases of detected fraud are based on the number of effective benefit cases, which is defined as an investigation that results in an adjustment of the current rate of benefit, an overpayment or an underpayment or the person ceasing their claim to benefit. Detected fraud excludes general matching service (GMS) cases.
3. Referrals accepted exclude general matching service (GMS) cases.
4. Sanctions, prosecutions and convictions figures include GMS, Instrument of Payment (IOP) and Organised Fraud cases.
5. Prosecutions figures exclude cases withdrawn at court.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the cost of (a) operating and (b) advertising the benefit fraud hotline is in 2006-07; [116591]

(2) what the cost was of (a) operating and (b) advertising the benefit fraud online form in each year since its inception; and how many people have been successfully prosecuted for fraud as a result of evidence from the online form in each year. [116592]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department runs public information campaigns designed to positively reinforce honest behaviour, create a climate of intolerance to benefit fraud and undermine its social acceptability.

The benefit fraud hotline has no specific advertising budget of its own and the cost of advertising it is not separately available.

The operational costs of administering the national benefit fraud hotline include the costs of administering the report-a-benefit-thief online service. These costs cannot be separated. The available information is in the following table.

National benefit fraud hotline budget allocation

2001-02	1,086,000
2002-03	959,277
2003-04	957,977
2004-05	1,192,843

2005-06	986,000
2006-07[1]	597,010

[1] Up to end of December 2006.

Notes:

1. Figures include goods, services and staffing costs.
2. The national benefit fraud hotline (NBFH) commenced in August 1996. Information around budget allocation is available only from year ending 2001-02. Prior to this, NBFH was the responsibility of the former DSS Benefits Agency Security Branch and figures on funding and budget costs are no longer available.

The available information regarding the number of people who have been successfully prosecuted for fraud as a result of evidence from the online report-a-thief form in each year are in the following table.

Convictions arising from completion of the DWP online report-a-thief form

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were prosecuted as a result of evidence obtained from callers using the benefit theft hotline in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [124708]

Mr. Plaskitt: Between 1 February 2006 and 31 January 2007 there were 608 people prosecuted as a result of evidence obtained from callers using the national benefit fraud hotline.

Note:

The figures relate to prosecutions carried out between the dates given. They do not relate to calls made during that time. Cases where a call to the National Benefit Fraud Hotline has not yet led to a prosecution are not included.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of applications for community care grants took (a) less than two weeks, (b) two to four weeks, (c) four to six weeks and (d) over six weeks in the last year for which figures are available. [124910]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is in the following table.

Total	575,500	100

Notes:

1. The clearance time for an individual application is measured in whole working days from the date of receipt of the application to the date of the decision, inclusive.
2. Numbers are based on applications cleared in the most recent financial year, not on applications received during that year.
3. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 100 and percentages to the nearest 0.1 per cent. (apart from the total).

Customer Overpayment Debt

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individual cases of customer overpayment debt there have been in each year since 1997; what the total value was of customer overpayment debts in this period; what proportion of such debts are over 10 years old; and what the cost was of administering these debts. [106615]

Mr. Plaskitt: Our error reduction strategy "Getting Welfare Right: Tackling Error in the Benefits System", was published on 24 January 2007. This first ever, ambitious strategy on error reduction is based on prevention, compliance and correction—preventing new error, ensuring that customers and staff comply with benefit rules and identifying/correcting existing errors.

The strategy will save £1 billion over the five years to 2012.

The information is only available from the fiscal year 2000-01.

Details of individual customer overpayments identified are in the following table.

New debts

	Customer error overpayments identified		Official error and small overpayments identified
	Volume	Value (£ million)	Volume	Estimated value (£ million)
2000-01	684,600	363	509,900	131

2005-06	549,600	365	296,800	99

The proportion of cases in the debt stock over 10 years old is not available.

Information on the cost of administering the above debt separately to the Department's other debt recovery operations is not available.

Eligible Loans Deduction Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost to his Department has been of developing the Eligible Loans Deduction Scheme. [118808]

Mr. Plaskitt: The projected total expenditure for implementation and running costs for the three-year period 2005 to 2008 is £2.246 million.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many participants there were in Employment Zone programmes for each month since April 2000; how many of those had previously engaged with Employment Zone programmes; how many found work; and how many had previously participated in the New Deal for Young People. [125901]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 7 March 2007]: Since April 2000, 75,000 people have gained a job through Employment Zones.

Of the 154,820 people who have entered the Employment Zone programme, 29,290 had previously participated in the new deal for young people.

Information on participants in Employment Zones for each month, and the number of those who had previously engaged with Employment Zone programmes is in the following table.

Housing Benefit

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he has made an assessment of the cost of disregarding child benefit as income in claims for housing benefit and for tax credits. [128413]

Mr. Plaskitt: The estimated yearly cost of disregarding child benefit as income for housing and council tax benefit would be £300 million (housing benefit £220 million and council tax benefit £80 million).

Child benefit is not taken into account as income when assessing entitlement to tax credits.

Housing Benefit: Homeless Households

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of changes to the housing benefit subsidy for homeless households in temporary accommodation on the availability of licensed and short-term leased accommodation. [128421]

Mr. Plaskitt: The subsidy system remains generous and the changes still allow for good quality accommodation to be procured.

Local authorities in London should be able to continue to secure good-quality leased temporary accommodation and meet all their reasonable costs within the limits of the existing subsidy system. The accommodation procured should still therefore be cost-neutral to the local authorities and there will be no need to move homeless households to cheaper accommodation.

There is no evidence that local authorities will be unable to procure sufficient leased accommodation within the new subsidy levels to meet their temporary accommodation needs.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to require homeless families to pay a share of the (a) housing and (b) management costs of their temporary accommodation from income support and jobseeker's allowance. [128422]

Mr. Plaskitt: We are currently working with Communities and Local Government, and the devolved administrations, to develop proposals which separate costs for the rent and management of temporary accommodation. Our objectives are to reflect reasonable rent and management costs and support people in temporary accommodation until a permanent solution becomes available.

We have no plans to require people to pay these costs from their income support or jobseeker's allowance.

Housing Benefit: Reform

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress the Department is making in implementing the modernisation of housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [124078]

Mr. Plaskitt: The next major housing benefit modernisation measures are contained in the Welfare Reform Bill. Included in the Bill are powers to facilitate the national rollout of the local housing allowance, to direct whom housing benefit should be paid to in the social sector and to modernise extended payment provisions. The Bill is currently progressing through the House of Lords, where it entered Grand Committee on 20 February.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the current status of plans to reform housing benefit is; and when evidence will be available from the pilot areas. [127158]

Mr. Plaskitt: The next major housing benefit modernisation measures are contained in the Welfare Reform Bill. The Bill has reached the final stages in the House of Lords.

Evaluation was carried out over the full Pathfinders' period of October 2003 to February 2006 and 13 evaluation reports have been published so far. The final evaluation reports will be published in summer 2007.

Immigration Crime Partnerships

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with the Home Office on the creation of immigration crime partnerships; and if he will make a statement. [127967]

Mr. Plaskitt: Officials from DWP and the Home Office have regular discussions on a range of issues. Ongoing dialogue will include the development of immigration crime partnerships as announced in the Home Office paper "Enforcing the Rules" published on 7 March 2007.

National Insurance

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many national insurance numbers were noted as inaccurately matched to a given name in the last year for which figures are available. [129385]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

National Insurance: EC Nationals

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many national insurance numbers have been issued in Northamptonshire to non-UK nationals since EU enlargement. [127903]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is that since 1 May 2004, 13,040 non-UK nationals have registered for a national insurance number in Northamptonshire.

New Deal Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people (a) participated in the New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP), (b) were participating in the NDLP for the second or more time and (c) gained employment as a result of their participation in the NDLP in each month since 1997. [125811]

Mr. Jim Murphy: New deal for lone parents is a voluntary programme. Since October 1998, it has helped more than 482,000 lone parents into work. If lone parents choose to participate for a second or subsequent time in the programme, it indicates that they have previously found it helpful and likely to increase their chances of finding work.

The information is in the following table

New deal for lone parents

New Deal Schemes: Self-employed

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of people likely to participate in the New Deal self-employment programme in the next 12 months; and how many participated in each of the previous three years. [128229]

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he has estimated the costs to the public purse of assisting an unemployed person to return to work under the (a) New Deal self-employment programme and (b) other employment programmes. [128668]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Self-employment support is available to new deal participants through the mandatory new deal for young people and new deal 25 plus and through the voluntary new deal for partners and new deal for lone parents. There is no separate new deal self-employment programme.

Self-employment support offers an initial awareness session for potential entrepreneurs followed by a period of supported business planning with a business expert and a period of "test trading". During test trading, participants start their business while continuing to receive their benefit, an allowance or working tax credits, depending on their circumstances, to help them over any initial transitional hurdles. This period can last up to a maximum of 26 weeks.

No specific assessment has been carried out into the relative merits, or costs involved, of returning to work through new deal self-employment compared with other elements of new deal. However, data indicate that of those who started the stage three self-employment test trading element of new deal for young people, 61 per cent. subsequently left to employment. Corresponding figures for the new deal for young people options are: employment option, 71 per cent.; full-time education and training option, 46 per cent.; voluntary sector, 51 per cent., and environmental task force, 52 per cent. Similar data are not available for the other new deals.

We expect that around 5,000 people will start new deal self-employment support in 2007-08.

Information is not available on the number of starts to self-employment provision through new deal for partners and new deal for lone parents in the last three years. Information on the number of people who started self-employment provision in the two mandatory new deals in each of the last three years is in the following table.

Starts on the new deal self-employment option

Poverty: Children

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of families with children who could not afford (a) winter coats and shoes, (b) two meals a day, (c) toys and (d) school trips in (i) 1997, (ii) 2001 and (iii) the latest year for which figures are available. [122386]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Data are not available for 1997. The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004. Figures are taken from the Families and Children's Study, an annual DWP-funded survey of 7,000 families with dependent children in Great Britain which has been carried out since 2001. The parent(s), usually the mother, are asked about a set of items, to report whether they "have this", "would like to have this but cannot afford it at the moment" or "do not want/need this at the moment". The responses are the respondent's own interpretations.

The available information is in the following table. Figures are not available for "two meals a day" and "school trips". They are available for "a cooked main meal" and "money for trips, holidays or outings" so these have been provided instead.

The proportions and numbers of families with children in Great Britain reporting that "they would like to have this but cannot afford it at the moment"

	2001		2004
	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number
Weather-proof coat for each child	2.8	196,000	1.3	89,000
Two pairs of all weather shoes for each child	7.4	520,000	3.9	274,000
A cooked main meal every day	1.7	119,000	1.1	77,000
Toys and sports gear for the children	6.5	451,000	3.4	238,000
Money for trips, holidays or outings	21.7	1,518,000	17.2	1,201,000

Note:
Population figures have been estimated by grossing up from a representative sample of 7,000 families and will therefore be subject to error.

Rented Housing

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of (a) the number and (b) the proportion of households renting from (i) local authorities, (ii) registered social landlords, (iii) private landlords and (iv) owner occupiers which are workless. [126503]

Mr. Plaskitt: The following table shows the number and proportion of workless people by tenure.

	Total number of workless people, including pensioners (Million)	Number of workless working age people (Million)	Proportion of workless people[1] (Percentage)
Local authority tenants	3.0	1.8	54
Housing association tenants	1.9	1.1	53
Private tenants	1.3	1.2	32
Owners/part owners	11.8	4.6	18

[1] The proportion of workless people is the proportion of working age people who are out of work.
Note:
Figures may not add up due to rounding.

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were prosecuted for benefit fraud in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [128478]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is in the following table.

Benefit fraud prosecutions convictions and sanctions by DWP and local authorities

	Prosecutions	Convictions	Total of all Sanctions
2003-04	13,891	12,844	38,741
2004-05	14,299	13,204	44,091
2005-06[4]	16,832	15,088	54,097

Notes:

1. Sanctions, prosecutions and convictions figures include QMS, Instrument of Payment (IOP) and Organised Fraud cases.
2. Prosecutions figures exclude cases withdrawn at court.
3. Sanctions are defined here as the sum of 'prosecutions', 'administrative penalties' issued, and 'cautions' issued.

Social Security Benefits: Maladministration

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his letter of 8 February to the hon. Member for Totnes and the answer of 8 February 2007, Official Report, column 1214W, on maladministration payments, when he will decide the level of compensatory payment due to Miss Hinkley; and if he will make a statement. [122479]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 22 February 2007]: I will write to the hon. Member regarding the specific circumstances of the case he raises.

Tenants: Personal Savings

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the amount of savings held by (a) local authority tenants, (b) registered social landlord tenants, (c) private tenants and (d) owner occupiers. [126305]

Mr. Plaskitt: No estimates have been made of the amount of savings held by (a) local authority tenants, (b) registered social landlord tenants, (c) private tenants and (d) owner occupiers.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of households eligible for winter fuel payments in 2006-07; and how many applications his Department has received for that payment. [129386]

James Pursell: Some 8,506,750 households received a winter fuel payment in winter 2005-06. It is not possible to say how many households are eligible for a winter fuel payment because in order to assess whether a person is entitled to a winter fuel payment we need to establish their circumstances. A person may be ineligible for various reasons such as serving a custodial sentence, in hospital receiving free in-patient treatment for more than 52 weeks, or subject to immigration control. Over 99 per cent. of winter fuel payments are made automatically without the need to claim based on information already held by the Department. However some people aged 60 or over who are not in receipt of a benefit administered by DWP may need to claim. For winter 2005-06 we received 311,900 claim forms by the cut-off date of 30 March 2006. Figures for winter 2006-07 are not yet available but we expect the numbers to be similar.

Notes:

1. Figures rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Any residence found to have four or more occupants aged 60 and over is not included in the household figures as it is assumed to be a care home.

HEALTH

Acute Beds: Eastern Region

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute hospital beds per head of population there were in (a) the former Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire strategic health authority area, (b) the East of England Strategic Health Authority area, (c) the former Suffolk West Primary Care Trust area and (d) Suffolk Primary Care Trust area in each year since 1997. [127871]

Andy Burnham: Information is not available in the format requested. The following table shows the average daily number of available acute beds per 100,000 population, for the period 2002-03 to 2005-06 for the former Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire SHA, the former Suffolk West Primary Care Trust and the newly formed East of England SHA which was created on 1 October 2006, following the merger of three previous SHAs (Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire SHA, Essex SHA and Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire SHA).

	Norfolk, Suffolk, and Cambridgeshire SHA	East of England SHA	Suffolk West PCT
2002-03	213.65	168.25	2.79
2003-04	218.91	172.55	—
2004-05	211.84	172.29	—
2005-06	198.28	163.40	—

Notes:

1. Due to SHA reconfigurations, data from prior to 2002-03 are not available at SHA level.
2. Population data for mid-year 2006 and beds data for 2006-07 are not yet available.
3. Suffolk West PCT only provided acute beds in 2002-03. They subsequently provided geriatric beds.
4. Suffolk West PCT was formed at the start of 2002-03 from Bury St Edmonds PCG. The old organisation did not provide any beds.

Ambulance Services: Emergency Calls

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency calls were made to ambulance services in each year since 1997-98. [127822]

Andy Burnham: Validated information about ambulance service's response times to emergency calls is collected each year by the Department on return ambulance services, England: KA34 and published annually. Copies are available in the Library and available on the Information Centre for Health and Social Care's website:

Blood Products: Inquiry

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what mechanism she will report to the House the findings of the review under way into the documents held by the Department relating to the safety of blood products between 1970 and 1985 when it is completed; and if she will make a statement. [129651]

Caroline Flint: When the report is finalised it will be placed in the Library.

Bowel Cancer Screening

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England participating in the national bowel cancer screening programme have been invited to attend a follow-up endoscopy at each of the bowel cancer screening centres; and how many have attended at each of the centres. [129636]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Up to 5 February 2007, 594 people had attended a faecal occult blood (FOB) test positive clinic. At the clinic, a screening nurse assesses the person's suitability to undergo colonoscopy. The number of colonoscopies undertaken was 496, giving a colonoscopy uptake rate of 84 per cent. Please note these data are only to 5 February as colonoscopy data take longer to be entered on to the bowel cancer screening computer system.

The table shows the colonoscopies broken down by screening centre:

Local screening centre	Screening nurse clinic attendance	Colonoscopies
Wolverhampton	147	113
Norwich	199	173
Liverpool	96	88
South Devon	69	60
St. Mark's, London	60	50
St. George's, London	23	12
Total	594	496

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding her Department allocated to the national bowel cancer screening programe for 2006-07; and what funding has been agreed for the programme in 2007-08. [129627]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Funding for the national health service bowel cancer screening programme is included in the strategic health authority (SHA) bundle, which incorporates a number of budgets formally managed directly by the Department.

Around £10 million will be spent on wave 1 of the programme in 2006-07. The value of the SHA bundle for 2007-08 is £6,945.78 million, and was announced in the NHS Operating Framework that was published on 11 December to the NHS. Allocations are made direct to SHAs, and they manage the distribution of funds among the different programmes, including the bowel cancer screening programme, taking account of local circumstances.

This is an ambitious programme, and the Government are committed to ensuring that the necessary funding is available to ensure the full implementation of the bowel cancer screening programme.

Cancer: Tamworth

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Tamworth constituency residents have been treated for cancer in the last 12 months. [128334]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not centrally collect data on the number of people who have received treatment for cancer.

Childbirth

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) minimum and (b) average period was that (i) primagravida and (ii) all other mothers spent in hospital after delivery in each year since 1995. [126142]

Andy Burnham: That information is not available in the form requested and it is not obtainable without incurring disproportionate cost.

Chiropody: Wirral

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on provision of chiropody services in the Wirral. [127938]

Andy Burnham: Wirral Primary Care Trust funds and manages a community podiatry department which aims to meet the needs of people requiring podiatric intervention. Treatments and services include nail surgery, clinical treatments (routine and high risk care), biomechanical assessments (orthotics/insole provision), diabetic screening and training sessions for patients and outside agencies.

This Department also provides services to multi-disciplinary clinics at Wirral Hospital National Health Service Trust, as well as undertaking joint clinics with the community physiotherapy service.

Dentistry

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the net primary dental service allocation in North Yorkshire and York primary care trust is ring-fenced. [129369]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) and primary care trusts (PCTs) are expected, as a minimum, to maintain levels of investment in national health service primary dental care services across their respective areas. If an individual PCT cannot maintain levels of expenditure, for example because of delays in securing replacement services where a dentist retires or leaves, the PCT should plan to restore full levels of service as soon as possible. If necessary, SHAs will be expected to move any unused resources to other PCTs for re-investment in dentistry.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the (a) net primary dental service allocation and (b) allocation for possible patient charge income was for Hambleton and Richmondshire primary care trust in 2006-07; [129434]

(2) what the (a) net primary dental service allocation and (b) allocation for possible patient charge income was for Scarborough, Whitby and Ryedale primary care trust in 2006-07; [129435]

(3) what the (a) net primary dental service allocation and (b) allocation for possible patient charge income was for Selby and York Primary Care Trust in 2006-07. [129436]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A table listing the Primary Dental Service Resource Allocations for 2006-07 for all primary care trusts (PCTs) in England as at 31 July 2006 is available in the Library. This sets out the net allocations awarded to PCTs and the assumed gross budgets based on illustrative assumptions about levels of patient charge income for each PCT. Strategic health authorities agreed with their PCTs locally how these allocations would be redistributed within the new PCT areas that took effect from 1 October 2006.

Departments: Risk Register

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of her Department's risk register. [123387]

Andy Burnham: The Department's risk register is a live document. It is continuously updated as the basis of advice to top management in the Department about current and emerging risks to the Department's programme and the national health service, and what can be done to control and mitigate these risks. It also informs discussions between the Department and top management in the NHS about addressing key issues in policy, resourcing and service management. Putting the risk register in the public domain would be likely to reduce the detail and utility of its contents. This would inhibit the free and frank exchange of views about significant risks and their management, and inhibit the provision of advice to Ministers. We cannot therefore agree to place a copy of the current version of the register in the Library.

Depression

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1112W, on depression, who is responsible for (a) responding to and (b) following up recommendations made by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on matters other than guidelines on clinical matters. [126186]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Research recommendations made by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) are considered by the Health Technology Assessment (HTA) programme. The HTA programme ensures that high-quality research information on health technologies is produced in the most effective way for those who use, manage and provide care in the NHS. The programme is coordinated by the National Coordinating Centre for HTA on behalf of the Department's Research and Development Directorate.

The HTA programme and NICE are working closely together in order to increase uptake of NICE research recommendations and to increase the number of high-quality research recommendations coming to the programme for the benefit of the NHS and its patients. NICE research recommendations are recognised as important and are given special consideration in the HTA programme prioritisation processes.

Health Services: Irish Community

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sanctions are applicable to health bodies which fail to take account of the needs of the Irish community under the requirements of race equality schemes. [128208]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000 places specific duties on national health service trusts, primary care trusts, special health authorities and strategic health authorities. These include a requirement to publish a race equality scheme and to ensure that the organisation is taking account of the needs of minority ethnic communities, including the Irish community.

The Department has issued guidance setting out these accountabilities for NHS boards and the Healthcare Commission's inspection role includes an explicit focus on equality and diversity in their assessments of NHS organisations.

Like all public authorities, NHS organisations can be challenged in a High Court for failing to meet their duties under the Act and the Commission for Racial Equality can use its powers of formal investigation to enforce these duties.

The Department wrote to all NHS chief executives in January 2007 to remind them of their responsibilities under this legislation.

Health: Prisoners

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures are in place to (a) collect information on prisoners' health and (b) share such information with relevant primary care trusts on the release of prisoners. [127314]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Medical information in prison is managed in accordance with relevant legislation and the NHS code of practice on confidentiality.

A discrete patient clinical record is opened for every prisoner on first reception into custody and reasonable attempts made to merge this with records from previous periods in custody. Where possible, and with the prisoner's express consent, information from the prisoner's general practitioner (GP) or other relevant service he/she has recently been in contact with is also sought.

Last year, the Prison Service issued a mandatory instruction, "Prison Service Order 3050 Continuity of Healthcare for Prisoners", to prison governors to improve the continuity of healthcare received by prisoners between key stages of their imprisonment—particularly as they enter prison, transfer between prisons, attend court, and on release. A copy is available in the Library.

Offenders with continuing care needs should have relevant information about them communicated to their GP or other agency with responsibility for their care upon their release. Prisons are required to have written and observed guidelines in place setting out the procedures for reception, transfer and release, including:

Ensuring information on continuing care is conveyed to other establishments on transfer, to national health service hospitals for outpatient and inpatient appointments, and;

Information to ensure continuity of care is communicated, with the prisoner's consent, to a general practitioner and or other responsible community agencies on discharge.

In 2002, the Department published "Guidance On The Protection and Use Of Confidential Health Information In Prisons And Inter-Agency Information Sharing", which provides a framework for developing local agreements and inter-agency information sharing protocols to ensure that boundary-crossing processes work smoothly, are effectively managed and that patient and staff uncertainties about information sharing are reduced.

Hearing Impaired: Health Services

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been (a) undertaken and (b) published of the effectiveness of open-ear technology for audiology service as advocated in the recent document "Improving Access to Audiology Services in England"; and if she will make a statement; [128201]

(2) if she will estimate the cost to the NHS of collating and publishing on a quarterly basis the waiting times for audiology services for each audiology department from GP referral to actual fitting for (a) first time fittings and (b) reassessments; and if she will make a statement. [128202]

Andy Burnham: Twelve national health service trusts have tested the open ear hearing aid technology. The findings from these sites will be published shortly as part of the good practice evidence and tools referenced in "Improving Access to Audiology Services in England".

Since January 2006, we have been collecting waiting time data for diagnostic tests/procedures, including audiology. The monthly diagnostic data for audiology consisted of waits for pure tone audiometry until October 2006 (published in December) when this was extended to cover all audiometry assessments.

We plan to consider later this year whether a national collection of referral to treatment waiting times for audiology services is necessary as part of the work underpinning "Improving Access to Audiology Services in England", published in March 2007, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Hospitals: Waiting Lists

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the causes of the correlation between primary care trusts with low-age needs scores and health economies with greater distance from the six-month inpatient waiting time target reported in her Department's chief economist's report, "Explaining NHS deficits" published on 20 February. [127837]

Andy Burnham: The distance between several secondary sector service targets and the service initial positions in March 2003-04 is moderately correlated to the age/needs index: the PCT health economies with low age/needs had modestly further to travel to achieve the targets. However, numerous parts of the country with low age/needs did not have far to travel in meeting these targets. The correlation is not a perfect one (with correlation co-efficients ranging from -0.28 in the case of distance to the A&E four hour wait and age/needs to -0.13 in the case of distance to the outpatient booking targets and age/needs). The reasons behind the relationship are complex.

Secondary sector under-performance in low age/needs areas is likely to have existed for some time prior to March 2003-04. By raising the quality of care to uniform national standards, the Government have significantly improved the services provided to patients in these areas.

The age and need index, and the interactions between them, are currently being reviewed by independent academic researchers under the auspices of the Advisory Committee on Resource Allocation. A new age and need adjustment for weighted capitation may emerge from this research for resource allocation in 2008-09.

Influenza

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2007, Official Report, column 2298W, on influenza: disease control, what observations the World Health Organisation representatives made on the likely availability of influenza vaccines from non-UK sources during a pandemic. [129625]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the context of exercise Winter Willow, the scenario required that manufacturing delays meant that pandemic specific vaccine would not be available to the United Kingdom during the first wave of the exercise pandemic and therefore use of such vaccine was not considered further in the context of the exercise. The views of the World Health Organization representatives were not sought on this aspect of the scenario during the exercise.

Maternity Services: Compensation

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many maternity-related compensation claims there were in each year since 1995; [126166]

(2) how much her Department paid in compensation to patients in each year since 1995; and what proportion of such payments were for maternity-related claims. [126172]

Andy Burnham: The NHS Litigation Authority collects data on the obstetrics speciality, which includes maternity-related compensation claims. The following table shows how many claims there have been under the clinical negligence scheme for trusts (CNST) in each year since 1995, the number of obstetrics claims in each of those years, as well as total paid in compensation on all claims and total on all obstetrics claims. Claims are taken as the year in which the incident was reported to have occurred.

[1] Category A claims are those that fell within the excess claim limit and were handled by individual trusts before the excess was removed in 2002.
[2] Claims have been considered in the year that the incident occurred.
Notes:
1. Claims may still be made for incidents that have yet to be reported within the stated years.
4. Category A claims were handled by individual trusts and reported to the NHS Litigation Authority. Therefore, the NHS Litigation Authority cannot 100 per cent. validate the accuracy of the data around these claims as the data was not produced by the NHS Litigation Authority.

Musgrove Park Hospital: Waiting Lists

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for (a) in-patient, (b) day cases and (c) out-patient appointments in Musgrove Park hospital, Taunton, in each year since 1992. [128744]

Andy Burnham: The median waiting times for in-patient, day cases and out-patient appointments in the Taunton and Somerset national health service trust in each year since 1992 are shown in the following table.

Provider based median waiting time information for Taunton and Somerset NHS trust, March 1992 to December 2006

NHS Bodies and Premises: Inspections

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations have the authority to conduct inspections of (a) NHS bodies and NHS premises and (b) her Department; and from where that authority is derived in each case. [107387]

Andy Burnham: A range of organisations have authority to conduct inspections in those areas, some of which fall within the responsibilities of the Secretary of State for Health, and others, such as the police, do not. The authority to conduct inspections is similarly derived from a range of sources.

NHS Direct

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of calls to NHS Direct were referred to (a) 999 and (b) an accident and emergency department in each quarter since December 2002. [127823]

Andy Burnham: The information is shown in the following table

NHS: Equal Opportunities

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to launch a website cataloguing best practice to support those introducing gender equality duties in the NHS. [126725]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has already produced guidance for national health service organisations that have a duty to implement the forthcoming gender equality duty.

"Creating a Gender Equality Scheme: A practical guide for the NHS" is posted on the Department website and includes examples of good practice in both service and workforce areas. The Department has also recently launched single equality scheme web guidance "10 Steps to Your SES" to support NHS organisations to comply with all existing and emerging public sector duties in a coherent and cross cutting way. This also provides the opportunity for NHS organisations to share examples of best practice on an ongoing basis.

Nitrous Oxide: Health Hazards

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been hospitalised as a consequence of inhaling nitrous oxide since 1997. [125165]

Caroline Flint: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Home Secretary on the availability of nitrous oxide for recreational use. [125166]

Caroline Flint: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no discussions with the Home Secretary on this subject.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency have issued a press release warning nightclubs and festivals of the health risks of inhaling nitrous oxide, reminding them of their responsibilities and the prospects of legal action should they allow the sale of nitrous oxide on their property.

Nurses: Schools

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school nurses or full-time equivalents there were in Northamptonshire in each year from 2000 to 2006. [124892]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not available in the format required.

Data available for the numbers of school nurses or full-time equivalents in Northamptonshire for 2004-05 are shown in the following table.

	2004		2005

1. Full-time equivalent figures are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. School nursing nurses have only been collected from 2004 as a separate category.
3. It should be further noted that, as data is not centrally held below PCT level, figures are not available for the parts of Northamptonshire which previously fell within Cherwell Vale PCT and South Peterborough PCT.

Parkinson's Disease: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Parkinson's disease specialist nurses there were in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex in each year since 1997. [125491]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Pembury Hospital

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the figure for the cost of the Pembury hospital private finance initiative Scheme, as used by the Minister of State in her letter to hon. Members representing Kent constituencies of 26 February 2007, differs from the figure given by the Prime Minister in his oral answer of 19 July 2006. [129776]

Andy Burnham: The principal reason for the change to the capital values of the scheme at the Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells national health service trust was that in October 2006 the scheme was subject to a Departmental reappraisal. A key part of this was an assessment of the capacity assumptions to ascertain if these were realistic and properly suited to the needs of the local health economy; and a review of the estate in terms of current and planned building stock to ensure optimal use. This led the trust to reconsider how the scheme could best be structured in order to deliver services in the most cost-effective way and ensure long-term viability, and the capital value of the scheme was reduced accordingly.

In addition, the figure given by the Prime Minister included the cost of the mental health element of the scheme, which is being funded by the Kent and Medway Partnership and Social Care Trust. The Secretary of State's letter gave a figure that related exclusively to the acute element of the scheme.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking (a) to facilitate and (b) to monitor the implementation of the Prostate Cancer Equality Action Plan. [128488]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Good progress has been made in considering the recommendations of the Prostate Cancer Charter for action's tackling prostate cancer in black and minority ethnic (BME) groups report. The recommendations were included for consideration in the cancer equality action plan, which fed into the Department action plan to support the publication of the Single Equality Scheme on 4 December 2006. Specifically:

the cancer action team have appointed to the post of Associate Director—Patient Experience. This post is being funded by the National Audit Office, and the postholder begins work on 1 April 2007. Responsibilities will cover equality issues as follows:

provide leadership on BME issues within the cancer action team;

promote the establishment of a forum of the key stakeholders working with BME communities and work with them to facilitate the sharing of good practice; and work with key stakeholders and selected cancer networks to develop best practice guidance for cancer networks (including needs of local population, awareness raising, information and support for patients, end of life care and promote the implementation of guidance).

public awareness pilot—the pilot took place in Coventry in October 2006, and draft quantitative and qualitative evaluation reports have been received. These are being considered by the prostate cancer advisory group's (PCAG) public awareness working group, who will advise the main PCAG on implementation of the findings in June 2007;

prostate cancer risk management programme (PCRMP)—the higher risk of prostate cancer for men of black origin will be included in revised PCRMP materials, due for relaunch in March 2008; and research—follow up studies to the prostate cancer in ethnic subgroups (PROCESS) study are being actively developed.

The Department's cancer policy team are facilitating and monitoring the implementation of the tackling prostate cancer in BME groups report, and the other recommendations will be considered with the cancer action team Associate Director-Patient Experience in due course.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what procedures she has put in place to ensure that men with prostate cancer are given information on (a) local support groups and (b) national charities involved with prostate cancer; [128514]

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure that men have an informed choice when making decisions about their treatment for prostate cancer. [128522]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published "Improving Outcomes in Urological Cancers", including prostate cancer, in September 2002. The guidance recommends that the treatment each patient receives should be tailored to fit his individual values and situation, so it is essential that patients are actively involved in decision making. This requires that they receive adequate and accurate information, both through meetings with members of the multi-disciplinary team, and in published forms so that they can study at home. Patients should be given sufficient time to consider all the options available to them.

To support this, a number of initiatives are under way:

The cancer services collaborative Improvement Partnership patient information project team has been working with cancer networks since 2003 to help them develop the resources and processes they need to provide a co-ordinated network wide approach to patient information delivery. A website has now been launched to support networks in improving patient information delivery by providing guidance and resources.

The Government will introduce Information Prescriptions for everyone with a long term condition or care need by 2008. This commitment is part of the 2006 White Paper "Our Health Our Care Our Say". The information prescriptions pilots, which will trial the initiative, were announced on 18 October 2006. The pilot includes four sites focusing on cancer, and will run until the end of 2007.

From 2004 to 2005 the Action on Urology programme hosted a project designed to pilot the implementation of decision aids into routine practice in the national health service. The decision aid programme was introduced into four NHS hospital trusts in England, into either one or both of two urology pathways early-stage localised prostate cancer and benign prostatic hyperplasia. Phase one identified a range of improvements which participants felt should be made before the package was rolled out nationally. Phase two has been established to address these amendments in a further six pilot sites. It is planned that a final range of decision making tools will be ready for general issue across England by March 2008.

The Department has collaborated with signatories to the prostate cancer charter for action to develop UK Prostate Link, the first comprehensive online source of information of its kind, to help prostate cancer patients, their families and health professionals to access the quality information they need about prostate cancer. The website address is: www.prostate-link.org.uk

Patient information and decision support are also being taken forward by the patient experience working group as part of the development of the cancer reform strategy.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to raise awareness of prostate cancer. [128524]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Raising the awareness of prostate cancer is a key challenge. We want men to know what their prostate is, what it does, and what can go wrong with it. However, we have to raise awareness in a responsible way so as not to cause undue anxiety and worry. That is why we teamed up with the Prostate Cancer Charter for Action to fund a pilot public awareness programme of the prostate, and that is why we are also making raising awareness a key strand of the new Cancer Reform Strategy.

The pilot public awareness programme on the prostate and its function took place in Coventry in October 2006, and an independent evaluation is now assessing the effectiveness of the messages used in the pilot, the interventions used to promote the messages, and the impact the pilot has had on national health service services. Draft reports of the evaluation are being considered by the Prostate Cancer Advisory Group's (PCAG) public awareness working group, who will advise the main PCAG on implementation of the findings in June 2007.

The Department provided £100,000 towards the pilot and the evaluation, with signatories to the Charter providing a further £50,000 towards the pilot.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to revise the Prostate Cancer Risk Management Programme; and what the timescale is for the revision. [128526]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The formal evaluation of the Prostate Cancer Risk Management Programme (PCRMP) was undertaken between 2004 and 2006 by the Cancer Research UK Primary Care Education Research Group. Based on the results of the evaluation, the group has now begun work on revising the PCRMP materials. The group are looking to appoint to a dedicated post to continue the revision, and will begin work shortly on an update of the formal literature review that informed the original PCRMP packs. We are also ensuring that revisions to the PCRMP are consistent with the development of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's Clinical Guide on the Diagnosis and Management of Prostate Cancer.

The review will also involve discussions with key stakeholders in the voluntary sector. We are committed to involving key stakeholders in policy development. That is why the Prostate Cancer Advisory Group (PCAG), chaired by Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, has representation from signatories to the Prostate Cancer Charter for Action, including the Prostate Cancer Charity.

A consultation on the revised PCRMP materials will take place in autumn 2007, with a re-launch of the packs in March 2008.

Prostate Cancer: North East Region

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department's (a) 31 and (b) 62 day waiting time target for prostate cancer was met in Newcastle and Gateshead in the latest period for which figures are available. [128521]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data collected centrally by the Department to monitor cancer waiting times does not separately identify those patients diagnosed with prostate cancer. However, for the period October to December 2006, data for the Gateshead Health NHS Foundation Trust and the Newcastle Upon Tyne Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust shows that they achieved 100 per cent. and 99.6 per cent. respectively for the all cancer 31 day diagnosis to treatment standard. For the same period, these trusts achieved 96.6 per cent. and 96.1 per cent. respectively for the 62 day referral to treatment standard for all cancers.

Surgery

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) inpatient and (b) day case procedures were carried out in each year since 1997-98 (i) in England and (ii) in each NHS trust (A) for both elective and non-elective procedures and (B) for elective procedures only. [127834]

Andy Burnham: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Voter Turnout

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the voter turnout has been in elections for foundation trusts in 2006. [113413]

Andy Burnham: This information is not held centrally and no longer collected by Monitor (the statutory name of which is the Independent Regulator of National Health Service foundation trusts). Information relating to the elections to the governing bodies of individual NHS foundation trusts can be obtained by contacting the chairmen of the respective trusts.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Postal Voting

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Government have any further plans to conduct polls wholly by postal vote. [129422]

Bridget Prentice: The Department has no plans to conduct polls wholly by postal vote.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she expects the Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs; the hon. and learned Member for Redcar (Vera Baird) to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 18 January 2007 (Ref:83269/231), on legal aid. [129379]

Vera Baird: I replied to the hon. Member on 22 March. I apologise for the delay.

Reports

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the Government expects to respond to (a) the eleventh report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life and (b) the report of the Electoral Commission dated 19 March 2007. [129438]

Bridget Prentice: In respect of the Government's response to the eleventh report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life (CSPL) I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer of 30 January 2007, Official Report, column 234W, to the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald). The report of the Electoral Commission dated 19 March is the Commission's response to the CSPL's report. The Government will take this and responses from other stakeholders into account in considering the recommendations of the CSPL.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adult Education: Barnet

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what change is being made in Barnet college's grant for adult training; how many placements at Barnet college have been made by brokers through the train to gain institution; and if he will make a statement. [126582]

Bill Rammell: We have increased investment in further education by 48 per cent. in real terms between 1997 and 2005. We are spending more on adult learning that ever before, over £3 billion in 2007-08, up 7 per cent. on 2005-06,

In 2007-08, investment in our new national employer programme, train to gain will increase by £300 million to £460 million between 2005-06 and 2006-07. Nearly 150 colleges and nearly 200 training providers successfully bid for train to gain contracts in 2006-07. FE allocations and train to gain together will offer 82 per cent. of all colleges the opportunity to earn more than in 2005-06, with 45 per cent. earning 5 per cent. or more.

Information on the impact on individual colleges and train to gain performance data are not held centrally by the Department but Mark Haysom, as the chief executive of the Learning and Skills Council, has written directly to my hon. Friend with answers to these questions, A copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 21 March 2007:

I am writing in response to your question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, about what change is being made in Barnet college's grant for adult training; how many placements at Barnet college have been made by brokers through the train to gain institution; and if he will make a statement.

The 19+ adult allocations for 2007-08 for any provider have yet to be agreed however the following allocations were made in the last two academic years:

2005-06 Barnet college was allocated £14,759,408 for 19+ learners

2006-07 Barnet college was allocated £14,525,033 for 19+ learners

2007-08 allocations for 19+ learners have yet to be agreed.

Barnet college does not directly engage with train to gain but operates as a sub-contractor for two other lead contractors—four counties training and the college of North East London. The data therefore is a combined total for the two as all operational data goes through the consortia leads.

Skills Brokers identify learners within an organisation—some of which may be funded by train to gain discrete funding but others who may not—for instance those learners who already have a Level 2 or equivalent qualification would not be eligible for full subsidy. However the learners with a Level 2 would still be able to access training either at full cost or via further education mainstream funding with the employer making an appropriate contribution to costs. Therefore the skills broker will estimate what level of learners may be "Train to Gain" but the employer's choice of provider will then identify specifically eligibility.

Therefore from August 2006 to January 2007 skills brokers identified 510 learners who may have been eligible to the two consortia leads out of which 160 have actually started provision under train to gain discrete funding. However this is a dynamic process many of the 510 could still be being assessed and preparing to enter train to gain discrete provision or other provision and certainly there are increases in activity as the service gains momentum therefore these figures are probably underestimates.

I hope this response is helpful to you.

Employment Schemes: Greater London

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many visits to employers have been made by brokers promoting the Train to Gain programme in London; how many people have been placed as a result of those visits; whether brokers are paid on the basis of (a) visits to employers and (b) placements achieved; how much has been paid to brokers; and if he will make a statement; [126583]

(2) what progress has been made in London with the Train to Gain programme; and if he will make a statement. [126584]

Phil Hope: Detailed Train to Gain performance data are not held centrally by the Department but are collected by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). Mark Haysom, as the LSC chief executive, has written directly to my hon. Friend with answers to these questions, A copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 21 March 2007:

I am writing in response to your Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many visits to employers have been made by brokers promoting the Train to Gain programme in London; how many people have been placed as a result of those visits; whether brokers are paid on the basis of (a) visits to employers and (b) placements achieved; how much has been paid to brokers.

Skills Brokers in the London Region have made 2,436 engagements with employers from August 2006 to January 2007. Some of these engagements would be via telephone as opposed to a visit but would be some form of meaningful discussion beyond simple contact. Out of these engagements 1,548 are designated as "Hard to Reach" being employers defined as those without Investors in People recognition and have not invested in any vocational training leading to a qualification within the last 12 months.

Train to Gain Skills Brokers in London have made approximately 15,500 individual learner referrals to date for all types of learning provision including some at full cost to the employer as well as that funded by the LSC. Out of those individual learner referrals approximately 5,000 are related to Level 2 provision. This is a dynamic process and placement of these learners is ongoing. The Train to Gain service is still within its initial launch stage and evaluation of conversions from referrals to learners starting programmes is taking place to identify lessons learned and good practice.

Skills Brokers in London have been paid a total of £2.5 million to date. The cost of each employer engagement averages approximately £670.

This would include activity such as initial marketing, visits, organisational needs analysis, identifying development opportunities and solutions for the business, sourcing training provision possibly across a range of providers, ongoing monitoring of both the business relationship and learner progress and maintaining contact for potential repeat business and support for the future.

I hope this response is helpful to you.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 21 March 2007:

I am writing in response to your question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, about what progress has been made in London with the Train to Gain programme.

The Train to Gain service in London has enabled 4,534 learners to start LSC funded provision directly linked to Train to Gain. There have been discussions and referrals to many other organisations in addition to these learners. 1,548 employers have been actively engaged in discussions about developing their staff where this had not occurred within at least the last twelve months—probably longer. This has been achieved in only 6 months of the Skills Brokerage service being launched and the increase in activity has been considerable. Therefore it is confidently anticipated to make an increasing impact on the developmental activities of employers in the London Region during 2007.

I hope this response is helpful to you.

English Language: Education

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the planned budget is for English for speakers of other languages provision over the next five years. [127896]

Bill Rammell: Since 2001, the funding for English for speakers of other languages (ESOL) has been provided through the skills for life strategy in response to regional and local demand.

The expectation is that next year's spending on ESOL will be broadly comparable to this year at around £279 million. The budget for the next five years will be dependent upon the comprehensive spending review after which all priorities will be re-assessed.

Secondary Education: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library the secondary curriculum programmes of study and level descriptions produced by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) secondary curriculum review as approved by the QCA board on 14 December 2006. [128805]

Jim Knight: On 14 December, the QCA Board considered and endorsed drafts of programmes of study and level descriptions. A number of minor changes were made to these drafts following the Board meeting before final versions were recommended to the Department for consultation on 18 January. Copies of the final versions have already been placed in the Library.

The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) publishes the agendas and minutes of its Board meetings on its website.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 4 December 2006, Official Report, column 94W, on local government reorganisation, if he will place in the Library a copy of the consultants' report. [119529]

Mr. Hanson: Arrangements will be made to place a copy of the consultants report in the Library.

Sexuality: Equality

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many representations his Department has received (a) in support of and (b) in opposition to the Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2006; and if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Regulations in Northern Ireland. [129511]

Mr. Hanson: The Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister received 373 responses to the consultation on the regulations. Question one to that consultation asked; do you agree that the new sexual orientation Regulations should apply to goods, facilities and services? The Department received 27 responses to that question; 26 supported the introduction of the regulations and one opposed.

In addition, the Department received 287 responses to the questions concerning the application of a religious exemption. Of these, 272 expressed a desire for inclusion of an exemption for religious organisations and expressed views on the extent of that exemption, but did not express outright opposition to the regulations; 15 argued for no exemptions at all.

The Department has also received 693 correspondence cases on the subject. Of these, three have expressed their support for the regulations. The rest have expressed either opposition, or sought amendments, to the regulations.

The regulations came into operation on 1 January 2007 and their implementation will be overseen by the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland who will issue guidance on them.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government from what date council tax bills for a new year are liable. [129248]

Mr. Woolas: The earliest date that an instalment of council tax may become due is 1 April of the financial year to which it relates, subject to demand notices being served at least fourteen days prior to that date.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 20 February 2007,

Official Report, columns 13-17WS, on departmental expenditure limits, what the purpose was of the provision of £5,000,000 for the Combined Universities of Cornwall of funding from the Development of English Regions programme. [129265]

Angela E. Smith: The £5,000,000 referred to is a contribution to the match funding needed to enable the Combined Universities in Cornwall (CUC) to access funding from the European Regional Development Fund Objective 1 programme for Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly, to support phase two of the project to develop the CUC.

Departments: Climate Change

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on her Department's contribution to tackling climate change. [128225]

Angela E. Smith: My Department is fully committed to playing our role in the Government's strategy on climate change. Recent improvements we have made to the energy efficiency of building regulations, have, for example, reduced energy use by around 40 per cent. Compared to pre-2002 levels. And we have recently consulted on making all new homes zero carbon by 2016—which together with our new Code for Sustainable Homes and our new draft planning policy statement on climate change—could save between 5 and 7 million tonnes of carbon by 2020. Further details on the Department's climate change policy can be found at:

www.communities.gsi.gov.uk.

For the year 2005-06 this Department was ranked fifth out of 19 Departments by the Sustainable Development Commission for its environmental performance across its estate.

Departments: Complaints

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many formal complaints were made to her Department on the conduct of (a) the Department and (b) individual members of staff in the last 12 months. [128469]

Angela E. Smith: There have been four complaints made to the Department in the period from March 2006 to February 2007—I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1784W.

Over the same period there have been four formal complaints made about the conduct of individual members of staff during that period. These are currently subject to action under the formal complaints procedures set out in the staff handbook.

Departments: Databases

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which databases in her Department are (a) owned, (b) internally managed and (c) managed or maintained by external firms or consultants. [129192]

Angela E. Smith: I refer the hon. Member to my answer given to the hon. Member for Fareham (Mr. Hoban) on 2 November 2006, Official Report, column 619W.

Departments: Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what strategy she has put in place for (a) the use of renewable energy and (b) meeting energy targets in her Department's buildings; and if she will make a statement. [125410]

Angela E. Smith: Communities and Local Government published its energy strategy in May 2006. The strategy was a response to specific energy targets relating to carbon emissions and energy efficiency that Government Departments were mandated to meet. We have worked with the Carbon Trust, using their expertise to assist us in identifying improved methods of working and projects that will enable us to improve our use of energy and to reduce our carbon dioxide emissions. We are implementing our Energy efficiency Action Plan for our London HQ buildings and our progress against the targets is published annually by the Sustainable Development Commission.

Departments are also mandated to source at least 10 per cent. of electricity from renewable sources by March 2008.

Communities and Local Government's HQ estate currently obtains 99 per cent. of its electricity from renewable sources. The remaining 1 per cent. is provided by our landlord in a multi-occupancy building as part of the service charge, and they have no proposals to change this arrangement.

CLG's agencies obtain 52 per cent. of their electricity from renewable sources; at this time they have no plans to increase this percentage, although the situation is reviewed annually. This review takes into consideration factors such as cost, market forces and Government commitments.

Equal Opportunities Commission: Manpower

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will break down by (a) sex, (b) age, (c) disability and (d) ethnic background the number of staff in the Equal Opportunities Commission. [129268]

Angela E. Smith: According to the Equal Opportunities Commission's annual report 2005-06, the staff breakdown is as follows:

	Number
(a) Sex
Female	135
Male	30
(b) Age
18-21	3
22-40	81
41-65	85
65+	0

	Number
(c) Disability	10
(d) Ethnic origin
White	152
Non-whites—Mixed, Asian, Black and Chinese	13

Government Contracts: Equality

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) sponsored public bodies has produced on making the award of public contracts conditional on the bidding private sector firms meeting equality or diversity criteria or targets. [128558]

Angela E. Smith: The information is as follows:

(a) The Department

The Corporate Procurement Division (CPD) dictates Procurement Policy and provides Guidance for the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG). This Guidance is not mandatory for DCLG Agencies and DCLG sponsored public bodies but is a source of best practice and incorporates material from other sources, including the Office of Government Commerce and the Commission of Racial Equality.

This Guidance outlines the scope to take account of social considerations, such as equality and diversity issues, in the procurement process in line with the European procurement rules and the Government's procurement policy based on value for money. In order to be consistent with the procurement policy and legal framework, using the meeting of equality or diversity criteria or targets as Tender evaluation criteria is permissible when they are of relevance to the function or service being carried out.

DCLG procurement policy is to evaluate the Sustainability aspects of each procurement at the earliest stage, to identify if equality, diversity criteria or similar can be used as evaluation tools to determine the award of Contract.

(b) Agencies

DCLG Agencies have not issued any Guidance of their own on this issue. They refer to departmental guidance (a) in this respect.

(c) Sponsored Public Bodies

Of DCLG sponsored public bodies, several indicate they have not issued any Guidance of their own on this issue. They refer to departmental guidance (a) in this respect.

Greenbelt: South East Region

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the effect on the amount of Green Belt land in the South East of the proposals in the South East Regional Spatial Strategy. [129277]

Meg Munn: The policies contained in the South East Regional Spatial Strategy, including those relating to the greenbelt are currently being tested through an independent panel, their report is due to be submitted to the Secretary of State in July 2007.

It would not at this time, be appropriate to comment as to whether those polices would affect the amount of greenbelt in the South East.

Housing: Water Temperature

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she is taking to introduce water temperature control in new homes. [129662]

Angela E. Smith: All aspects of hot water safety, including temperature control, will be considered in the next review of part G of the Building Regulations.

We are currently undertaking a review of the building control system as a whole which will include our future approach to the review of the regulations. I expect to make a preliminary announcement on this within the next few weeks and to issue a consultation paper later in the year. It is not therefore possible at this point to say when the next review of part G will take place but I am clear that once we have agreed a way forward it should be a priority.

In the meantime my officials have been working with industry to provide plumbers and housing managers with information on the hazards presented by certain types of water heating systems and guidance on how to minimise these. We will continue to do this to ensure that the issues are understood and acted upon as widely as possible.

Local Government Services

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment her Department has made of the causes of recent trends in public satisfaction with council services. [129199]

Mr. Woolas: The main source of data on recent trends in public satisfaction with council services is the Best Value performance indicator surveys for England 2006-07.

These are only available at the aggregate level for upper-tier authorities at this stage and show:

51 per cent. satisfied with the overall performance of the local authority—a decline of 2 percentage points since 2003-04.

32 per cent. of complainants satisfied with the handling of their complaints—an improvement of 1 percentage point since 2003-04.

64 per cent. satisfied with the cleanliness standard (keeping land clear of litter and waste) in their area—an improvement of 9 percentage points since 2003-04.

79 per cent. satisfied with household waste collection—a decline of 2 percentage points since 2003-04.

66 per cent. satisfied with waste recycling (local facilities)—an improvement of 5 percentage points since 2003-04.

79 per cent. satisfied with waste disposal (local tips)—an improvement of 4 percentage points since 2003.

54 per cent. satisfaction with local transport information—an improvement of 6 percentage points since 2003-04.

60 per cent. satisfied with local bus services—an improvement of 6 percentage points since 2003-04.

55 per cent. satisfied with sports and leisure facilities—an improvement of 3 percentage points since 2003-04.

71 per cent. satisfied with libraries—an improvement of 4 percentage points since 2003-04.

43 per cent. satisfied with museums and galleries—a decline of 1 percentage point since 2003-04.

44 per cent. satisfied with theatres and concert halls—a decline of 3 percentage points since 2003-04.

72 per cent. satisfied with parks and open spaces an improvement of 2 percentage points since 2003-04.

No aggregate 2006-07 results are available yet for district councils as these data have not been fully validated and published. Similarly, because the 2006-07 average for all councils in England uses single and upper-tier data, these satisfaction figures are also not available yet.

Given this substantial dataset of approximately 210,000 respondents only became available earlier this year, detailed statistical analysis of the causes of these trends is in its earliest stages. Work to date has concentrated on potential drivers of overall satisfaction with local government rather than individual services. This has shown that communication by local government is important—the more informed people feel the more satisfied they are with their local authority. Similarly, participation and empowerment are significant—the more satisfied people are with opportunities to participate and their level of influence in local decision-making the more satisfied they are with their local authority. Performance is also critical—the higher the CPA star category of an authority and the higher its direction of travel assessment the more satisfied people are. There are also variations in satisfaction by age and gender and direct experience of services—older people tend to be more satisfied as do women and those who are direct users of local government services. Lastly, overall satisfaction with an area is strongly associated with satisfaction with the council.

Local Government: Standards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the overall public satisfaction figures for (a) all local authorities and (b) each tier of local authority as collected by her Department and its predecessors' best value performance surveys were in each year that they have been collected. [129215]

Mr. Woolas: The overall public satisfaction figures from the best value performance indicator surveys for England for (a) all authorities in England and (b) each tier of local government for the years in which these data have been collected are as follows:

2000-01 and 2003-04 overall satisfaction (BVPI3) results for all local authorities in England, plus 2006-07 results for single tier and county councils only—"Taking everything into account how satisfied or dissatisfied are you with the way authority run things?"

	Percentage satisfied
	2000-01	2003-04	2006-07
All councils in England	65	55	[1]—
Single tier and county council average	61	53	51
County councils	62	54	50
Unitary authorities	62	52	50
Metropolitan boroughs	62	54	52
London boroughs	55	52	54
District councils	68	56	[1]—

[1] No result is available yet because aggregate 2006-07 data for district councils have not been fully validated and published. Similarly, because the 2006-07 average for all councils in England uses single and upper-tier data, this figure is also not available yet.

These figures were published in a summary report of the 2006-07 BVPI user satisfaction survey results for upper-tier authorities only. This report can be found on the Department for Communities and Local Government website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1506089.

Non-Domestic Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) whether municipal recycling facilities are subject to business rates; [129216]

(2) whether car parks are subject to business rates. [129217]

Mr. Woolas: Yes.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library copies of the ordnance survey technology tracking system reports from the last 12 months. [129257]

Angela E. Smith: Ordnance survey did not produce any technology tracking system reports in 2006.

Ordnance Survey: Publications

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library copies of the in-house staff magazine of the Ordnance Survey from the last 12 months. [129247]

Angela E. Smith: Copies of the spring, summer and winter 2006 editions of Viewpoint, the Ordnance Survey in-house staff magazine have been placed in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2007, Official Report, column 1102W, on parliamentary questions, and further to the evidence given before the Communities and Local Government Committee (HC 106-ii) on 4 December 2006 at Q117, why the revised guidance issued to civil servants on answering parliamentary questions does not specify that questions relating to the former Office of the Deputy Prime Minister should be answered in the same way as questions that specifically relate to the Department for Communities and Local Government. [129244]

Angela E. Smith: The revised guidance states that

"Each question should be considered on its merits and there is no prohibition on providing information relating to the former ODPM."

Thames Gateway

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many letters of objection she has received to the proposed Thames Gateway Bridge. [129460]

Meg Munn: Overall, the Department has received 4,808 written representations objecting to the scheme, broken down as follows:

2,949 representations, of which 2,836 were contained in petitions, before the opening of the public inquiry into the proposed bridge;

1,819 representations, of which 1,786 were individual letters prepared to a standard format, during the inquiry; and 40 representations following the close of the inquiry.

Valuation Office

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what changes to the collection of local authority (a) planning or development control and (b) building control data by the Valuation Office Agency for (i) business rate valuations and (ii) council tax valuations have been (A) made, (B) commissioned and (C) undertaken since May 1997. [128543]

Mr. Woolas: There have been no changes since 1997 to the statutory requirement on local authorities to provide information to the Valuation Office Agency. However, the method of transfer of the information has improved because of increasingly better technology.

Community Development: Disadvantaged

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if her Department will take steps to introduce microfinance schemes for individuals to improve the economy in deprived areas. [124730]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have already taken steps to introduce microfinance schemes to encourage entrepreneurs in deprived areas.

The Phoenix Fund, launched in 1999, was a time limited, £40 million fund which pump-primed the establishment of 63 community development finance institutions that serve disadvantaged communities around the country. 4,545 loans with at total value of £34,475,308 were provided by the Phoenix Fund, which closed in 2006. Future funding of CDFIs rests with the RDAs who have received a further £11 million of post-Phoenix transition funding for the 2006 to 2008 period specifically for the community finance sector.

Further assistance with micro-loans is available through the Local Enterprise Growth Initiative (LEGI) which was announced by the Chancellor in his 2005 Budget. It aims to release the economic and productivity potential of the most deprived local areas across the UK through enterprise and investment—thereby boosting local incomes and employment opportunities, and building sustainable communities.

LEGI is a £300 million programme in the first instance, spread over three years. 15 local authorities have already benefited from the first round. A further 14 local authorities will benefit from the second round. Local authorities that have been successful in securing LEGI funding in rounds one and two may introduce microfinance schemes to encourage entrepreneurship.

Finally, small businesses in disadvantaged areas may seek funding from the Small Firms Loan Guarantee (SFLG). This scheme provides loans from £5,000 upwards to small businesses with viable business plans that are unable to obtain a conventional loan because they do not have collateral or a proven track record. Current monthly usage is around 250 loans with a total value of around £20 million.

TREASURY

Child Trust Fund

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2032W, on the Child Trust Fund, what estimate his Department has made of the percentage of parents of children whose Child Trust Fund voucher expired by 31 December 2006 who have not been written to. [128453]

Ed Balls: Following the answer given on 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2032W, the vast majority of parents of children whose voucher expired by 31 December 2006 (including those whose vouchers expired in late December) have been written to with details of the revenue allocated account opened for them. HMRC continue to notify parents about the expiry of their Child Trust Fund vouchers.

There are a very small number of cases where we have not written to a parent following the expiry of a voucher, for example where we no longer have a current address.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 8 February, transferred to his Department from the Department for Transport, PO Ref: 7/14043/2007. [129378]

John Healey: I have done so.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1430W, on Departments: Manpower (1) which directors the personal assistants work for; and whether any Director has more than one personal assistant; [128896]

(2) which directors the two private secretaries work for; and what the pay band is of each private secretary. [128897]

Ed Balls: Each Director has a PA or share of a PA. The Director of Operations and the Director of Policy and Planning each has a Range E who provides them with support as part of their duties.

Gila Sacks

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1490W, on Gila Sacks, which policy area Gila Sacks covers. [128899]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1490W.

Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to issue a press notice on the appointment of each special adviser to his Department. [128804]

Ed Balls: A full list of special advisers across Government is provided each year by the Prime Minister in a written statement to the House.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what aspects of the Government's Policy Review findings he plans to take into account in the Comprehensive Spending Review. [128832]

Ed Balls: The Cabinet's Policy Review Working Groups as well as the series of specific policy reviews set out in chapter 6 of the 2006 pre-Budget report, will inform the Government's preparations for the 2007 comprehensive spending review, which will focus on equipping Britain to meet the challenges of the next decade. On completion of the 2007 CSR, the Government will publish a White Paper setting out their conclusions.

Reverse Charge Mechanism

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the Paymaster General's written statement of 19 March 2007, whether any concessions were made by the UK Government in return for EU approval of the implementation of the Reverse Charge mechanism in the UK. [129774]

Ed Balls: After discussions with European partners and UK businesses, the Government decided that the derogation should run for two years rather than three, after which the UK can apply for it to be renewed, and that the scope of the reverse charge should be restricted to mobile phones and computer chips which are the goods most commonly used in MTIC fraud.

In addition the Government decided that a de minimis level of £5,000, rather than £1,000 as originally envisaged, is sufficiently low to deter fraud in these goods, while ensuring that those supplying very small quantities of these high value goods do not need to use non-standard VAT accounting rules. Some member states were also particularly concerned about the fraud moving to them, so we have agreed to enhanced co-operation measures.

These changes will not reduce the effectiveness of the measure.

Treasury Board

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the conclusions were of the Treasury Board on 25 January 2007 on his Department's performance in the last quarter. [128802]

Ed Balls: Detailed reporting on the Department's performance is available in the Departmental Report and Autumn Performance Report.

Welfare Tax Credits: Overseas Students

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many English for Speakers of Other Languages students are claiming tax credits; and if he will make a statement. [128810]

Ed Balls: This information is not available.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Politics and Government

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any of the benchmarks set out in Afghanistan Compact have been revised; and if she will make a statement. [127166]

Margaret Beckett: The benchmarks set out in the Afghanistan Compact last until 2011. The Joint Co-ordination and Monitoring Board (JCMB), which comprises members of the government of Afghanistan and the international community, was mandated under the Compact to keep all the benchmarks under regular review. To date, some of the deadlines have been revised to take account of developments on the ground. The full details are available on the Afghanistan National Development Strategy's website at www.ands.gov.af under "JCMB".

British Council: Offices

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which British Council offices (a) opened and (b) closed in each of the last five years. [128812]

Mr. Hoon: In the last five years British Council country operations have opened in Afghanistan and Iraq (2004) and closed in Ecuador (2002), Bolivia (2003), Brunei (2005) and Peru (2006).

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British Council offices there were in (a) Europe, (b) the Middle East, (c) South and Central America, (d) Africa, (e) North America, (f) Asia and (g) Australasia in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2006. [128813]

Mr. Hoon: In 2000 the British Council had a presence in 110 countries. Although there have been changes in the network the British Council still operated in 110 countries worldwide in 2006.

British council country operations

	2000	2006
Europe	39	40
Middle East	7	8
South and Central America	12	10
Africa	20	20
North America	2	2
Asia	2	2
Australasia	28	28
Total	110	110

Iran: Political Prisoners

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the government of Iran on the recent imprisonment of women campaigners; and if she will make a statement. [127692]

Margaret Beckett: 33 women's rights activists were arrested on 4 March outside a court building in Tehran, a few days before International Women's Day. They were demonstrating in support of five other women who are on trial for organising a women's rights demonstration in June 2006.

The EU Presidency, with UK support, issued a statement on 9 March, which expressed strong concern at these arrests, which are in breach of Iran's commitments to international human rights treaties that ensure the right to freedom of assembly and expression, and respect for all human rights without discrimination. The UN High Commissioner for Human Rights also made a statement on 6 March. Earlier on 4 March, in a meeting with the Iranian Foreign Ministry, the EU Presidency had raised concerns about the trial of the women's rights activists and the harassment of women's rights activists who have been involved in a campaign to protest against Iran's discriminatory laws against women.

We believe that most of the arrested women have since been released, but we continue to have serious concerns about Iran's treatment of those who exercise their right to peacefully express their opinions.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the effect of transfer of security responsibility to Iraqi forces on the security situation in (a) Muthanna and (b) Dhi Qar; and if she will make a statement. [127148]

Margaret Beckett: Both Muthanna and Dhi Qar provinces have remained relatively stable following the transfer of security responsibility to the Iraqi authorities. Under the terms of the agreement reached between the Coalition and the Iraqi authorities for the transfer of provinces to Provincial Iraqi Control, the Iraqi authorities can request Coalition assistance if a security situation arises that they are unable to resolve themselves. To date, this has not proved necessary in either province.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria are required to be fulfilled in order to proceed with the transfer of (a) Maysan and (b) Basra provinces to full Iraqi control; and if she will make a statement. [127149]

Margaret Beckett: The decision on when to transfer responsibility for security in each of Iraq's 18 provinces, including Maysan and Basra, is taken jointly by the Multi-National Force-Iraq (MNF-I) and the government of Iraq on the basis of provincial security transition assessments, compiled by divisional commanders of MNF-I.

The criteria used in these assessments are: the capabilities of the Iraqi security forces; the threat level; the Iraqi governance capacity; and the capabilities of MNF-I to re-intervene at the request of the Iraqis.

One of the main objectives of our work with the Iraqi security forces and provincial councils in the south is to build their capacity and capabilities in order to create the conditions for the transfer of security responsibility. We hope that this will happen in Maysan in the next few months and in Basra in the second half of this year.

Malaysia: Military Decorations

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the conclusions were of the consideration in 2006 by the Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations and Medals of the points made by those seeking to wear the Pingat Jasa Malaysia medal. [127034]

Margaret Beckett: On 31 January 2006 the Government announced that Her Majesty the Queen had graciously approved the recommendation by the Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations and Medals that veterans and others eligible should exceptionally be allowed to accept the Pingat Jasa Malaysia (PJM), offered by the King and Government of Malaysia, but that in accordance with normal policy and practice official permission to wear the medal should not be granted. Since then, a number of people have said they believe that this decision was wrong; and that those entitled to accept the medal should also be permitted formally to wear the PJM.

Given the strength of feeling of some individuals, the committee considered the matter again very carefully. After examination of the issues involved, the policies underpinning the operation of the UK honours system and particular application of these policies in the case of the PJM, it concluded that the original decision to allow exceptions to two of the major principles of the British Honours System—the double medalling rule and the five year rule—should be upheld. Entitled individuals will continue to be allowed to accept the PJM, but there is no official permission to wear it.

In re-affirming the decision of 31 January 2006, the committee was aware that it would disappoint those who wish to wear the PJM, but they hoped that all who had been involved would understand that the decision reflected a major exception to the normal rules on acceptance of foreign medals. Exceptions to the rules are made only in exceptional circumstances, and in reaching its decision, the committee considered the importance of British involvement in the Malaysian campaign in the histories both of Malaysia and the UK in the years 1957-66, the generous gesture by the King and Government of Malaysia, as well the principles on which the British Honours System is based. Similar exceptions were made for medals from the Saudi and Kuwaiti Governments after the First Gulf War.

Pakistan: Afghanistan

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when the Pakistan-Afghanistan cross-border Jirga is expected to take place; what aims have been agreed for the Jirga; and if she will make a statement; [127164]

(2) whether the UK has a role in the planning and coordination of the agreed Pakistan-Afghanistan joint Jirgas to address issues pertaining to the border areas, as agreed in trilateral meetings between the presidents of the United States, Afghanistan and Pakistan in September 2006; and if she will make a statement. [127165]

Margaret Beckett: The governments of Afghanistan and Pakistan have not yet announced when the cross border Jirga will take place.

We support the joint Jirga proposal put forward by Presidents Karzai and Musharraf as a useful vehicle to bring peace and stability to the region, and are encouraging both governments to work together to prepare an agreed Jirga process and structure. We understand the Afghan Jirga Commission visited Islamabad on 10-13 March to hold formal talks with the Pakistan Jirga Commission.

Constructive dialogue between the governments, tribal elders and representatives of other interested groups on both sides of and across the border could play an important part in bringing peace and security to the border area, and help counter the shared terrorist/extremist threat.

The UK does not have a formal role, but we stand ready to consider requests for assistance from the governments of Afghanistan and Pakistan.

Poland: Energy

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she (a) has had and (b) plans to have with her Polish counterpart on a common EU energy policy. [128564]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and Polish Foreign Minister regularly meet to discuss a wide range of European issues including the EU's energy policy. This was a major theme of the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 5-6 March and the European Council on 8-9 March, attended by both, where EU governments agreed an ambitious package of measures on climate change and energy security, including further steps towards establishing a coherent EU external energy policy.

Zimbabwe

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will seek to extend the travel ban on Robert Mugabe to members of his family. [129437]

Mr. McCartney: As well as Robert Mugabe and his wife, Grace, the EU travel ban list also includes his sister (Sabina) and nephew (Patrick Zhuwao). Both are included because of their positions in Government, respectively, a Politburo member and a Minister. Should other family members take up such positions or become identified with acts of violence and abuse, we will propose that they be immediately added to the EU travel ban list. In addition, we will seek to ensure that those identified as either directing others or participating themselves in torture and beatings will be added to the EU travel ban list.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Coastal Areas: Rights of Way

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's proposals for greater public access to the coast; and when he plans to undertake a public consultation on the issue. [128680]

Barry Gardiner: The Government received Natural England's report on 28 February in which they recommended that the Government should introduce new legislation to enable Natural England to align a "coastal access corridor" around the whole coast that people could enjoy with confidence and certainty. We are considering Natural England's advice and intend to issue a public consultation document in the spring.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the UK's budget for the Common Agricultural Policy was paid to farmers; and if he will make a statement. [129478]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 23 March 2007]: Total 'Farm-based scheme' expenditure, as reflected in the Rural Payment Agency's (RPA) 2005-06 Resource Account, amounted to £2,293,579,000. Total 'Trader-based' expenditure amounted to £313,664,000.

The percentage of farm-based expenditure is, therefore, 87.97 per cent.[1].

These figures are accruals-based and cover England only.

Docking of Working Dogs Tails (England) Regulations 2007

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the draft Docking of Working Dogs' Tails (England) Regulations 2007 were withdrawn. [129281]

Mr. Bradshaw: The draft Docking of Working Dogs' Tails (England) Regulations 2007 were not withdrawn.

The regulations were debated in Grand Committee of the House of Lords on 7 March (Hansard ref. GC13-GC20). An objection was raised on the regulations during the debate, which meant that the formal motion to consider the regulations was withdrawn. A new motion referring the regulations for debate on the Floor of the House was subsequently tabled. A debate on the Floor of the House has been arranged for Tuesday 27 March.

My noble Friend Lord Rooker and my officials have had constructive informal dialogue with peers since the debate on 7 March.

The regulations are expected to come into force on 6 April, at the same time as the main provisions of the Animal Welfare Act 2006.

Energy Protection: Lighting

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely environmental benefits of banning the sale of energy inefficient, incandescent light bulbs. [127198]

Ian Pearson: Our current assessment is that, by removing incandescent light bulbs from the UK market and encouraging sales of the most efficient alternatives, we could avoid up to 1.2 million tonnes of carbon emissions per year by 2011.

We welcome the European Commission's intention to work introduce regulatory measures relating to domestic lighting by 2010, with a phase out over the following years, but, as recently announced by the Chancellor, we will take voluntary action in the UK in advance of this. To this end, we will work with retailers and manufacturers to phase out inefficient light bulbs in the UK between 2008 and 2011.

Genetically Modified Organisms: Potatoes

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what studies his Department has (a) carried out and (b) supported on the health impact on farm animals of feeding them the by-products of the starched-altered GM potato EHG92-527-1. [128151]

Ian Pearson: My Department has not commissioned or supported any studies on the health impacts on farm animals of feeding with by-products of GM potato EH92-527-1. An application for EU marketing consent to cover this proposed use has been made under the GM food and feed regulation 1829/2003. Within the UK this is the responsibility of the Food Standards Agency.

Institute for Public Policy Research

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding the Environment Agency provided to (a) the IPPR and (b) IPPR Trading Ltd in each year since May 1997; and for what purpose funding was provided. [124213]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency is required to keep finance records only for six years.

The value of payments made by the Environment Agency (EA) to the Institute for Public Policy Research (IPPR) or IPPR Trading Limited in each year since 2002 (excluding VAT) was as follows. For all items over £200, the Environment Agency has identified the purpose of the payment.

Year	Purpose of payment	Amount (£)
2002	n/a	200
2003	Report on sustainable development	5,000

Year	Purpose of payment	Amount (£)
2004	Sustainable development event	5,000
2005	Report on water efficiency	5,000
2005[1]	Environmental behaviour change debate	2,000
2006	Supporting low carbon economy debate	5,000
2006[1]	Environmental debate	2,500

[1] The EA holds events either jointly or on its own to debate environmental issues on the fringes of each of the three main party political conferences. These invoices reflect such events.

Seals: Shetland Islands

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the reasons for recent trends in the population of common seals in the Shetland Islands. [129279]

Mr. Bradshaw: This is a devolved issue and is, therefore, a matter for the Scottish Executive.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Air Pollution

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the annual absolute carbon emissions of the parliamentary estate were in each of the last five years. [120553]

Nick Harvey: The annual absolute carbon emissions of the House of Commons estate in each of the last three years from gas and electricity are in the following table.

Absolute carbon emissions in tonnes

	Gas	Electricity	Total
2003-04	1,158.9	2,257.6	3,416.5
2004-05	1,078.8	2,270.3	3,349.0
2005-06	1,163.1	2,302.7	3,465.8

Gas consumption reduced in 2004-05 and then increased in 2005-06; due to fluctuations in heating energy consumption caused by variations in outside temperatures measured in degree days. The following table shows the degree days for the Thames Valley region which includes London. From these figures a higher emission would have been expected in 2005-06. That it was not so is due to the installation of more efficient Palace boilers in 2004.

Degree Days

	Number
2003-04	1,740
2004-05	1,703
2005-06	1,869

The steady increase in carbon emissions from electricity was due to an increase in electricity consumption in the Palace and 7 Millbank. This was due mainly to the installation and usage of more air conditioning units.

The figures have been calculated from gas and electricity invoices and not meter readings taken by estate staff, but estimated invoices were amended using actual meter readings where possible. Natural gas invoices list several multiplying factors used to calculate each month's consumption and the existing monitoring and targeting system used on the parliamentary estate, based on staff meter readings, is not as sophisticated and therefore not as accurate.

The figures for the years 2001-02 and 2002-03 have not been calculated since the energy invoices for those two years are not readily available.

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what estimate the House authorities have made of the volume of (a) carbon dioxide, (b) methane, (c) perfluorocarbons, (d) nitrous oxide and (e) carbon equivalent released by the incineration of waste from the House of Commons estate when calculating the estate's carbon footprint. [120729]

Nick Harvey [pursuant to the reply, 21 March 2007, Official Report, c. 907W]: I regret that my previous answer was not published in full. The complete answer is set out as follows:

Only residual waste after recycling has taken place is sent for incineration with energy recovery. In 2006 residual waste collected from the parliamentary estate amounted to 1,299 tonnes. This material was combusted at an energy recovery facility regulated by the Environment Agency, generating 725,000 kilowatt hours of electricity. The recovered energy is classed as renewable energy by the UK Government, in line with directive 2001/77/EC on the promotion of electricity produced from renewable energy sources in the internal electricity market.

Recovering energy from waste is acknowledged in the Stern Review as an effective weapon in combating climate change, displacing carbon dioxide emissions from fossil fuel power generation sources.

The carbon footprint associated with the combustion of this waste is made up of a number of components:

(1) Direct emissions of greenhouse gases (GHG), expressed as carbon equivalents

(2) "Avoided" emissions of GHG (that is, emissions displaced from an equivalent amount of fossil fuel power generating capacity)

(3) GHG emissions (additional or saved) from waste transportation

(4) Net GHG emissions, taking account of direct, avoided and transport-related emissions.

Direct emissions of GHG

GHG emissions from waste combustion are calculated in two steps. First, an estimate is made of the percentage of fossil and non-fossil carbon in the waste. Second, the emissions from the combustion of the fossil carbon within the waste are calculated. Emissions of non-fossil carbon do not contribute to global warming and are therefore not taken into account.

Methane is not produced in combustion plants. The remaining greenhouse gases are released in trace quantities relative to emissions of carbon dioxide. Because their concentrations in the emission gases vary according to the composition of the waste, the total

GHG effect expressed in tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalents (Teq) is estimated using emission factors developed by Defra, based on measured emissions averaged across UK energy recovery facilities.

Direct GHG emissions following the combustion of residual waste from parliamentary estates amounts to 415 Teq, of which 295 Teq is carbon dioxide.

"Avoided" emissions of GHG

Combustion of parliamentary estates waste in an energy recovery facility also results in avoided carbon dioxide emissions. The electricity produced by the facility displaces electricity that would otherwise be provided by an electricity utility power plant. Because most utility power plants burn fossil fuels and thus emit carbon dioxide, the electricity produced by waste combustion reduces utility carbon dioxide emissions. These avoided GHG emissions must be subtracted from the GHG emissions associated with combustion of the waste.

The convention is to assume that the electricity displaced arises from so-called "marginal" power generators, which in the UK is assumed to be gas-fired power stations. As with direct GHG emissions, emission factors are used to estimate the tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalents avoided when waste is combusted.

GHG emissions avoided following the combustion of residual waste from parliamentary estates amounts to 435 Teq, of which 405 Teq is carbon dioxide.

GHG emissions from waste transportation

A saving in GHG emissions is realized when residual waste from the parliamentary estates is combusted, since the energy recovery facility is just 12 miles from the House. Previously the waste was being transported to landfill further away from the estate.

The GHG emission factor developed by Defra for waste transportation varies between 0.37 and 0.49 kg carbon dioxide equivalents per tonne of waste transported, depending on distance travelled. For transportation of 1,299 tonnes of parliamentary estates waste, this amounts to a GHG emission of between 0.48-0.65 Teq. Since this is less than 1 per cent. of the emissions of direct or avoided emissions, the GHG saving in transporting the waste a shorter distance will be omitted when presenting net emissions.

Net GHG emissions

The carbon footprint associated with the combustion of waste from the parliamentary estates is obtained by subtracting avoided emissions from direct emissions.

This equates to a net GHG saving of 20 Teq. Therefore 20 Teq should be subtracted when determining the total carbon footprint of parliamentary estates.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Written Statements

Mr. Heald: To ask the Leader of the House if he will take steps to ensure that an electronic version of each written ministerial statement is provided to the Library on the day it is made. [129415]

Mr. Straw: Following a recommendation from the Librarian, Government Departments now supply the Library with an electronic version of each written ministerial statement on the day it is made. I understand the system is working well, but if the hon. Gentleman is aware of any failings in this respect he should please let the Librarian and me know.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Reconstruction

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what large scale reconstruction projects have been completed in Afghanistan since 2002. [127151]

Hilary Benn: This information is not available and to obtain it would incur a disproportionate cost.

Developing Countries: AIDS

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will seek a reduction in the price of the essential medicines for AIDS treatment at the forthcoming G8 Development Ministers meeting; and if he will raise the issue of patent barriers at the meeting. [129633]

Mr. Thomas: We welcome the German G8 Presidency's continued focus on HIV/AIDS including universal access to prevention, treatment and care, and essential medicines for AIDS treatment for all that need it. Development Ministers will include reducing the price of first and second line anti-retrovirals, and intellectual property issues, in their discussions. They will also consider related factors, such as research and development funding and propose a UN stock-take to review countries' universal access plans. A rapid review would strengthen efforts to deliver universal access and help realise our commitment to ensuring that "costed, inclusive, sustainable, credible and evidence-based national HIV/AIDS plans are funded" as agreed at the UN General Assembly Special Session on HIV and AIDS in June 2006.

We are working to encourage G8 partners to support and subscribe to mechanisms to help reduce medicine prices, for example as the UK and France have done by joining the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNITAID), the drug purchase facility. One of the first actions of UNITAID, which started work in September 2006, was to negotiate lower prices for paediatric HIV/AIDS treatment expected to benefit 100,000 children. Through its long-term and predictable funding, UNITAID has an explicit aim to help lower drug prices. We are also working closely with the United States President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR) initiative to make paediatric AIDS treatments more widely available.

Palestinians: EC Aid

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much has been paid to

HSBC to transfer social welfare payments to Palestinian (a) workers, (b) pensioners and (c) welfare recipients; and who has paid the costs of transferring these funds. [128993]

Hilary Benn: The total fees paid so far to HSBC are €2,931,028. Of this €158,823 was for payments to pensioners; €1,910,125 for payments to workers; and €862,080 for payments to social hardship cases. Costs have been paid by each donor contributing to the TIM, proportionate to their contribution. So far the TIM has disbursed a total of €181 million in direct assistance and to support basic services for the Palestinian people.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many European Commission staff are involved in administering the Temporary International Mechanism. [128998]

Hilary Benn: There are six European Commission staff working in the Temporary International Mechanism Management Unit in Jerusalem.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment the European Commission has undertaken of the operation of the Temporary International Mechanism; how Palestinians were included in this process; and what the conclusions were. [129097]

Hilary Benn: The European Commission and the World Bank have begun work on a review of the Temporary International Mechanism (TIM). This will assess the impact of each of the TIM's three windows as well as its overall impact. Consultation with Palestinians and the international community is expected to take place from April 2007.

So far the TIM has provided €181 million in direct support to the Palestinian people, including financial assistance benefiting an estimated 900,000 people and supplies to keep basic services going, including over 4.6 million litres of fuel for power supplies in Gaza. Increased EU and other donor funding is assessed as the main reason that the decline in the Palestinian economy over the last year has been much less than feared. The TIM has made an important contribution in this regard.

United Nations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate his Department has made of the annual recurrent costs of maintaining a high level of preparedness among UN agencies. [128997]

Mr. Thomas: United Nations' agencies ensure, with support from DFID and others, that they are prepared to lead the humanitarian response to natural disasters and longer term crises caused by conflict. DFID provides institutional and operational funding (which can often include preparedness activities) to UN humanitarian agencies, including the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the UN Children's Fund, the World Health Organisation, the World Food Programme and the UN High Commission for Refugees. The UN agencies do not have an agreed definition of preparedness and do not budget for this on a consistent basis. It is not therefore possible to estimate the annual recurrent costs of maintaining a high level of preparedness for UN agencies.

Whales

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with his foreign counterparts on whaling in the last 12 months. [128647]

Mr. Thomas: The Secretary of State has had no discussions on whaling with his foreign counterparts. The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) are the Government lead on national and international issues related to whaling.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe. [129608]

Hilary Benn: I am extremely concerned about the deteriorating humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe. About 1 million Zimbabweans are reliant on international food aid as the next harvest approaches. There has been confirmation of almost total crop failure in the southern part of the country. Many Zimbabweans face difficulty buying food because of the terrible economic situation resulting from the appalling policies of their Government. AIDS is also contributing to high mortality rates resulting in over 1.3 million orphans; approximately one in four children.

DFID has spent £33 million in the last financial year to tackle food insecurity and HIV/AIDS. All of our funding in Zimbabwe goes through UN agencies and NGOs. DFID has provided £3 million to support World Food Programmes. We have also provided £30 million for a three year programme to help over a million vulnerable people in rural and urban areas through NGO initiatives. DFID is also providing £5 million to the International Organisation for Migration to help internally displaced people.

SCOTLAND

Advocate-General for Scotland

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost was of travel by train by staff in the Office of the Advocate-General in each year since 1997. [128147]

David Cairns: The Office of the Advocate-General for Scotland was established on 20 May 1999. The Scotland Office provides corporate services, such as paying invoices and travel claims, to the Office of the Advocate-General. Separate figures are, however, not available for 1999-2000 and 2000-01; thereafter, the figures for the Office of the Advocate-General are:

2001-02	16,097.50
2002-03	21,277.30

2003-04	15,614.55
2004-05	16,944.13
2005-06	21,445.60

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff were employed to work in the Office of the Advocate-General in each year since 1997. [128148]

David Cairns: The Office of the Advocate-General for Scotland was established on 20 May 1999. Staffing figures are published in the Office's Departmental and Annual Reports, copies of which are lodged in the House Library.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his estimate is of the expenditure by the Advocate-General's Office on newspapers, magazines and periodicals in each year since 1997. [128149]

David Cairns: The Office of the Advocate-General for Scotland was established on 20 May 1999. The Scotland Office provides corporate services, such as the payment of invoices, to the Office of the Advocate-General. Separate figures for newspapers and magazines for each Office are not recorded; and the cost of periodicals is subsumed within the overall library costs, such as the purchase of books. Expenditure by both Offices on newspapers and magazines was:

1999-2000	9,096
2000-01	13,639
2001-02	12,968
2002-03	12,990
2003-04	12,556
2004-05	11,546
2005-06	9,318

WORK AND PENSIONS

Departments: Equal Opportunities

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its sponsored public bodies has produced on making the award of public contracts conditional on the bidding private sector firms meeting equality or diversity criteria or targets. [128669]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department its agencies and sponsored public bodies (The Health and Safety Executive and The Rent Service) will continue to take account of the guidance issued by the Office for Government Commerce (OGC) in relation to awarding of public contracts. OGC has published the guidance note Social Issues in Purchasing which outlines the scope to take account of social considerations such as equality and diversity issues in the procurement process in line with the European procurement rules and the Government's procurement policy based on value for money.

DWP procurement guidance states that potential suppliers should be precluded from bidding for contracts if they are in breach of UK law, this includes equality legislation and unique legislation on disability issues for example sheltered workshops. Contracts require suppliers to meet statutory legal requirements including those in respect of equality and diversity issues and our contracts require suppliers not to discriminate in employment practice.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128250]

Mrs. McGuire: The DWP and its agencies use four postal companies to handle mail.

Royal Mail collect, sort and deliver mail from majority of DWP sites including the collection of first class mail from a DWP supplier who produces mail on behalf of the Department.

UK Mail handle approximately 80 million items of DWP second class mail collected from two regional distribution centres and passed into the Royal Mail delivery office network for final mile delivery under down stream access.

Spring is responsible for the collection, sort and onward dispatch for final delivery of departmental international mail.

TNT is responsible for the courier service for the Department's internal mail. This also includes the distribution of internal mail and stationery from our print suppliers.

Homelessness: Training

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was allocated to training for homeless people in London from resources received from the European Social Fund in each quarter of 2007; and if he will make a statement. [127924]

Mr. Plaskitt: The European Social Fund (ESF) supports employment and training activities. It is increasingly being focused on improving the employment prospects and skills of people who are at a disadvantage in the labour market. However, the England ESF programme and the London regional ESF plan do not break down ESF funds into financial allocations for specific groups such as homeless people. The target for ESF spending in London in 2007 is £77,450,422.

Housing Benefit

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) which local authorities he has consulted on his plans to change the housing benefit subsidy for homeless households in temporary accommodation; [126485]

(2) if he will publish the responses to his consultation on his plans to change the housing benefit subsidy for homeless households in temporary accommodation; [126486]

(3) if he will place in the Library a copy of his consultation paper on his plans to change the housing benefit subsidy for homeless households in temporary accommodation. [126487]

Mr. Plaskitt: Consultation on any aspect of housing benefit (HB) is not undertaken with individual local authorities but via their representative associations—the Local Government Association, the Association of London Councils, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and the Welsh Local Government Association.

The large increase in HB expenditure in temporary accommodation was first discussed at a meeting with the Local Authority Associations in August 2006 and there were further discussions with representatives of the associations in November and December 2006 and January 2007.

Three DWP discussion papers were issued and both verbal and written responses were received from the representative associations. Copies of the discussion papers have been placed in the Library and will be published on the DWP website. Subject to third party approval, which we are in the process of obtaining, copies of responses will also be placed in the House of Commons Library and on the DWP website as soon as possible.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was of non-housing revenue account expenditure on homeless households in temporary accommodation in each year since 2002-03. [126488]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following tables.

Non-housing revenue account expenditure on homeless households in temporary accommodation (nominal terms)

				£ million
	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Estimated GB temporary housing expenditure	307	374	501	599
Subsidised	244	308	456	551
Unsubsidised	62	66	45	48

Non-housing revenue account expenditure on homeless households in temporary accommodation (real terms 2006-07 prices)

				£ million
	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Estimated GB temporary Housing expenditure	339	402	524	615
Subsidised	271	331	477	566
Unsubsidised	69	71	47	49

Notes:
1. Expenditure data is taken from local authorities' subsidy returns.
2. All figures are final audited data with the exception of 2005-06 which is provisional (pre-audited) data.
3. GDP deflator is the latest available as at 5 pm on 12 March 2007, last updated 21 December 2006, and is taken from www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/economic_data_and_tools/gdp_deflators/data_gdp_fig_cfm
4. Due to historical differences in the treatment of Scottish rent rebate expenditure, it is not possible from local authority subsidy returns to identify all expenditure on temporary accommodation in Scotland. These figures may therefore slightly understate temporary accommodation expenditure. From an assessment of the England and Wales data, we estimate that this understatement would be of the order of £1-2 million.

Income Support

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of children lived in households in receipt of income support in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [129600]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested. The available information is in the following table.

Numbers of children living in households in receipt of income support (IS) in Great Britain; as at April each year

	Number of dependent children in IS households	Percentage of dependent children
2004	1,978,630	17.6
2005	1,865,720	16.7
2006	1,828,275	16.4

Notes:
1. Figures have been rounded the nearest five.
2. Figures exclude a very small number of cases that are held clerically.
3. Figures are for children dependent on a parent/guardian claiming income support.
4. Due to the introduction of child tax credits in April 2003, information on child dependents held on the benefit computer system is not reliable; therefore children data have been merged onto income support claims from child benefit records with permission of HMRC.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many information technology projects within the responsibility of his Department, its agencies and their predecessors have been cancelled since 1997; what the total cost was of each project at cancellation; and if he will make a statement. [105474]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was created in June 2001.

The Department undertakes a large number of projects which deliver business change and policy initiatives. IT changes are an enabling component of many projects. The number of projects in train at any one time will vary and the duration of the project lifecycle is often more than one calendar year. The following table includes only those projects that have been formally closed where the IT element is such that non-delivery of the IT would significantly damage the project's ability to deliver its intended results and the investment in the project has exceeded £1 million.

Project name	Investment expenditure (£ million)
Document Management (closed 2006-07)	1.4
Retirement Planner (closed 2004-05)	11.2
E-enabled Retirement Pension (closed 2006-07)	1.8
Benefits Processing Replacement Programme (BPRP) (closed 2006-07)	[1]135
Customer Accounting and Payment Strategy (closed 1999-2000)	127
Debt Accounting and Management System (closed 1999-2000)	13

[1] Including future commitments

A significant amount of the investment in BPRP is of future value to the Department. We estimate that at least half of the sum invested (around £73 million) is of future value to the Department. Similarly the benefits realised by the Debt Accounting and Management System project exceeded the costs incurred of £13 million and thus no actual loss occurred.

The costs of the Customer Accounting and Payment System are the estimated costs for that project at the time of closure.

Means-Tested Benefits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were in receipt of each means-tested benefit administered by his Department in each year since 1990-91. [121840]

Mr. Pickles: The available information is in the following tables.

n/a = Not applicable

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 1,000.
2. Pension credit was introduced on 6 October 2003 and replaced minimum income guarantee (income support for people aged 60 or over). The vast majority of people who were previously in receipt of the minimum income guarantee transferred to pension credit in October 2003 however some residual cases remain on the income support statistics.
3. income support for the unemployed was replaced by income-based jobseeker's allowance in October 1996.
4. IS figures for August 1994 to August 1998 and all JSA (IB) figures have been derived by applying 5per cent. proportions to 100 per cent. WPLS totals.
5. Some income-based JSA claimants may also be entitled to benefit via the contributory route.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions his Department checked the immigration status of applicants for national insurance numbers in each year since 1997; and how many applications were refused as a result. [116599]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested.

Prior to July 2006, individuals entering the UK from abroad who required a National Insurance number (NINO) had to attend Jobcentre Plus for an evidence of identity interview. The interviewing process was primarily designed to guard against identity fraud. If Jobcentre Plus became aware of immigration or right to work irregularities it advised the Home Office Immigration and Nationality Directorate of this so that appropriate action could be taken.

From July 2006 a "right to work" pre-condition for all employment-related NINO applications was introduced. This prevents anyone who does not have the right to work from being allocated a NINO for employment purposes. From July 2006 to 30 November 2006 a total of 1,529 NINO applications were refused on the basis of not satisfying the right to work test.

New Deal

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost to his Department of each new deal programme has been in each year since 2001. [105299]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is in the following table.

New deal costs since 2001

£ million

	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
New deal for young people	308	314	264	254	198
New deal 25 plus	213	238	189	179	125
New deal 50 plus	87	87	41	3	1
New deal for lone parents	46	62	20	24	26
New deal for disabled people	10	31	28	65	68
New deal for partners	8	6	0	1	1
Admin	n/a	n/a	121	113	121

Notes:
1. Figures include all new deal costs including administrative expenditure up to 2002-03. Information on administrative expenditure by individual new deal is not available for 2003-04 and later years.
2. Spend data also includes allowances paid to participants apart from the 50 plus element of the working tax credit which is the responsibility of HMRC. As this is not included, new deal 50 plus costs reduce after 2002-03.
3. Spend on new deal for partners in 2003-04 was less than £0.5 million and is thus not recorded as figures are rounded to the nearest £ million.
4. Start dates for each programme are: new deal for young people: January 1998; new deal 25 plus: July 1998; new deal for lone parents: October 1998; new deal 50 plus: April 2000; new deal for disabled people: July 2001; new deal for partners: April 1999.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate his Department has made of the cost per job placement of (a) the New Deal for Young People and (b) New Deal 25 plus. [111233]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We estimate that the average cost of helping someone into work through new deal for young people is £2,789 and through new deal 25 plus is £3,471. This data is for the period ending March 2006 and excludes administration costs.

Pensioners: Tees Valley

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners live in (a) Hartlepool borough council and (b) Tees Valley sub-region areas; how many are in receipt of council tax benefit; and what percentage this represents of the total number of pensioners living in each area. [129789]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table.

Council tax benefit recipients by age and local authority, August 2006

Local authority	Council tax benefit recipients aged 60 and over[1]	Population aged 60 and over	Percentage of population aged 60 and over in receipt of council tax benefit
Darlington	5,090	22,200	23.0
Hartlepool	6,590	19,200	33.3
Middlesbrough	7,880	27,000	29.2
Redcar and Cleveland	8,270	32,800	25.2
Stockton on Tees	8,910	37,100	24.0

[1] Council tax benefit figures exclude any second adult rebate cases.

Notes:
1. The data refer to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
2. Council tax benefit caseloads are rounded to the nearest 10 and percentages to one decimal place.
3. Population figures are rounded to the nearest 100.
4. Figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.
5. "Aged 60 and over" is defined as benefit units where the claimant and/or partner are aged 60 and over. Therefore figures will contain some claimants aged under60 where there is a partner aged over 60 years.

Social Security Benefits

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's policy is on paying (a) social security benefits and (b) job seeker's allowance to people who live with a partner who works more than 24 hours per week; and if he will make a statement. [129601]

Mr. Plaskitt: Income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance are non-contributory benefits. The full basis for entitlement is set out in regulations. The principal rule in relation to remunerative work is that, where the claimant works 16 hours or more a week or the claimant's partner works 24 hours or more week the claimant does not satisfy the conditions of entitlement. For those cases where the couple is obliged to make a joint claim for JSA, the 16-hour rule applies to both partners because both are claimants.

In cases other than joint claim JSA cases, where the claimant's partner is working between 16 and 24 hours a week, it may be possible for the couple to claim both working tax credit and either income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance. In such cases, there is an automatic entitlement to maximum working tax credit, but the claimant's entitlement to income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance will be reduced pound for pound by the working tax credit that is paid.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's policy is on paying (a) social security benefits and (b) job seeker's allowance to people who live with a parent who works more than 24 hours per week; and if he will make a statement. [129602]

Mr. Plaskitt: Both Income Support and income-based jobseeker's allowance are available to those who satisfy the qualifying criteria. The fact that a non-dependent young person may choose to continue to live in their parents' household does not in any way affect their entitlement to these benefits.

TRANSPORT

Departments: Ministers

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether Ministers in his Department have had meetings with former Ministers of the Department in the last three months. [129826]

Gillian Merron: Department for Transport Ministers meet with ministerial colleagues and former ministerial colleagues in the course of performing their ministerial duties.

Departments: Official Engagements

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who has had access to the diaries of his Department's (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the last three months. [129827]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport employs some 19,000 officials. Identification of who would have access to each official's diary could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Access to ministerial diaries is limited to those who support the Minister in their ministerial duties.

Departments: Security

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 18W, if he will break down by commercial and industrial sector the 4711 passes issued to contractors and consultants by his Department. [129078]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 22 March 2007]: The Department's access control systems used to calculate the number of passes previously advised in the answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 18W, do not contain any further information to provide a meaningful breakdown of those passes issued to commercial and industrial sectors.

Exhaust Emissions: Pollution Control

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the progress of motor manufacturers towards meeting the targets for new car emission levels set out in the 1998 agreement between the European Automobile Manufacturers Association and the European Commission. [129740]

Dr. Ladyman: For 2004 (the last year for which EU figures are available), the average new car efficiency for the EU was 163g/km (grams carbon dioxide emitted for every kilometre travelled). The agreement between the European Commission and the European Automobile Manufacturers' Association (ACEA) was for ACEA members to meet an efficiency target of 140g/km by 2008.

While the 2004 figure shows a 12 per cent. gain in efficiency since 1995 (the first year of the EU-manufacturer emissions agreements), it is also clear that the 2008 target is unlikely to be met. Because of this, the Commission recently announced its intention to legislate on emissions: by mid-2008, it will propose legislation requiring manufacturers to reach an emissions level of 130g/km by 2012 (with other measures taking the overall target to the equivalent of 120g/km). While details around the target level are still being considered, we welcome in principle the Commission's intention to bring forward mandatory proposals.

Galileo Satellite Navigation System

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his latest estimate is of the date when the Galileo satellite navigation system will be fully functional. [129919]

Dr. Ladyman: The latest information provided by the European Commission gives 2012 as the date for full operational capability to be achieved. This is subject to the successful conclusion of negotiations with the consortium bidding for the public private partnership (PPP) contract.

Heathrow Airport: Air Traffic

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of flights were delayed from landing by having to circle or stack at Heathrow airport in (a) the last 12 months and (b) the last three years; if he will determine what effect this has on (i) fuel consumption and (ii) pollution; what action is being taken to reduce these delays; and if he will make a statement. [129611]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport does not hold this information.

HGV Drivers

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers his Department has to ensure that foreign drivers unable to obtain HGV licences in the UK for medical reasons do not drive in the UK. [129861]

Dr. Ladyman: Driving unlicensed is an offence under the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 and the penalty reflects the seriousness of that offence. On conviction the driver is liable to disqualification from driving all vehicles. The police will continue to enforce the law.

Motor Vehicles: Registration

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons estimates of the number of foreign registered vehicles on UK roads are not available, as referred to in the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 28W, on vehicle registration. [129293]

Dr. Ladyman: Estimates of the number of foreign registered vehicles on UK roads are not available because comprehensive data of this nature are not collected.

However, an estimate of the number of foreign registered heavy goods vehicles entering GB is available from an ad-hoc survey undertaken in 2003. The report entitled "Foreign Vehicle activity in GB in 2003" was placed in the House of Commons Library and is also available online at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/statistics/datatablespublications/freight/foreignvehicle/coll_surveyofforeignvehicleactiv/surveyofforeignvehicleactivi5130.

Rapid Transit Systems

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many light rail projects his Department has considered since 1997. [129984]

Mr. Tom Harris: 18 schemes have been considered since 1997, some of which were considered more than once in different forms.

Road Charging

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1456W, on tolls, whether the (a) London congestion charge and (b) Durham congestion charge are compliant with the requirements of EU Directive 2004/52/EC. [129865]

Dr. Ladyman: Article 1(2) of the EU Directive 2004/52, states that the directive does not apply to road toll systems:

for which no electronic means of toll collection exists, which do not need the installation of on-board equipment, which are small, strictly local road toll systems for which the costs of compliance with the requirements of this directive would be disproportionate to the benefits.

Both the London congestion charge and Durham congestion charge are therefore exempt from the EU Directive 2004/52 as they do not require vehicles to install on-board equipment and do not use electronic means to collect the charge.

Road Traffic

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of the (a) motorway and (b) strategic trunk network have been widened to ease traffic bottlenecks since 1997. [125987]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table lists the schemes within the strategic roads programme which have been widened in order to ease traffic congestion since 1997.

	Length of scheme (Miles)
Motorway schemes
A1 (M) Wetherby-Walshford	3.11

Tolls: Greater Manchester

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has selected Manchester as a location for a road user pricing pilot. [129094]

Dr. Ladyman: No decisions have been taken on areas to take forward local road pricing.

Greater Manchester is one of 10 areas to be awarded pump-priming funding to support the development of Transport Innovation Fund packages that address local congestion problems by combining demand management, including road pricing, with better public transport.

It is for the local authority to decide whether to propose such a scheme.

Transport

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the timetable for the draft Transport Bill. [129095]

Dr. Ladyman: The draft Road Transport Bill is due to be published later in the spring.

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what date he expects to approve technology and testing standards for equipment that could be fitted to vehicles to abate emissions of nitrogen oxide in relation to the enforcement to Euro IV standards. [129855]

Dr. Ladyman: Euro IV standards are mandatory for all new cars, vans, lorries and buses registered in the United Kingdom, and indeed Europe. Test procedures are therefore already in place for type approval to these standards.

Diesel lorries and buses meeting earlier Euro standards are eligible for reduced road tax if they have been retrofitted to reduce their particulate emissions (but not NO_x emissions) to Euro IV levels. Such retrofit emissions control devices are approved through the Reduced Pollution Certificate scheme.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has recently announced that the Reduced Pollution Certificate scheme will be extended to offer reduced road tax to lorries and buses meeting the Euro V standards ahead of the date that this becomes mandatory (1 October 2009). Euro V differs from Euro IV solely in terms of the limits on oxides of nitrogen emissions. The exact details of the requirements for issuing Reduced Pollution Certificates to Euro V compliant vehicles, including any test procedures required, have not yet been decided.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which postal companies handle mail dispatched by her Department and its agencies. [128246]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport uses the following postal companies: Royal Mail, IDS (Interdepartmental Dispatch Service), Parcelforce and City Sprint. Our executive agency, the Royal Parks, uses the following postal companies: Royal Mail and City Sprint.

Departments: Recruitment

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department spent on newsprint recruitment advertising in each of the last five years; and which newspapers it used for such purposes over that period. [129090]

Mr. Lammy: The cost of newsprint advertising cannot be easily separated from other recruitment expenditure without disproportionate cost.

Senior posts are typically advertised in The Times or The Guardian, and, if appropriate, the specialist press. More junior positions are advertised in the London press.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many vacancies there are within her Department. [129091]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has 12 vacancies currently.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department has spent on recruitment in the last five years, broken down by (a) costs incurred directly by her Department, (b) costs incurred through the employment of recruitment agencies and agents and (c) other costs. [129092]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has paid the following amounts on the recruitment of permanent staff in the last five years:

2001-02	27,079
2002-03	115,369
2003-04	70,786
2004-05	34,931
2005-06	130,980

A breakdown of these amounts as requested could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Gaming Clubs

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether (a) the Chairman and (b) other members of the Casino Advisory Panel read the Joint Committee's Report on the Gambling Bill during their deliberations on the award of casino licences. [127179]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Chairman and members of the Casino Advisory Panel read the report of the Joint Committee on the Draft Gambling Bill: Draft Gambling Bill Session 2003-2004 Volumes I to III and Joint Committee on the Draft Gambling Bill: Draft Gambling Bill (Regional Casinos) Volumes I and II and used this information to inform their conclusions.

Gaming Clubs: Licensing

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many regional casinos must be licensed in the pilot scheme in order to comply with the EU legislation relating to freedom of enterprise. [129037]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are satisfied that the Gambling Act 2005 complies with EU law. The Act provides for three new categories of casinos: one regional casino, eight large and eight small casinos.

National Lottery: Grants

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of funding provided by each lottery distributor went to voluntary and community sector organisations in each of the last five years. [129155]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 22 March 2007]: This information is not available in detail for all lottery distributors. However, the information that we do have suggests that distributors channel a significant amount of their funding through the voluntary and community sector (VCS).

For example the Heritage Lottery Fund estimates that in 2005-06, 55 per cent. of its lottery awards were made to the third sector. Its estimates for the previous four years are 39 per cent. in 2004-05, 51 per cent. in 2003-04, 45 per cent. in 2002-03 and 50 per cent. in 2001-02.

The Arts Council England estimates that in 2005-06, it awarded approximately 60 per cent. of its budget to the VCS.

Sport England estimates that around 30 per cent. of its funding has gone to the VCS over the lifetime of the lottery.

Since 2004-05, the total annual Community Fund budget and approximately 40 per cent. of the New Opportunities Fund budget has been allocated to the voluntary and community sector. From 2006-07, the Big Lottery Fund made a new undertaking to allocate 60-70 per cent. of its total budget to the voluntary and community sector and will be reporting on its performance against this target in its annual report.

Olympic Delivery Authority

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) roles and (b) pay grades are of (i) Board and (ii) Committee members of the Olympic Delivery Authority. [129246]

Mr. Caborn: The roles of the Board members and Committee members of the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) are detailed in the Management Statement and the Standing Orders and Terms of Reference for each established Committee (Audit, Communications, Finance, Planning, Remuneration and Risk). These can be found on the ODA's website at www.london2012.com. Remuneration for the chairman's post is set at £300,000 per annum pro rata and requires a two to three day per week time commitment. Other Board members and Committee members are remunerated at the rate of £500 per day for each whole day or half day that they spend on ODA business.

Olympic Games

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will estimate the likely effect on lottery resources available to voluntary and community bodies of national lottery funding for the 2012 Olympic Games. [125649]

Tessa Jowell: The Government and the Big Lottery Fund have agreed that the fund's resources for the voluntary and community sector will be protected. They will continue to receive £2 billion, as they expect, from the Big Lottery Fund between now and 2012.

The voluntary and community sector also receives lottery funding from distributors for the other good causes, the arts, heritage and sport. At this stage it is not possible to estimate the effect on this funding of the recently revised Olympic budget. No decisions have been taken by Arts Council England or the Heritage Lottery Fund about possible adaptations to their lottery programmes. They intend to honour all existing commitments and they remain committed to supporting the voluntary and community sectors in their fields. Furthermore, a significant proportion of Sport England's investment is directed to the voluntary and community sector and I expect this to continue also. My Department will also be working closely with all distributors to ensure they are able to fully benefit from the many opportunities London 2012 will afford.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will break down by area of planned expenditure the £390 million allocated for sport in the public sector funding package for the 2012 Olympics. [129382]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The £388 million in the public sector funding package allocated for investment in non Olympic Delivery Authority provision comprises: £290 million from the Sports Lottery for investment in elite and community sport; a £66 million contribution to the Paralympics costs; and £32 million for other non Olympic Delivery Authority costs.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department has benchmarked the expenditure on administrative costs accrued by the Olympic Delivery Authority in relation to the construction of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games against the administrative budgets for previous Olympic Games; and if she will make a statement. [128412]

Tessa Jowell: Administration costs are specific to the particular state of the labour market in each country. We have not therefore benchmarked the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA's) administration costs against those for previous Olympic Games. We will however, continue to press down on those costs to ensure that they are contained within the budget agreed.

The total cost of the ODA's programme delivery budget represents around 10 per cent. Of the total costs of the ODA programme, which is consistent with industry norms for a project of this scale, complexity and concentration.

Sports: Finance

Chris Bunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much (a) the Government and (b) the Big Lottery Fund spent on elite sport, including facilities and major events, in each of the last five years; and how much is planned to be spent in each of the next five years. [129088]

Mr. Caborn: UK Sport is the Government's lead agency for elite sport in the UK and a lottery distributor. The table provides details of the level of Government and national lottery funding to UK Sport over the last five years.

	Exchequer funding	Lottery funding	Total
2002-03	5,100,000	22,100,000	27,200,000
2003-04	11,500,000	17,700,000	29,200,000
2004-05	16,400,000	14,300,000	30,700,000
2005-06	16,300,000	15,700,000	32,000,000
2006-07	35,400,000	40,500,000	75,900,000

Over the next five years UK Sport plans to invest approximately £508.6 million of Exchequer and lottery money in elite sport.

Sport England provides some funding for English non-Olympic sports at elite level and, prior to April 2006, also provided elite funding to English Olympic sports. This funding was wholly from the lottery and was made via Sport England's world class programmes. This ran between1997 and 2005 and a total of £236,679,512 was provided over this period.

Since 1 April 2005, Sport England's investment in national governing bodies (NGBs) has been made via whole sport or one stop plans. Between 2005 and 2009 Sport England estimates that £59 million will be distributed to support elite sport

On 9 March Sport England launched its proposals for NGB investment between 2009 and 2013. This will determine future funding for non-Olympic elite sports.

The plan is to have funding agreements in place by March 2008.

Figures from Sport England show that the following capital amounts have been spent to build or refurbish elite sports facilities (defined for this purpose as the English institutes of sport and the national sports centres) over the period 02-03 to 06-07:

	Exchequer funding	Lottery funding	Total
2002-03	0	24,792,379	24,792,379
2003-04	100,000	3,525,565	3,625,565
2004-05	391,000	49,833,172	50,224,172
2005-06	1,117,000	0	1,117,000
2006-07	624,000	0	624,000

In addition, DCMS, Sport England and the London Development Agency have contributed £161 million (£120 million Lottery and £41 million Exchequer) towards the cost of the Wembley Stadium project which opened its doors for the first time on 17 March 2007; and Sport England and DCMS have contributed £11 million towards the cost of the Lee Valley athletics centre (£7 million lottery and £4 million Exchequer) which opened formally in January 2007.

Sport England anticipates spending an additional £3 million in the period up to 2007-08 on the national sports centres.

Funding on elite sports facilities beyond 2007-08 will be subject to the outcomes of the comprehensive spending review.

UK Sport distributes lottery funding each year, through the world class events programme, to support NGBs' bidding and staging costs for major sporting events. Between 2002 and 2006 UK Sport invested £1.6 million a year in this programme. From 2007 it will be investing £3.3 million a year.

The big lottery fund money has not allocated any funding to support elite sport.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Casinos

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on casino development in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [129516]

Mr. Hain: None. The legislation governing gambling in Northern Ireland, the Betting, Gaming, Lotteries and Amusements (Northern Ireland) Order 1985, does not permit facilities for high stakes gaming such as are provided by commercial gaming clubs (casinos) in Great Britain. A casino cannot, therefore, operate lawfully in Northern Ireland. There are no plans at present to change the law to allow casinos to operate in Northern Ireland.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128066]

Mr. Hanson: Information on advertising campaign expenditure is not held centrally in the format requested. However the following tables show the information currently held on departmental advertising expenditure. This information is available for the past two financial years but is not broken down by campaign. A breakdown in relation to (a) television, (b) radio, (c) print media and (d) other is supplied in the following tables. Category (d) includes other forms of advertising, for example outdoor advertising, cinema and online. The new Advertising Shared Service Centre, which becomes operational on 1 April, is currently developing a management information system to collate information on campaign and classified expenditure.

Prisons: Drugs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many drugs treatment programmes were in operation in each Northern Ireland prison in each of the last six years. [128014]

Paul Goggins: The Prison Service has contracts with three voluntary support groups, one in each of the establishments, to provide counselling and education services to prisoners who have abused substances.

The number of drug and/or alcohol misuse programmes provided is as follows:

	Number
2002-03	17
2003-04	32
2004-05	28
2005-06	35
2006-07 (to end February)	57

In addition there are very many counselling sessions with individual prisoners.

Roads: Bangor

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) fatal and (b) non-fatal accidents occurred at Six Road Ends in Bangor in each of the past six years; and what assessment was made of the cause in each case. [129586]

Paul Goggins: I have been advised by the PSNI that as there may be ongoing civil and criminal proceedings in respect of these collisions it is not possible to provide causation factors for each specific collision.

Please see the following table detailing history of injury road traffic collisions at the Six Road Ends junction, Bangor, covering the period from 1 January 2001 through to 31 December 2006.

Universities: Northern Ireland

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total costs associated with building a new university on the Springvale site have been to date. [121663]

Maria Eagle: Springvale was to be a joint project, between the University of Ulster (UU) and the Belfast Institute, for a main campus, a community outreach centre and an applied research centre on a split site on the Springfield road. £9.2 million has been spent to date—£0.9 million from Government, £6 million from external sources and the remainder from the two institutions. The outreach centre has been built but, following the withdrawal of UU, the other two elements will not proceed. The Belfast Institute brought forward an alternative proposal for a workforce and economic development centre, to be located adjacent to the community outreach centre. This proposal received ministerial approval at April 2006 and, when delivered, will complete the regeneration of the south site.

Valuation and Lands Agency

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for how long the Valuation and Lands Agency has used pictometry techniques for valuations of domestic property. [128638]

Mr. Hanson: The Valuation and Lands Agency has never used pictometry techniques for valuations of domestic property.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which councils in Northern Ireland are willing to engage in the Valuation and Land Agency or Land and Property Services Agency's building control project. [128632]

Mr. Hanson: To date Belfast city council is the only council currently engaged in the Valuation and Lands Agency/Land and Property Services Agency's Building control project.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advice the Valuation and Land Agency or Land and Property Services Agency has sought from (a) the Information Commission and (b) legal experts on the use of oblique aerial photography for valuation purposes. [128633]

Mr. Hanson: Valuation and Lands Agency/Land and Property Services Agency has not sought advice from (a) the Information Commissioner and (b) has had preliminary discussions with legal advisers on the use of oblique aerial photographs for valuation purposes.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information Belfast city council is providing to the Valuation and Lands Agency or Land and Property Services Agency as part of the building control project; and whether this includes the provision of photographs. [128634]

Mr. Hanson: As part of the building control project, Belfast city council provides the Valuation and Lands Agency/Land and Property Services with full survey details on new and altered properties. This generally includes a digital photograph of the front elevation of the property.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what use the (a) Valuation and Lands Agency and (b) Land and Property Services Agency is (i) making and (ii) planning to make of fee code segmentation data to determine value significance. [128640]

Mr. Hanson: The Valuation and Lands Agency/Land and Property Services Agency are (i) not currently making use of fee code segmentation data to determine value significant alterations to properties for rating purposes, but (ii) may consider the use of these data in the future.

Victims Commissioner

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applicants there were for the post of Victims Commissioner in Northern Ireland, broken down by (a) gender and (b) religious affiliation; and how many applicants were (i) shortlisted and (ii) interviewed in each category. [129778]

Mr. Hanson: Out of the 46 applicants for the post of Commissioner for Victims and Survivors for Northern Ireland:

(a) There were 24 male and 22 female applicants.

(b) 29 were from a protestant community background, 21 from a Roman Catholic community background and six other.

14 were shortlisted for interview. One candidate (female and from a Roman Catholic community background) withdrew from the competition prior to the interviews being conducted, resulting in 13 candidates being interviewed.

Of those interviewed six were male and seven were female. Eight were from a Protestant community background, four from a Roman Catholic community background and there was one other.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Detainees

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations her Department has made to the US to ensure the safe return of former residents of (a) the UK and (b) UK overseas territories being held at the detention facility in Guantanamo Bay. [130216]

Dr. Howells: The Government are not in a position to provide consular or diplomatic protection to non-British nationals, including those detainees in Guantanamo Bay, who were formerly resident in the UK or UK overseas territories.

However, we agreed in March 2006 to make representations to the US government for the release of Mr. Bisher al-Rawi, an Iraqi national formerly resident in the UK, from Guantanamo Bay and his return to the UK. That decision was based on the particular circumstances in his case. On 6 April 2006, my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Mr. Straw) wrote to the US Secretary of State to ask formally for Mr. al-Rawi's release and return. Detailed discussions between our Governments have continued ever since. While these are sensitive and complicated issues that take time, we are fully committed to securing Mr. al-Rawi's release from Guantanamo Bay and his return to the UK.

The Government continue to raise humanitarian concerns about detentions at Guantanamo Bay with the US authorities, including issues relating to detainees who were formerly resident in the UK.

Africa: Drugs

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of action taken to stop the trafficking of narcotics across African borders. [129424]

Dr. Howells: East and west Africa is increasingly being used as a transit route for cocaine and heroin from Latin America and Asia to European and other western markets. We have supported counter narcotics capacity building projects with local law enforcement agencies in Kenya, Rwanda, Ethiopia, Nigeria, Ghana, Gambia and Senegal to improve interdiction through the provision of training and equipment.

While significant challenges remain, our assistance is starting to have some impact in the region. In 2006 the Kenyan authorities destroyed over one ton of cocaine from an earlier seizure. In Ghana, drugs interdiction training and equipment at Accra International airport (Operation Westbridge) has achieved some good success interdicting cocaine couriers, since the start of its operation in November 2006. As at 21 March 2007, 40 couriers destined for the UK or Europe had been interdicted with seizures of 130 kg of cocaine and 413 kg of cannabis, with an estimated UK street value of £8.5 million. This progress proves the importance of supporting good law enforcement co-operation coupled with training on interdiction techniques.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her assessment is of relations between Ascension Islanders and the Island administrator. [129822]

Mr. Hoon: The administrator of Ascension Island has a good professional relationship with those living and working on the Island. That relationship is promoted through regular formal and informal meetings.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provisions have been made to hold elections to replace the Ascension Island councillors who have recently resigned. [129871]

Mr. Hoon: The Island Council (Ascension) Ordinance lays down the procedure for holding elections. Six out of a total of seven councillors have recently resigned just a little under half-way through a three year tenure. The acting governor of St. Helena and its Dependencies, as acting governor of Ascension, in consultation with the substantive governor and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, is currently considering urgently whether in these circumstances a by-election should be held or the council should be dissolved so that a general election should take place.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Ministers from her Department visited Ascension Island in each year since 1997; and what the (a) duration and (b) purpose was of each visit. [129982]

Mr. Hoon: My hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Bill Rammell) transited Ascension Island on 26 November 2003 en route to the Falkland Islands. During his visit, he had the opportunity to meet the Ascension Island councillors. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, was prevented from visiting Ascension Island on 15 December 2006 by bad weather. He had scheduled meetings with the Ascension Island councillors.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in providing permanent rights of (a) abode and (b) property ownership to residents of Ascension Island. [129984]

Mr. Hoon: After having weighed carefully the aspirations of those working and living on Ascension Island against the risk that a settled community might not be economically viable, the Government concluded that the UK would face unacceptable risks if the right of abode were granted and further development of property rights permitted. This decision was conveyed to the Ascension Island Council in my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham's letter of 19 January 2006.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received from the United States government on providing (a) permanent rights of abode and (b) property ownership rights to residents of Ascension Island. [129985]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has received no representations from the US Administration on providing permanent right of abode and property ownership rights to residents of Ascension Island.

Cambodia: Administration of Justice

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the independence from the political process of the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia trying suspects accused of serious crimes under the Khmer Rouge regime. [129560]

Dr. Howells: The Government support an independent, UN-supported tribunal that will help strengthen accountability, the rule of law and judicial reform in present day Cambodia as well as hold to account those suspected of being most responsible for the serious crimes committed during the Khmer Rouge period. We, and other interested states, continue to encourage all parties to work together to ensure the credibility and success of the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia. We are monitoring developments at the tribunal closely.

Cameroon

Mr. Clayton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by the High Commission in Yaoundé on the arrest and detention of Dr. Nfor Ngala Nfor and other members of the Southern Cameroon National Council in Bamenda. [128874]

Mr. McCartney: Our high commission in Yaounde has not made any representations to the Cameroon authorities regarding this incident. However, since learning of the arrest and detention of 11 Southern Cameroon National Council members, including Dr. Nfor Ngala Nfor, the high commission in Yaounde has been in contact with the National Human Rights Commission and Freedoms representative in Bamenda. That representative has met with Dr. Nfor at the prison, who confirmed that their health situation was good and they were being detained under normal Cameroon prison conditions, including having access to their legal counsel and families.

Ten of the 11 detainees including, Dr. Nfor Ngala Nfor, were released on bail on 14 March. Hearings on preliminary investigation into the arrests have been scheduled for 17 April. The high commission will continue to follow the case.

China

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the compliance by China, in respect of its occupation of Tibet, with Article 49 paragraph six of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949. [129373]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The Government have not made any assessment of the situation in Tibet in relation to paragraph six, Article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949. Successive Governments have regarded Tibet as autonomous while recognising the special position of the Chinese authorities there. We encourage the Chinese Government to put history aside and move towards a solution to the present problems in Tibet, doing so most recently at the latest round of the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue in London on 5 February. We continue to urge China to engage in dialogue with representatives of the Dalai Lama, without preconditions.

Egypt: Politics and Government

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her Department's assessment is of the democratic process in Egypt. [128868]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 22 March 2007]: The Egyptian Government have committed to a process of political reform. In recent years some important reforms have taken place. The constitution was amended in 2005 to allow multi-candidate presidential elections to be held for the first time. Domestic monitors were allowed to observe parliamentary and presidential elections for the first time in 2005. In December 2006, President Mubarak announced further constitutional amendments; these will be voted on in a referendum today. The President has also committed to ending the state of emergency by May 2008.

There is scope for further progress in enhancing the transparency and independence of the electoral system, as well as increasing the participation of women in the political process. We will continue to monitor the implementation of the reforms and the constitutional amendments. We will also continue to work with Egypt to promote democracy and human rights.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made on the raids of 23 and 25 February 2007 by US and Iraqi forces on the head offices of the General Federation of Iraqi Workers; what reports she has received on the damage caused; and if she will make a statement. [129566]

Dr. Howells: We have made no representations on this matter. We are aware of the raids on the offices of the General Federation of Iraqi Workers. These were carried out by Iraqi security forces with the backing of multi-national forces as part of ongoing security operations—several other offices and institutions have also been subject to similar operations. We strongly support the Iraqi Government's efforts to improve security, which are essential to improving the situation across the whole country.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria the Government use when formulating policy of opposing or supporting development of nuclear capability by other states. [129555]

Dr. Howells: The Government are bound by their commitment under article IV of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to be supportive of the development of peaceful nuclear technology by all states party to the treaty. The state party concerned must, of course, be in compliance with its treaty obligations, particularly those under articles I and II, but also under article III, to be the beneficiary of such support.

Policy towards those not in compliance with their treaty, or International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, obligations is formulated case by case.

Pakistan: Entry Clearances

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether HM High Commission, Islamabad, has received the decision papers from the Immigration Appeals Tribunal in respect of cases VA/08797/2006, VA/08788/2006 and VA/08793/2006 concerning Mr F. A., Mrs R. B. and Miss M. M., relatives of Mrs N. S. of Aylesbury. [127745]

Dr. Howells: The determinations in respect of the cases of Mr. F A, Mrs. R. B. and Miss M. M. were received in our High Commission in Islamabad in October and November 2006. These cases were part of the backlog of allowed appeal cases, but the papers have now been linked with their files and passed to a casework officer for a brief review before the applicants are contacted and invited to submit their passports so that their visas can be issued.

The Visa Section in Islamabad aim for this to be done within the next week.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many refused immigration applications are awaiting review by entry clearance managers at HM High Commission, Islamabad. [127748]

Dr. Howells: All refused applications are reviewed by an entry clearance manager within 24 hours.

Pakistan: Religious Persons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many imams were granted entry clearance from Pakistan to carry out religious duties in the UK in each year since 1995. [129064]

Dr. Howells: The information requested by my hon. Friend is listed as follows:

Paramjeet Singh

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received on the case of Mr Paramjeet Singh, arrested in India on 23 December 2006; and what action she has taken following Paramjeet Singh's arrest. [129232]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received a number of letters from hon. Members about Mr. Singh's case.

Officials from our High Commission in New Delhi sought consular access as soon as we were notified of his arrest. We visited Mr. Singh in prison on 30 December 2006 and again on 22 February. We will continue to provide Mr. Singh and his family with appropriate consular assistance.

Saudi Arabia

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she last met her counterpart in Saudi Arabia. [129857]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last met Prince Saud, her Saudi counterpart, in Paris on 25 January.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her counterpart in Saudi Arabia. [129858]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last spoke to Prince Saud, the Saudi Foreign Minister, on 21 March. They discussed regional issues related to the forthcoming Arab League Summit in Riyadh.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she plans to visit Saudi Arabia in the near future. [129859]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary had planned to visit Saudi Arabia from 21-22 March. However, because of preparations for the Arab League summit next week, it was agreed that the visit should be postponed. We hope that the visit will be reinstated soon.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Community Court Schemes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the Community Court schemes in Salford and Liverpool. [128166]

Ms Harman: Both the Liverpool and Salford Community Justice schemes have been undergoing extensive quantative and qualitative evaluations. It is anticipated that the final reports will be published in May. Community justice makes a key contribution to the Government's Respect Action Plan, which was published in January 2006. It aims to strengthen the links between the courts, the criminal justice system and the local community so that local people's confidence in the work of the courts and the wider criminal justice system increases. As the Lord Chancellor said in his written ministerial statement of 27 November 2006, the Government are now establishing 10 further community justice initiatives. The aim of this next phase of community justice work is to provide further learning and best practice so that in the long term the principles of community justice are applied in the courts and the criminal justice system throughout England and Wales.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the most recent re-offending rates are in England and Wales; and what the re-offending rates have been from the Community Court schemes in Salford and Liverpool. [128167]

Ms Harman: Figures from November 2006 from the Home Office put the most recent re-offending rate for England and Wales at 57.6 per cent. This is measured for adult offenders over two years following the date of release from prison or sentence to a community order. Since it is less than two years since the launch of both Liverpool and Salford, these figures are not yet available.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the most recent attendance rate by the accused at court is in England and Wales; and what the rate has been at the Community Court schemes in Salford and Liverpool. [128168]

Ms Harman: The Home Office Criminal Statistics Bulletin 2005 states that, nationally, 8 per cent. of adult defendants fail to appear in the magistrates court. Figures for 2006 are not yet available. Figures for the Community Justice Centre in Liverpool, which opened in September 2005, show that in 2006, 20 per cent. of adult and 15 per cent. of youth offenders failed to attend court. The Liverpool Community Justice Centre has a different caseload, however, to a normal magistrates court and also sits as a Crown court. These figures are not collected at Salford magistrates court.

Coroners: Armed Forces

Robert Key: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has to transfer funds from HM Coroner for Oxfordshire to HM Coroner for Wiltshire following the decision to transfer cases of multiple military deaths overseas from RAF Brize Norton to RAF Lyneham; and if she will make a statement. [129138]

Ms Harman: The exceptional funds provided to the Oxfordshire coroner were to clear a backlog of inquests which had developed. I will continue to regularly review progress regarding these inquests.

Robert Key: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what new arrangements she plans to make to fund HM Coroners following her decision to transfer responsibility for coroners inquests from Oxfordshire to the home counties of individual deceased military personnel; and if she will make a statement. [129139]

Ms Harman: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Robert Key: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the additional costs falling on HM Coroner for Wiltshire arising from the transfer of cases of multiple military deaths overseas from Oxfordshire to Wiltshire. [129140]

Ms Harman: We have no costings for the Wiltshire and Swindon coroner handling potential multiple inquests of fatalities repatriated to RAF Lyneham.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many military inquests were conducted in (a) Oxfordshire and (b) Wiltshire in each of the last five years. [129631]

Ms Harman: We are seeking the relevant information from the Oxfordshire coroner. The Wiltshire coroner's office has advised that five military inquests were held in 2002, eight were held in 2003 (of which one remains outstanding), none in 2004, six in 2005 and two in 2006.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what extra funding and staffing has been given to the Oxfordshire Coroner to assist with the cost of military inquests incurred due to the use of RAF Brize Norton for the repatriation of bodies; and what additional resources will be given to the Wiltshire Coroner when those duties are transferred to RAF Lyneham on 1 April. [129632]

Ms Harman: To clear the backlog of military inquests the Oxfordshire coroner has been provided with the funding authority to employ three additional assistant deputy coroners, three additional coroner's officers, one additional administrative officer and recording equipment to enable two courts to run simultaneously. To date, the Department for Constitutional Affairs has received invoices totalling £115,000 for this additional resource. It is not planned to provide additional resources to the Wiltshire and Swindon coroner who we understand intends to transfer as many of the military inquests as he can to the coroners nearest to the bereaved family. I will continue to regularly review the progress of military inquests.

Courts: Security

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what funding her Department provided for security in courts in each year since 2001. [129150]

Ms Harman: Between 2001 and the creation of Her Majesty's Courts Service in 2005 my Department provided funding, either directly or as capital grant or resource funding, to all courts in England and Wales. Due to the nature of this allocation method, to determine what funding was provided for security in courts for each year would incur a disproportionate cost.

Post 2005, all budgets were and continue to be devolved to the seven regions which comprise Her Majesty's Courts Service and funding for security is not recorded separately. To extract security costs from the general planned maintenance budget and other provisions in courts in England and Wales would incur a disproportionate cost to collate.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department has taken to improve security at courts in England and Wales since 2001. [129151]

Ms Harman: My Department continually reviews the security arrangements at courts in England and Wales to ensure that appropriate security measures are in place. Since 2001, my Department has sought to ensure that those measures achieve and continue to achieve the necessary levels of protection through a process of risk management.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many security staff are employed at (a) High Court premises and (b) Crown court premises in England and Wales. [129152]

Ms Harman: My Department currently employ 60 security staff in the High Court and 306 in Crown courts throughout England and Wales. To ensure that there is no double counting, a separate figure has not been provided for locations when a High Court judge is on circuit, as they sit in existing Crown high court locations.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment has been made of security arrangements at courts in England and Wales following recent bombings of courts sittings in terrorism trials in Pakistan. [129153]

Ms Harman: Her Majesty's Courts Service, an Executive Agency of the Department for Constitutional Affairs, continually review the security arrangements of courts in England and Wales. The risks posed to all court buildings, staff and court users are assessed to ensure that appropriate measures are in place and that those measures are achieving the correct levels of protection through a process of risk management.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128062]

Ms Harman: Since its inception in June 2003, the Department for Constitutional Affairs has conducted the following advertising:

- a regional poster campaign on buses to promote recruitment to the lay magistracy
- a national campaign to promote recruitment to the lay magistracy
- radio and press adverts to target court fine defaulters (under the title Operation Payback)
- press adverts to promote voting fraud prevention
- invitations in the legal press to comment on Lord Carter's Review of Legal Aid Procurement
- a campaign in London to encourage voter registration by 18 to 24-year-olds

My Department has not conducted any television advertising since June 2003.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much her Department spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper or publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers and other publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic was of each. [128895]

Ms Harman: For the period March 2006 to March 2007 my Department placed the following advertorials:

In November 2006 an advertorial was placed in Media Today to help raise awareness of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 among health and social care practitioners. The cost for this was £204.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many meetings (a) she and (b) her Department's Ministers held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128767]

Ms Harman: During 2006 (a) I held two meetings with trade union representatives; (b) other Ministers in my Department held 13 meetings with trade union representatives, as set out in the following table.

	Number
Lord Falconer	[1]5
Baroness Ashton	[1]1
Vera Baird	0
Bridget Prentice	[1]10

[1] Two meetings with union representatives were held jointly by Lord Falconer and Bridget Prentice and one jointly by Lord Falconer and Baroness Ashton.

Gender Recognition Act 2004

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether criminal actions under section 22 of the Gender Recognition Act 2004 can be pursued for any period, so long as evidence still exists. [129399]

Vera Baird: No. Disclosure of protected information under section 22 of the Gender Recognition Act 2004 is a summary offence. The relevant time limit is set out in section 127 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980. Under that section, a court can only deal with an alleged offence if a complaint or information is submitted to the relevant authorities within six months of the event that gave rise to it.

Legal Aid

Harry Cohen: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the effect on those (a) affected by domestic violence and (b) on low incomes of the proposed changes to legal aid arrangements; and if she will make a statement. [129570]

Ms Harman: Domestic violence is a cross-Government priority and formalised through the formation of the Inter-Ministerial Group for Domestic Violence. The Group comprises of Ministers from nine Government Departments and the three devolved administrations. In light of the assessments and priority need, the group prepares an Annual Delivery Plan and reports against progress each year. The report for 2006-07 will be published shortly together with the Delivery Plan for 2007-08.

Domestic Violence proceedings are a priority area for legal aid funding. The Legal Services Commission's (LSC's) Funding Code Criteria for domestic violence cases are wider than for most other family and non-family areas; they are not limited to any specific definition of domestic violence or abuse. When appearing in a family court, persons of limited means will be funded in all but the most exceptional of circumstances. As a separate measure to the wider programme of legal aid reform as set out in "Legal Aid Reform: The Way Ahead" the financial eligibility limits for legal aid for domestic violence victims will be raised and both income and capital limits will be able to waived, by the LSC, on a discretionary basis from 9 April 2007. In criminal proceedings, the Crown Prosecution Service represents the victim of domestic violence.

Miscarriages of Justice: Family Courts

John Hemming: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) which Minister would be responsible for assessing whether systemic miscarriages of justice were occurring in the family courts; [129162]

(2) if she will establish a review of family court cases where Dr. David Southall retained a special case file. [129163]

Ms Harman: My right hon. Friend The Lord Chancellor is responsible for supporting the efficient and effective administration of the courts. The judiciary is primarily responsible for guarding against miscarriages of justice and they are entirely independent of the executive. It is open to the parties in an individual case to seek legal advice about the route to appeal if they are dissatisfied with the outcome of the case.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills has inquiry-ordering powers in relation to the exercise by local authorities of their children's services functions. In 2004, a review of cases that were before the family courts, and of children for whom the courts have made care orders (under section 31 of the Children Act 1989) was undertaken by local authorities at the request of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, the results of which were reported to Parliament. There are currently no plans to conduct a review of family court cases in which Dr. David Southall has been involved.

National Archives

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on delivery of services to researchers of the reduction in support for the National Archive. [129110]

Vera Baird: The National Archives measures the delivery of its services against published key performance indicators. At this point in the performance year, the National Archives is meeting all of its published targets relating to the delivery of services to researchers, of which the principal measure is customer satisfaction. Customer satisfaction with services provided at Kew and at the Family Records Centre in Islington is currently running at 95 per cent. against a target of 90 per cent.

Voting

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) whether an individual will be entitled to refuse to provide the personal identifier details in the event that the Government introduces personal identification in polling stations pursuant to the Electoral Administration Act 2006; and whether that individual would be entitled to receive a ballot paper and vote in such circumstances; [129439]

(2) whether she plans that an individual will have to provide his or her signature in a polling station before voting. [129440]

Bridget Prentice: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to my previous answer of 31 January 2007, Official Report, column 336W.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the reasons are for the differences in the procedures in relation to personal identifiers for those that vote by post and those who vote in person at a polling station. [129481]

Bridget Prentice: The Electoral Administration Act, as approved by Parliament, provides for a polling station voter to provide a signature, while a postal voter must provide both a signature and date of birth. The greater level of security applied to postal voting addresses concerns about the security of postal voting.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academy: Isle of Sheppey

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding Kent county council is providing for the proposed Academy on the Isle of Sheppey. [118270]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 February 2007]: Kent county council has made a public commitment to provide £1 million sponsorship towards the proposed Academy on Sheppey. Any additional funding required will be identified as the Academy proposals develop.

Act of Union

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what ways the 300th Anniversary of the Act of Union between England and Scotland will be officially commemorated in events and activities in English schools. [116895]

Jim Knight: The Department considers it important that schools have autonomy to plan their own timetables, including the commemoration of significant events. The current curricula for both Citizenship and History provide opportunities for schools to discuss the Act of Union. For instance, the statutory Citizenship curriculum for all secondary schools requires that pupils be taught about the origins and implications of the diverse national, regional, religious and ethnic identities in the United Kingdom and the work of parliament and government.

Admissions

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many admissions appeals were heard for pupils in the Peterborough Local Education Authority in each year since 1997; how many were successful; and if he will make a statement. [129410]

Jim Knight [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The information requested is shown in the table, as reported by schools and local authorities.

Apprentices

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many people in (a) apprenticeships and (b) advanced apprenticeships (i) were participating in a programme-led apprenticeship and (ii) had successfully completed the full framework of a programme-led apprenticeship in each year since the inception of programme-led apprenticeships; [127397]

(2) what the non-completion rate was for (a) programme-led apprenticeships, (b) programme-led advanced apprenticeships, (c) non-programme-led apprenticeships and (d) non-programme-led advanced apprenticeships in each year since the inception of programme-led apprenticeships. [127398]

Phil Hope: Figures for those participating in apprenticeships funded by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) can be derived from the Individualised Learner Record (ILR). The work-based learning (WBL) ILR was collated as an interim collection for the first time in 2001/02 and figures are presented from that time.

The programme-led pathway (PLP) is an initiative to enable more learners to enter an employed status apprenticeship programme. When they achieve their agreed goals, learners cease to be on a PLP and then become mainstream apprentices. Learners could start their pathway in WBL or FE (completing their non-employed learning). Once they attain employed status they will transfer to mainstream WBL.

It is possible to calculate participation for programme-led apprenticeships from the ILR data, but because it is difficult to accurately identify learners in mainstream WBL who started on a pathway, progression onto mainstream apprenticeships cannot be accurately calculated. The concept of framework achievement is not appropriate for programme-led pathways because an apprenticeship can only be completed in full, in employment. As the programme-led phase is not employment, learners on this pathway can only ever finish part of the framework.

Non-completion is not a standard measure for apprenticeships. (A learner could complete all of their learning but not gain achievement.) One measure of performance is the success rate, which is calculated as the number of leavers who either meet all of the requirements of their apprenticeship framework, or achieve an NVQ required by the framework, divided by the number of learners who have either left training or successfully completed their programme.

The following table shows the success rate for apprenticeship courses on an annual basis.

England	Advanced apprenticeship success rate	Apprenticeship success rate
		Percentage
2001/02	26	22
2002/03	32	24
2003/04	32	30
2004/05	38	40

In order to successfully complete an apprenticeship the learner must achieve each element required by their particular framework; that would include an NVQ, Key Skills and any other required qualification.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1249W, on apprentices, how many and what proportion of (a) apprenticeships and (b) advanced apprenticeships had (i) a separately assessed off-the-job technical certificate and (ii) their technical qualification integrated into the delivery and assessment of the National Vocational Qualifications in each year since 1997. [128039]

Phil Hope [holding answer 21 March 2007]: Data on Apprenticeships and Advanced Apprenticeships are collected on the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) Individualised Learner Record (ILR). This can record all of the individual learning aims that an Apprentice is undertaking as part of the framework, including those identified as separate technical certificates. However, we are unable to identify whether an Apprenticeship framework without a technical certificate is because (a) the learning is integrated into the delivery and assessment of the NVQ; or (b) the learner has previously achieved this qualification.

Children's Centres: Greater London

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the criteria were for approving children's centres in Kensington and Chelsea; and in what locations in the borough he expects children's centres to be operational by 2008. [128676]

Beverley Hughes: There are currently four Sure Start Children's Centres in Kensington and Chelsea. Approval for the designation of centres operating in the most disadvantaged areas of England is given when the following criteria are met: centres are open five days a week, ten hours a day, 48 weeks a year; integrated care and learning is available for children under five, with the support of at least half the time of a qualified teacher; links with Jobcentre Plus are agreed; and plans are in place to provide health, family support and outreach services within an agreed geographical area.

Kensington and Chelsea have not yet finalised the locations for their children's centres for phase 2 of the programme (2006-08). This information will be submitted to the Department in the next few weeks following further negotiations with local providers. The Department's chosen delivery partner, Together for Children, is working very closely with the local authority to ensure that appropriate high quality Sure Start services are delivered within the borough.

City Academies: Darwen

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects to be able to announce the name chosen for the new academy in Darwen. [126391]

Jim Knight: The Darwen Academy project is currently in the feasibility stage, which is expected to last until autumn this year. Once this is complete and the funding agreement has been signed we will be able to announce details for this academy. It is not the Department's normal practice to announce formally the name of academies but I can confirm that the project is known locally as the Darwen Aldridge Community Academy.

City Academies: Pay

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which academies run a system of performance-related pay for their staff. [127354]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold details of which academies run a system of performance related pay for their staff.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128063]

1998-99	15,673,000

Jim Knight [holding answer 21 February 2007]: The figures in the following table show the education blocks of the 1996-97 Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) settlement (part of the Local Government Finance Settlement from what was then Department of Environment) plus Grants for Education, Support and Training from the then Department for Education and Employment. The table does not include the Isles of Scilly and the City of London due to their small size.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what he expects the fees to be for the range of English for Speakers of Other Languages courses in 2007-08 between a programme of two hours per week for 30 weeks and a full-time programme of 450 programme guided learning hours. [124695]

Phil Hope [holding answer 2 March 2007]: Since 2001, almost 2 million people have taken up the opportunity to improve their English language skills through the Skills for Life Strategy.

The fee for a learner taking a course in English for Speakers of Other Languages is an operational matter for the national Learning and Skills Council (LSC) and Mark Haysom, the LSC's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with this information. A copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 21 March 2007:

I write in response to your recent question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, about the expected fees for English for Speakers of Other Languages courses in 2007-08 between a programme of two hours per week for 30 weeks and a full-time programme of 450 programme guided learning hours (glh).

Guidance on assumed fee rates is set out in the "Funding Guidance for Further Education 2006/07", Annex A. In particular Table A2 gives the loadbanded assumed fee element for provision from 9glh to 1019glh per year.

For 2007/08 the assumed fee contribution will move to 37.5% from 32.5% (2006/07).

Set out below is the likely assumed fee rate for all qualifications of the stated glhs for 2007/08. The 2007/08 guidance is due to be published by April 2007 and there may be a slight variance in the figures once all the final calculations have been done:

For 60 - 89 glh	Assumed fee contribution would be:	153
For 450 - 479 glh	Assumed fee contribution would be:	990

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 1 February 2007, Official Report, column 487W, on English for Speakers of Other Languages, if he will publish the data to which he refers from the Learning and Skills Council's Individualised Learning Record disaggregated to the degree possible. [126484]

Phil Hope: The answer of 1 February referred to Learning and Skills Council (LSC) data which show the increase in demand for Skills for Life English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) provision.

LSC data show that between 2000/01 and 2004/05, enrolments onto basic skills learning aims increased as follows:

	Enrolments (Thousand)
2000/01	159,000
2001/02	302,000
2002/03	413,000
2003/04	488,000
2004/05	484,000
2005/06	[1]504,000

[1] Based on data up to data October 2006, both confirmed and estimated.

These data are not normally published as part of the Statistical First Release on the DfES website.

The current ESOL cohort do not all have the same learning needs as the original target cohort for Skills for Life ESOL. In order to deliver learning appropriate to the needs of both the settled community and those who need English for work in the UK, the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority has been asked to develop new ESOL for Work qualifications.

Entry to Employment Programme: Gloucestershire

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much his Department provided to the E2E programme in Gloucestershire in 2006-07; what that figure represents per head of population; what the average figure per head of population is in England; and if he will make a statement. [129287]

Phil Hope [holding answer 22 March 2007]: The E2E budget in Gloucestershire for 2006/07 is £2,377,931. This is based on an estimate of 827 young people starting in learning during the year. E2E funding is based on a single national weekly rate per place, with additional payments for achievement of qualifications and for progression into employment, learning or training. Because E2E programmes are developed to meet individual needs there are different lengths of stay and different achievements and progression. Based on the current average length of stay in learning of 19 weeks, and progression and achievement rates around 50 per cent., the average level of funding for E2E learners in Gloucestershire is £2,875. Length of stay and achievement/ progression rates in Gloucestershire are broadly in line with national figures, and as the funding rates are the same, the level of funding will also be broadly the same.

GCSE

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students achieved five GCSEs at grade C or above including English and mathematics in each year since 1997. [127919]

Jim Knight [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Headteachers: Pay

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the salary is of the head teacher in each academy. [127273]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold information centrally on academy principals' salaries.

Independent Schools

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what formal consultation with stakeholders took place prior to the publication of the consultation document on the Definition of Full-Time Education in Independent Schools; in what form; and if he will make a statement. [111999]

Jim Knight: The consultation on the "Definition of Full Time Education in Independent Schools" has been undertaken in full adherence with the Cabinet Office's Code of Practice on Consultations. All major stakeholders, identified prior to the consultation, were sent a copy of the consultation on the day it launched and invited to respond. The consultation is available on the Department's website.

Information and Communications Technology: Employment

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what areas in IT in the UK are expected to have skills shortages in (a) five and (b) 10 years time. [129673]

Phil Hope: The IT sector is expected to grow by more than 20 per cent. in the next 10 years, representing more than 200,000 new jobs. By 2014 more than 1 million workers will be employed in the IT sector.

One third of employers report skills gaps in their current specialist IT work force. Demand will continue to grow most in high level IT skills. New entrants to the work force will need significantly higher levels of business, project, interpersonal and technical skills. The need to improve IT user skills among the general working population will also continue to grow. Regional employment forecasts show that the regional concentration of the IT industry across the UK is not expected to shift significantly. The largest share of the IT industry will remain in the South East and London.

The Sector Skills Council for the IT sector, e-skills UK, published the Sector Skills Agreement of IT Action Plans for England, Scotland and Wales during 2005, setting out how the various partners in the education and skills system will work together with the sector to meet the sector's future skills needs.

Languages: Education

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of teaching foreign languages to age (a) seven, (b) 10 and (c) 14-years-olds. [127597]

Jim Knight: The Department has commissioned two pieces of research into language teaching and learning at key stage 2 (7 to 11). The first is looking at the national implementation of primary languages and the other at the impact the teaching of languages has on attainment across the primary curriculum. The first headline findings will be published in July 2007. We have also developed a two year training programme to increase the quality and consistency of language teaching at key stage 3, and have commissioned a two year research project into the provision and practice of language learning at key stage 3. The Dearing Review of languages, published on 12 March, recommended improving teaching through a range of CPD. We are currently considering how to implement his recommendations.

Literacy: Curriculum

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what flexibility teachers have to offer remedial reading teaching within the mandatory elements of the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement. [127736]

Jim Knight: The national curriculum sets out which subjects must be taught at each key stage. The knowledge, skills and understanding, and the prescribed content which must be covered, are set out in statutory programmes of study for each subject.

The national curriculum does not completely fill the school timetable at any key stage and provides teachers with the flexibility to include remedial teaching where required. This flexibility enables schools to satisfy the demands of the overarching curriculum inclusion statement which requires teachers to set suitable learning challenges for all pupils; to respond to diverse learning needs and to put in place strategies to overcome potential barriers to learning and assessment.

Literature: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on what basis the authors in the list of pre-20th century texts for the revised key stage three programme of study proposed by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority were selected. [127329]

Jim Knight: The pre-20th century authors were selected as they have an enduring appeal that transcends the period in which they were written and have played a significant role in the development of literature in English. They continue to be read, studied and interpreted in print and on screen for contemporary audiences.

New Schools

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many new schools were built under the direct management of (a) his Department and (b) local authorities in each of the past 30 years. [116929]

Jim Knight: The Department for Education and Skills does not directly procure or manage the building of new schools.

We do not collect information on new schools built by local authorities, in support of our policies of devolving decision-making to the local level and minimising bureaucratic burden. But we estimate that since 1997, 800 new schools have been built around the country.

However, we have information on the numbers of new schools (including replacement schools) built in recent years through the private finance initiative, and in the academies programme. This information is provided in the table below. We will collect this information systematically in Building Schools for the Future and the primary capital programme.

Number of new schools completed in each year:

	PFI	Academies	Total
1999-2000	3	n/a	3
2000-01	5	n/a	5
2001-02	18	n/a	18
2002-03	30	n/a	30
2003-04	51	4	55
2004-05	23	5	28
2005-06	25	6	31
2006-07	32	7	39

Additionally, in the voluntary aided sector, the number of new schools built each year, listed by year of project approval is:

	Voluntary aided
2001-02	4
2002-03	17
2003-04	7
2004-05	0

Note:
These figures under-represent the number of new voluntary aided schools opened, as they do not include where a new school is open, but where all elements of construction are not yet completed. Nor do the figures include new voluntary aided schools approved in earlier years but completed in or after 2001-02, where the records are not readily accessible.

We have not searched for records on new schools going back to 1977 as this would exceed the disproportionate cost threshold.

Parliamentary Questions

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will answer Question 106146, on departmental energy use, tabled by the hon. Member for Wealden on 23 November 2006.

Mr. Dhanda: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2070W.

Pupil Exclusions: City Academies

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were excluded from each academy in the last school year; and if he will make a statement. [127272]

Jim Knight: The available information is given in the table.

Exclusions data are collected retrospectively. Information on exclusions during the 2005/06 school year is expected to be published in June 2007.

Exclusions in academies are high relative to national averages. However, academies are placing great emphasis on getting the basics right and improving behaviour in particular. Academies often inherit a large number of disruptive pupils and need to establish good behaviour in order to raise attainment. As the new ethos and behaviour policy are enforced in an academy's early days, the number of exclusions may rise, but it typically drops down as behaviour improves.

This phenomenon is not unique to academies—the same effect is often observed when a new head teacher transforms a struggling maintained school.

Qualifications and Curriculum Authority

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority derived the six groups within the personal, learning and thinking skills framework. [127321]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority's (QCA) personal, learning and thinking skills framework was designed following extensive consultation. The QCA carried out an online survey with local authorities, teacher associations, sector skills councils, awarding bodies and partner organisations between 3 October and 2 December 2005. In addition, the QCA discussed the framework at over 40 meetings with partners and stakeholders during the same period. The QCA also carried out a separate specific consultation for young people.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) on what dates the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority's Secondary

Curriculum Review External Committee has met since it was established; [127322]

(2) how the members of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority Secondary Curriculum Review External Committee were appointed; and who was responsible for their appointment; [127328]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2077W, on the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, what the terms of reference are of the Secondary Curriculum Review External Committee; and who the members of the committee are. [127343]

Jim Knight: A number of representatives from government bodies, educational organisations, schools and other stakeholders were invited by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) to join its Secondary Curriculum Review External Committee. The QCA was responsible for the appointment of committee members.

The current committee members are:

Peter Walker, Secondary National Strategy

Keith Wheeldon, Ofsted

Mr. Hugh Baldry, The Training and Development Agency for Schools

Ms Jenny Jupe, The Specialist Schools and Academies Trust

Ms Kathy Baker, General Teaching Council

Professor John White, Institute of Education

Dr. Gordon Stobart, Institute of Education

Ms Sue Kirkham, Field House

Mr. Steve Labedz, Admiral Lord Nelson School

Mr. Martin Buck, Lister Community School

Alison Mottram, Ashton on Mersey School

Mrs. Carol Penney, South and West Association of Leaders in Special Schools

Corri Van de Stege, The Learning and Skills Network

Yasmin Bevan, The National College for School Leadership

Julie Bramman, DfES

Tina Isaacs, QCA

Kate Moorse, QCA

Jeremy Tafler, QCA

John Brown, QCA

David Downes, QCA

The Committee's terms of reference are:

To bring an external perspective to the development of the key stage 3 curriculum and its assessment;

To help shape consultations with pupils, teachers, parents and other stakeholders;

To help shape trialling and piloting aspects of the proposed curriculum and assessment changes; and

To anticipate, and seek solutions for, possible implementation issues.

The committee met on 17 May 2005, 21 September 2005, 24 November 2005, 6 February 2006, 21 April 2006, 2 November 2006 and 6 December 2006.

School Sponsorship

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what representations he has received from organisations based primarily outside the United Kingdom about sponsoring (a) an academy and (b) a foundation school with a foundation; [111814]

(2) when he will reply to question 111814, on academy and foundation schools, tabled by the hon. Member for Brent East on 23 January 2007. [128738]

Jim Knight: Officials in the Department for Education and Skills had preliminary discussions with two companies based primarily outside the United Kingdom back in 2005. They were keen to sponsor several academies in England but have since decided to withdraw from the proposal.

Officials in the Department for Education and Skills have discussed supporting foundation schools with foundations (trust schools) with a wide range of organisations, including some based primarily outside the United Kingdom. Microsoft Ltd are confirmed as a partner for one of the trust school pathfinder schools. However the Department does not hold a comprehensive list of every organisation that has expressed an early interest or asked for information about forming a foundation to support a school.

Schools: Admissions

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils were admitted to their first preference school in the last year for which figures are available for all secondary schools. [126114]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) which admissions authorities include ballot by lottery amongst their oversubscription criteria, in each local authority; [127384]

(2) which admissions authorities allocate places (a) primarily by lottery and (b) by lottery within fair banding, in each local authority; [127385]

(3) which admissions authorities include catchment area amongst their oversubscription criteria, broken down by local authority; [127386]

(4) which admissions authorities allocate places primarily by catchment area, broken down by local authority; [127387]

(5) how many children living within a catchment area for a school which they listed as first preference did not get a place in that school in the latest period for which figures are available, in each local authority; [127388]

(6) how many children living within a catchment area for a school to which they applied did not get a place in that school in the latest period for which figures are available, in each local authority. [127393]

Jim Knight: None of the data requested is collected centrally, but they may be available from individual local authorities.

The admissions framework is flexible enough to allow admission authorities to take account of local circumstances. They may set whatever admission criteria they consider appropriate as long as they are in accordance with the School Admissions Code.

Random allocation, use of catchment areas, or banding are all acceptable means of determining which children should be given priority for admission to oversubscribed schools. They can also be used together—for example, by using random allocation within a defined catchment area—or alongside other criteria—for example, giving priority to siblings.

Schools: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the dedicated schools grant was for the London Borough of Bexley in each of the last five years. [119889]

Jim Knight: The Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) was first introduced in 2006-07; the funding that Bexley received in 2006-07 and the indicative allocation for 2007-08 are detailed in the following table:

	2006-07 (final)	2007-08 (indicative)
DSG guaranteed unit of funding per pupil	3,719.15	137.002
Total DSG funding	3,969.90	145.552

Notes:
1. Figures are on a cash basis
2. Prior to the introduction of the DSG, funding for nursery, primary and secondary school aged pupils was through the Education Funding System (EFS) which was part of the local government finance settlement. EFS was based on what an authority needed to fund education whereas DSG is largely based on an authority's previous spending. EFS also included funding for an authority's central functions, this is still part of DCLG's local government finance settlement rather than DSG. For those reasons EFS and DSG are not comparable.
3. The DSG does not represent the totality of education funding; there are other grants that support the schools budget which have not been included in the table.

Schools: Construction

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 14 December 2006, Official Report, columns 1397-98W, on schools: construction, how many schools have completed the BREEAM schools assessment process; and what rating they have achieved. [129644]

Jim Knight [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The numbers of schools that have registered for BREEAM Schools certification now stands at 470 up from 347 in December 2006. Of these, 459 are currently undergoing assessment.

11 schools have now completed the assessment process; four in England and seven in Scotland. In England, two schools achieved a "good" rating, one a "pass" rating, and one a "very good" rating. All seven schools in Scotland achieved a "good" rating.

Schools: Crimes of Violence

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many incidents of violence towards (a) staff and (b) pupils were reported in (i) the 10 per cent. of primary schools with the (A) lowest and (B) highest levels of free school meal entitlement and (ii) the 10 per cent. of secondary schools with the (A) lowest and (B) highest levels of free school meal entitlement in 2006. [126527]

Jim Knight: The number of incidents of violence towards staff and pupils is not collected centrally.

From the academic year 2003/04, information is available on the reasons for pupil exclusions. These reasons include 'physical assault against an adult' and 'physical assault against a pupil'.

The table provides a breakdown of the number of permanent and fixed period exclusions during 2004/05 from maintained primary and secondary schools for physical assault against a pupil or an adult in schools with the highest and lowest proportion of school population known to be eligible for free school meals.

Exclusions data are collected retrospectively. The latest available exclusions data relate to the 2004/05 academic year. Information on exclusions during the 2005/06 academic year is expected to be released in June 2007.

[1] Includes middle schools as deemed.
[2] Published statistics (SFR 24/2006) on permanent exclusions have been derived from data collected via the school census. These data did not include the reason for exclusion. Figures shown in this table relating to permanent exclusions have been derived from Termly Exclusions Survey returns and will not match published figures on permanent exclusions.
[3] Information on the proportion of school population known to be eligible for free school meals has been derived from 2005 school census returns. Schools have been ranked based on the percentage of full-time pupils aged 0 to 15 and part-time pupils aged five to 15 who are known to be eligible for free school meals.
[4] Schools were sorted by the proportion of school population known to be eligible for free school meals and size of school population. Three primary schools had the same free school meal percentage and school population at the end of the lowest 10 per cent. band and have all been included in this analysis (pushing the band size to 1,766 instead of 1,764).
[5] One or two exclusions, or a rate based on one or two exclusions.

Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 10. There may be discrepancies between the sum of constituent items and totals as shown.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local authorities agreed increases in centrally retained expenditure from their school budgets above the central expenditure limit in 2006-07. [127080]

Jim Knight: The following list details the 90 local authorities whose budget for central expenditure for 2006-07 was greater than the allowed limit. This is taken from the local authority benchmarking tables which can be found on TeacherNet at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/localauthorities/section52/subPage.cfm?action=section52.default&ID=73

The tables were published on 31 August 2006 and copies of the data have been placed in the House Library.

Two technical changes to the school funding system for 2006-07 contributed to the total of 90 authorities who breached the central expenditure limit: local authorities were allowed to retain centrally funding which had in 2005-06 been distributed through teachers' pay grant; and school specific contingency within the individual schools budget (ISB) was abolished, leading to an increase in the amount of contingency held within the central budget for some local authorities. We thought it appropriate that local schools forums should approve these arrangements where they led to a breach of the central expenditure limit.

Schools: Fire Extinguishers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what his Department's policy is on the installation of sprinkler systems in existing school buildings; [127196]

"(2) what his Department's policy is on the installation of sprinkler systems in school buildings being (a) renovated and (b) newly built. [127197]

Jim Knight: On 1 March I was able to announce in the House our new policy on sprinklers. It is now our expectation that all new schools will have fire sprinklers installed. However, we do not intend to make this a compulsory measure as sufficient regulations are already in place covering life safety and we do not need to legislate further for property protection. There may be cases where local authorities or other promoters of schools consider that sprinklers are not needed. They will need to be able to demonstrate that such schools are low risk and that sprinklers would not represent good value for money. To do this they should use our new risk assessment and cost benefit analysis tools that I launched on 26 February at a parliamentary seminar.

Where a school is undergoing extensive renovation, local authorities and other promoters should use the same tools to determine levels of risk and value for money, and therefore whether sprinklers are needed or should be considered. We are not suggesting that existing school buildings that are not undergoing refurbishment should have sprinklers installed. However, the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005, implemented in October 2006, requires all schools to carry our annual fire risk assessments. Where risks are identified, measures must be taken to reduce or remove them.

Schools: Greenwich

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department has taken to improve the performance of schools in the London borough of Greenwich since 1997. [126687]

Jim Knight: Greenwich has seen a significant overall rise in standards across all Key Stages since 1997. The proportion of 11-year-olds reaching the target level 4+ has risen by 24 percentage points to 74 per cent. in English in 2006 and by 20 percentage points to 71 per cent. in mathematics. The proportion of pupils achieving 5 A*-C grades at GCSE and equivalent has improved by 12 percentage points to 43 per cent. in 2006. This represents faster improvement than the national average.

We want to see standards in Greenwich improve further and the Government's London Challenge programme and the National Strategies in particular are working closely with the borough and its schools to achieve this.

London Challenge support since 2003 includes:

Direct support for five of Greenwich's secondary schools through the Keys to Success programme. This has provided schools with access to expert advice from a London Challenge Adviser who has helped them to prioritise areas for improvement and put together bespoke improvement packages;

Consultancy support for English, maths and science in secondary schools across the borough;

Inclusion in the Science Challenge to improve the standard of science in target secondary schools;

Inclusion in the English and Maths Challenge to improve standards in English and maths in target secondary schools;

Inclusion in the Primary London Challenge which aims to raise standards in traditionally underperforming primary schools.

Support for the local authority to increase capacity in the Secondary School Improvement Team

Opportunities for Greenwich teachers to qualify as Chartered London Teachers and support for housing costs.

Consultant Leaders working to support school leadership.

KS2-3 Transition projects

Opportunities for Greenwich students to gain a variety of rich experiences out of school.

Schools: Standards

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he has (a) commissioned and (b) supported research into the impact on governing bodies and their chair of a school being put into special measures. [124453]

Jim Knight: The Department has not commissioned or supported research into the impact on governing bodies of a school that is placed in special measures. For such a school the local authority has a duty to prepare a statement of action within 10 working days and we expect urgent action to be taken by the authority, governing body and others involved to improve provision at the school as soon as possible.

This will inevitably involve a good deal of hard work, but a well organised governing body can spread its workload by setting up committees to consider various matters on, for example, curriculum, finance and management issues. Support from the local authority can include the appointment of additional members to strengthen the governing body.

Where the Ofsted inspection finds that the governors are not discharging their responsibilities adequately and this failure contributes to the finding that the school requires special measures then the local authority should include in its statement of action how it will address governance issues at the school.

Secondary Education: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will assess the extent to which schools teach specific factual content above that which is proposed in the programmes of study included in the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority secondary curriculum review. [127317]

Jim Knight: We have no plans to make such an assessment.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the consultation launched by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority on 5 February on the secondary curriculum (a) relates solely to the revised key stage 3 programme of study and (b) includes (i) the revised key stage 4 programmes of study and (ii) the content of the sections entitled curriculum lenses, Organising the curriculum and curriculum dimensions on the secondary curriculum review website. [127319]

Jim Knight: The statutory consultation launched by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority on 5 February relates to proposed changes to the statutory programmes of study and level descriptions at key stages 3 and 4.

QCA has also invited separate comment on supporting materials to accompany the proposed programmes of study, including the content of the sections entitled curriculum lenses, Organising the curriculum and curriculum dimensions.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority considered the content of maths curricula in use in (a) Japan, (b) South Korea, (c) Flemish-Belgium, (d) Singapore, (e) Chinese Tapei and (f) Hong Kong when designing the new programme of study in mathematics as part of the secondary curriculum review. [127326]

Jim Knight: Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) curriculum advisers keep up to date with developments in other countries and with international studies and surveys, especially from countries where achievement in mathematics is higher than that in the United Kingdom. While the QCA has not drawn from the curriculum of any specific country when designing the new programmes of study for mathematics, the background knowledge gained was used in its preparation.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of mainstream maintained secondary schools set lessons in (a) mathematics, (b) English and (c) science. [129640]

Jim Knight [holding answer 23 March 2007]: We have figures for the number of lessons as opposed to the number of schools. In its 2002/03 school inspection cycle, Ofsted noted that of all the lessons which inspectors observed:

5,567 of mathematics lessons were set (86 per cent.)

3,681 English lessons were set (51 per cent.)

4,456 science lessons were set (70 per cent.)

We want schools to provide a tailored education for every child and believe that the effective use of pupil grouping plays an important part in supporting this aim. We have been encouraging schools to use setting and other forms of pupil grouping since 1997. However, it will continue to be for schools to decide how and when to group and set pupils. That is the only practical approach.

Students: Part-Time Employment

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate his Department has made of the numbers of students undertaking full-time higher education courses who have part-time jobs. [127771]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 15 March 2007]: The Student Income and Expenditure Survey 2004/05, published on the 30 March 2006, is a comprehensive study on students' income, expenditure, borrowing and debt. It showed that 56 per cent. of all full-time undergraduate students undertook paid work at some time during the academic year—either during term time, during the short vacations or both. For those undertaking such work earnings were on average £3,250 (after tax). The Department plans to repeat the survey in the 2007/08 academic year.

The Government provide a generous package of financial support for students. In 2006/07 no eligible full-time student has to find the funding for their fees before or while they are studying; the loans for living costs have been increased above inflation; and new maintenance grants of up to £2,700 are benefiting up to half the full-time students. Students generally ought not to need to work to meet their essential living costs. Nonetheless we recognise that many students undertake paid work and, providing excessive hours are not worked to the detriment of their academic studies, students can gain useful skills as well as supplementing their income.

Teachers

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of newly qualified (a) secondary and (b) primary school teachers who had not taken up full-time teaching posts one year after qualification in each of the last five years in Leeds. [129372]

Jim Knight [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The following tables provide the number and percentage of final year trainees from Higher Education Institutes (HEIs) in Leeds gaining Qualified Teacher Status (QTS) award by academic year who have not commenced a full-time teaching post, in either the maintained or independent sector, six months after completing their course in the academic years, 2002/03 to 2004/05:

[1] Leeds Metropolitan University is not included in 2003/04 figures because of inconsistencies in data collection and recording from the Destinations of Leavers from Higher Education (DLHE) survey.
Notes:
1. Figures for final year trainees in Leeds include HEIs only, but exclude SCITT, OU and employment based routes. This is because the breakdown of teaching posts into full-time or part-time posts is only available for HEIs.
2. HEIs in Leeds include the University of Leeds, Leeds Metropolitan University and Trinity and All Saints College.
3. Trainees gaining QTS award and classified as known not to be in a full-time teaching post six months after completing their course include trainees who are in part-time teaching posts, seeking a teaching post and not seeking a teaching post.
4. These figures show the number of final year trainees from HEIs in Leeds gaining QTS award who have not commenced a full-time teaching post six months after completing their course. They do not show the number of NQTs living in Leeds who are not in full-time teaching posts. Also those who are in full-time teaching posts may not necessarily be teaching in Leeds. Not all qualifying teachers will seek employment in teaching immediately; some may travel, take further study or pursue other interests before doing so.
5. Figures for 2003/04 have been affected by inconsistencies in data collection and recording for Leeds Metropolitan University from the Destinations of Leavers from Higher Education (DLHE) survey. Therefore no data from Leeds Metropolitan University are included for 2003/04 figures.
6. Data on destinations of final year trainees for 2005/06 are not yet available.
7. The breakdown of the type of teaching posts which trainees enter (i.e. full-time or part-time) is only available for trainees who were awarded QTS in 2002/03 onwards.
8. Percentage calculation includes response whose employment status was unknown.

Teachers: Redundancy Pay

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the total cost was of teacher redundancy payments in (a) community schools, (b) foundation schools, (c) voluntary-aided schools, (d) voluntary controlled schools, (e) academies and (f) city technology colleges in each year from 1997 to 2007; [127552]

(2) how many and what percentage of (a) all teachers and (b) teachers in (i) community schools, (ii) voluntary-aided schools, (iii) voluntary controlled schools, (iv) foundation schools, (v) academies and (vi) city technology colleges (A) took voluntary redundancy payments, (B) took early retirement, (C) retired and (D) were dismissed in each year between 1997 and 2007. [127553]

Jim Knight: Information on the number of teachers who took redundancy payments, the amount of these payments and the number of teachers who were subject to dismissal is not collected centrally.

The following table provides the number of teachers who retired in each year from 1997/98 to 2005/06 in the maintained schools sector, city technology colleges and academies by type of retirement.

The figures include teachers who may have left teaching service some years before being awarded retirement benefits. The year given is that of the award. Early retirements include premature and actuarially reduced benefit retirements but exclude ill-health retirements which are listed separately. This information is not available broken down for the other school types requested. 2005/06 is the latest information available.

Teaching Methods

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1026W, on teaching methods, what the size was of the effect on pupils' learning which was found by the research into the effectiveness of drawing connections between different subjects and areas; and whether the effect was statistically significant. [125263]

Jim Knight: Research suggesting that drawing connections between different subjects and areas of the curriculum is an effective approach which impacts on pupils' learning is part of a wider body of research work into the principles of effective teaching. An overall effect size for this approach is not currently available.

For example, Ellis et al. (1996) conducted a research review to determine the principles of effective teaching. Ten principles were developed from the evidence base, of which one was teaching that highlights the similarities between topics and curriculum subjects. Askew et al. (1997) found that highly effective teachers of numeracy were those who, among other things, made connections between different areas of maths and different ideas in the same area of maths. Hall and Harding (2003) found that effective literacy teachers balanced direct teaching of basic literacy skills with wider, more contextually-grounded literacy activities, often linked with other curriculum areas.

Truancy

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what definition his Department uses of truancy; [129642]

(2) what targets his Department has for reducing truancy. [129643]

Jim Knight [holding answer 23 March 2007]: Truancy is generally considered to be unjustified absence from school, usually without parental knowledge or consent.

The Department does not set targets for reducing truancy because we are concerned about all forms of problem absence, including parentally condoned or encouraged absence, and because there is no satisfactory direct measure of truancy. Unauthorised absence is often taken to be a proxy for truancy, but it is an imperfect measure because it also includes lateness, some term time holidays and absence which parents have not yet explained. It is also well known that unauthorised absence tends to rise when schools take a tougher line on absence generally, as it has done in recent years, without necessarily reflecting any underlying increase in truancy.

That is why the Department has moved away from focusing narrowly on rates of unauthorised absence. We are now focusing our efforts on reducing persistent absence, including persistent truancy, in schools where this problem is most acute and where a small minority of pupils miss significant amounts of their schooling. This is proving highly effective. Last year, our targeted challenge and support in 198 secondary schools helped to reduce the number of pupils in those schools with high levels of unauthorised absence by 27 per cent. to reduce the average rate of absence in those schools by 0.63 percentage points and the average rate of unauthorised absence by 0.89 percentage points.

Building on that success, we are now focusing on providing challenge and support to 436 secondary schools with high levels of persistent absence.

Volunteering: Young People

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been raised from private sector supporters to assist in meeting the recommendations of the Russell Commission on Youth Volunteering. [128267]

Edward Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

The independent charity v has, to date, received pledges of over £20 million in match fund projects through partnership with the private sector with £7.5 million matched on a pound-for-pound basis. The remaining pledges will be matched once suitable projects are identified and established. The match fund projects have created over 43,000 volunteering opportunities.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of individuals made subject to an anti-social behaviour order have since been convicted of a criminal offence. [121854]

Mr. McNulty: ASBOs are civil orders and not an offender management tool so the information is not collected centrally.

Numbers of ASBOs proved in court to have been breached are monitored centrally and these numbers together with breach rates are shown in the following table.

Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Category D Prisoners

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders are in category D prisons in the UK, broken down by offence for which they were convicted. [125873]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the numbers of offenders held in open prisons in England and Wales as at 31 January 2007 can be found in the following table.

Passports: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department where he plans to locate passport interview centres in Cumbria. [127351]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 13 March 2007]: IPS plans to open an interview office in Carlisle and Kendal. A full list of the 69 proposed interview offices is available in the Library.

Passports: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passport applications were processed in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years; how many of those applications were (a) granted and (b) refused; and what the average time taken to process passport applications in Northern Ireland was over this period. [123510]

Joan Ryan: IPS have a single office in Northern Ireland, located in Belfast. This office processes applications for a catchment area which includes areas of the UK outside of Northern Ireland. Therefore the figures provided relate to the number of applications processed in Northern Ireland but do not represent the number of applications made by residents of Northern Ireland.

Applications processed can have three outcomes:

Passed for issue

The application was successful and approval was given for a passport to be issued.

Withdrawn

The application for a passport was withdrawn prior to a final decision being made.

Failed

The application failed and the applicant was not entitled to a passport.

Table 1 displays the total number of passports processed within the Belfast office, broken down into the outcomes of passed for issue, withdrawn and failed.

When processing passport applications IPS do not monitor the time taken to process applications which have errors or queries raised while being processed. These queries create a need for additional checks to take place and extend processing time due to requesting further information from the customer. For straightforward applications, those measured by the publicised 10 working day turnaround target, table 2 identifies the average turnaround time in days for the Belfast office.

Police Custody

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were held in custody suites in each year since 2000. [123982]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prisoners have been held in police cells during 2002, 2006 and 2007.

Between 11 July and 20 December 2002 prisoners were held in police cells under Operation Safeguard on a total of 28,650 occasions.

Between 12 October and 22 December 2006 police custody under Operation Safeguard was used on 4,617 occasions.

Operation Safeguard was reactivated on 22 January 2007. Between 22 January and 9 March it was used on 4,861 occasions.

Prisoners: Foreigners

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals in UK prisons are from (a) outside the EU and (b) within the EU; what categories of offences they have committed; what estimate he has made of the number to be deported once they leave prison; and what previous offences they had committed before entering the UK. [125862]

Mr. Sutcliffe: At the end of December 2006 there were (a) 8,904 foreign national prisoners from outside the European Union and (b) 2,290 foreign national prisoners from within the European Union detained in prison establishments in England and Wales. Information on the offence groups for the immediate custodial sentenced population of prisoners within prison establishments in England and Wales by nationality group can be found within the following table.

All foreign nationals in custody have their sentences assessed in line with the guidance issued to IND and prisons on deportation matters. Those who meet the set criteria will be considered for deportation.

Information about crimes committed by foreign nationals before they entered the UK is not routinely collected by the police. Requests for such information are made at the discretion of the investigating police force depending on operational need.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Prisons: Islam

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what facilities Muslim worshippers are offered in prisons; and what the associated costs of such facilities were in each year since 2001. [127950]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service policy is to enable those prisoners who wish, to practise their religion. The Prison Service Performance Standard on Religion (number 51) and the Prison Service Order on Religion (4550) sets out the more detailed policy and includes specific information on the provision necessary for the practice of the main world faiths, including Islam. Copies of Prison Service Orders are kept in the House Library and both Prison Service Orders and Performance Standards are also published on the Prison Service website (www.hmprisons.gov.uk). The requested information on costs is not available.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons employ an Imam; and how much each is paid. [127536]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service establishments that currently employ Muslim chaplains are detailed in the following list. Other establishments will use Muslim chaplains on a fee-paid basis. Chaplains in the public sector Prison Service are paid in two pay-bands with pay (excluding allowances) ranging from £19,680 to £35,799. Each private contractor has different rates of pay within the range £25,000 to £38,000.

Safer Stronger Communities Fund

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the projected funding allocation for the Safer Stronger Communities Fund is in each of the next two financial years. [126423]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The Safer and Stronger Communities Fund forms part of the core funding for local area agreements in England, wherever they have been agreed. In 2007-08 this will include Home Office funding that was previously identified as: Building Safer Communities Fund; Anti-Social Behaviour Co-ordinator Grant; Drug Strategy Partnership Support Grant; Anti-Social Behaviour Action Areas and Trailblazer. The detail of the allocations for 2007-08 will be announced shortly.

Sexual Offences

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many registered sex offenders are subject to multi-agency public protection arrangements. [128216]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All offenders who are subject to the notification requirements placed on sex offenders (registered sex offenders) are also subject to the Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA). Since 2002, the number of registered sex offenders has been published in the MAPPA Annual Report for each area of England and Wales. In the 2005-06 reports, the latest year of publication, 29,976 registered sex offenders were shown as living in the community across England and Wales as at 31 March 2006. The reports are available in the House Libraries and on the internet at:

Young Offenders: Secure Accommodation

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the maximum population capacity is of each (a) secure children's home, (b) secure training centre and (c) young offender institution; what the current population is of each; and if he will make a statement. [126021]

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departments: BAE Systems

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 19 March 2007, Official Report, column 630W, on Departments: BAE Systems, if he will request the permission of the two individuals to list the details on his Department's security pass system. [129509]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department will make contact with BAE Systems with this request. Accordingly I will reply directly to my hon. Friend the Member for North Norfolk in due course and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many work permits were applied for by his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years. [127712]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department of Trade and Industry and its agencies do not apply for work permits. However, it is part of our standard pre-employment checks at recruitment stage to ensure that staff applying to be employed within the Department and its agencies have a work permit, where appropriate, before they are employed. Information on how many staff may have work permits is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Electronic Equipment: Waste Disposal

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of companies that manufacture, import or re-brand electrical and electronic equipment have registered with a producer compliance scheme in accordance with Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment regulations; and if he will make a statement. [128788]

Malcolm Wicks: Producer compliance schemes have until 31 March 2007 to register their members with the appropriate environment agency. Figures are therefore not yet available on how many companies have joined producer compliance schemes.

Members: Correspondence

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to answer Question 124806, on ministerial visits, tabled by the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton on 2 March 2007. [129189]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 March 2007]: I answered the hon. Member's question on 19 March 2007, Official Report, column 625W.

Patents: EC Law

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with his European counterparts on the use of English in the development of a common community patent. [129544]

Malcolm Wicks: UK Ministers and officials have had ongoing discussions with the European Commission and others, following the consultation launched by the Commission in 2006 on the Community Patent and other initiatives to improve the European patent system. The UK is committed to a business-friendly Community patent which imposes minimal burdens due to translations. A Community patent which is too burdensome will not be used by industry and, in a Europe with more than 20 official languages, full translation of Community patents will clearly impose high costs. We therefore hope that a reduced- or single-language solution can be found for the Community patent. However, language is understandably a highly sensitive issue, and a solution must be found which is acceptable to our European partners.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress towards the development of a community patent for the European Union. [129545]

Malcolm Wicks: Negotiations on a Community patent have been ongoing for a number of decades, and have been complicated by questions around language and jurisdiction. As the European Commission Consultation in 2006 noted, there appears no imminent prospect of achieving the unanimity required in order to establish a community patent.

The consultation aimed to find near term steps to improve the patent system in Europe that would help us to make progress towards the long term goal of a community patent. We anticipate that the Commission will publish its communication on those next steps over the coming few months.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the status is of the 2000 London Agreement on European patent translation costs. [129546]

Malcolm Wicks: UK has ratified the London Agreement along with eight other states including Germany, Switzerland and the Netherlands; Sweden and Denmark have made parliamentary commitments to ratify in due course. The agreement will enter into force three months after ratification by the French Government. When the London Agreement enters into force it is estimated to almost halve the translation costs that must currently be paid to patent in Europe. A French parliament report in 2006 recommended ratification, and the agreement has been ruled compatible with the French constitution, but the French Government have not yet indicated their intention to ratify.

Post Office: Contracts

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any Post Office Limited services (a) are and (b) are planned to go out to tender. [129530]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. Alan Cook, the managing director, has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Post Offices: Consultation Papers

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff have been deployed (a) to record and (b) to analyse the responses to the Post Office Network consultation. [129529]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Some 50 members of staff have been available to deal with the handling of responses to the consultation document.

A team of eight officials are involved in reviewing the consultation responses.

Post Offices: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices closed in each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland in each year since 1997; and how many of these were (a) urban and (b) rural post offices. [129517]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. Alan Cook, the managing director, has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Pregnant Women: Discrimination

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department on discrimination against pregnant women since June 2005; and if he will make a statement. [129527]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI commissioned the Maternity and Paternity Rights and Benefits In Britain Survey 2005, published in March 2006, which asked women about the treatment they received during their pregnancy.

Government keeps abreast of other research on pregnancy discrimination.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the merits of replacing a system of grants to encourage people to take on renewable energy and energy efficiency with one of targeted loans connected to council tax discounts for homeowners who have taken energy efficiency measures. [128073]

Malcolm Wicks: The Chancellor keeps national tax matters under review through the Budget and pre-Budget report processes. However, some local authorities have implemented council tax discount schemes for local residents who invest in energy-saving installations. The Government's current assessment is that the Energy Efficiency Commitment, under which major energy suppliers have to reach targets for installing energy efficiency measures in their customers' homes, offers a flexible and cost-effective means of encouraging take-up of insulation and other improvements that reduce both energy bills and UK carbon emissions over time. It also allows targeting of vulnerable groups. The Government are committed to continuing an energy supplier obligation until at least 2020. As announced at the 2006 pre-Budget report, the Government are examining finance models that best support the Energy Efficiency Commitment and encourage take-up of energy efficiency measures and energy audits.

In relation to the stimulation of renewable energy use by householders, the Microgeneration Strategy http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sources/sustainable/microgeneration/strategy/page27594.html sets out a series of measures aimed at boosting demand to help achieve the economies of scale that will lead to costs falling and negate the need for capital grants.

Key measures that will help to achieve this include:

making it easier for microgenerators to access Renewable Obligation Certificates; working with energy suppliers to ensure that microgenerators receive a fair reward for exported electricity;

a robust accreditation scheme (to build trust in the industry);

local authorities requiring new developments to source a percentage of energy requirements from onsite renewable sources (while not in the strategy itself, the Housing Minister made a statement that she expected all local authorities to develop such requirements following work undertaken in relation to the strategy); the removal of unnecessary controls in the consents regime (which regulates a wide range of developments by householders).

Research: Finance

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many research projects have had their funding ended due to the changes of criteria announced by Research Councils UK in October 2006. [128774]

Malcolm Wicks: None. Research projects under way when Research Councils made their announcement on the criteria for eligibility for funding on October 2006 have proceeded unaffected.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the likely impact on scientific research projects of the recent changes of criteria for research funding. [128775]

Malcolm Wicks: Last October the Research Councils clarified their arrangements for eligibility to apply for Research Council funding. Those eligible include UK higher education institutions, Research Council institutes and independent research organisations. Further information is available from the Research Councils UK website.

These arrangements introduce helpful coherence and should strengthen the value obtained overall from this funding.

TREASURY

Digital Broadcasting

Peter Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2225W, on digital broadcasting, on what basis he was able to announce in his financial statement a figure for the income from the sale of assets including the auction of spectrum; how much of this figure he announced derives from this auction; and if he will make a statement. [129849]

John Healey: The Budget speech announced expected asset sales of £36 billion between 2006-07 and 2010-11. This £36 billion comprises fixed and financial asset sales, including student loan and public corporation sales. No assumption has been made for proceeds deriving from the sale of the spectrum in this estimate.

Mortgages: Advisory Services

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many mortgage advisers are regulated by the Financial Services Authority. [129181]

Ed Balls: Statistics published by the Financial Services Authority show that there were 6,846 regulated mortgage intermediary firms at the end of December 2006.

These data are available at:

http://www.fsa.gov.uk/pages/About/Teams/Retail/statistics/mortgage/index.shtml

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated cost is of the VAT on the consultation on facilities for the Olympics; and what percentage of this revenue will be passed to the EU. [128937]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made to the House by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on 15 March 2007, Official Report, columns 450-66. Details of how the UK's contribution to the EC budget is determined are included in the 2006 European Community Finances White Paper (Cm 6770).

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions he has circulated guidance to other Departments in the last 12 months following the tabling of round-robin written parliamentary questions. [110931]

John Healey: In its response to the Third Report of Session 2003-04 from the Public Administration Select Committee, the Government made clear that while individual Departments may liaise with each other when they receive the same question, this co-ordination

> "does not cut across the line of ministerial accountability which is that it is for individual Ministers to decide on the final content of an answer to a Parliamentary Question".

The Treasury has provided advice to other Government Departments on this basis.

Stamp Duties

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether stamp duty is charged on Social Homebuy purchases; [129196]

(2) whether stamp duty will be levied on tenants taking out a 10 per cent. equity share under the proposals for reform of the Social Homebuy scheme; [129197]

(3) whether (a) the social tenant and (b) the social landlord is liable to pay stamp duty under the Social Homebuy scheme. [129234]

Ed Balls: Stamp duty is paid by the purchaser of an interest in land. Purchasers of a share in a property under Social Homebuy are liable to pay stamp duty on the same basis as other shared ownership purchasers. This means that they can, if they wish, elect to pay stamp duty once and for all on the market value of the property, less Social Homebuy discount. Otherwise, they will pay stamp duty on the amount they pay for the initial share of the property. In this case, purchases of further shares up to 80 per cent. are exempt but they will have to pay stamp duty on the purchase of a final share, including the freehold reversion.

Outright purchases under Social Homebuy attract stamp duty on the same basis as a Right to Buy/Right to Acquire purchase: that is, on the price paid for the property, less Social Homebuy discount.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average stamp duty paid on a right to buy sale was in the most recent year for which figures are available. [129236]

Ed Balls: The average stamp duty land tax paid on right to buy transactions in 2005-06 was estimated at £200. The average includes transactions which paid no stamp duty land tax either because the price of the property was below the stamp duty land tax threshold, or because of disadvantaged area relief.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the projected annual cost of introducing zero stamp duty for zero carbon homes in each of the next 10 years. [129493]

Ed Balls: As reported in the Financial Statement and Budget report published on 21 March, the annual cost of the stamp duty exemption is projected to be negligible (defined as less than £3 million) in each year of the fiscal years 2007-08 to 2009-10 and to rise to £15 million in 2011-12.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Building Regulations: Wales

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to transfer responsibility for building regulations in Wales from her Department to the Welsh Assembly Government. [129359]

Angela E. Smith: The National Assembly for Wales has made an approach to this Department requesting that the ability to make building regulations for Wales be transferred to the Welsh Assembly Government. Officials from my Department and the Welsh Assembly Government will shortly be meeting to identify and discuss the issues that would arise from any such transfer.

Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she has any plans to bring forward a statutory requirement for planning authorities to take account of the recommendations of the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment. [121551]

Yvette Cooper: We have no current plans to make the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment (CABE) a statutory consultee in the planning process. However, my Department intends to consult on a review of statutory consultees later this year, and it will be open to respondents to make a case for change at that time. CABE does however already play an important role as a non-statutory consultee in the planning process.

The Department for Communities and Local Government actively encourages all local planning authorities to consult CABE about significant applications in their areas and our chief planner wrote to all chief planning officers in December 2006 reminding them of the circumstances under which they should seek CABE's advice.

A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Under the existing non-statutory consultation arrangements, we encourage and support CABE to work directly with architects, planners, designers, developers and clients to offer guidance on projects. CABE makes this guidance available in a number of ways, including the provision of a free expert design review service, which offers independent assessment of schemes. Design review considers 350 major development proposals each year, over 80 per cent. of which are altered in light of its comments.

The current arrangements seek to ensure that CABE's resource is directed at influencing the quality of the most significant schemes, which we consider the best use of its capacity and expertise.

Community Development: Expenditure

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what public expenditure has been to date on the millennium communities scheme. [128533]

Yvette Cooper: There are seven millennium communities. Greenwich Millennium Village was the first to be announced in 1997. The others are at Allerton Bywater (near Leeds), New Islington (east Manchester), South Lynn (Kings Lynn), East Ketley (Telford), Oakgrove (Milton Keynes) and Hastings. In total the programme will bring forward over 9,000 eco-home 'Excellent' standard homes, plus other commercial and community facilities, providing inspiration to both the development industry and the general house-buying public and demonstrating how difficult sites can be brought back into use.

It is not possible to identify the costs linked only to the millennium communities themselves. To date, public expenditure related to the programme amounts to a total of £131,565,732. This figure covers costs outside those that relate specifically to the seven millennium communities, because it is not possible to disaggregate costs retrospectively. It therefore includes elements of the remediation cost of the wider English Partnerships' 121 ha (300 acre) Greenwich peninsula site and not just the costs for the 13 ha (32 acre) section that is the Greenwich Millennium Village itself. The Greenwich Peninsula was previously the site of the largest gas works in Europe, and is one of the largest development sites in London and one of Europe's biggest regeneration projects.

This expenditure by English Partnerships on the millennium communities will be offset by receipts as the land is sold through the usual competitive arrangements to the preferred developer on each site.

Council Housing: Heating

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will estimate (a) the number of properties in local council or housing association ownership covered by district heating schemes and (b) the energy use per inhabitant in such schemes; whether it is her intention (i) to make proposals and (ii) to provide incentives to improve the energy efficiency of housing not covered by such schemes; and if she will make a statement. [122811]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 February 2007, Official Report, column: 300W, which provide information about the number of homes covered by district heating systems and the energy use of inhabitants.

To make their homes decent social landlords have to ensure homes have both efficient heating and effective insulation, and this is regardless of the type of heating system currently in the home. The Department's guidance "A Decent Home: Definition and guidance for implementation" encourages landlords to increase the energy efficiency of dwellings.

Research conducted by the Building Research Establishment indicated that almost all landlords engaged in energy efficiency works are taking the opportunity to work to much higher standards than the minimum required by Decent Homes.

Under the Energy Efficiency Commitment (EEC), electricity and gas suppliers are required to achieve targets for the promotion of improvements in domestic energy efficiency which includes social sector homes.

Council Tax: Boats

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will consider reducing the council tax payable for people who live in boats on marinas where the owner of the marina pays business rates; and if she will make a statement. [129477]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 23 March 2007]: No. A mooring occupied by a boat which is somebody's sole or main residence is deemed to be a dwelling for council tax purposes and will therefore attract a council tax liability in the same way as other domestic property, along with any discounts or exemptions that may apply.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many meetings (a) she and (b) her Department's Ministers held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128763]

Angela E. Smith: Ministers and civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and advice. It is not normal practice to disclose details of such meetings.

Empty Housing: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of long-term empty homes in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex. [125484]

Yvette Cooper: At October 2005 there were an estimated 5,194 long term vacant homes in East Sussex. At October 2005 Eastbourne district council reported a total of 1,568 long-term vacant homes.

These figures are based on long-term vacant homes, empty for more than six months as reported by local authorities in the Council Tax Base return (CTB1).

Local councils in East Sussex now have new powers they can use to bring long-term empty homes into use where appropriate.

Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the timescale is for the implementation of the Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007; and if she will make a statement. [129863]

Meg Munn: The Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007 will come into force on 30 April, at the same time as parallel protections on grounds of religion or belief. From this date on, individuals will have a legal remedy to discrimination on these grounds through the county courts in England and Wales or the Sheriff courts in Scotland.

The new regulations provide for a transition period for faith based adoption and fostering agencies until the end of 2008. Any agency wishing to take advantage of the transitional arrangements will have to refer prospective parents they are not prepared to assess on grounds of their sexual orientation to other agencies that will be able to assist. The Prime Minister will be commissioning this May an independent assessment process of the issues agencies will need to address during the transition period, if vital services for children are to be retained and developed. The assessment team will give their first report to the PM before the summer, followed by regular six monthly reports.

Detailed guidance on the implementation of both new sets of protections will also be published in May, after the forthcoming elections. When the Commission for Equality and Human Rights opens its doors this October, it will offer further information, advice and support.

Fire Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department is taking to improve the protection of firemen in Lancashire from (a) physical and (b) verbal attacks when at work. [125749]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has published on its website good practice guidance on tackling violence at work.

On 20 February 2007, the Emergency Workers (Obstruction) Act 2006 came into force. This Act, which specifically includes firefighters, makes it an offence to obstruct or hinder an emergency worker responding to emergency circumstances, punishable by fines of up to £5,000.

Fire Services: Bullying

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many reported incidents of bullying there were in the Lancashire fire service in each of the last 10 years. [125748]

Angela E. Smith: Centrally held information, based on annual returns from Lancashire fire and rescue service, on the number of complaints of harassment, bullying or discrimination in Lancashire fire and rescue service is tabled as follows, from the earliest available year which is 1998.

	Uniformed	Non uniformed	Total
1998-99	8	0	8
1999-2000	5	2	7
2000-01	8	1	9
2001-02	4	0	4
2002-03	4	1	5
2003-04	6	3	9
2004-05	14	0	14
2005-06	2	2	4

Fire Services: Inspections

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the timetable is for the transfer of responsibility for fire service inspection to the Audit Commission. [129203]

Angela E. Smith: Responsibility for fire service inspection was transferred to the Audit Commission following the publication of the Government's White Paper "Our Fire and Rescue Service" in June 2003 and the subsequent Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004. Since that time, Her Majesty's Fire Service Inspectorate has not carried out any inspections of Fire and Rescue Authorities but has acted as an advisory body providing the Government, the Audit Commission and fire and rescue authorities with advice on professional fire service matters.

The Audit Commission conducted a Comprehensive Performance Assessment (CPA) of fire and rescue authorities and reported on their findings in July 2005. This assessment set a baseline for improvement in all fire and rescue authorities and the Audit Commission has subsequently developed a performance assessment framework for the service to measure improvement since CPA. This performance assessment framework consists of three elements—a direction of travel assessment, a use of resources assessment and a service assessment. The service assessment included an operational assessment, developed in conjunction with the Chief Fire Officers Association, and carried out by Fire and Rescue staff seconded into CLG for that purpose. Results of these assessments for 2006-07 are due to be published shortly.

Fire Services: Violence

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many duty firemen in Lancashire were subjected to (a) physical violence and (b) verbal abuse in each of the last 10 years; and how many convictions there were for (i) physical violence and (ii) verbal abuse towards firemen in Lancashire in each of the last 10 years. [125747]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has been maintaining records of attacks on firefighters since April 2004, although it is not held specifically in the form requested. The total number of attacks on firefighters in Lancashire since 2004, based on returns from Lancashire fire and rescue service is as follows:

	Number of attacks
2004	6
2005	24
2006	41
2007 to date	1

The Department does not collect information on the number of convictions.

Freeholds

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what measures have been introduced to strengthen regulation concerned with (a) freeholds and leaseholds, (b) the relationship between landlords and tenants and (c) ground rents since 1997; and what plans she has to introduce further measures affecting these matters. [129012]

Yvette Cooper: The Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 introduced a number of measures that made changes to leasehold legislation. These have helped redress the balance between leaseholders and landlords by strengthening and improving the law, and creating a fairer and more comprehensive system of rights for leaseholders. These measures include the requirement for landlords to serve a particular form of notice on leaseholders before ground rent becomes payable.

We continue to work on the remaining provisions of the 2002 Act which will further improve the rights that leaseholders have. We will introduce them at the earliest opportunity.

Home Information Packs

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will produce an updated regulatory impact assessment for the implementation of home information packs. [128548]

Yvette Cooper: Yes.

Hostels: Finance

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what reports she has received of the effects of changes in (a) revenue funding and (b) numbers of bed spaces on the submission of bids by charities and registered social landlords for funding under the hostels capital improvement programme. [128035]

Yvette Cooper: Since the launch of the hostels capital improvement programme in December 2004 I have received update reports from my officials regarding the programme on a regular basis. We are not aware of any particular problems with revenue funding or bedspaces and my officials continue to closely monitor progress.

One of the criteria for funding under the hostels capital improvement programme (HCIP) is that there is agreed supporting people or other revenue funding to ensure that high quality support services are continued as capital works are completed. As regards bedspaces, hostel residents are housed elsewhere during building work and there has been no identified impact on the numbers of people sleeping rough.

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she plans to extend the Hostels Capital Improvement Programme beyond 2008; and if she will make a statement. [128036]

Yvette Cooper: The current £90 million Hostels Capital Improvement Programme runs through until March 2008. Future investment under the programme will be dependent on the comprehensive spending review which is under way.

Housing

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many long-term empty private sector properties there were in (a) rural and (b) non-rural areas in each year since 1980; what each figure represents (i) per 1,000 of the population and (ii) per 1,000 households; and if she will make a statement. [118697]

Yvette Cooper: Information on long term private vacancies (over six months) is only available on a consistent basis back to the year 2000.

Long term vacancies are tabulated below by urban and rural local authorities:

Since long term private vacancies are not available on a consistent basis prior to 2000, total private vacancies (long and short term) are tabulated in the following table by urban and rural local authorities every five years since 1981 to provide a long term view.

The table shows that the number of private vacant dwellings per 1,000 households in rural local authorities has fallen since 1991, with a larger fall between 1996 and 2006. Vacancy rates have also fallen in urban areas since 1996.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government for what areas housing targets have been set; what target has been set for each area; and what the (a) size and (b) population is of each area. [125875]

Yvette Cooper: Regional spatial strategies include housing provision figures for constituent housing market and local planning authority areas for each region, except in London, where they are set out in the spatial development strategy (The London Plan). All regional spatial strategies are currently in the process of being revised.

Housing Data Warehouse

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 19 January 2007, Official Report, column 1354W, on the Housing Data Warehouse, whether the council tax valuation list data being provided by the Valuation Office Agency will include the details of the council tax banding of (a) individual properties, (b) neighbourhoods/market areas, (c) super-output areas and (d) sub-sets thereof. [129266]

Mr. Woolas: (a) yes; (b), (c) and (d) no.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 20 February 2007, Official Report, column 582W, on the Housing Data Warehouse, (1) what the estimated (a) set-up costs and (b) running costs are of the Housing Data Warehouse; [129267]

(2) which Departments and Government agencies will have access to the Housing Data Warehouse; [129249]

(3) what the live date is for the Housing Data Warehouse. [129254]

Angela E. Smith: The estimated costs of the Housing Data Warehouse are £9,000 for set up and £3,000 annual running costs. These are negligible because it runs on the existing IT infrastructure.

The Housing Data Warehouse will be directly accessible only from within Communities and Local Government. There are no plans to extend direct access to other Government Departments.

In respect of the data contained in the Housing Data Warehouse I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) on 8 November 2007, Official Report, column 1571W.

Housing Revenue Accounts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to reform housing revenue accounts to allow local authorities to keep more of their rental income. [127159]

Yvette Cooper: Housing Revenue Account (HRA) subsidy is based on a notional measure of authorities' income (which is mainly rents) and expenditure. If need to spend is assumed to be greater than assumed income, then the authority is assumed to have a deficit and HRA subsidy is paid to the authority to make up that shortfall. If the assumed income is greater than the assumed need to spend, this negative subsidy is captured, recycled within the HRA subsidy system and used to help pay for the subsidy entitlement of the deficit authorities. Even with this recycling, in the most recent year for which audited data are available (2005-06), the Exchequer still made an annual contribution of over £200 million.

Surpluses (and deficits) are not related to the efficiency of a council in operating its HRA. Surpluses rarely, if ever, occur where the need to spend is greatest; if those authorities that make surpluses retained them this would, within the total funding levels agreed, mean reduced subsidies and therefore higher rents, for all those authorities with a deficit. The alternative would be higher taxes or cuts in services. The surpluses that are being generated by some authorities also come from housing that has largely been funded by central Government.

My Department is currently working with a group of local authorities to investigate the potential benefits, in terms of asset management, efficiency and better outcomes, of allowing some councils to leave the subsidy system. Self financing would involve a one-off settlement to replace future subsidy or surplus payments. As such, it would not be a means for surplus authorities to have a larger share of overall housing resources.

Housing: Construction

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1800W, how many dwellings were (a) permitted and (b) built in (i) England, (ii) Hampshire and (iii) each (A) district, (B) borough and (C) unitary authority in Hampshire in each year since 2003. [126398]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the dwellings granted planning permission is not held centrally.

The following numbers of dwellings were built in England, Hampshire and each district in Hampshire since 2003-04:

New build completions in England, Hampshire and Hampshire districts

Housing: Disabled

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will take steps to ensure that sufficient funding is available through the disability facilities grant to ensure recommendations made following visits by occupational therapists to those who face access issues are implemented. [128058]

Yvette Cooper: Under the disabled facilities grant (DFG) programme it is for the local housing authority to assess the need of a disabled person for housing adaptations in the light of the mandatory entitlements to assistance set out in section 23 of the Housing Grants Construction and Regeneration Act 1996. The housing authority must also judge whether any work to a dwelling is reasonable or practicable having regard to its age and condition.

The grant is also means tested and subject to a maximum limit of £25,000.

The housing authority will normally take expert advice from an occupational therapist in order to assess the need of the disabled person but the grant award under DFG must take account of all of the provisions of the DFG legislation as described.

The Department provides ring-fenced funding to local authorities to support the expenditure incurred by them in delivering the DFG programme. In 2007-08 £126 million was made available from this Department for authorities in England. Local authorities are required to find the remainder of funding from their own resources to fulfil their statutory obligations.

Housing: Finance

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate the Government have made of the net deficit or surplus of housing revenue accountable authorities following the 2007-08 housing subsidy determination. [128320]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The 2007-08 HRA Subsidy Determination calculates allowances that each local authority will receive and also makes assumptions on notional rental income. But to calculate the subsidy entitlement that a local authority will receive from, or pay out to, the Exchequer other authority-specific factors are required such as the average rate of interest on their borrowing. These specific factors are only applied when the local authority makes their claims for subsidy during 2007-08. We will not have a final audited subsidy figure for 2007-08 for each local authority until 2009. The most up-to-date audited actual subsidy entitlement figures we have are for 2005-06.

Housing: Greater London

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many affordable houses were built in (a) the London borough of Havering and (b) Romford in each year since 2001. [124837]

Yvette Cooper: The numbers of affordable homes provided in the London borough of Havering in each financial year since 2000-01 are tabled as follows. The numbers of affordable homes provided in Romford are not readily available. Figures include both new build and acquisitions.

Affordable homes provided: Havering

Housing: Leasehold

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to review the marriage value on properties where the lease has less than 80 years to run; and if she will make a statement. [128102]

Yvette Cooper: The Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 amended the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 so that marriage value would be disregarded where the unexpired term of the existing lease exceeds 80 years. For existing leases where the unexpired term is 80 years or less, marriage value is split 50/50 between the leaseholder and the landlord. We have no current plans to review the way marriage value is treated.

Housing: Low Incomes

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many affordable homes were built in each London borough as a result of section 106 agreements in each of the last five years. [124604]

Yvette Cooper: The numbers of affordable homes provided in each London borough as a result of a section 106 agreement in each of the last five years are tabled as follows. Figures include both new build and acquisitions.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will take steps to classify low-cost housing developed by the private sector for non-social tenants as affordable housing for planning policy purposes. [128555]

Yvette Cooper: Affordable housing is defined in "Planning Policy Statement 3: Housing" published in November last year. The Government adopted this new definition, which includes social rented and intermediate housing, because we wished to ensure that developer contributions were used to help provide genuinely affordable housing for households in need over the longer term. The definition can include homes provided by private sector bodies.

Local planning authorities should plan for the full range of market housing. In particular, they should take account of the need to deliver low-cost market housing as part of the housing mix.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment her Department has made of the effect of the availability of affordable or social rented housing on political extremism. [129207]

Yvette Cooper: Communities and Local Government is currently engaged in examining the means by which we monitor the impact of policies on cohesion and extremism, including those relating to housing.

The role of housing in contributing to community cohesion is one of several matters being considered by the independent Commission on Integration and Cohesion, which is due to report in June 2007.

Housing: Meters

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with colleagues in the Department (a) of Trade and Industry and (b) for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the inclusion of smart-enabled meters in new build houses. [128724]

Yvette Cooper: The Department for Communities and Local Government has had a number of exchanges with colleagues in the Departments (a) of Trade and Industry and (b) for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in relation to the Energy White Paper and the energy performance in buildings directive. The Government will set out their views on metering in the forthcoming Energy White Paper.

Housing: Prices

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average house price was in each Government office region in England in the most recent period for which figures are available. [128627]

Yvette Cooper: Data for monthly mix-adjusted house prices by Government office region are published as Live Table 592 on the Communities and Local Government website at http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/165/Table592_id1156165.xls. The most recent data for January 2007 were published on 12 March 2007.

Sub market sales including right-to-buy sales are excluded from the figures.

Housing: Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what factors were taken into account when deciding that Supporting People agencies should be able to require efficiency savings of home improvement agencies. [127545]

Mr. Woolas: Individual Supporting People administering authorities, not "Supporting People agencies", are responsible for the local delivery of Supporting People services including Home Improvement Agencies (HIAs). Authorities manage this by establishing contracts with service providers, and they are responsible for managing their funding and so for delivering on any efficiencies that are required.

Communities and Local Government is developing a Supporting People national value improvement programme from 2008 in which all Supporting People authorities will be encouraged to adopt improved commissioning and procurement practices to help to further improve overall value for money in the provision of all services.

Housing: Standards

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many arm's length management organisations (ALMOs) managed residential properties have been brought up to the Decent Homes Standard since the start of the ALMOs programme in April 2002; and how many were brought up to that standard in the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available. [126472]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 14 March 2007]: The following table, based on returns from local authorities and ALMOs, shows the number of dwellings managed on behalf of the council by ALMOs which have been made decent in each year since 2002-03.

Number of homes made decent by ALMOs

	Dwellings
2002-03	21,949
2003-04	46,050
2004-05	48,583
2005-06	53,849
2006-07[1]	51,524
Total	221,955

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many residents of arm's length management organisations (ALMOs) managed residential properties have lived in homes brought up to the Decent Homes Standard (a) since the start of the ALMOs programme in April 2002 and (b) in the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available. [126474]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Communities and Local Government does not currently collect specific returns on residents whose homes, managed on behalf of the council by ALMOs, have been brought up to the Decent Homes Standard.

However, by using an average number of people per council home we can estimate the following figures.

Number of residents living in homes made decent by ALMOs

	Residents
2002-03	48,946
2003-04	102,692
2004-05	108,340
2005-06	120,083
2006-07[1]	114,899
Total	494,960

[1] Forecast.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with the Department for Work and Pensions on how its village agent workforce can work in tandem with home improvement agencies. [128057]

James Purnell: I have been asked to reply.

Extensive discussions have taken place and the village agent workforce is already working in tandem with home improvement agencies.

Village agents have strong links with the HIAs, building on their association with the community and adult care helpdesk and its FASTtrack minor adaptations service. The links between the organisations work in two directions as the HIA will also contact the adult helpdesk if they feel that a person who has been referred to them from another area would benefit from the assistance of the adult helpdesk and village agent if applicable.

There are already results covering a range of referrals covering a wide band of HIA services.

Housing: Waiting Lists

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people were registered on local authority housing waiting lists in (a) each English region and (b) each London local authority in 2006; and what the percentage change was on the previous year in each case. [128671]

Yvette Cooper: Information is available on numbers of households rather than people. The number of households on the waiting list for social housing in (a) each English region (b) each London local authority; and the percentage change on the previous year is given in the following tables.

(a) Number of households on waiting list for social housing, as at 1st April by region, as reported by local authorities

Communities and Local Government Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix return (HSSA)

Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing waiting list as at 1 April in their annual Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix returns. Not everyone on the waiting list is necessarily in urgent housing need. The waiting list includes those who consider social housing as their preferred or one of a number of housing options, and those who decide to get onto the waiting list ladder before they need or want to move house—particularly where the priority system is heavily based on waiting time.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people in Taunton constituency are on housing waiting lists; and how many have been waiting (a) less than six months, (b) six to 12 months, (c) 12 to 18 months, (d) 18 to 24 months and (e) over 24 months for housing. [128745]

Yvette Cooper: The constituency of Taunton covers the whole of Taunton Deane district council but also includes a large part of West Somerset district council. Information is not collected at the constituency level, only at local authority level and includes households rather than people. Information on length of waiting time on a housing list for households is not held centrally.

However, the number of households on the waiting list for social housing in Taunton Deane, as at 1 April each year, is published on the Communities and Local Government website in Table 600. The link for this table is as follows:

Land

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment has she made of the effect of landbanking by developers on the cost of housing. [129201]

Yvette Cooper: Landbanking and option contracts were considered within Kate Barker's Review of Housing Supply, commissioned by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Deputy Prime Minister. Her interim report (December 2003) found little evidence, across the country as a whole, to substantiate concerns that these practices allow housebuilders to erect barriers to entry into the market; however, once land is acquired, competitive pressure and responsiveness in the industry are reduced and faster rates of production may be more socially beneficial.

In December 2006 the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government announced the Callcutt Review of Housebuilding Delivery. The Review will provide analysis of the acquisition, holding and disposal of land for housebuilding, the volumes of land held and the influence of land supply on levels of housebuilding production. This will include an assessment of the relationship between supply and demand for housing and any observed market failures and the means by which they may be addressed. We expect the Review to report in the autumn.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what information her Department collects on landbanking by developers. [129206]

Yvette Cooper: Communities and Local Government does not collect information on landbanking by developers.

Local Government: Standards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Comprehensive Performance Assessment rankings and scores have been for every council since its introduction. [129274]

Mr. Woolas: This is an operational matter for the Audit Commission and I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member. The reply was sent on 22 March and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she will respond to the letter of 12 January from the hon. Member for Billericay on the provisional local government finance settlement 2007-08 for Basildon council. [130042]

Mr. Woolas: I have now replied to the hon. Member's letter.

Millennium Dome

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what research has been conducted into the causes of the Millennium Dome cost over-runs. [129102]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

Since the final cost of the Millennium Experience was just 4 per cent. higher than the amount allowed for in the original May 1997 budget, we have not conducted any specific research. However, the National Audit Office published two wider reports on the Millennium Experience, "The Millennium Dome" (HC936) in 2000 and "Winding up the New Millennium Experience Company" (HC749) in 2002.

Non-Domestic Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether a material change to a business premises that increases the rateable value will result in an amended business rates bill prior to the next periodic business rates revaluation. [129209]

Mr. Woolas: Billing authorities calculate and send out revised rates bills to ratepayers as soon as possible after changes in rateable values have been notified to them by valuation officers, rather than waiting until the next revaluation of non-domestic properties.

Planning Permission

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent discussions she has had with the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment concerning issues of planning permission guidance; when those meetings took place; whether she plans to publish the minutes of the meeting; and if she will make a statement. [126817]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Secretary of State has not met with the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment (CABE) specifically to discuss issues related to planning. She last met with representatives from CABE on 21 November 2006 for a general discussion of their progress against agreed work priorities for 2006-07. At this meeting CABE did re-iterate views it had set out as part of its formal response to the consultation on the forthcoming Planning Policy Statement 3: Housing, with specific reference to the importance of emphasising good design.

CABE is the Government's advisor on architecture, urban design and public space and, therefore Communities and Local Government Ministers may meet with CABE for a variety of reasons each year. One meeting will normally be held to discuss CABE's objectives for the forthcoming year. Other meetings can involve a broad discussion on design issues which may include consideration of how CABE's programmes can support good quality outcomes from the planning process, for example through its design review service.

There will also be occasions when Ministers and CABE representatives are both present at meetings and events that are also attended by other parties, and at which the planning system may be among the issues discussed.

Planning: Fees and Charges

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Town and Country Planning (Fees for Applications and Deemed Applications) (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2005 (S.I., 2005 No. 843) to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126651]

Yvette Cooper: Statutory Instrument 843 of 2005 relates to planning fees. The Regulatory Impact Assessment issued at the time balanced the additional cost to applicants (including businesses) against the benefit to applicants of a better-funded, more effective planning service.

In the year since the fee increase (2005-06) research suggests that planning fee income to local authorities increased by £35 million. The number of local authorities meeting all their Best Value targets for turning round planning applications has gone up from 19 per cent. in the year ending 31 March 2004, to 64 per cent. in the year ending 31 March 2006.

The cost to regulators was merely that of using existing staff to revise the legislation and inform stakeholders.

Regeneration: Finance

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was allocated to regeneration projects from her Department in each year between 2001-02 and 2005-06, broken down by by local authority area. [125876]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many regeneration projects received funding from her Department in each year between 2001-02 and 2005-06, broken down by region. [125877]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of her Department's spending was devoted to (a) urban and (b) rural regeneration and redevelopment in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2005-06. [125890]

Yvette Cooper: We estimate that around 32 per cent., 36 per cent. and 37 per cent. of the Department's main programme spend was spent on regeneration and redevelopment programmes for 2003-04 , 2004-05 and 2005-06 respectively. It is not possible to analyse how much of this expenditure could be considered to be urban and how much rural regeneration and redevelopment other than at disproportionate cost.

Rents: North West Region

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homeowners in (a) England, (b) the North West, (c) Greater Manchester and (d) Denton and Reddish constituency pay a rent charge. [127905]

Yvette Cooper: The precise address and location of a particular property is required to access this information from the Land Registry. It is not possible to provide the quantity of homeowners paying a rent charge without a description of all of the properties relevant to the enquiry. Information on particular premises can be obtained for a small charge by contacting the Land Registry.

Rents: Swindon

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what average rent was paid in Swindon by (a) council tenants, (b) tenants with a registered social landlord and (c) tenants paying market rates in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement; [127658]

(2) what average rent was paid for (a) council housing and (b) registered social landlord housing in each local authority in England in the last year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [127661]

Yvette Cooper: The average rent paid for local authority housing was £57.90, and for registered social landlord housing it was £64.32. Figures are as at the end of April 2006 and for local authorities are based on unaudited information. Figures for the RSL sector are based on data collected by the Housing Corporation.

The average rent paid by tenants in Swindon as at end April 2006 was £54.57 for local authority rents, and £67.54 for RSL rents.

As part of the next restructuring programme, local authority and housing association rents for similar properties are converging. Information on average rent paid by private renters in Swindon is not available. This information is available by region as tabled.

Right to Buy Scheme

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether tenants on housing benefit may exercise the right to buy. [128093]

Yvette Cooper: Tenants who are in receipt of housing benefit may exercise the right to buy if they meet the qualifying criteria—i.e. that they hold secure tenancies and have been public sector tenants for at least five years. However, their ability to do so would depend on the willingness of lenders to offer them mortgage finance, or the availability of financial assistance from family or friends.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average (a) house price value and (b) cost to the purchaser was after the discount of a right to buy council property in England in (i) 1997 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [129224]

Yvette Cooper: In 1996-97 the average value of a council property sold through the right to buy scheme in England was £41,000; after the discount was applied this represented an average cost to the purchaser of £21,000.

In 2005-06 the average value of a council property sold through the right to buy scheme in England was £84,000; after the discount was applied this represented an average cost to the purchaser of £58,000.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average net receipt to the public finances is from a right to buy sale. [129228]

Yvette Cooper: The average capital receipt to the public finances from the sale of a council property through the right to buy scheme in England in 2005-06 was £58,000.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes have been sold under the right to buy since its introduction. [129229]

Yvette Cooper: Between 1 October 1980 and 31 March 2006, 1,735,000 council properties have been sold through the right to buy scheme in England.

Social Rented Housing

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many social housing tenants (a) in each English region and (b) in each London local authority moved via Homeswap in each of the last five years. [128457]

Yvette Cooper: Homeswap was the name given to a scheme for social housing tenants who transfer from one local authority or housing association property to another, across local authority boundaries, by advertising their existing property for an exchange with a similar tenant wishing to move in the opposite direction. We do not collect data on Homeswap specifically, but do routinely collect data on mutual exchanges which include those formally arranged through the Homeswap scheme as well as any other exchanges within the local authority. Information is available on number of dwellings rather than social housing tenants. Dwellings let through mutual exchanges within the local authority are shown for the last five years in (a) each English region and (b) each London local authority in the table.

Social Rented Housing: Waiting Lists

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment her Department has made of the effect of changes in the level of immigration on waiting lists for social housing. [129208]

Yvette Cooper: The Department does not collect information centrally on the number of migrants on local authority waiting lists. However, the Department does collect information on the number of lettings to foreign nationals by local authorities.

In the 12 months up to September 2006, local authorities reported that under 1 per cent. of lettings were made to foreign nationals.

South East Plan

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2007, Official Report, column 1163W, on the South East Plan, if she will place in the Library a copy of the reports commissioned from Robert Tym and Partners. [129269]

Angela E. Smith: A copy of the report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Sustainable Development: Rapid Transit System

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has for the integration of light rail systems (a) into the new sustainable communities and (b) in existing urban areas being regenerated. [129113]

Mr. Woolas: The Government recognise that access to good quality local services and infrastructure, including transport, is a key element of creating sustainable communities. It is the responsibility of local authorities to determine their transport needs and to develop appropriate solutions in each case, taking account of local and regional plans.

Telecommunications

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether in addition to the forthcoming consultation on non-domestic rates for unbundled local loops she has any plans to take further steps on the wider review of rating telecoms infrastructure as outlined in the Government's response to the 2002 Annual Report from the Broadband Stakeholder Group. [126910]

Mr. Woolas: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for North Warwickshire (Mr. O'Brien), to the then hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Allan) on 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 245W. There are no plans to take any further steps on the rating of telecoms infrastructure beyond the forthcoming consultation and subsequent secondary legislation on local loop unbundling.

Temporary Accommodation: Swindon

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people lived in temporary accommodation in Swindon in each year since 1995. [127665]

Yvette Cooper: Information about local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly at local authority level, in respect of households rather than people.

Information reported each quarter by local authorities about their activities under homelessness legislation includes the number of households in temporary accommodation on the last day of the quarter. The figures include both those households who have been accepted as owed the main homelessness duty, and those for which enquiries are pending.

A summary table showing the total number of households in temporary accommodation, from 1997-98 to 2005-06, for each local authority (including Swindon,) was placed in the Library of the House on 23 October 2006.

Key data at local authority level are published in supplementary tables to our quarterly statistical release on statutory homelessness. These are placed in the Library each quarter, as well as published on our website. Data on the number of households in temporary accommodation in the Thamesdown district of Wiltshire, for years prior to 1997-98, are already available in the Library.

In January 2005 the Government set a target of halving the number of households in all forms of temporary accommodation used by local authorities to discharge their main duty under the homelessness legislation.

Tenancy Deposit Scheme

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the proportion of letting agencies which will meet the implementation deadline of 6 April 2007 for the Tenancy Deposit Scheme; and if she will make a statement. [127419]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 14 March 2007]: All letting agencies should be able to comply with the requirements of the tenancy deposit protection. From 6 April 2007 there will be three schemes for operation. A letting agent will be able to decide with their landlord clients to either insure the deposit with one of the two insurance based schemes or lodge the deposit with the custodial scheme.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she is taking to ensure the Tenancy Deposit Scheme does not create a disproportionate administrative or financial burden for small businesses; and if she will make a statement. [127421]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 14 March 2007]: The Department has worked with stakeholders to ensure that the tenancy deposit protection scheme does not create an administrative or financial burden. There is no charge for the use of the custodial scheme and information that needs to be provided to a tenant has been kept to a minimum and is prescribed by the Department.

Unitary Councils

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much she has budgeted for the cost of assessment of unitary authority bids going to independent audit (a) per bid and (b) in total. [127513]

Mr. Woolas: The assessment of proposals against the criteria are decisions for Ministers, having regard to all the relevant information available to them. This information will include for proposals that proceed to stakeholder consultation, the results of the limited assurance to the baseline financial data that will be carried out by the Audit Commission and for which the Commission will charge the authorities concerned.

Valuation Office

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 11 December 2006, Official Report, column 906W, on the Valuation Office Agency, what the expected payments by (a) Capgemini and (b) the Agency to (i) CLT and (ii) Tyler Technologies are in 2007-08. [128561]

Mr. Woolas: Payments will depend on the support to be provided, which is subject to discussion.

Waste Management: Domestic wastes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what advice the Audit Commission has provided to local authorities on the frequency of domestic rubbish collections. [129237]

Angela E. Smith: This is an operational matter for the Audit Commission and I asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member. The Chief Executive subsequently replied to him on 22 March and a copy of the letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departments: Credit Cards

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff in his Department have corporate charge cards; and whether he holds one. [129413]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Government procurement cards are used by civil servants as required in accordance with the terms of the Cardholders' Manual issued by Communities and Local Government, which administers cards on our behalf. I do not hold one.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many meetings he held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128752]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Ministers and civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and advice. It is not normal practice to disclose details of such meetings.

Departments: Database

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what databases are controlled by his Department; and what percentage of the data in each database he estimates is inaccurate or out of date. [124041]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The only databases controlled by my Department contain internal records of correspondence.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departments: Publications

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will place in the Library a copy of the Cabinet Office publication 'The Occupants Guide: A-Z of Key Services at The Admiralty Arch Building'. [129143]

Hilary Armstrong: The occupant guides are no longer in use.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will place in the Library copies of the last 12 months of the Cabinet Office's staff newsletter. [129144]

Hilary Armstrong: This is an internal staff journal and not for publication.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will place in the Library a copy of the latest edition of the Central Office of Information's IPO directory. [129146]

Mr. McFadden: The Central Office of Information's IPO (Information and Press Officers) Directory is now officially called the White Book and lists a wide range of contacts in Government Departments and agencies, not just information and press officers.

The latest edition was distributed on 6 March and copies are available in the Library for the reference of Members.

The next edition is due to be published at the end of July.

National Youth Volunteering Organisation

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will place in the Library the details of each project funded by the National Youth Volunteering Organisation, v; what estimate she has made of the number of people who volunteered through each project; what the (a) cost and (b) location was of each project; and on what date the project (i) commenced and (ii) ended. [128901]

Edward Miliband: Details of the projects funded by the independent charity v in its first grants round are contained in the press release issued by v on 27 September 2006. Copies will be placed in the Library for the reference of Members.

In the first grants round, v has supported the creation of 42,000 volunteering opportunities involving 100 organisations. The break-down on funded projects shows 31 projects for short-term volunteering opportunities, 32 projects for part-time opportunities, 17 projects for full-time volunteering opportunities, and 20 projects through the v development teams. The projects funded ranged in size from providing 15 to 4,000 volunteering opportunities and from a cost of £240 to £298,500 for the total project cost.

In addition, through partnerships with the private sector, 64 projects are being supported by the match fund to the tune of £7.5 million, which will create a further 43,000 opportunities.

These projects are set to commence at various points between summer 2006 and spring 2008.

Details of projects which v has supported will be made available in the Annual Report, which will be published this year.

Press Officers

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many press officers her Department employs; and at what cost. [130008]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office employs eight press officers at an estimated cost of £475,000 in 2006-07.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Leominster (Bill Wiggin) of 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 853W, on primary care trusts, which trusts have been visited; and if she will place in the Library copies of the reports of each visit. [129911]

Hilary Armstrong: The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit has visited the following 35 primary care trusts (PCTs) within the last year:

Broxtowe and Hucknall
Croydon
Kingston
Leeds
Thurrock
Tower Hamlets
Somerset Coast
Gateshead
Oldham
South Somerset
Wandsworth
East Surrey

Southampton
Lambeth
Southwark
North Sheffield
Sheffield
Barking
Bromley
Plymouth
Redbridge
Selby and York
East Birmingham

The purpose of the visits is to gain an understanding from the front line of issues affecting delivery of key services, rather than assess the performance of individual PCTs. The resulting reports constitute confidential advice to Ministers and are not published.

DEFENCE

Courts Martial

12.Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the effectiveness of the courts martial process; and if he will make a statement. [129308]

Mr. Ingram: The courts-martial process was most recently examined during the passing of the 2006 Armed Forces Act. As a result changes are being made which include enhancing the role of the service police in the conduct of investigations likely to lead to a court-martial, and applying the same rules across the three services.

Armed Forces' Housing

13. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on the provision of local authority housing for former members of the armed forces. [129309]

Derek Twigg: I discussed the issue of local authority housing for former members of the armed forces when I met my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, on 13 March. We agreed that our officials should work together to ensure that servicemen and women are fairly treated in terms of access to social housing.

Iraq

14. Mrs. Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent progress has been made in training the Iraqi army; and if he will make a statement. [129311]

Des Browne: The coalition has so far trained and equipped an Iraqi Army comprising ten divisions and around 135,000 personnel.

The new Iraqi military headquarters in Baghdad has full operational control of four divisions of the Iraqi Army and more divisions will transfer over the coming months. This transfer of command and control is a critical step towards the Iraqi Government taking full responsibility for delivering security in Iraq.

Afghanistan

15. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of counter-narcotics operations on the level of insurgency in southern Afghanistan. [129312]

Des Browne: Targeted counter-narcotic operations by Afghan forces continue to contribute positively to the international effort to stabilize that country. While there has been some opposition, this has been localised and it is not assessed to have significantly affected the wider insurgency.

17. Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in establishing Afghanistan development zones; and if he will make a statement. [129314]

Des Browne: UK operations in Afghanistan are focused around the Lashkar Gah Development Zone. To date, the creation of six other Afghan Development Zones has been announced and we expect more to follow.

19. John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, whether British forces will take (a) M26 and (b) any other cluster munition rockets among the ammunition to be used by multiple launch rocket systems when deployed in Afghanistan. [129317]

Des Browne: No.

PFI Liabilities

16. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's private finance initiative liabilities are; and if he will make a statement. [129313]

Mr. Ingram: The MOD's private finance initiative commitments are published in the Department's Annual Report and Accounts, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Injured Troops

18. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when he next expects to meet Department of Health Ministers to discuss the medical treatment of injured service personnel. [129315]

Derek Twigg: I am looking forward to sharing a platform at the veterans plenary conference on 28 March with the Minister of State, Department of Health, my right hon. Friend the Member for Doncaster, Central (Ms Winterton). My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and I met with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health on 22 February. There is regular contact between our Departments at official level, both formally through the Partnership Board which meets three time a year, and informally as required.

Hercules Fleet

20. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what progress has been made in the fitting of suppressant foam to the Hercules fleet. [129318]

Mr. Ingram: The programme to fit explosive suppressant foam to the majority of the RAF Hercules fleet is ongoing. On current plans it is expected that this work will be completed around the end of the year.

Bevin Boys

21. Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what progress has been made on proposals to recognise the contribution of the Bevin boys. [129319]

Derek Twigg: I met with Warwick Taylor, the vice-president of the Bevin Boys Association, on 7 February to discuss the most appropriate way to recognise the service of the Bevin Boys. Mr Taylor has since met with officials to discuss this matter further. I expect an announcement to be in made in the near future.

Afghanistan: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he (a) has taken and (b) is taking better to protect HM Forces from land mines in Afghanistan. [128285]

Mr. Ingram: A range of measures are taken to protect UK armed forces from both anti-personnel and anti-tank mines. The best protection against mines can be provided by a combination of appropriate equipment and robust Training, Tactics and Procedures.

The UK Task Force has an Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Task Force which is skilled and well-trained for dealing with mine incidents. The UK's EOD Task Force has good knowledge of legacy minefields, and UK military personnel undertake mine awareness training.

While not designated a 'Mine Protected Vehicle' the newly procured Mastiff, a wheeled patrol vehicle with a less intimidating profile than our tracked vehicles, offers good protection against a range of threats including mines. We are rapidly procuring 100 of these vehicles for use in both Iraq and Afghanistan, and they will be delivered to Afghanistan this spring.

It is departmental policy that all troops deploying to Op Herrick are provided with Enhanced Combat Body Armour before they deploy to theatre.

This armour, as well as protecting against small-arms fire, could additionally protect against shrapnel and blast injuries.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for changes to the number of personnel deployed in Afghanistan. [129304]

Des Browne: As I explained to the House on 26 February 2007, Official Report, columns 619-21, the UK has decided to fill one of NATO's most pressing requirements—a manoeuvre battalion for Regional Command (South). That means that over the summer our forces in Afghanistan will increase from around 6,300 to settle at around 7,700. The current planning assumption remains that these forces are committed until 2009. I and the Chiefs of Staff agree that this commitment is manageable.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many British helicopters are available to UK forces in Afghanistan; [129429]

(2) how many British (a) Chinook, (b) Lynx and (c) Apache helicopters are (i) operationally available and (ii) fit to fly on a typical day in Afghanistan; [129433]

(3) for how many flying hours per day on average the British (a) Lynx, (b) Apache and (c) Chinook helicopters are available in Afghanistan. [129449]

Mr. Ingram: The following UK helicopters are currently based in Afghanistan: Chinook CH-47 support helicopters; Apache AH-64 attack helicopters; and Lynx light-utility helicopters. We would not expect all the helicopters to be available at any one time, due to requirements for routine maintenance, and therefore daily flying hours and availability will fluctuate. I am withholding further details as it would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness and security of our armed forces.

We continue to keep our helicopter requirements under review to ensure that we have sufficient helicopter support to meet current and anticipated tasks.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received of the effect on the operational effectiveness of Lynx helicopters in Afghanistan of warmer weather conditions. [129450]

Mr. Ingram: We recognise that all helicopters have lift or payload constraints, and we take these into account when deploying a number of different helicopters as part of a varied fleet. Aircraft can be affected by variations in temperature and weather conditions, but I am withholding the information as it would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of our armed forces.

Air Force: Military Bases

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which (a) Ministers, (b) members of the Intelligence and Security Committee and (c) other hon. Members have visited (i) RAF Menwith Hill, (ii) RAF Molesworth, (iii) RAF Lakenheath, (iv) RAF Mildenhall, (v) RAF Croughton, (vi) RAF Fairford, (vii) RAF Fylingdales and (viii) RAF St. Mawgan since January 2000; and what the date was of each such visit. Armed Forces: Health Services

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received on the adequacy of medical care for injured service personnel; and if he will make a statement. [129310]

Derek Twigg: From 1 January to 20 March this year, Ministers had received some 50 representations from hon. Members and members of the public on the adequacy of medical care for injured service personnel.

Armed Forces: Housing

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Modern Housing Solutions call centres there are; and how many people are employed at each centre. [129685]

Derek Twigg: There is one Modern Housing Solutions helpdesk, which is located in Speke, Liverpool.

89 staff currently work at the call centre.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many requests for repair call outs were received by Modern Housing Solutions in each of the last 12 months. [129687]

Armed Forces: Legal Profession

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) military and (b) civilian personnel were serving with the Army legal corps in each year since 2000. [128080]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The following table shows the number of military and civilian personnel working for the Army legal service (ALS) as at 1 January each year since 2000.

Adjutant general's corps (army legal services) trained army officer and civilian strength

1 January:	Officers[1, 2, 3]	Civilians[4, 5]
2000	80	70
2001	100	60
2002	100	70
2003	100	80
2004	100	80
2005	100	90
2006	110	90
2007	120	90

[1] Figures include all AG Corps (ALS) Officers including those Officers with a rank of Colonel and above.

[2] The figures are for trained regular army officers only and therefore exclude all reservists.

[3] Only Army personnel capbadged AG ALS are included in the figures. Therefore the figures exclude those personnel from other arm/services attached to or supporting AG ALS.

[4] Civilians working in the following units are included: Director General Legal Services, Directorate of Army Legal Services, Army Prosecuting Authority (Germany), HQ Army Prosecuting Authority (UK), Office for Standards of Casework and the Officer and Soldier Complaints Authority Army Appeals Wing.

[5] Full-time equivalent staff. Counts part-time staff by the number of hours they work as a proportion of their full-time conditioned hours.

Note:
All figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Armed Forces: Uniforms

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what points Ministers have sought permission from Her Majesty the Queen for servants of the Crown to wear European Union flag unit insignia upon their uniforms. [129242]

Derek Twigg: The European Union insignia as worn is not formally a flag, but a circular patch. Approval from Her Majesty the Queen is required for the wearing of insignia which contain a crown. The European Union symbol, worn below the Union flag, does not fall into this category.

Armoured Fighting Vehicles

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the next vehicle expected is in the future rapid effect system series after the Panther Command and Liaison vehicle; [127021]

(2) what assessment he has made of the priority accorded to (a) the personnel carrier and (b) the direct fire version in the development of future rapid effect system medium weight vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [127027]

Mr. Ingram: The Panther Command and Liaison vehicle does not form part of the future rapid effect system (FRES) programme. The FRES utility vehicle, which will carry personnel as one of its roles, is currently afforded the highest priority and is likely to be the first variant to enter service. A direct fire variant may follow; the Department is continuing to examine the requirement and options as part of the assessment phase.

Army: Manpower

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel there were in the Army in each year since 1992. [128869]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 22 March 2007]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 22 January 2007, Official Report, column 1557W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Stourbridge (Lynda Waltho).

Departments: Art Works

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on art work for its main building in 2005-06. [129723]

Derek Twigg: No works of art were bought for the Main Building, nor for any other MOD building, in 2005-06. £52,992 was spent in 2005-06 on maintenance tasks for the MOD Art Collection, including conservation, re-framing, re-hanging and photography.

Departments: Official Hospitality

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many regimental dinners took place in 2006; and what the total cost was of those dinners. [127537]

Derek Twigg: Information on how many regimental dinners took place in 2006 is not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

All Army messes are supported by contracts that include provision for a number of functions each year, for which attendees are charged the costs of food and drink. Some of these will be regimental dinners. If a regiment wants to hold additional functions, the drink and staff costs are met by private regimental funds and not the Defence budget. It is therefore not possible to provide the total cost of regimental dinners in 2006.

Falkland Islands: Anniversaries

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what celebrations his Department is preparing for the 25th Anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands. [129727]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 11 January 2007, Official Report, column 711W, to his earlier question on this subject. Preparations for the commemorations that I have outlined are now well under way.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many courts martial have been held to try the conduct of British soldiers in Iraq; and what the charges were in each case in which no legal proceedings remain active. [128793]

The charges in each case are:

Marines: Manpower

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Marine commandos there are; and what the planned target number for the period 2006-07 was. [129730]

Mr. Ingram: On 1 February 2007 there were 5,540 trained Royal Marines Commandos.

The requirement for Royal Marines Commandos in April 2006 was 5,970 and 6,030 in April 2007.

Note:

These figures include Regular personnel and exclude full-time reserve personnel and activated reservists.

Military Fatalities

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military fatalities have been repatriated through RAF Brize Norton in each of the last five years. [129645]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The number of military fatalities that have been repatriated through RAF Brize Norton in each of the last five years are:

	Personnel repatriated
2003	53
2004	39
2005	15
2006	50
2007 (to date)	12
Total personnel	169

Navy: Deployment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy ships are in service; how many were in service in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [126293]

Mr. Ingram: In August 1997 the Royal Navy had 98 ships in service. The Royal Navy currently has 75 ships in service although HMS Invincible is held at low readiness. These totals include: landing platform docks, landing platform helicopter, aircraft carriers, destroyers, frigates, mine countermeasures ships, river class offshore patrol vessels, inshore patrol craft, survey ships and the royal yacht.

RAF Lyneham

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what extra resources he plans to make available to RAF Lyneham when they take over responsibility for military repatriation on 1 April. [129646]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 March 2007]: An assessment has been made of the implications for the Station from which it was determined that the task could be absorbed within existing manpower resources. Any financial costs resulting from the ceremonies can be claimed from the Contingency Fund.

Service Personnel: South African Citizens

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2007, Official Report, column 1173W, on service personnel: South African citizens, what progress has been made on the officials' visit to South Africa; and if he will make a statement. [128183]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The draft South African legislation on mercenaries and membership of the armed forces of other nations has completed its parliamentary process, and is currently with the President awaiting his assent although we are unable to establish when and if this may be given. Active engagement with the South African Department of Defence is on-going and we hope to secure a date for the officials' visit at the earliest opportunity.

Type 45 Destroyers

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his estimate is of the minimum number of Type 45 destroyers necessary to provide area air defence for the fleet; and if he will make a statement. [128577]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 290W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

Unidentified Flying Objects

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent producing the report Unidentified Aerial Phenomena in the UK Air Defence Region; who the author was; what the author's qualifications in this subject were; to whom the report was circulated; what actions were taken on the recommendations of the report; and if he will make a statement. [128505]

Mr. Ingram: It is not possible to provide accurate details as to the cost of producing the Unidentified Aerial Phenomena report as this was one of several tasks that were included within a single contract and detailed costings for each of these tasks is not available. However, it is estimated that the overall cost was approximately £50,000.

The author of the report was a contractor and was employed by the Defence Intelligence Staff (DIS) on a long-term contract. Further details of the author, including the name, are being withheld under the terms of the Data Protection Act 1998.

The report was circulated within the DIS and to other branches of the Ministry of Defence and RAF. As recommended by the report, the DIS ceased to monitor unidentified aerial phenomena sighting reports (and therefore reaped a saving in staff time) as they contained no information of Defence Intelligence interest and no further action was taken.

HEALTH

Bexley Community Health NHS Trust

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was provided by her Department to Bexley Care Trust for (a) prevention and (b) treatment of (i) sexually transmitted diseases, (ii) obesity, (iii) diabetes and (iv) alcoholism in each of the last five years. [126875]

Andy Burnham: All primary care trusts (PCTs), including Bexley Care Trust are responsible for meeting the overall health needs of their community from their mainstream funding—including the prevention and treatment of sexually transmitted diseases, obesity, diabetes and alcoholism.

The 2006-07 and 2007-08 revenue allocations to PCTs separately identify £211 million in 2006-07 and £342 million in 2007-08 to support the initiatives set out in the White Paper, "Choosing Health: making healthy choices easier" (such as sexual health modernisation, action on diet, activity and obesity and alcohol interventions).

It is for PCTs to determine how to use the funding allocated to them to commission services to meet the health care needs of their local populations. PCTs were informed of their shares of the £342 million funding but not their shares of each initiative.

Bowel Cancer Screening

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards (a) establishing and (b) evaluating pilots of flexible sigmoidoscopy as part of bowel cancer screening for people in their fifties. [129630]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 23 March 2007]: Flexible sigmoidoscopy (FS) is a potential way of screening for bowel cancer. A large clinical trial, funded by the Medical Research Council and Cancer Research UK, has looked into screening healthy people for bowel cancer using FS. The final results are not expected until 2008 but early results have been very promising and have shown that this type of screening will help to prevent bowel cancer and be cost effective. However, we do not know yet how many lives it could save. Based on these promising results, the Government are now funding a pilot study at St. Mark's hospital in London to examine the feasibility of FS screening performed by specialist nurses. The pilot is inviting 2000 men and women aged 58 and 59. The study is costing £400,000, and is expected to report in 2008.

Breast Feeding

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to promote breast feeding in 2007-08. [129365]

Caroline Flint: The Department is planning a comprehensive year-round communications package, including marketing support that will be launched at the National Breast Feeding Awareness Week to be held on 13-19 May. We are in the process of developing activities such as television and radio filler advertising, updating website, and PR activity as well as developing educational and promotional materials. We are also working with UNICEF in developing joint publications on infant feeding.

The Department is continuing to work with the Food Standards Agency on the implementation of the European Union Directive on infant formula and follow-on formula. In addition, we have appointed a new National Infant Feeding Adviser, who will be actively involved in promoting breast feeding by developing activities locally to help increase breast feeding rates and supporting health professionals.

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department spent promoting breast feeding in each year between 2002-03 and 2006-07; which organisations received such funding in each year; and for what purposes funding was provided in each year. [129366]

Caroline Flint: Since 2002, the Department has funded a range of activities promoting breast feeding and infant feeding. The following table sets out the funding provided each year for breast feeding promotion from 2002-07.

Financial year	Departmental spend on breast feeding promotion (£)
2002-03	280,000
2003-04	462,000
2004-05	747,000
2005-06	743,000
2006-07	729,011

Most of the funding available was spent centrally in developing promotional and educational materials, PR activities for the breast feeding campaigns, developing and updating websites, conferences and supporting the work of the National Network of Breast Feeding Co-ordinators.

In 2004-05, the Department spent approximately £350,000 in developing and distributing a resource pack for health professionals. Since 2005, the Department provided approximately £12,000 to the breast feeding network in support of developing a national helpline number on breast feeding. In addition, the Department has also provided grants to four voluntary organisations under the Section 64 Grants Scheme to promote their work on breast feeding. We have provided core grant of £13,000 for 2007-08 to the Association of Breast feeding Mothers.

Care Homes: Fees and Charges

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the number of people in residential care homes of whom third-party top-up fees are (a) sought and (b) received; what estimate she has made of the average top-up fee paid in respect of such people; and what steps the Government are taking to prevent such fees being regressive; [124713]

(2) if she will bring forward proposals to reduce the number of care home residents who are affected by third-party top-up fees; and if she will make a statement. [124717]

Andy Burnham: This information is not collected centrally in the form requested. However, the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) conducted a United Kingdom wide survey of 'Care Homes For Their Care Homes For Older People in the UK' report, published in May 2005. The OFT found that the average care home in the UK had 32 places of which 29 were occupied. Of these, seven, around 24 per cent. were paid for by a combination of the local authority and a third-party top-up. The UK average third-party top-up was £65.33p a week.

The detail of contracting arrangements between local councils and care homes is a matter for local decision. The Government do not set or recommend rates at which councils contract with care homes. We think it is important that councils are able to tailor contracts to specific local circumstances. However, the Government have made available record levels of funding for social care. Since 1997, Government grants for local services, including social care, have increased by £28.4 billion or 39 per cent. in real terms.

This substantial funding is making a real difference. Although, in their annual 'Care of the Elderly: UK Market Survey 2006' report, independent market analysts Laing and Buisson reported that around half of local authorities increased the fees they pay to care homes by less than 3.5 per cent. This follows a three year period, 2002-03 to 2004-05 during which Laing and Buisson reported that payments increased at an unprecedented rate. This is clear evidence that local authorities have been using the additional resources provided by central Government to increase payments to care homes and rebalance the care home market.

Care Homes: Finance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residential care home places there are in each strategic health authority (SHA); and what the average cost per place is in each SHA. [126532]

Andy Burnham: I am informed by the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that data on the number of care homes and places are not collected by strategic health authority area. CSCI is able to supply information on the number of care homes and places in its regions, of which there are nine in England. These data are shown in the following table.

Number of registered adult care and nursing homes and places by CSCI region

Region	Homes	Places
East Midlands	1,605	40,809
Eastern	1,859	45,933
London	2,012	40,314

South West	2,634	56,479
West Midlands	1,931	44,446
Yorkshire and Humberside	1,713	47,967

Information on the costs of care home places is not collected centrally.

Cervical Cancer: Screening

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking (a) to reduce the decline in and (b) to increase the numbers of women attending for cervical screening. [129613]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2094-95W.

Community Health Services: Tolls

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the potential impact of road pricing on funding allocated to community health workers. [128683]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply and refer to my answer given today to question UIN 126159.

Doctors

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of levels of motivation of doctors in the NHS. [126626]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department takes the welfare of all national health service employees very seriously. Morale among NHS staff can be difficult to gauge; however, the Healthcare Commission NHS annual staff surveys in 2005 indicated that staff remain generally satisfied, with job satisfaction identified as 73.78 per cent. across all staff, 69.32 per cent. within acute trusts and all medical staff in acute trusts 73.31 per cent.

Health Services: Greater London

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has carried out equality impact assessments of (a) the decision to close the Maudsley hospital 24-hour emergency clinic, (b) the reduction in the budget of the South London and Maudsley NHS hospital trust for 2007-08, (c) the reduction in the budget of the Southwark primary trust for 2007-08 and (d) the reduction in the budget of the Lambeth primary care trust for 2007-08. [130043]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the answers provided, 20 March 2007, Official Report, columns 858-59W and 861-62W.

Health Services: Gambling

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to provide additional services to treat gambling addiction in areas approved for the licensing of a large casino, with particular reference to Solihull. [119005]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Problem gamblers, who are entitled to treatment under the national health service, can access services in primary care and secondary care including specialised mental health and addiction services. There are currently no central plans to provide additional services in areas approved for the licensing of a large casino. However, we will continue to be responsible for assessing and commissioning services to meet the needs of the populations that they serve.

Heart Diseases

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average period of time was which patients have waited for a myocardial perfusion scan in (a) West Lancashire, (b) the North West and (c) England in the latest period for which figures are available. [128227]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows the number of people waiting more than six and 13 weeks for a routine myocardial perfusion study.

Waiting times information for routine myocardial perfusion study, August 2006

Heart Diseases: Irish

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of research on the risk faced by Irish people in England dying prematurely from heart disease compared to other groups; and what steps are being taken by her Department to address this risk. [128207]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Health Survey for England 2004 supplement, The Health of Minority Ethnic Groups, collected information from the seven largest minority ethnic groups in England including Black Caribbean, Black African, Indian, Pakistan, Bangladeshi, Chinese and Irish. The general population survey reported that cardiovascular disorder diagnosed by a doctor was most prevalent in Irish men and women.

The survey also looked at risk factors for cardiovascular disease (CVD). Significantly, it shows that Irish men were more obese and that their prevalence for smoking and drinking was higher than the general population. Irish women have higher blood pressure and both drink and smoke more than the general population. These are all risk factors for CVD which includes coronary heart disease (CHD).

The Department has an overarching target to improve mortality for CVD which incorporates a specific target for tackling health inequalities:

> To improve the health of the population by substantially reducing the mortality rates by 2010, (from the ONS baseline, 1995-97) from heart disease and stroke related diseases by at least 40 per cent. in people under 75, with at least a 40 per cent. reduction in the inequalities gap between the fifth of areas with the worst health and deprivation indicators and the population as a whole.

Those areas with the worst health and deprivation indicators have been designated Spearhead primary care trusts. They are responsible for designing and delivering services to meet the needs of their local population, taking account of issues such as ethnic mix. Latest data show continued improvements in CVD mortality inequalities with a 27.9 per cent. reduction in the absolute CVD inequality gap. This has been achieved by promoting healthier lifestyles and with the increased distribution of preventative drugs such as statins.

Kidney Diseases

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are diagnosed with chronic kidney disease in (a) the UK, (b) the West Midlands and (c) Coventry. [129033]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no national registry of chronic kidney disease (CKD). Over 99.9 per cent. of people with CKD will be under the care of general practitioners and not be seen by secondary or tertiary hospital services.

At general practice level, the maintenance of a practice register of patients with CKD became a part of the quality and outcomes framework in April 2006, which in due course should mean that a very rich dataset will be available for every community in the country.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to encourage early treatment to prevent renal failure. [129034]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Part 2 of the "National Service Framework for Renal Services" sets out the Department's strategy for early identification and management of chronic kidney disease, and for slowing down its progression. This has been reinforced by the introduction of a set of indicators relating to chronic kidney disease in the quality and outcomes framework, which rewards general practitioners for developing services in this area.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans her Department has for the long-term provision of dialysis facilities. [129035]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Part 1 "Dialysis and Transplantation—The National Service Framework for Renal Services: Dialysis and Transplantation", which is available in the Library, sets out the Department's vision for the sufficiency and quality of dialysis services in the national health service. Standard 4 of the National Service Framework aims to improve the outcomes for people on dialysis and maximise their rehabilitation, quality of life and survival.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has plans to increase the provision and availability of home dialysis equipment. [129036]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Choice is acknowledged as being of paramount importance in the "National Service Framework for Renal Services", and that choice includes home dialysis. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has recommended that patients should be offered the choice of home haemodialysis, where clinically indicated, as a cost-effective alternative to haemodialysis in a hospital or satellite unit. The Department is currently hosting a seminar to promote the availability of home dialysis in the national health service.

Mental Health Services: Ethnic Groups

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the best practice guide Positive Steps: Supporting Race Equality in Mental Health Care of 21 February 2007 does not include the Irish as a specific category; and whether this practice is consistent with the categories recommended in the Department's guide to ethnic monitoring. [128176]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is committed to the promotion of equality in the national health service, for staff, patients and the public. Delivering race equality (DRE) in mental health is a comprehensive five-year action plan for tackling racial inequality in mental health care.

The definition of black minority ethnic (BME) in the DRE action plan is used to refer to all minority ethnic groups in England. It does not only refer to skin colour but to people of all groups who may experience discrimination and disadvantage, such as those of Irish origin, Mediterranean origin and East Europe migrants.

Most of the Positive Steps guide is applicable to all these groups. The guide is intended to expand and develop over time. It currently includes information specific to two BME communities. Information on others, including the Irish, will be added shortly.

Mid-Essex Hospital Trust: Vacancies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will clarify her answer of 20 March 2007 to question 127533, tabled by the hon. Member for West Chelmsford, on vacancies at the Mid-Essex Hospital Trust. [129612]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not collect estimates of projected vacancy levels by trust. It is for local national health service providers in consultation with commissioners, to estimate their work force requirements to meet the healthcare needs of their local populations.

The national three-month vacancy survey due to be carried out at the end of this month will show how many vacancies have been unfilled for three months in each trust in England. The results of this survey will be published in the summer.

Midwives

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many registered midwives (a) left the NHS, (b) returned to the NHS and (c) were made redundant in each of the last 12 years for which records are available; and how many of these posts were not then filled or replaced. [127277]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of registered midwives who left the national health service in the last 12 years is not collected centrally.

Since 1999 over 1,200 midwives had returned to the NHS as at March 2004.

Information on redundancies was collected for the first time last year. There were nine compulsory midwife redundancies in England in the nine months up to 31 December 2006.

This needs to be seen in the context of the last census showing there were 24,808 midwives employed in the NHS in England, an increase of 2,423 (10.8 per cent.) since 1997.

Information on how many of these posts were not then filled or replaced is not collected centrally.

Midwives: Manpower

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwives left the profession in the last three years for which figures are available. [127549]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of independent midwives who are likely to leave the profession as a result of the new rules requiring professional indemnity insurance. [127550]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No estimate has been made centrally. All registered health care professionals will be required to have professional indemnity insurance to protect the public in the event of a claim for negligence. While it is important to consider independent midwives, especially in relation to extended choice and diversity of provision, it cannot be at the cost of the protection of the woman.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 18 December 2006, Official Report, columns 1719-20W, on NHS expenditure, whether her Department has discussed the consistency of methodology for calculating health expenditure per capita with officials from the Welsh Assembly Government. [123529]

Andy Burnham: In submitting the data, officials from the Department and the Welsh Assembly Government did not hold specific discussions on the comparability of the data.

NHS: Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) expenditure per unweighted head of each primary care trust and (b) (i) in-year and (ii) accumulated financial position was of each primary care trust for (A) 2003-04, (B) 2004-05 and (C) 2005-06. [124931]

Andy Burnham: The information on expenditure per unweighted head of each primary care trust (PCT) has been placed in the Library. Data on the in-year financial position for individual PCTs for the years requested are not held centrally. PCTs manage their resources on an annual basis, therefore the year-end financial position represents the accumulated position. This information has also been placed in the Library.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) accumulated financial position of the NHS and (b) the in-year financial position of the NHS was in each year since 1996-97. [124932]

Andy Burnham: The national health service manages its resources on an annual basis, therefore the year-end financial position represents the accumulated position. The in-year financial position can only be provided from 2002-03 as this the first year that adjustments for prior year performance were made. These figures are presented in the following table:

£ million

	Total NHS net surplus/(deficit)	Total NHS in-year surplus/(deficit)
1996-97	(459)	n/a
1997-98	(121)	n/a
1998-99	(18)	n/a
1999-2000	(129)	n/a
2000-01	112	n/a
2001-02	71	n/a
2002-03	96	(5)
2003-04	73	68
2004-05	(221)	(298)
2005-06	(547)	(407)
2006-07[1]	(437)	269

[1] Quarter three forecast.

Notes:

1. The figures in the table exclude foundation trusts.
2. The 2006-07 forecast figures exclude the £450 million savings identified by SHAs through their continued prudent management of central NHS programme funds.

NHS: Tolls

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the weekly cost to the national health service of the introduction of road user charging. [126159]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

No decisions have been taken on a national road pricing scheme. The Government are working with local authorities interested in establishing local pricing schemes to address local congestion problems, and the first of these are expected to be in place in four to five years. Any decision on a national road pricing scheme will only be taken on the evidence of these schemes.

Given that no decisions have been taken on whether to introduce national road pricing and if so what form it might take, it is not possible to estimate the potential impact on specific groups or sectors at this stage.

Nurses: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent school nurses there were in Cumbria in each year between 1997 and 2006. [128732]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer to the right hon. Member to the answer given on 20 March 2007, Official Report, column 850W.

Pinderfields

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from the hon. Member for Normanton (Ed Balls) on Pinderfields hospital in the last 12 months. [129773]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 23 March 2007]: My right hon. Friend the former Minister of State for Quality and Patient Safety, (Jane Kennedy), met with my hon. Friends the Members for Hemsworth (Jon Trickett), Normanton (Ed Balls), Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper), Selby (Mr. Grogan), and Elmet (Colin Burgon) on 29 March 2006.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met with my hon. Friends the Members for Hemsworth (Jon Trickett), Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper), Wakefield (Mary Creagh) and my noble Friend Lord Lofthouse on 21 November 2006.

Smoking: Legislation

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish guidance on the enforcement and implementation of the smoke-free legislation. [128917]

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department has provided to local authorities on enforcing the public smoking ban. [129211]

Caroline Flint: The Department published guidance on smoke-free legislation for businesses on 23 March.

The guidance entitled "Everything you need to prepare for the new smoke-free law on 1 July 2007" includes support materials to assist business to be ready for implementation, including no-smoking signs. A copy has been placed in the Library.

The guidance will be posted during April to businesses in England with employees, and is also available on the Smokefree England website at www.smokefreeengland.co.uk

The Local Authorities Co-ordinators of Regulatory Services (LACORS) has published on 23 March guidance for local council regulatory officers to support the successful and consistent implementation of smoke-free legislation across England. The LACORS guidance was developed in partnership with the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health and in consultation with the Department. The guidance has been placed in the Library.

Speech Therapy

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS institutions employ speech and language therapists; and what proportion of such institutions decided not to recruit newly qualified practitioners in 2006. [127667]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of speech and language therapists employed by primary care trusts has been placed in the Library.

If any of these institutions have decided not to recruit newly qualified practitioners in 2006 it is not recorded centrally.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Cambodia: Forestry

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department (a) provides and (b) plans to provide support to assist reform of the forestry sector in Cambodia. [129565]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provides £13 million over five years to a natural resource management and livelihoods project in Cambodia managed by the Danish development agency Danida. Under this programme £1.2 million has been allocated to support the Forestry Administration to implement a forestry sector action plan. This will help put in place a supportive policy and regulatory environment for more sustainable management of forests.

Cambodia: Politics and Government

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support his Department provides for civil society and non-governmental organisations in Cambodia. [129567]

Mr. Thomas: Six non-government organisations (NGOs) receive funding from DFID's Civil Society Challenge Fund for activities in Cambodia. These are Christian Outreach, Health Unlimited, Landmine Disability Support, Cambodia Trust, Ockendon International, and World Vision. Total funding for these projects amounts to almost £2.5 million. Mines Advisory Group also receives funding for its projects to raise awareness of the dangers of mines and to support mine clearance.

DFID's health and HIV programmes also fund NGOs to support the delivery of Government services. Under the 'Health Sector Support Project', Save the Children Australia, Swiss Red Cross, CARE Australia, and Health Net International receive funding to manage the delivery of primary health care services. DFID also supports Population Services International (PSI) to promote and distribute condoms under the national HIV strategy; and the NGOs World Education and Co-operation for Sustainable Cambodian Society to provide education about HIV/AIDS. Local NGOs working on HIV/AIDS prevention, care and support also receive funding.

The DFID Livelihoods Programme, implemented through Danish Co-operation (Danida), will agree contracts with a number of NGOs to implement a £7 million civil society component of a larger Danida Livelihoods and Natural Resources programme.

European Development Fund

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department has undertaken a cost-benefit analysis of the (a) European Development Fund and (b) International Development Association. [126873]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is constantly reviewing the performance of organisations to which it gives money. We are trying new ways of assessing the effectiveness of multilateral development organisations in contributing towards the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, to inform our aid allocation decisions. This work includes both quantitative and qualitative assessments of the effectiveness of the European Development Fund and the International Development Association. This work is due to be completed towards the second half of the year.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Select Committees: Witnesses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Leader of the House what assessment he has made of the merits of requiring witnesses to take an oath before giving evidence to Select Committees. [129363]

Mr. Straw: All select committees have the power to take oral evidence on oath (administered, under Standing Order No. 132, by the Chairman or the Clerk of the Committee). It is not usual for such Committees, other than Committees on private or hybrid Bills, to take evidence on oath although this is done on occasion. The Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Code set the requirements for Ministers and civil servants who give evidence to Select Committees.

I have made no specific assessment of the merits of Committees taking evidence on oath more widely. It is a matter on which each Committee is best placed to take a view in the circumstances of the individual case.

Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Leader of the House pursuant to his answer of 21 March 2007, Official Report, column 895W, on Departments: trade unions, if he will ask (a) the Chancellor of the Exchequer and (b) the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to change their policy on answering questions on official meetings in respect of the question from the hon. Member for Maidenhead regarding meetings with trade union representatives in 2006. [130210]

Mr. Straw: No. Ministers are individually responsible for their own answers, which will inevitably vary between Departments.

WALES

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper and publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers and publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic of each was. [129939]

Mr. Hain: Nil.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Coastal Areas: Access

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to include provisions for coastal access for walkers in the proposed Marine Bill. [126833]

Barry Gardiner: The Government's rural manifesto said that action to improve access to the coast would be a priority. We have not yet made any decision on how to take this forward. Natural England has been carrying out detailed research and has recently recommended that the Government should introduce new legislation to enable Natural England to align a "coastal corridor" around the whole coast that people could enjoy with confidence and certainty. We are considering Natural England's advice and intend to issue a public consultation document in the spring.

Departments: Biofuels

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to contribute to meeting the Government's targets on the use of biofuels. [129667]

Ian Pearson: A Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation (RTFO) will be introduced in April 2008 which will require 5 per cent. of fuel sold in the UK to come from a renewable source by 2010.

A number of companies are building, or planning to build, biofuel processing plants in the United Kingdom (UK) which will use UK-grown crops such as oilseed rape, wheat and sugar beet as feedstocks.

Farmers can claim the single payment for biofuel crops grown on set-aside land or where the €45 per hectare energy aid payment is claimed for crops on non-set-aside land.

We are also developing carbon and sustainability standards to encourage supply of fuels giving the greatest environmental benefits. We are pressing the EU to take a lead in establishing internationally agreed standards in this area.

Inland Waterways: Finance

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what recent representations he has received on reductions in British Waterways' grant and its likely effects on the canal system; [130360]

(2) what (a) meetings and (b) discussions he has had with British Waterways and the effect on its budget of the reduction in planned maintenance of canals. [130363]

Barry Gardiner: The Government have received representations from British Waterways as well as a wide range of hon. Members and key stakeholders following reductions in British Waterways' grant. The representations have taken the form of meetings, correspondence and parliamentary questions. In particular, I met a number of hon. Members and stakeholders at the Parliamentary Waterways Group (PWG) on 12 December 2006 and a range of inland waterways representatives and press at the London Boat Show on 11 January 2007.

In the last six months, I have met British Waterways six times in my role as Inland Waterways Minister, including at PWG and the Boat Show. Discussions have included funding and delivery of shared strategic objectives.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much (a) has been spent in the last five years and (b) is expected to be spent in the next five years on canal systems, broken down by canal. [130361]

Barry Gardiner: The following table provides information on the amount spent by British Waterways on canal systems in England and Wales since 2004. Information on spending is not held centrally on a canal-by-canal basis and, therefore, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

England and Wales

[2] For example, repairs and maintenance to principal assets such as bridge repairs, lock chamber repairs, embankments and aqueducts, and culverts.

Comparable figures for spending prior to 2004 are not available due to changes to British Waterways' accounting and computing systems carried out in 2003.

Decisions on the amount spent on future funding for British Waterways canal systems from 2008 onwards will be informed by the 2007 Comprehensive Spending Review settlement.

Information on canal systems not maintained by British Waterways is not held by my Department.

River Wear

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) on which parts of the River Wear voluntary access agreements have been reached on (a) both river banks and (b) a single river bank; [129670]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of voluntary access agreements covering only a single river bank on providing effective access to the River Wear. [129671]

Barry Gardiner: On the River Wear, 9 km of access, from Houghall to the Sands, has been negotiated through the voluntary access project managed by the Environment Agency. All of this has the agreement of landowners on both banks.

The voluntary access project delivered over 70 km of access on four rivers. Of this, only 200 m on the River Mersey is with one river bank owner. There is no evidence to suggest that single bank access is likely to be a feature of many agreements and no assessment of the impact of such access has been made.

TRANSPORT

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what legal advice his Department has received on blue badge holders parking in loading bays; [130244]

(2) what guidance his Department has issued to local authorities in relation to blue badge holders and parking in loading bays. [130245]

Gillian Merron: The rules about using the blue badge in a loading/unloading bay are contained in the Local Authorities' Traffic Orders (Exemptions for Disabled Persons) (England) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/683). This is supplemented by guidance issued to local authorities and badge holders which conveys the Department's policy, which is to prohibit parking by badge holders where there is a ban on loading or unloading.

The Department's legal section has recently reviewed the 2000 regulations on this specific aspect and confirmed that they meet the Department's policy intention.

Cycling: Pilot Schemes

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what lessons have been learned from the six cycling demonstration towns. [129403]

Mr. Tom Harris: The cycling demonstration towns project is now at the halfway stage so it is too soon to assess the full impacts and lessons learned. However, the key lessons learned so far are:

- the success of the project will primarily rest on commitment from senior local authority politicians and officers;
- that commitment needs to extend beyond the lifetime of the project;
- the towns' project managers required support and guidance in the early stages particularly on design of infrastructure and signage;
- funding can unlock significant contributions from developers on cycling infrastructure adding further value to the project;
- the towns that have implemented a co-ordinated approach are yielding the best results.

EC Transport Policy

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which division of his Department is leading engagement with EU authorities to establish a cross-border data sharing process for criminal and administrative matters. [129292]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department's Europe and International Division has responsibility for co-ordinating UK policy on cross-border enforcement of traffic offences.

Exhaust Emissions: EC Action

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's position is on the EU proposals to limit car emissions to 130 g of carbon dioxide per km by 2012. [127311]

Dr. Ladyman: We agree with the European Commission's conclusion that legislation on car efficiency is necessary. The target should be challenging but achievable. A target for average new car tailpipe CO_2 emissions of 130 g/km is, in principle, around the right level. But more work will be necessary to examine the feasibility and impacts of this target (including full impact assessments and consultation) before making any final decisions. Similarly, there will need to be careful consideration of how the target should be structured. We will continue to engage actively in discussions at the EU level, and we will also be calling on the European Commission to develop longer term targets in order to give the car industry greater certainty.

Motor Vehicles: Registration

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate (a) the number of cars registered in a non-EU or non-EEA country being used on the roads in the United Kingdom and (b) the number of such vehicles which have been so used for more than 12 months. [129073]

Dr. Ladyman: Foreign registered vehicles that are temporarily brought into the United Kingdom by overseas residents are usually exempt from UK registration and licensing. The exemptions state that a vehicle which is properly registered and taxed in its home country may be used by the visitor for up to six months in 12 without being subject to domestic registration and licensing requirements.

Any vehicle used in this country for more than six months in any 12 has to be registered and licensed in the normal way.

There is therefore no means to estimate the number of foreign registered vehicles which may be in circulation in the United Kingdom at any one time.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many foreign registered vehicles entered the UK in each of the last 15 years, broken down by port of entry. [129261]

Dr. Ladyman: This Department does not hold the information requested.

Motorway Service Areas

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he is taking to bring to a conclusion the review of policy for service areas and other roadside facilities on motorways and all purpose trunk roads in England; and if he will make a statement; [130223]

(2) when he expects the Highways Agency to report to him on draft revised guidance following the consultation on policy for service areas and other roadside facilities on motorways and all purpose trunk roads in England; [130224]

(3) how long he expects the consultation period to be for the revised proposals on policy for service areas and other roadside facilities on motorways and all purpose trunk roads in England; and when he expects to issue final policy guidance on these matters; [130225]

(4) what the final timetable is for the completion of the remaining stages of the review of policy for service areas and other roadside facilities on motorways and all purpose trunk roads in England. [130229]

Dr. Ladyman: A 12-week public consultation on 'The Review of Policy for Service Areas and other Roadside Facilities on Motorways and All Purpose Trunk Roads' was launched on 16 November 2006 and ended on 8 February 2007.

The Highways Agency is now preparing a report of the responses to this initial consultation and expects to publish it by Easter. A draft policy will then be produced which will be subject to a further six-week public consultation in line with Cabinet Office guidelines.

The aim is to publish the final policy by the autumn.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the reasons are for the time taken to undertake the Highways Agency's consultation on policy for service areas and other roadside facilities on motorways and all purpose trunk roads in England. [130230]

Dr. Ladyman: In line with Cabinet Office guidance, the Highways Agency was obliged to consult fully with relevant stakeholders, collect sufficient evidence and to analyse this in order to produce a draft revised policy for further public consultation.

Parking Offences: Schools

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to enforce the parking restrictions on zig-zag markings outside schools. [130343]

Gillian Merron: Local authorities have the power under the Road Traffic Act 1984 to make Traffic Regulation Orders that, among other things, put in place parking restrictions such as zig-zag markings outside schools. Where a local authority has Decriminalised Parking Enforcement (DPE) power it may enforce a Traffic Regulation Order (TRO). Otherwise it is for the police to enforce.

Public Transport: Greater London

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the role of his Department is in respect of the London Works project; and if he will make a statement. [129572]

Gillian Merron: The Government welcome the development by Transport for London of London Works to assist London's highway authorities in the management of works in the highway across London. The Department for Transport has had no role in its development.

Public Transport: Security

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department has taken to improve security on (a) underground trains, (b) overland trains, (c) rail terminals and (d) bus terminals since 2005. [129164]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department is security regulator for transport industries including the rail network in Great Britain and the London underground. We maintain a risk-driven protective security regime based on assessments of the terrorist threat prepared by the Security Service.

The London attacks in July 2005 necessitated the raising of security measures to their highest level, with a package of supplementary measures deployed by rail and underground operators. In response to the London attacks we also developed, in consultation with industry and the police, specific best practice guidance for the bus and coach sector.

The situation is kept under constant review to ensure that measures remain relevant. We also continue to look at what further practical measures can be taken to protect transport targets.

It is not appropriate to discuss the specific details of our current or any potential future counter-terrorist security measures on public transport to avoid potentially compromising their effectiveness. However, it is important to remember that our rail and underground networks, and bus services, are open systems and it is therefore impracticable to impose the sort of security regimes seen at our airports.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding his Department has made available to (a) Network Rail, (b) Transport for London and (c) British Transport Police to improve transport security since 2005. [129165]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Strategic Rail Authority provided Network Rail with £16.5 million for the capital costs of the London major stations CCTV upgrade. The upgrade comprised the provision of digital recording systems and the replacement of analogue camera systems with digital ones.

Transport for London (TfL) is funded via a block grant and for 2006-07 this will be a total £2.38 billion, a rise of over £700 million from 2003-04. Within this grant it is an operational decision for TfL to determine funding for security.

Most of the funding BTP receives is from the rail industry; however, the DfT provides capital funding. The capital funding BTP received from DfT in 2005-06 and 2006-07 amounted to £12.5 million and £10 million respectively. In addition to this the Department provided £3.6 million as a contribution to the costs of dealing with the London bombings in July 2005. This money was used to fund a variety of capital developments and improvements such as communications and information systems, fleet replacement and modernisation and accommodation improvements. All of this expenditure improved the capacity of BTP to detect and prevent crime and to improve the security and safety of the railways.

Rail Link: Penrith-Keswick

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with his consideration of plans for a new railway line between Penrith and Keswick in Cumbria; and if he will make a statement. [129864]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department for Transport has not, to my knowledge, received a business case in relation to this proposal. Without a business case it is not possible to consider the proposal or make any kind of statement. The business case would need to detail the scheme and the proposed sources of funding and demonstrate that it offered value for money.

Railways: Greater London

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the Mayor of London on London rail services. [125894]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Secretary of State and the Mayor spoke about London rail services on 21 March in the context of discussions regarding the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007.

Railways: Passengers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the expected change in train passenger numbers over the next 10 years is; and what steps his Department plans to take to deal with increases in such estimates. [129678]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department for Transport is in the course of assessing the future volume of train passenger numbers as part of the analysis underpinning the forthcoming High Level Output Specification, which will specify the improvements that the Secretary of State wishes to secure over the period 2009-14.

Railways: Portsmouth

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the recent disruption to the rail network in the Portsmouth area. [130133]

Mr. Tom Harris: Stagecoach South Western has had detailed discussions with Network Rail regarding the continued engineering overrun in the Portsmouth area.

Stagecoach South Western has made changes to its timetable to ensure that it is able to maintain the best service given the restrictions to access.

This also applies to Southern and First Great Western regarding their services in the Portsmouth area.

Railways: South East Region

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the strategy for reducing overcrowding on trains in the South East is; and if he will make a statement. [130103]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Government will continue to take steps to increase the capacity of the railways through the franchising process, and through the High Level Output Specification (HLOS) and the longer term strategy framework, both of which will be published this summer 2007.

Additional capacity can be provided in a number of different ways and the rail industry will respond to the HLOS in October 2007 with proposals for optimum interventions tailored to specific routes.

Railways: Thames Valley

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1455W, on Railways: Thames Valley, on what basis future likely passenger demand is being assessed; what methods are being used to derive these figures; and whether data for the work are being derived from passenger surveys. [130239]

Mr. Tom Harris: Passenger demand forecasts for the railway are derived from industry standard forecasting tools which draw upon forecasts of population and employment changes, economic growth and other related factors. Demand data upon which future forecasts are based are derived from analysis of ticket sales and passenger counts and surveys, such as the London Area Travel Surveys (LATS).

Railways: Timetables

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether Network Rail has a statutory duty to publish a national rail timetable in hard copy. [130404]

Mr. Tom Harris: Network Rail's network licence places an obligation on it to "publish or procure the publication of a national timetable of railway passenger services".

Network Rail currently discharges this obligation by producing a national rail timetable in A5 format.

Any decision to change the content, publication and distribution of the national rail timetable is the responsibility of Network Rail.

The hon. Member should contact Network Rail's chief executive at the following address for an answer to her question:

John Armitt
Chief Executive
[redacted]

Rapid Transit Systems

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on the development of ultra-light rail systems in new sustainable communities. [129112]

Mr. Tom Harris: Department for Transport Ministers regularly meet with ministerial colleagues in the course of performing their ministerial duties. It is not the normal practice of the Government to release details of meetings.

Renault Cars

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many representations have been received by the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency requesting the recall of Renault Clio/Campus cars in relation to concerns about design of the bonnet catch mechanism; and what steps are being taken; [130186]

(2) whether his Department plans to investigate reports of a design fault to the bonnet mechanism of Renault Clios manufactured between 1998 and 2005. [130187]

Dr. Ladyman: The Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) has received two requests to recall Renault Clio II vehicles to address concerns about the bonnet catches.

VOSA has checked both the main catch and the safety catch of Renault Clio II vehicles and has found no evidence of a design or construction defect. The evidence indicates that any problems are most likely to be due to inadequate maintenance and incorrect closing of the bonnet.

We understand that Renault has nevertheless agreed to contact all Renault Clio II customers as soon as is practicable inviting them to have a free check carried out at their nearest Renault dealership. We also understand that where poor maintenance is detected—and the bonnet catch mechanism has suffered resulting damage—Renault will replace the mechanism free of charge as a gesture of good will.

Road Charging

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1456W, on tolls, whether a (a) privacy impact assessment and (b) regulatory impact assessment has been produced on the implementation of EU Directive 2004/52/EC. [129869]

Dr. Ladyman: A regulatory impact assessment has been produced and will be published on the Department for Transport website shortly. The parts of this directive that have been transposed into UK law are about technology and have no impact on privacy. The aspects of the Directive concerning the European Electronic Tolling Service, or EETS, have yet to be defined by the European Commission.

Roads: Repairs and Maintenance

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the most recent appraisal summary table for each road scheme in the targeted programme of improvements. [124399]

Dr. Ladyman: I have arranged for appraisal summary tables for each road scheme in the targeted programme of improvements to be placed in the House Library.

Street Clutter

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken to reduce street clutter erected by local highway authorities. [129089]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport recognises that over-provision or poor design of signs and street furniture can lead to clutter. We therefore encourage local authorities to avoid unnecessary street clutter through our Local Transport Plan guidance and through the design guidance we provide. Guidance on minimising clutter is given in the Traffic Signs Manual and in the "Streets for All" guides produced with English Heritage.

We are strengthening our guidance in new publications such as the Manual for Streets, which will encourage a fresh approach to residential street design; good practice guidance on the use of pedestrian guardrails; and guidance on how to reduce the impact of traffic management measures on the street scene.

Trains: Bicycles

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on the provision of reasonable facilities for cyclists on board new railway and light rail and tram rolling stock and at stations. [129404]

Mr. Tom Harris: The responsibility for the design of new rolling stock and the carriage of bikes on trains rests with individual train operating companies (TOCs). All TOCs currently carry folding bikes on trains at all times and the Government encourage TOCs to carry non-folding bikes whenever possible. Non-folding bikes are not carried on light rail services.

We also encourage all train operators to provide secure cycle parking at stations in 2004-05. DfT funded a Strategic Rail Authority project to provide an additional 2,500 cycle parking spaces with shelters and CCTV at over 100 stations as part of a project to improve cycle parking capacity on the rail network.

We have asked Cycling England, our advisory body on cycling to report on ways to better integrate bike and rail travel. It is due to report later this year.

Transport: Schools

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he provides on school travel plans; and what resources are available from his Department for implementing the guidance. [129402]

Gillian Merron: Guidance on the development and implementation of school travel plans was included in 'Travelling to School: a good practice guide', published by the Department for Transport in September 2003. Additional guidance is provided by school travel advisers and regional school travel advisers.

As part of the 'Travelling to School' project, the Department for Transport and Department for Education and Skills are providing £7.5 million a year joint funding to local authorities to enable them to employ a network of around 250 school travel advisers, who work with schools to help them develop and implement school travel plans. The school travel advisers are supported by regional school travel advisers.

In addition, DfES is providing up to £20 million a year for small capital grants for schools with approved school travel plans (£5,000 for a typical primary and £10,000 for a typical secondary school).

Transport: Urban Areas

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the comparative safety record of the operation of lightweight trams, light rail and buses in urban areas. [129111]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Government annually record and publish information concerning safety incidents in relation to the operation of lightweight trams, light rail and buses.

For specific public transport schemes for which departmental funding is required, safety issues are also integral to the New Approach To Appraisal (NATA) process when assessing the benefits of the proposal.

SCOTLAND

Budget

7. Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the First Minister on the impact of the Budget on Scotland. [128981]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have regular discussions with the First Minister on a range of issues. My right hon. Friend's Budget last week is a good Budget for Scotland and a good Budget for all of the UK. It tackles our long-term challenges and has been welcomed publicly by key Scottish industries.

13. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Treasury following the latest Budget statement as it affects Scotland. [128987]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have regular discussions with Treasury Ministers on a range of issues.

Post Office Network

8. Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the future of the post office network in Scotland. [128982]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on a range of issues.

15. John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the future of the post office network in Scotland. [128989]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on a range of issues.

Economic Activity

9. John McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his latest assessment is of the level of economic activity in Scotland. [128983]

David Cairns: The most recent data from the Office of National Statistics showed the economic activity rate to be 80.3 per cent.—a record high. This means that not only are there more people in work in Scotland today than ever before, but also there are more people seeking to join the labour force.

10. Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Chancellor of the Exchequer to discuss the economic performance of Scotland. [128984]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have regular meetings with my right hon. Friend to discuss a range of issues. The Scottish economy is currently growing at above the long-term trend rate, record numbers of people are employed and more people are participating in the labour market than ever before.

Financial Services

11. Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to secure the long-term future of the financial services sector in Scotland. [128985]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend's decision to cut corporation tax directly addresses the concerns raised by the financial services sector when I have met them recently. Furthermore, recognising the significance of the sector in Scotland, the Chancellor invited me to join his high-level group on financial services. I am now currently working with the industry preparing a paper for the Chancellor's Group on what more can be done to support financial services in Scotland and win new investment and jobs.

New Deal

12. Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the new deal in Scotland. [128986]

David Cairns: Since 1997 employment in Scotland is up by over 246,000, long-term claimant unemployment is close to its lowest for 30 years and long-term youth unemployment has been significantly reduced.

The new deal in Scotland has contributed to this success by helping more than 200,000 people into work.

Manufacturing Exports

14. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the First Minister to discuss manufacturing exports from Scotland. [128988]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have regular meetings with the First Minister where a range of issues are discussed. Scottish Executive data show that 2006 saw an annual increase in manufactured exports—the first increase in five years.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

British Food

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of food served in (a) buildings occupied by his Department and (b) schools in England and Wales was of British origin in (i) 2005 and (ii) 2006. [111128]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not held by the Department.

Children In Care

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the commissioning process is for looked-after children services, with particular reference to the length of contract and conditions for renewal; what the conditions for the tendering process are; and if he will make a statement. [127035]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department does not mandate a single commissioning process for looked-after children services. Each top tier local authority operates a commissioning process in accordance with their standing orders, any relevant European procurement requirements and their obligations in the Children Act 1989. Issues such as length of contract, conditions for renewal and tendering processes are therefore at local authority discretion.

The Department has, however, taken steps to support better commissioning across the whole of children's services. These include publishing the "Joint Planning and Commissioning Framework for Children, Young People and Maternity Services", supporting a working group led by local authorities and provider organisations developing standardised national contracts for independent and non-maintained special schools and residential care, and developing children in care regional commissioning pilots, which will support local authorities by making available a choice of placements for each child, leaving final decisions about individual placements in the hands of social workers, in discussion with children themselves.

Children: Day Care

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) private, voluntary and independent and (b) state sector child care places closed in each year since 1997. [126187]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 8 March 2007]: The information requested about child care places broken down by sector is not available.

The following table provides information for all types of day care provider.

Ofsted has also produced figures on the numbers of registered child care providers and places on a quarterly basis from March 2003. Its latest figures were published in its report "Registered Childcare Providers and Places, December 2006", which is available on its website, www.Ofsted.gov.uk/.

As these two tables show, there have been substantial net increases in child care places over this period.

Curriculum Review

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what terms of reference were set by his Department for the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority in relation to the secondary curriculum review. [128474]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority was asked to undertake a review of the key stage 3 curriculum to enable schools to have the flexibility to meet better students' individual needs and strengths. It was asked to review the content of all core and foundation subjects and to focus in particular on those subjects that were content heavy, namely history, geography, science, design and technology, citizenship and the non-statutory framework for personal, social and health education. QCA was also asked to consider the implications on key stage 3 English, mathematics and ICT of the review of these subjects at key stage 4, including the definition of functional skills.

Curriculum: Languages

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which foreign languages were studied by pupils in Tamworth constituency at (a) GCSE level, (b) A/S level and (c) A-level in 2006. [128337]

Jim Knight: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Pupils at the end of key stage 4 attending secondary schools located in Tamworth constituency were entered for GCSEs in the following modern foreign languages:

French;
German;
Spanish;
Modern Greek;
Chinese.

(b) Students aged 16 to 18 attending secondary schools and further education sector colleges located in Tamworth constituency in 2006 were entered for GCE AS-levels in the following modern foreign languages:

French;
German;
Italian.

(c) Students aged 16 to 18 attending schools and further education sector colleges located in Tamworth constituency in 2006 were entered for GCE A-levels in the following modern foreign languages:

French;
German;
Chinese.

Educational Psychologists

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the supply of educational psychologists. [129960]

Mr. Dhanda: Educational psychologists (EPs) are employed by local authorities, and it is for those authorities to determine how many to employ in light of their assessment of local needs and available resources, and to plan for future needs. The Department does not undertake any manpower planning assessment for this group of local employees.

The full-time equivalent number of EPs in post in local authorities in England, as at January 2006, was 2,200, with 109 full-time vacancies.

Employer Training Pilots

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 18 December 2006, Official Report, column 1498W, which companies have signed Train to Gain contracts; how many staff each company employs; and how many of these staff will receive Train to Gain funded training. [128573]

Phil Hope: Train to Gain is a new service aimed at supporting businesses in improving their productivity through increased investment in the skills of their workforce. Skills brokers conduct an organisational needs analysis to understand the problems facing the company. They then source the most appropriate training provider to meet that needs analysis giving the employer a real choice in the selection of the training provider. Skills brokers then help the company put together a fully costed action plan, setting out the likely levels of public subsidy together with any investment from the employer. Employers do not sign a contract but do enter into a non-contractual agreement setting out their commitment to the delivery of the action plan. By the end of January 2007, more than 25,000 employers have engaged with Train to Gain with more than 90,000 employees starting on a course of training.

Higher Education: Student Numbers

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many UK-domiciled students were studying for a (a) full-time and (b) part-time undergraduate degree in each British university in 2006, broken down by income decile of their parents. [129408]

Bill Rammell: Data on the number of UK domiciled students at each British university are not available broken down by parental income.

Information and Communications Technology: Employment

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the percentage of IT degree graduates who went into careers in IT in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [129672]

Bill Rammell: The available information on the destination of graduates is taken from the Destination of Leavers from Higher Education (DLHE) survey collected annually by the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA). The DLHE survey collects information on the first destination of graduates six months after qualifying. The latest figures are shown in the table for students qualifying in the 2004/05 academic year. Figures for the destinations of students qualifying in the 2005/06 academic year will be available in summer 2007. The table shows that, of those computer science graduates in employment, 3,200 or 41.6 per cent. of them were working in an IT occupation.

Language and Literacy

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what support is provided to early years providers and primary schools to ensure an effective transition for children from the Foundation Stage to the National Curriculum for (a) speech, language and communication and (b) reading and literacy; and if he will make a statement; [129880]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the recommendations made by Ofsted in its report "The Foundation Stage" on (a) guidance on (i) raising standards in communication, language and literacy, (ii) supporting the achievement of boys and (iii) providing effective challenge for more able children and (b) training by local authorities on improving the links between communication, language and literacy and other areas of learning; and if he will make a statement; [129881]

(3) what support his Department provides to assist staff working in early years settings to raise standards in the provision of support to children for communication, language and literacy needs; and if he will make a statement. [130002]

Jim Knight: The Government welcome the recent Ofsted report and accept many of the recommendations. Evidence in this report was collected before the launch last September of the new programme of high quality phonics work to address the findings of Jim Rose's review of early reading. We are confident that this programme will deliver higher standards of communication, language and literacy skills.

The "Curriculum Guidance for the Foundation Stage" already makes it clear that practitioners should plan a curriculum that helps all children to make good progress towards the early learning goals and, where appropriate, beyond. The Department has reinforced this by producing guidance on the identification of gifted and talented children and by asking the Primary National Strategy to produce guidance on better support for boys' learning. The "Early Years Foundation Stage" (EYFS) which takes effect in September 2008 and replaces the Foundation Stage guidance will set out equally clear expectations for all children.

The Department has produced a training package, "Communicating Matters", to help local authorities to support staff working in early years settings to raise standards in communication and language. In addition, the Primary National Strategy will shortly publish a new document to replace "Progression in Phonics" and "Playing with Sounds" which will support effective phonics teaching from the EYFS through to the end of key stage 1. Training and briefing for practitioners emphasises the links and interdependencies between all the areas of learning and development.

The EYFS and the "Primary Framework for literacy and mathematics" which support planning progression and personalisation of learning have been developed in parallel, with relevant sections of each mirroring the other to ensure that there is continuity between the EYFS and key stage 1. In conjunction with the Primary National Strategy, the Department has also produced guidance on the importance of providing continuity of experience for young children and their families.

Languages: Education

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the standard of difficulty of modern language (a) GCSEs and (b) A-levels. [129679]

Jim Knight: There has been no recent assessment of the standard of difficulty of modern language (a) GCSEs and (b) A-levels. However, Lord Dearing's Languages Review, published on 12 March, considers the view that languages GCSEs are more demanding than other subjects, and that this perception has a negative impact on the number of pupils continuing to study languages post-14. He recommends that there is a study to resolve this issue as soon as possible. The Secretary of State has welcomed Lord Dearing's recommendations and we are considering how to take this recommendation forward.

Ofsted

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many members of staff of Ofsted have made formal complaints of bullying in the last 12 months; [127625]

(2) how many grievances were raised by staff at Ofsted in each of the last three years; [127626]

(3) how much Ofsted spent on (a) in-house training and (b) external training in each of the last three years; [127627]

(4) what the total cost of consultants employed by Ofsted was in each of the last three years; [127628]

(5) how many consultants were contracted to work for Ofsted in each of the last three years. [127629]

Jim Knight [holding answer 15 March 2007]: These matters are for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of her reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Christine Gilbert, dated 15 March 2007:

Your recent parliamentary questions have been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply. I will address these in turn:

I. You asked how many members of staff have made formal complaints of bullying in the last 12 months (PQ127625).

Of the 20 grievances raised between February 2006 and February 2007, four have related to "bullying and harassment". Of these, two have been heard and the grievance was not upheld, in one case the individual resigned before the hearing took place and a decision is pending on the fourth. This compares to seven complaints of bullying and harassment in 2004-2005; two in 2003-2004 and one in 2002-2003.

The increase in the number of complaints has partly been due to a revised bullying and harassment policy and initiatives implemented following Ofsted's 2004 staff survey results. These raised awareness of this issue and encouraged individuals to come forward with concerns they had. This issue remains a priority for Ofsted.

II. You asked how many grievances have been raised by staff at Ofsted in each of the last three years (PQ127626).

Until fairly recently, Ofsted has not kept records of all types of grievance. Those relating to bullying and harassment are on file as these are reported in our equal opportunities reports. Ofsted started collecting general grievance data as of November 2005 and our data therefore reflects this period onwards.

From the data we hold, we are able to report that, over the last 16 months, we have 22 grievances in total from members of staff (this figure includes the 20 grievances noted in response to PQ127625). Four of these were from the same individual, one was a collective grievance (from four members of staff) and the others were all individual one-off grievances.

III You asked how much Ofsted spent on (a) in-house training and (b) external training in each of the last three years (PQ127627).

The following internal costs (rounded to the nearest £5k) include a programme of courses that have been developed specifically for an Ofsted audience; these include management development, IT skills and nationally supported qualifications such as specialist degrees. They also include the cost of our corporate learning and development team:

	Internal	External	£ Total
2004-05	1,585,000	1,135,000	2,720,000
2005-06	1,645,000	930,000	2,575,000
2006-07	1,540,000	560,000	2,100,000

IV. You asked what the total cost of consultants employed by Ofsted was in each of the last three years (PQ127628) and how many consultants have been contracted to work for Ofsted in each of the last three years (PQ127629).

Based on the DfES definition of consultancy services, which is "investigating problems, providing analysis or advice, or assisting with the development of new systems, new structures or new capabilities within the organisation", we will have spent around £2.5 million (including VAT) in the financial year 2006-07. This spend is through 42 consultants.

Within this total around three quarters is for Information Services related consultancy to build new systems ready for the creation of the New Ofsted with effect from 1 April 2007. The remainder covers other corporate areas such as estates, personnel and finance.

Due to the way in which Ofsted has previously prepared our accounts, this is the only year for which a separately identifiable consultancy figure is available.

A copy of these replies have been sent to Jim Knight MP, Minister of State for Schools, and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of pupils left pupil referral units to enter (a) special schools and (b) mainstream schools in each year between 1997 and 2006, broken down by local authority. [127855]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of pupils at pupil referral units were issued with a national record of achievement in each year between 1997 and 2006, broken down by local authority. [127856]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Both the national record of achievement (NRA) and its successor, Progress File, were made available on a voluntary basis. While over 70 per cent. of secondary schools and many colleges ordered Progress File materials, our distribution records do not distinguish pupil referral units from other educational establishments.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils at pupil referral units there were with pupils numbers of (a) under five, (b) between five to 10, (c) between 10 to 20, (d) between 20 to 30, (e) between 30 to 40, (f) between 40 to 50, (g) between 50 to 80, (h) between 80 to 100 and (i) over 100 in each year between 1997 and 2006. [127858]

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupil referral units there were in each year between 1997 and 2006, broken down by local authority. [127859]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Pupils: Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what additional revenue support has been allocated in 2006-07 to assist children in mainstream schools with severe behavioural problems. [127942]

Jim Knight: Information on additional revenue support to assist children in mainstream schools with severe behavioural problems is not collected centrally.

In 2006-07, for the first time, schools received their funding from a Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) rather than as part of the local government settlement. The DSG is a ring-fenced grant and must be used for schools' budgets. It is for each local authority to distribute funding using a locally agreed formula, and for schools' governing bodies to decide how to spend the available resources.

Pupils: Clothing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of Muslim schoolgirls who wear a veil at school. [129406]

Jim Knight: The Department has not made any estimate of the number of Muslim schoolgirls wearing a veil at school.

Qualifications and Curriculum Authority

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the contribution of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority futures initiative to the secondary curriculum review. [128317]

Jim Knight: The information gathered from the futures initiative through consultation with stakeholders, such as employers, subject associations, head teachers and young people, helped to inform QCA's proposals for the secondary curriculum review.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library copies of advice sent to (a) him and (b) other Ministers by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority since 14 December 2006. [128806]

Jim Knight: There is an agreed protocol for publishing advice to Ministers from the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority. Any such advice since 14 December 2006 and during the first four months of 2007 is due to be published on the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority's website in June 2007.

I will write to the hon. Member when the advice is published.

School Sports

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding his Department made available for school sports facilities in (a) Tamworth and (b) England in each of the last five years. [129996]

Jim Knight: Data at the level requested are not held centrally. The capital funding for investment in school buildings—including sports facilities—is set out in the following table:

	England (£ billion)	Staffordshire[1] (£ million)
2002-03	3.3	32.9

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of 11-year-olds have no secondary school within two miles of their home; and how their interests will be taken into account under the guidance of the new Schools Admission Code. [128460]

Jim Knight: The percentage of 11-year-olds with no secondary school within two miles of their home is given in the following table. These distances are measured as a straight line between home and school.

School Census, January 2006

The new School Admissions Code rules out the use of unfair admission criteria, and encourages admission authorities for schools to consider how they can ensure fair access to schools for all children in their area. Local authorities must provide free home-to-school transport for secondary pupils attending their nearest suitable school where the school is beyond the statutory walking distance of three miles.

The Education and Inspections Act 2006 extends rights to free home-to-school transport to a choice of three maintained schools and academies for children from low-income families (defined as those whose children are entitled to free school meals or who are in receipt of their maximum level of working tax credit) where they live between two and six miles from their chosen school. This will remove the lack of affordable transport as a barrier to choice for these families.

Schools: Transport

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total central funding to local authorities, via all mechanisms, for school transport is in 2006-07; how much central funding each local authority has received for school transport; what total sum has been spent by local authorities and central Government on school transport; and how much revenue has been raised from parental contribution to defray the cost of school transport in each local authority area. [128677]

Jim Knight: This question has been passed to the Department as it has responsibility for collecting information from local authorities about school transport expenditure.

Central funding of local authorities for home-to-school transport is included within formula grant. This can be used on a range of services provided by authorities, and the way in which it is calculated does not make it possible to say that a certain amount is for school transport costs.

Local authorities submit financial information to the Department;

1. specifying their planned expenditure on school transport, and

2. after the financial year has ended to show the actual expenditure.

For 2006-07 the total planned expenditure on school transport by local authorities in England is £889,101,657. Anticipated income is £9,502,934 which includes, but may not be entirely made up of, parental contributions. The table provided shows the information broken down by individual local authority.

It is not possible to supply the actual amounts spent and raised in 2006-07 as this data will not be supplied to the Department until later this year.

Secondary Education: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 36W, on secondary education: curriculum, whether he expects Ofsted to take into account non-statutory guidance accompanying the National Curriculum when inspecting a school. [127934]

Jim Knight: Ofsted inspectors are required by the framework for inspection to evaluate the extent to which learning programmes match learners' aspirations and potential, building on their prior attainment and experience, and how far the curriculum meets external requirements and is responsive to local circumstances. External requirements are those of the National Curriculum, but inspectors would also be aware of other guidance received by schools. The Chief Inspector will consider what if any additional advice needs to be provided to inspectors in the light of guidance issued to schools.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 36W, on secondary education: curriculum (1) whether the regional events planned by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority will be open to the general public; [127935]

(2) how the regional events planned by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority will be publicised. [127936]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority's regional events are being run with local authorities and are designed for specific audiences. For example, two of the regional events will be for parents. Local authorities are hosting the events and it is they who are inviting delegates to attend. QCA will also be running seminars and exhibiting at the Education Show later this month which is widely attended by parents and teachers. All those with an interest in the consultation can complete the response form online at www.qca.org.uk/secondarycurriculumreview/.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 36W, on secondary education: curriculum, what the purpose was of the visit of the Director of Curriculum to South Africa. [127937]

Jim Knight: The purpose of the visit of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority's Director of Curriculum to South Africa was to inform them about the curriculum and qualifications in England, to learn more about their curriculum and to share examples of good practice. The visit was at the request of the Western Cape Education Department, who are interested in learning from our curriculum experience.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library the (a) agendas and (b) minutes of meetings of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority Secondary Curriculum Review External Committee. [128728]

Jim Knight: The Department has no plans to ask the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority to release the agendas and minutes of its Secondary Curriculum Review External Committee.

Secondments

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which staff in his Department are (a) seconded from organisations with charitable status and (b) have (i) costs and (ii) salaries met (A) in part and (B) in whole from (1) public funds and (2) by the charity from which they are seconded. [102409]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department currently has a total of 83 inward secondments the vast majority of which are from organisations in the wider public sector. The costs and salaries for inward secondments to the Department are met in full from public funds by the business unit engaging them.

There is no current requirement on Departments to formally collect information on the status of organisations to determine whether they have charitable status.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library a copy of the draft guidance on Planning and Developing Special Educational Provision issued for consultation on 8 March 2007. [127381]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

Teachers: Primary Education

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students qualified to become primary school teachers in each of the last five years; and how many vacancies for primary school teachers there were that period. [128336]

Jim Knight: The numbers of primary trainee teachers gaining qualified teacher status (QTS) in academic years, 2000/01 to 2004/05, the latest year for which information is available, are shown in the following table:

Primary teachers gaining qualified teacher status by academic year

	Number of teachers
2000/01	10,540
2001/02	10,720
2002/03	11,930
2003/04	12,470
2004/05	12,690

The numbers of vacancies for nursery and primary school teachers for January in years, 2001 to 2005 are shown in the following table:

Full-time vacancies in local authority maintained schools in England: January of each year

	Nursery and primary[1,2]
2001	2,110
2002	1,800
2003	1,110
2004	780
2005	740

[1] The vacancies are only those available on the date of the survey in January. They are advertised vacancies for full-time permanent appointments of at least one-term duration and include those being covered on a temporary basis by a teacher with a contract of less than one term.
[2] In January 2006, there were 710 vacancies in nursery and primary schools in England. However, the information on the number of trainee teachers gaining QTS for 2005/06 is yet to be published.

Source:
618g survey

The number of people to be trained to be teachers each year is calculated taking account of the forecast demand for teachers due to pupil numbers, teacher wastage, returnees and retirements and new curriculum pressures. This will inevitably be greater than the number of vacancies at the single point in January when vacancy statistics are counted. Most vacancies will be filled by schools as from the start of the academic year in September and therefore will not be shown as such at the single point in January when vacancy statistics are counted. The January figure is therefore a reflection of posts that are unfilled at that time, not of vacancies that have become available and been filled during the year.

Teaching Assistants: County Durham

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teaching assistants there are in County Durham; and how many there were in 1997. [128856]

Jim Knight: The following table provides the full-time equivalent number of teaching assistants employed in local authority maintained schools in the former County Durham local authority area in January 1997 and 2006.

Full-time equivalent teaching assistants in local authority maintained schools in former County Durham, Darlington and Durham, January 1997 and 2006

Durham and Darlington local authorities were created as separate local authorities with responsibilities for education on 1 April 1997. Prior to this date figures for Durham and Darlington were included in the former County Durham local authority area.

Third Sector Forum

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects the minutes of the Third Sector Forum for Children and Young People which took place on 22 January to be published; and what the reason is for the delay in the publication. [129879]

Mr. Dhanda: The notes from the meetings of the DfES Third Sector Forum for Children and Young People's Services held on 22 January 2007 will be made public on 26 March. They will be found on the Every Child Matters website through the Strategy and Governance section on the Third Sector Forum page. The reason for the delay in the publication is administrative oversight.

Young People: Antisocial Behaviour

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of community sport and cultural activities funded by his Department in engaging young people most at risk of committing antisocial behaviour. [128265]

Jim Knight: Although the funding of community sport and cultural activities is primarily the concern of the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, youth work providers do use sport and cultural activities in the process of working with young people—sometimes utilising funding issued by the DfES.

The main DfES programme working in this way has been the Positive Activities for Young People programme (PAYP). Between April 2003 and March 2006 PAYP engaged 250,000 young people (85 per cent. of whom were classified as being 'at risk') in constructive leisure time activities. 47 per cent. of the activities were sport or arts based. The evaluation of PAYP found that the programme had achieved a range of positive outcomes for participating young people, including contributing to reductions in criminal and antisocial behaviour, supporting people back into education, and offering opportunities for personal development.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has undertaken of (a) how far youth activities meet the demands of people and (b) the impact on the provision of youth activities on preventing involvement in antisocial behaviour. [128269]

Jim Knight: The Youth Matters green paper (2005) set out a range of proposals for youth activities and support. The subsequent consultation drew a strong and positive response—including from over 19,000 young people.

The Education and Inspection Act 2006 introduced a new duty on local authorities to secure young people's access to positive activities. The duty also requires local authorities to consult young people about local positive activities, including the need for new provision and any access issues, and to take these views into account.

Activities for young people are one of the key elements of the Respect Action plan for tackling antisocial behaviour. Such youth activities contribute to the prevention of a range of negative outcomes, including involvement in antisocial behaviour. For example, the evaluation of the Positive Activities for Young People programme (PAYP) found that the programme had achieved a range of positive outcomes for participating young people, including contributing to reductions in criminal and antisocial behaviour, supporting people back into education, and offering opportunities for personal development.

Young People: Education and Training

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many young people not in employment, education or training there were in Hampshire in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [117373]

(2) when he will answer question number 117373, on young people, tabled by the hon. Member for Basingstoke on 17 January 2007. [129615]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 23 January 2007]: The following table gives the estimated number and percentage of 16 to 18-year-olds not in education, employment or training (NEET) in the South Central Connexions Partnership area in every year since 2002. The South Central area includes the local authorities of Hampshire, Isle of Wight, Portsmouth and Southampton.

Estimated number and percentage of 16 to 18-year-olds in South Central Connexions Partnership area who were not in education, employment or training, November 2002-05

	Number	Percentage
2002	3,070	5.2
2003	3,340	5.8
2004	2,720	4.7
2005	3,630	6.1

These figures are drawn from the operational client management systems maintained by Connexions services. It only includes those people known to the service (about 85 per cent. of the population); some young people who attended independent schools or were at school outside England are excluded. The age relates to those of calendar year age 16-18 on the date of measurement.

This NEET measure is that used for setting and monitoring Connexions performance. The definition differs from that used to measure the national departmental PSA NEET target. Along with not covering the entire population, the Connexions NEET measure excludes those on gap years, or in custody. The PSA measure is for academic rather than calendar age 16-18.

The Department has a target to reduce the proportion of 16 to 18-year-olds NEET by 2 percentage points by 2010.

There is a close alignment between poor educational attainment pre-16 and the likelihood of becoming NEET between the ages of 16 and 18. Our 14-19 reforms are aimed at raising attainment levels, and ensuring that as many young people as possible remain in education and training up to the age of 18.

Youth Matters set out a series of reforms aimed at improving the way in which services work together to support young people particularly those most at risk of underachieving.

Youth Work: Finance

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who the recipients of grants made by the National Voluntary Youth Organisation grant programme are; and how much was paid to each recipient for each year between 1997 and 2006. [130295]

Mr. Dhanda: The NVYO grant scheme is a three-year cycle of funding. The current cycle covers the three years 2005-08. Individual awards, including separate amounts for the three years involved are shown in the first table. Total amounts only are available for the 2002-05 scheme and these are shown in the second table.

Figures prior to 2002 are not readily available.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Brownfield Sites

23. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she next expects to meet representatives of planning authorities to discuss building on brownfield sites. [129837]

Meg Munn: I and my ministerial colleagues meet the Local Government Association regularly to discuss a range of matters. But there are no current plans to meet them to discuss this specific subject.

Coalfield Communities

25. Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on regeneration in coalfield communities. [129839]

Yvette Cooper: English Partnership's Coalfield Programme, the Coalfields Regeneration Trust and the Coalfields Enterprise Fund are delivering real change including 16,000 jobs so far as well as new homes, skills and community support.

Housing

26. Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what work her Department is undertaking in response to the report by John Hills on the future of housing. [129840]

Ruth Kelly: John Hills' report is a significant contribution to the debate about the role of social housing. My Department is developing a programme of work to address the challenges raised in John's report. We will bring forward our detailed proposals in due course.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Building (Amendment) Regulations 2001 and the Building (Approved Inspectors etc.) (Amendment) Regulations 2001 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125615]

Angela E. Smith: The Building (Amendment) Regulations 2001 and the Building (Approved Inspectors etc.) (Amendment) Regulations 2001 Regulations implemented changes to Parts H (drainage and waste disposal), J (combustion appliances and fuel storage systems) and L (conservation of fuel and power) of the Building Regulations.

A Regulatory Impact Assessment was carried out and is on the Department's website. It gives the following estimates of costs and benefits:

Part H	£ million
One off cost to business:	0
One off cost to regulators	0
Recurring cost to business	94
Recurring cost to regulators	0

Note:
The annual benefits were estimated at £177 million

Part J	£ million
One off cost to business	0.32
One off cost to regulators	0
Recurring cost to business	22
Recurring cost to regulators	0

Note:
The annual benefits were estimated at £30 million

Part L	£ million
One off cost to business	0
One off cost to regulators	0
Recurring cost to business	159
Recurring cost to regulators	0

Note:
The annual benefits were estimated at £237 million

As is clear above, the changes in each case were shown to deliver substantial health and safety and energy efficiency benefits which far outweighed the costs. It was estimated that the costs to regulators would be nil or minimal since these were amendments to existing provisions.

Local Government

27. Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on the recent Comprehensive Performance Assessment ratings for councils in England. [129841]

Meg Munn: The Comprehensive Performance Assessment 2006 results showed that:

79 per cent. of councils achieve three or four star performance;

77 per cent. of councils are improving strongly or improving well;

No councils are in the bottom Comprehensive Performance Assessment category.

The improvements in performance that local government continue to make has paved the way for the proposals for the new performance framework, outlined in our White Paper 'Strong and prosperous communities'.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what date the Lifting Burdens taskforce is expected to publish its final report; and what the timetable is for the implementation of its recommendations. [129272]

Mr. Woolas: The Lifting Burdens taskforce plans to have a rolling programme of reviews looking at the requirements relating to individual Government Departments, service areas or outcomes. It is anticipated that these reviews will be published at regular intervals over the next two years.

As the taskforce carries out further reviews, it is envisaged that the Government Department(s) that are the originators of specific individual reporting items will respond to the relevant set of recommendations after consideration of each review.

Local Government Funding

28. Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent representations she has received on the funding formula for allocating grants to local authorities. [129842]

Mr. Woolas: During the recent consultation on the 2007-08 local government finance settlement, 169 representations were received from local authorities, local authority groups and hon. Members.

29. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans the Government have to take forward the recommendations of the Lyons report. [129843]

Mr. Woolas: Sir Michael's report is substantial and wide-ranging and concludes there is no "golden key" solution. The Budget has set out the Government's position on a number of his short term recommendations. Sir Michael's individual recommendations will inform, and be taken account of within, the ongoing development of Government policy.

Flood Plains: Building

30. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes she expects to be built in the next five years on land in natural flood plains. [129844]

Yvette Cooper: Planning Policy Statement 25 (PPS25) is clear that only a very restricted range of development that is water-compatible or essential infrastructure should be permitted on the functional flood plain. In other flood risk areas, if the sequential risk-based approach set out in PPS25 shows that development cannot be directed to lower risk sites, the planning authority should test whether the need for the housing outweighs the flood risk, and it will be safe, taking into account the expected impacts of climate change, the ongoing availability of defences and the application of other flood risk reduction measures.

Business Rates Valuations

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 15 January 2007, Official Report, column 848W, on business rates valuations, what the timetable is for the completion of the feasibility study on using automated valuation modelling. [127109]

Ruth Kelly: It is expected that this exploratory work will be completed in April 2007.

Business: Insurance

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent meetings she has had with (a) representatives of the insurance industry, (b) business groups and (c) local fire authorities on insurance costs to businesses; and if she will make a statement. [128854]

Angela E. Smith [holding answer 20 March 2007]: The Secretary of State has not had any recent meetings with representatives of the insurance industry, business groups or local fire authorities on insurance costs to businesses, and has no plans to make a statement.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many and what proportion of parish and town councils in England levy a parish precept on the council tax. [129744]

Ruth Kelly: Statistical returns submitted by billing authorities to the Department record the aggregate amount of parish and town precepts for each billing authority area, but do not collect information on the number of councils setting such precepts or individual precept amounts.

Council Tax: B&Q DIY Superstores

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations her Department has received from B&Q plc on the council tax. [129752]

Ruth Kelly: We have identified two representations from B&Q plc received by this Department or its predecessor Department about council tax. Both expressed concern that people making home improvements would have to pay more council tax following revaluation. Both letters preceded the Government's decision to postpone council tax revaluation in England and our clear commitment that revaluation will not take place in the lifetime of this Parliament.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent on managing her Department's and its predecessor Department's corporate identity and branding in each year since 2002. [127057]

Ruth Kelly: The information is as follows

2002-03	52,117
2003-04	0
2004-05	0
2005-06	4,330
2006-07	42,300

Departments: Overseas Workers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether her Department has any employees based outside the United Kingdom. [129768]

Ruth Kelly: No staff are based outside United Kingdom.

Domestic Violence: Victim Support Schemes

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the £78 million announced for funding domestic violence sanctuaries by her Department in December 2006 was in addition to the previously announced funding for homelessness. [127065]

Ruth Kelly: The Department for Communities and Local Government strategy "Sustainable Communities: Homes for All" supported increased investment in homelessness prevention, from £60 million in 2005-06 to £74 million in 2007-08 for homelessness prevention grants for local authorities and the voluntary sector. £47.2 million of this has been allocated to local authorities, which will be used to fund Sanctuary Schemes and other homelessness prevention schemes.

Gaming Clubs: Licensing

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions her Department and its predecessor has had with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on increasing the number of casino licences from those currently allowed under the provisions of the Gambling Act 2005 and its secondary legislation. [129750]

Ruth Kelly: There have been no such discussions.

Government Offices for the Regions

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many full-time equivalent staff were employed by each government office for the region in (a) 1996-97 and (b) the latest period for which figures are available. [129754]

Ruth Kelly: Full-time equivalent (FTE) figures are not available for 1997. The total number of staff by headcount was 2,389. For 2007, please see the following table.

February 2007	Headcount	FTE
GO East	235	226.4
GO East Midlands	233	226.5
GO London	271	265.2
GO North East	266	256.3
GO North West	307	295.9
GO South East	282	265.3
GO South West	278	263.1
GO West Midlands	264	253.8
GO Yorkshire and Humber	248	236.0
Total GO Network	2,384	2,288.5

In 1997 the Government office network represented the interests of four Whitehall Departments. Today the network delivers on behalf of 10 Departments.

Hotels

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2007, Official Report, column 1353W, on hotels, if she will place in the Library copies of each representation. [129459]

Ruth Kelly: I have placed in the Library copies of each of the representations listed in the answer of 19 January 2007, Official Report, column 1353W on hotels.

Housing: Construction

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what estimate she has made of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Amendment to the Building and Approved Inspectors (Amendment) Regulations 2006, New Edition of Approved Document F, to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [126641]

(2) what her most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Building (Amendment No. 2) Regulations 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [126653]

(3) what her most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Building (Amendment) Regulations 2003 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126670]

Angela E. Smith: The Building (Amendment) (No. 2) Regulations 2004 introduced part P of the Building Regulations (Electrical safety in dwellings) to help reduce the number of deaths, injuries and fires caused by faulty electrical installations. Prior to its introduction the Department produced a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) which estimated costs and benefits over a 10-year period, discounted at 3.5 per cent. to present value. The full RIA is available on this Department's website:

www.communities.gov.uk.

The estimated costs for part P are:

One off costs to businesses: negligible so not estimated

One off costs to regulators: negligible so not estimated

Recurring costs to businesses: £36.9 million per annum;

Recurring costs to building control bodies: £1.35 million per annum.

Over the 10-year period the RIA estimated the benefits from the reduction in deaths, injuries and fires as £475 million.

Amendment to the Building and Approved Inspectors (Amendment) Regulations 2006 and new edition of Approved Document F refer to the 2006 revisions of part L and Approved Document F of the Building Regulations. Part L deals with conservation of fuel and power, and Approved Document F gives technical guidance on ventilation of buildings. A regulatory impact assessment was carried out and is on the Department's website. It gives the following estimates of costs:

Part L

	£ million
One off cost to business	10
One off cost to regulators	0.5
Recurring cost to business	1,084.9
Recurring cost to regulators	0.05

The total cumulative saving over the lifetime of the Part L measures was estimated at £1,531.5 million.

Approved Document F

	£ million
One off cost to business	4.75
One off cost to regulators	0.56

Approved Document F

	£ million
Recurring cost to business	2.14
Recurring cost to regulators	[1]

[1] Not significantly greater than before.

The amendments will make a significant and cost-effective contribution to reducing carbon dioxide emissions from new buildings. The total benefits of the part F changes were estimated to be between £1.5 million to £5.2 million per year (average of £3.1 million).

The Building (Amendment) Regulations 2003 introduced revisions of part M and Approved Document M of the Building Regulations. Part M deals with access to and use of buildings. The amendments relate solely to buildings other than dwellings, and support, and complement, the aims of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA).

A regulatory impact assessment was carried out and is on the Department's website. It gives the following estimates:

	£ million
New buildings
Recurring cost to business	120
Existing buildings
Recurring cost to business	69.33
Recurring cost to regulators:	[1]

[1] It was estimated that, on average, an additional quarter to half full time equivalent member of staff may be required to carry out the additional functions, the cost of which will be reflected in building control charges.

One-off cost to business and regulators was not estimated separately in the RIA but was assumed to be nil, since the regulations did not incur administrative costs additional to or separate from those normally incurred by the building control process.

The changes were shown to deliver substantial benefits which far outweighed the costs. To put this into perspective the expected annual cost for new buildings of £120 million was estimated to provide benefits to the value of approximately £10 per annum for each of the estimated 11.7 million people with disabilities. In view of the wide range of personal and social benefits that would result from improved access for disabled people and taking account of additional accessibility benefits for other groups and businesses, the actual benefits of these proposals are expected to exceed this by a considerable margin.

Housing: Floods

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate her Department has made of the number of new homes which have been built in high risk flood areas in the last year for which figures are available. [129758]

Ruth Kelly: In 2004, the most recent year for which data are available, 16,500 dwellings were built within flood risk areas. This is 11 per cent. of all dwellings built in 2004.

Flood risk is a major factor in the location of new development. The Government published a new Planning Policy Statement (PPS25) in December 2006 to strengthen and clarify earlier policy on this issue. Flood risk must be taken into account and carefully managed at all stages of the planning process.

Housing: West Midlands

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes in (a) England, (b) the West Midlands and (c) Birmingham were (i) demolished and (ii) built in each year since 1996, broken down by tenure. [124599]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested at various levels of disaggregation is available in Housing Statistics tables on the Communities and Local Government website.

(i) Conversion and demolitions (England) (Table 101)

http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/17/Table111_id1156017.xls

Due to the way estimates are compiled it is not possible to produce these at a regional or local authority level.

(ii) Housebuilding by tenure and region (Table 231)

http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/52/Table231_id1156052.xls

Housebuilding by local authority district and tenure (Table 253)

http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/66/Table253Excel860Kb_id1156066.xls

Due to the timing of when the information is collected the final tenure is not always known so some of the registered social landlord dwellings may be classed as 'private'.

Local Authority Charging

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2007, Official Report, column 1354W, on local authority charging, what the timetable is for the research into local authorities charging for pre-application advice and discussions. [129466]

Ruth Kelly: The Department has commissioned research into the cost of the planning service to local authorities, including the costs of non-fee related work such as pre-application advice and discussions. We will consider the research and plan to publish the results later this year.

Mapping Data and Services

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2007, Official Report, columns 1355-56W, on mapping data and services, if she will list the functions which were transferred from the former Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to the Deputy Prime Minister's Office that accounted for the £1,160,000 of expenditure. [129468]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the Deputy Prime Minister's letter of appointment of 16 May 2006 from the Prime Minister, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Parking: Fees and Charges

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the revenue was of each local authority with responsibility for parking enforcement in England from net income from (a) parking charges, (b) parking penalty notices and (c) balance of the Parking Places Revenue Account in 2006. [128651]

Gillian Merron: I have been asked to reply.

Information on net income from (a) parking charges and (b) parking penalty notices is not available. The balance of gross income from parking charges and parking penalty notices and gross expenditure for 2005-06 (for most recent year available) is provided in the table that has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Unitary Councils

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she would approve a bid for unitary council status where a majority of local residents (a) in total and (b) participating had voted against the proposal in a referendum held under the Local Government Act 2003. [128594]

Mr. Woolas: As previously stated, proposals for unitary status will be implemented only where, in the Government's judgment, they meet the five criteria set out in the Invitation issues on 26 October 2006.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether 2008 elections will be (a) postponed and (b) cancelled for councils which are approved to move to unitary status. [129766]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 March 2007, Official Report, column 995W.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128255]

Mr. Hain: My Department and its agencies use the following postal companies to handle dispatched mail: DHL Global Mail, DX Network Services, Royal Mail and TNT Post UK Limited.

Firearms

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many legal firearms have been stolen in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [129638]

Paul Goggins: The Police Service for Northern Ireland does not hold information in the form requested, however the Chief Constable has provided in the following table details of burglary, robbery and theft offences in the last five financial years where the property stolen included firearms.

Motoring Offences

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many road traffic offences were recorded in Northern Ireland for drivers whose vehicles were registered in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland, (d) the Republic of Ireland and (e) other European countries in each of the last six years, broken down by country of vehicle registration; and what penalties were imposed on drivers in each category. [129650]

Paul Goggins: I have been informed by PSNI that information in respect of motoring offences committed involving foreign registered vehicles is recorded by driver ethnicity as opposed to vehicle origin, therefore it is not possible answer this question.

From 1 April 2007, PSNI will record offender nationality.

Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland

Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to meet retired Royal Ulster Constabulary officers to discuss their views on the consequences of the conduct of Police Ombudsman of Northern Ireland investigations. [127332]

Paul Goggins: The views of retired police officers were outlined during an Adjournment Debate (21 March) about the Police Ombudsman's role in investigations. A report by the Retired Police Officer's Association was presented to me following the debate, and I have agreed to meet representatives of the association at the earliest opportunity to discuss their concerns further.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Broadcasting Programmes: Children

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent estimate her Department has made of the number of hours per week of children's programming shown on each public service broadcaster channel; and if she will make a statement. [129172]

Mr. Woodward: The most recent figures available, as collected by Ofcom, are for the number of hours of children's programmes broadcast per week in 2006 and these are set out in the table.

Casinos: Licensing

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance was sought by the Casino Advisory Panel from her Department on how to test the willingness to license within a local authority applicant for a regional casino. [130350]

Mr. Caborn: The Casino Advisory Panel was set up to operate entirely independently of the Government. It was a matter for the panel how it interpreted the criteria.

The factors which the panel took into account when assessing each of the proposals before it against its remitted criteria are set out clearly in chapter 6 of the panel's report.

Cultural Heritage: Conferences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1158W, on the Institute for Public Policy Research, on what date the Identity, Culture and the Challenge of Diversity research was commissioned; on what dates the conference and seminar fees were paid; what the titles were of the conferences and seminars; what the purpose was of the secondment; and what the dates were of the secondment. [129338]

Mr. Lammy: Arts Council England did not commission the Identity, Culture and the Challenge of Diversity research; this was an IPPR project to which the Arts Council made a charitable donation.

The following table shows the title and date on which fees were paid for other conferences and seminars:

Title	Date
Oxford Media Convention	9 January 2003
Oxford Media Convention	13 January 2004
Race equality event	19 July 2004
Breakfast debate—"For Art's Sake: Society and the Arts in the 21st Century", Labour Party conference	27 September 2004
Oxford Media Convention	12 May 2005
Breakfast debate—"Creating Communities: Arts, Housing and regeneration", Creating Communities	26 September 2005
Oxford Media Convention	17 January 2006
Seminar—"Trusts: A new future for schools", Sponsorship of Trusts	2 February 2006

The purpose of the secondment was to cover a vacancy in the Arts Council's research team. The secondment was from 13 February 2006 to 31 January 2007.

Digital Broadcasting

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what measures have been put in place in order to ensure that the targeted assistance scheme in Whitehaven is delivered effectively and that all of those persons assessed by her Department as eligible under the terms of the scheme (a) are contacted in a suitable format and (b) receive assistance appropriate to their needs; [129170]

(2) by what measures those eligible for the targeted assistance scheme are to be identified in Whitehaven. [129171]

Mr. Woodward: The Government and BBC are jointly conducting the procurement process to appoint an operator to deliver the help scheme in Whitehaven and more generally.

Digital UK is responsible for generic communications and has written to households in Whitehaven explaining the Help Scheme and asking those who think they are eligible to apply. This will be supported by local advertising. The letter and leaflets are available in large print, audio or Braille, or in another language.

Once appointed, the operator will confirm eligibility of those who have responded to the Digital UK letter and contact them about the support available.

Subject to parliamentary progress, DWP data released in accordance with the Digital Switchover (Disclosure of Information) Bill will be used to verify eligibility in Whitehaven.

Gambling

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department has made an estimate of the number of online casinos that will be based in the UK from September 2007; what the Gambling Commission's most recent estimate is of the number of remote casino operators based on-shore from September 2007; what discussions she has held with Ministers at HM Treasury on the taxation of online casinos; and if she will make a statement. [130036]

Mr. Caborn: Neither DCMS nor the Gambling Commission has made a formal estimate of the number of online casinos that will be based in Great Britain from September 2007. However, from September 2007, the Gambling Commission will have records of all new holders of remote operating licences. The Secretary of State regularly discusses a wide range of subjects with Treasury Ministers.

Licensed Premises

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many licensed premises there are in England and Wales, broken down by (a) off licence and (b) on licence. [129179]

Mr. Woodward: The Licensing Statistical Bulletin published by DCMS in 2004 showed that there were 159,952 licensed premises in England and Wales at 30 June 2004. Broken down, there were 113,370 on-licensed premises and 46,582 off-licensed premises.

Under the former licensing system, premises with an on-licence would usually also include permission to make off-sales. We expect most of these would have converted those permissions to their new licence.

Information for the next Licensing Statistical Bulletin is expected to be collected later this year.

Licensed Premises: Reviews

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what response her Department has made of the Licensing Review Panel's conclusions; and which recommendations she expects to be implemented. [130128]

Mr. Woodward: Copies of the Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel's final report were placed in the Libraries of the House on 25 January. We are currently assessing the implications of all the panel's detailed conclusions and recommendations and will provide a response shortly. Before reaching a final decision about implementing any changes to the fees regime and related issues, we will undertake a full public consultation so that fee payers, local authorities and the public can help to inform future policy.

Lottery Funding

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the awards made for sports-related activities in Rotherham in each of the last two years. [129848]

Mr. Caborn: The table shows the Exchequer and Lottery funding which Sport England and Sportsmatch have awarded to Rotherham in each of the last two full years.

	Organisation name	Project title	Amount (£)	Exchequer/Lottery funding

Museums and Galleries: Gloucester

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress she has made in her consideration of the case for providing funding for the Waterways Museum at Gloucester to enable it to provide free entry; and if she will make a statement. [129285]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 22 March 2007]: The Waterways Trust is an independent charitable trust that runs three Waterways Museums, including the one at Gloucester. The Museums, Libraries and Archives Council has provided substantial support and advice to the Waterways Trust and Museums which could help them to realise their potential to support learning and community activities.

As with other independent museums, it is for the trustees of the Waterways Museums to identify the most appropriate business model to secure their financial viability and the preservation of their collections. My Department has no plans to provide funding for the Waterways Museums.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether mine clearing vehicles (a) are and (b) are planned to be in use in Afghanistan. [128283]

Mr. Ingram: During war-fighting operations, minefields are not cleared but are breached in circumstances where they are an obstacle to the freedom of manoeuvre of our armed forces or present a potential threat to our troops. Comprehensive mine clearance is generally undertaken by humanitarian organisations on non-war-fighting operations, rather than by the armed forces. As the armed forces are not involved in clearance, there is no requirement for mine clearing vehicles in Afghanistan. The UK Task Force does, however, have a specific Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Task Force, which includes vehicles that can convey the EOD team to a mine incident.

Armed Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are (a) attached to and (b) working in his Department, broken down by rank. [128327]

Derek Twigg: It is not possible to determine how many service personnel are attached to or working in the Department. Data are held giving the strength of the UK regular forces broken down by budgetary area and rank, which broadly show the number of service personnel working in each operational and support area. All data are shown by paid rank.

Armed Forces: Divorce

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces personnel were granted a divorce in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006 who (i) have since left the armed forces and (ii) are still serving. [122196]

Derek Twigg: The following tables provide the number of Army and RAF personnel divorcing in 2005 and 2006, broken down by divorcees who have subsequently left the armed forces and those still serving. Naval service data are not available as the Naval service groups 'Separated', 'Divorced' and 'Widowed' together.

Figures are for UK regular forces, and therefore exclude Gurkhas, full-time reserve service personnel, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment and mobilised reservists. Figures are for trained and untrained personnel excluding officer designates.

The term 'divorce' includes 'decree absolute' and 'marriage annulled'. It excludes 'decree nisi' and individuals who are separated.

Army

	2005	2006
Number of divorces	1,040	900
Divorcees still serving as at 1 January 2007	890	870
Divorcees subsequently leaving the armed forces	160	40

RAF

	2005	2006
Number of divorces	570	n/a
Divorcees still serving as at 1 January 2007	480	n/a
Divorcees subsequently leaving the armed forces	90	n/a

Notes:
'n/a' denotes not available. Due to the introduction of a new personnel administration system, RAF data are not available.
Due to the rounding methods used, totals may not always equal the sum of the parts. When rounding to the nearest 10, numbers ending in five have been rounded to the nearest multiple of 20 to prevent systematic bias.

In compiling this data a small error has been discovered in the RAF data given in my reply of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 202W, to the hon. Member for Forest Dean (Mr. Harper) for which I apologise.

The error does not substantially alter the estimates of divorce rates in the RAF.

Armed Forces: Housing

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many house fires have been reported due to faulty Modern Housing Solutions property. [129692]

Derek Twigg: During the past 12 months there have been five fires in MHS managed properties, two of which were minor and attributed to employee carelessness rather than property defect. The remaining three serious fires resulted in severe property damage. One was caused deliberately by an intruder, another attributed to occupant carelessness, and a third was occasioned by a faulty electrical installation (not attributable to MHS but as a result of inherited defects from the previous maintenance regime).

Armed Forces: Uniforms

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much (a) a graduate of Sandhurst and (b) a newly-commissioned officer promoted through the ranks is expected to contribute to the cost of their regimental dress uniform. [128274]

Derek Twigg: All newly commissioned officers, whether graduates from Sandhurst or those promoted from the ranks, are provided with uniform and entitled to the same initial outfit allowance to enable them to perform their duties. The allowance does not vary according to the method of entry but does vary according to the Regiment or Corps to which they belong. Any additional cost that individuals may incur over and above the allowance is a private matter.

Army Board: Fair Trade Initiative

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has taken steps to ensure goods provided to members of the Army Board are fair trade. [128807]

Derek Twigg: Unless it is exempt, all public procurement must comply with the EC Public Procurement Regulations, which preclude the ability to specify a requirement as fair trade as it is considered anti-competition. It is, therefore, not legally possible to ensure that goods provided to the Army Board or the wider public sector are fair trade. However, the Department's policy encourages full consideration to be given to fair trade products whenever they meet the relevant legitimate criteria.

Army: Recruitment

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many recruits the Army is seeking to attract to (a) regular service and (b) officer cadet training in (i) 2007-08 and (ii) 2008-09. [129731]

Derek Twigg: The recruitment target for soldiers (regular service) is 13,817 (2007-08) and 14,104 (2008-09).

The recruitment target for officer cadet training (direct entry officers) is 652 (2007-08) and 658 (2008-09).

Bosnia: Kosovo

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and in what role British troops remain in (a) Bosnia and (b) Kosovo; and whether there are plans (i) to reduce numbers stationed and (ii) to change the operational remit in each location. [129726]

Mr. Ingram: Details of UK troop reductions in Bosnia-Herzegovina were provided in my statement on 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1083. Following European force transition, there will be fewer than 50 UK personnel working within Bosnia-Herzegovina. This grouping will provide further support to the European force and NATO headquarters and the peace support operations training centre in Sarajevo.

There are approximately 175 UK military personnel in Kosovo, the majority of whom provide intelligence support to the NATO led Kosovo force. In addition, a small number of staff contribute to security sector reform and work within the Office of the Kosovo Protection Corps Coordinator, the UN Mission in Kosovo and the British Office. The UK has no plans to reduce personnel numbers within Kosovo in the foreseeable future or to change our operational remit. We will keep our contribution under review in order to ensure it remains relevant and appropriate.

We will also maintain our commitment to the pan-Balkans operational reserve force.

Defence Diversification Agency

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Defence Diversification Agency. [129480]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The Department is in formal consultation with the trade unions and industry over proposals to close the Defence Diversification Agency. The House will be informed of the outcome from this process in due course.

Defence: Expenditure

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the defence planned programme budget (excluding funds from the Unallocated Special Reserve) was used to finance operations in (a) Iraq, (b) Afghanistan, (c) the Balkans and (d) other operations in each of the last six years. [121873]

Mr. Ingram: Net additional costs of military operations are not normally funded from the Defence core programme budget. Since 2001-02, the net additional costs of operations in Iraq, Afghanistan, the Balkans, Sierra Leone, the Gulf, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo have been funded from the Treasury Reserve.

No additional funding is sought for those items which would normally be paid for from the core programme budget, such as salaries, and information is not available on those sunk defence costs which contributed to operations.

The costs of operations carried out at the request of other organisations, e.g. UN peacekeeping/observer operations and DfID humanitarian operations, are also recovered from the requesting authority on a similar basis. Such operations are similarly not, therefore, a cost to the Department.

The only circumstance in which the Department does not raise charges is for the evacuation of UK non-combatant personnel from a place of danger to the nearest place of safety, such as last year's evacuation from the Lebanon to Cyprus. As we do not recover costs for such operations, we do not record their costs separately from those within the Defence programme.

Departments: Flags

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which flags are flown from Ministry of Defence buildings on which days. [129728]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is held centrally only for MOD main building, at which the Union flag, the White Ensign, the Army flag, the Royal Air Force Ensign, and two joint service flags are flown on a daily basis. An additional four Union flags are flown on flag days.

All Service and major commands and headquarters are required to fly the Union Flag daily in accordance with Queen's Regulations. In addition, they are permitted to fly flags signifying the relevant single service and commander, corps, regimental and station flags.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Union flag is flown from the Ministry of Defence main building on each day of the year. [129729]

Derek Twigg: The Union flag is flown daily on the Ministry of Defence main building.

EH101 Helicopters

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Merlin 1 helicopters are (a) in service, (b) under repair and (c) being cannibalised for parts; and if he will make a statement. [124595]

Mr. Ingram: On 1 March 2007, the details for the Royal Navy's Merlin helicopter fleet were as follows:

Helicopter type	Departmental fleet	In service	Under repair	Other
Merlin Mk 1	42	26	7	9

"In service" aircraft are those in the forward fleet and available to the front line and training units. Aircraft "Under repair" are those in the depth fleet which are undergoing planned routine depth maintenance. "Other" aircraft are those awaiting depth maintenance; in long-term storage; undergoing trials/ development activity or subject to modifications with industry.

Within the forward fleet controlled cannibalisation is conducted as part of normal business. Cannibalised aircraft are routinely returned to service when the necessary spare parts become available. Of the aircraft in the "Under repair" category, four are subject to controlled cannibalisation to support aircraft maintenance.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Eurofighter Typhoons are to be supplied to the Royal Air Force; what the estimated cost is of such Eurofighter Typhoons; and if he will make a statement. [129360]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom has, to date, contracted for 144 Eurofighter Typhoon aircraft for the Royal Air Force. A decision on the third production buy of the aircraft, known as tranche 3, has still to be taken and discussions with partner nations and industry are expected to continue during 2007. The unit production cost of tranche 1 and 2 Eurofighter Typhoon, as published in Major Projects Report 2006, is £66.7 million.

Harrier GR7

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of (a) the Royal Navy's fleet air arm and (b) the role of the Harrier GR7 aircraft; and whether there are any proposals to replace the existing Harrier aircraft. [129775]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The fleet air arm will remain a vital element of the Royal Navy and will continue to be equipped with a range of highly capable aircraft fulfilling a variety of operational roles. The Harrier GR7 is a combat aircraft which is optimised for ground attack operations. The GR7 is currently undergoing a series of major improvements which will see the aircraft redesignated as the Harrier GR9.

Identification Friend or Foe Systems

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 54W, on identification friend/ foe systems, why he has no plans to fit Successor IFF to Hercules C130J and Tornado GR4 aircraft; and whether he plans to fit Successor IFF to Typhoon aircraft. [129788]

Mr. Ingram: To confirm the answer of 12 March 2007, Official Report, column 54W, Tornado GR4 is in the process of being fitted with the Successor Identification Friend or Foe (SIFF) system transponder capability.

Hercules C130J and Typhoon aircraft are both supplied with an integrated IFF capability that is fully compatible and inter-operable with SIFF.

Iraq and Afghanistan

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces have received medical treatment in military hospitals in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan since the invasion of the country concerned; and how many members of the armed forces serving in each country (i) were returned to the UK for medical treatment and (ii) had their medical treatment carried out in another country, broken down by country, over the same period. [128128]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence publishes data on battle and non-battle casualties that have resulted from our operations in Iraq from March 2003 and Afghanistan since January 2006. The best centrally available casualty statistics can be found on the Ministry of Defence website:

http://www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/FactSheets/OperationsFactsheets

Data on the destination of aeromedical evacuations are held centrally only when it involved moving a patient out of the region since 1 January 2006. They do not, for example, include shorter evacuations such as those to the US medical facility at Bald in Iraq or from Afghanistan to Seeb in Oman. A number of personnel from both theatres are evacuated to the hospital at the Ramstein US airbase in Germany. These personnel are normally those who have been treated in US hospitals in theatre and are being medically evacuated through US channels, or those for whom domestically it is better to be treated in Germany (for example if they are normally stationed there).

Iraq

Between March 2003 and 31 December 2005 the total number of UK military and civilian personnel who were treated at the Shaibah "Role 3" field hospital in Iraq was 6,609. Of these, 226 were categorised as wounded in action, including as a result of hostile action, and 6,383 were categorised as suffering from disease or non-battle injuries.

Between March 2003 and 31 December 2005 some 4,000 military and civilian personnel (including a small number of Iraqis) were aeromedically evacuated from Iraq on medical grounds, whatever the reason.

On 1 January 2006 improved casualty reporting processes were implemented. Between 1 January 2006 and 28 February 2007:

775 UK military personnel were aeromedically evacuated from Iraq on medical grounds, whatever the reason; of these:

723 service personnel were evacuated to the UK.

52 service personnel were evacuated to Ramstein in Germany.

142 UK military and civilian personnel were admitted to UK field hospitals and categorised as wounded in action.

1,353 UK military and civilian personnel were admitted to UK field hospitals for disease or non-battle injuries.

Afghanistan

For the period between 1 January 2006 and 28 February 2007:

312 UK military personnel were aeromedically evacuated from Afghanistan on medical grounds, whatever the reason; of these:

299 service personnel were evacuated to the UK.

13 service personnel were evacuated to Ramstein in Germany.

108 UK military and civilian personnel were admitted to UK field hospitals and categorised as wounded in action.

206 UK military and civilian personnel were admitted to UK field hospitals for disease or non-battle injuries.

A figure for those evacuated or admitted to hospital prior to these dates is not centrally available. The Defence Analytical Service Agency is currently reviewing available historic aeromedical data and these will be published on the website once the process is complete.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the deaths of British soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan have been attributed to defective rifles. [129049]

Mr. Ingram: None of the fatalities of British soldiers in Iraq since 2003, and Afghanistan since 2001 have been recorded as attributed to defective rifles.

Joint Strike Fighter Aircraft

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made with the development of the US-UK Joint Strike Fighter; and how much the project has cost. [129735]

Mr. Ingram: The Joint Strike Fighter programme remains on schedule with the first development aircraft completing its ninth flight including full after-burner test in flight. The UK has now received the necessary assurances on technology transfer from the US; this will allow the UK to meet its operational sovereignty requirements. The next phase of the programme has now come into effect, with the UK, US and other international partners having signed up to the production, sustainment and follow-on development memorandum of understanding with the US.

At February 2007 £1.062 billion has been incurred on the JSF project covering concept, assessment and demonstration phases.

Military Decorations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many medals for gallantry have been (a) awarded and (b) awarded posthumously since 2003. [129725]

Derek Twigg: Awards for gallantry and meritorious service on operations are published routinely in the Defence Supplement of the London Gazette, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The relevant references from 2003 to date are as follows:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum: Families

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the process for removing failed asylum seeker families. [127906]

Mr. Byrne: The process for removing failed asylum seeker families is set out in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) Family Removals Policy notice (EPU 2/06), and the Operational Enforcement Manual chapter 58—Family Detention Visits, both of which are publicly available on the IND website.

Departments: Diaries

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who has been allowed access to diaries of Ministers and officials in his Department in the last three months. [129817]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Office employs approximately 78,000 officials. Identifying who would have access to each official's diary would be a disproportionate cost. Access to ministerial diaries is limited to those persons who support Ministers in performing their ministerial duties.

Departments: Ministers

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether Ministers in his Department have had meetings with former Ministers of the Department in the last three months. [129824]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 26 March 2007]: Home Office Ministers meet regularly with ministerial colleagues and former ministerial colleagues in the course of performing their ministerial duties. In so doing, each acts in accordance with the ministerial code.

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to ensure his Department's economical use of paper. [128013]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office is committed to meeting all the targets for Sustainable Operations on the Government estate, which include targets to reduce waste and increase recycling. Actions that have been taken specifically on paper include the purchase of recycled paper as standard for internal printing and photocopying, and the setting of many printers to automatically print double-sided. We have also run articles on the Home Office intranet advising staff about reducing paper wastage by, for example, not printing off e-mails. Staff are also encouraged to re-use paper as scrap, where possible, before putting it in the recycling facilities.

Departments: Public Expenditure

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the expenditure threshold is above which spending decisions by his Department require Treasury approval. [125760]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office requires specific Treasury approval to commit resources and/or incur expenditure above the following thresholds:

Capital projects—information technology, lands and buildings, on a private finance initiative basis or otherwise—£100,000,000;

Disposal of fixed assets—£5,000,000;

Losses:

Write-offs—£25,000,000

Bad debts—£10,000,000

Impairments—£10,000,000

Fraud/theft—£5,000,000

Provisions—£5,000,000

Abandoned/waived claims—£50,000

Gifts (cash or assets)—£100,000

Indemnities—£50,000

Compensation payments—£20,000

Deportation: Democratic Republic of Congo

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the security situation in the Democratic Republic of Congo before deporting foreign nationals to that country; and if he will make a statement. [127864]

Mr. Byrne: Every asylum and human rights claim is considered on its individual merits in accordance with our international obligations and taking full account of conditions in the country concerned as they impact on the individual claimant. Information about the conditions in the Democratic Republic of Congo, including the security situation, is obtained from a wide range of governmental and non-governmental sources, human rights organisations and the media. This information is published in regularly updated Home Office Country of Origin Information Reports. The latest Country of Origin Information Report on the Democratic Republic of Congo was published on 14 February 2007, and can be accessed on the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/country_reports.html

It is important for the integrity of our asylum system and to prevent unfounded applications that we are able to enforce the return of those who have no right to remain in the UK. The asylum decision making and independent appeals system exist to consider in each case whether the individual claimant would be at risk in their country of origin and we will only seek to return those who have been found not to need our protection.

Deportation: Terrorism

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been deported from the UK since 24 August 2005 on the ground that their presence is not conducive to the public good due to their involvement in fomenting or provoking others to commit acts of terrorism. [127003]

Mr. Byrne: Since 24 August 2005 no individuals have been deported from the UK specifically on the ground of involvement in fomenting or provoking others to commit acts of terrorism. However, such acts come within the scope of the power to deport a person because their presence in the UK is not conducive to the public good and are listed under the "unacceptable behaviour" (UB) provisions announced on 24 August 2005. To date there has been one deportation on UB grounds.

Entry Clearances: Fees and Charges

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations his Department held with community representatives before he announced the proposed new levels of fees for visas and in-country fee levels. [127401]

Mr. Byrne: A public consultation was conducted for an eight week period between 30 October and 22 December. The consultation document was available on the Home Office website and over 3,000 copies were sent to individuals and organisations. Almost 300 documents were sent to community representatives and another 180 were sent to foreign embassies and missions.

340 responses to the consultation document were received in total, of which 10 were from community representative groups and six from foreign embassies.

In addition, we ran 13 sector based stakeholder events with over 400 participants. These included key stakeholders in the heath and social care, education and business sectors, as well as diplomats and representatives of the travel and tourism sector.

A full copy of the publication 'A Response to the Consultation on a New Charging Regime for Immigration and Nationality Fees' can be found on the Home Office website at:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk.

Golden Arrow Communications

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have had with Golden Arrow Communications. [129823]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 26 March 2007]: A review of ministerial diaries has indicated that no current Home Office Minister has met with representatives of Golden Arrow Communications in their official capacity. The Home Office employs approximately 78,000 officials. Identifying which of these officials have held meetings with representatives from Golden Arrow Communications could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Immigration Controls: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration control staff are deployed in each Northern Ireland airport; where those staff are based; and what arrangements are in place for transporting such staff to their places of work. [128026]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 19 March 2007]: There are 14 immigration officers and two chief immigration officers who are all based at Belfast International airport.

These staff are also deployed to Belfast City and Derry airports when required.

All staff are responsible for their own travel arrangements to their places of work.

Immigration: Appeals

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the treatment of rape victims in immigration appeal hearings; what guidelines are in place for immigration judges in considering such claims; if he will commission research into this matter; and if he will make a statement. [129573]

Bridget Prentice: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) has considered the recent report 'Misjudging Rape: Breaching Gender Guidelines and International Law in Asylum Appeals' published by the Black Women's Rape Action Project (BWRAP) and Women Against Rape. Additionally, it has recently received representations on similar issues from stakeholders groups such as Asylum Aid and the Medical Foundation for the Victims of Torture.

The BWRAP report recommended that the Asylum Gender Guidelines (2000) be applied by immigration judges in all asylum appeals where rape is cited in the grounds of appeal. The guidelines never had binding authority on the tribunal and are out of date in respect of current law. The guidelines are framed very much as a statement of what the law is on particular aspects of a refugee claim. It is not the role of the tribunal to make statements on the law, save through its jurisprudence.

Immigration judges are independent members of the judiciary who determine cases on the evidence that is placed before them. Judicial training is facilitated by senior and experienced members of the judiciary. All immigration judges receive training in diversity and refugee law and are encouraged to keep up to date with legal developments both in the UK and nationally. All judiciary have access to the Judicial Studies Board (JSB) Equal Treatment Benchbook as well as country guidance determinations, Home Office country reports and wider information, and case law of the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal and higher courts.

There are currently no plans for the DCA to commission research into this area. It is not for the AIT, as an independent tribunal, to commission objective research into such issues.

National Crime Squad

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests were made and (b) convictions were secured by the National Crime Squad in each year since 1998, broken down by offence. [128785]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 22 March 2007]: The data available are for the four NCS threat areas, as shown in the following table. The data between 1998-89 and 2001-02 are not complete.

National crime squad—performance data

North Sea Camp Prison: Lincolnshire

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital funding he plans to commit to North Sea Camp Prison, Lincolnshire in each of the next three financial years. [124132]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A sewerage and drainage repairs scheme is planned for 2008 with a current estimated cost of £769,000. No other schemes are currently planned for the next three financial years.

Offenders: Suspended Sentences

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders convicted of (a) burglary, (b) aggravated bodily harm, (c) robbery, (d) supplying heroin, (e) grievous bodily harm, (f) theft from the person and (g) receiving stolen goods received non-custodial sentences in each year since 1999. [126946]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is contained in the following table; 2006 data will be available in the autumn.

Passports: Children

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had on the compilation of a fingerprint database for children between the ages of 11 and 15 who apply for a passport; and if he will make a statement. [128688]

Joan Ryan: As set out in the Strategic Action Plan for the National Identity Scheme published in December 2006, the Identity and Passport Service has anticipated that it may be necessary to record biometrics for passports issued to children over the age of 11 but no final decision has been taken on this.

At present, EU regulations specify no minimum age for the recording of fingerprint biometrics. The United Kingdom has participated in preliminary discussions with our EU partners concerning the establishment of a minimum age for the recording of fingerprint biometrics in passports.

Passports: Disabled

Mr. Heban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements his Department is making for disabled first-time passport applicants to attend interviews at Identity Passport Service offices; and if he will make a statement. [120390]

Joan Ryan: All interview offices are compliant with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. For example, they will have hearing loops and a wheelchair user will be able to manoeuvre a wheelchair anywhere within the public areas of an interview office.

Those people who need to have an interview as part of the application process will be sent a letter asking them to telephone IPS to make an appointment at one of the 69 interview offices. The letter asks the applicant to tell IPS if they have any particular requirements, for example, if they have a hearing impairment or learning difficulties. The applicant will also be sent a leaflet that explains the interview process, confirms that they should tell us of any particular requirements they have and gives examples.

When an applicant, or their representative, telephones our call centre to make an interview appointment, the caller will be asked if the applicant has any particular requirements.

Passports: Personation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to combat identity fraud in the process of issuing passports. [129622]

Joan Ryan: The Identity and Passport Service (IPS) has developed a comprehensive counter fraud strategy to combat identity fraud in the passport issuing process. This strategy includes:

checking biographical information to ensure that the identity claimed on the application form is real, living, and can be linked to the customer through cross checks against a range of public and private sector databases the development of facial recognition systems to check applicant images against a database of images of suspected fraudsters checking applicants against increasingly sophisticated internal watch files including the database of passports reported lost or stolen strengthening its business processes for identity authentication, and training and support for passport examiners and specialist fraud units interviews for all first-time adult customers.

These measures are only the latest in a long running programme of counter fraud initiatives developed by IPS. In the last five years IPS has:

Significantly increased security in passport book through the development and issue from last year of the ePassport which incorporates an RF chip and other advanced physical security features.

From 2002 created a database of around 750,000 infant death records to counter "Day of the Jackal" type fraud.

Introduced secure delivery of passports to customers from February 2004 resulting in an 80 per cent. reduction in losses of passport in the post.

Created better arrangements for the reporting, recording and sharing of data on lost/stolen passports. This database of around 920,000 records is now shared with UK border control and border control authorities worldwide via Interpol.

Established fraud and intelligence units in each of its seven passport issuing offices and provided professional, accredited training for all investigators.

Introduced the Passport Validation Service which enables approved government agencies to validate the status of a UK passport which has been presented to them as evidence of identity. The service is also available to organisations regulated by the Financial Services Authority that have to comply with the "Know Your Customer" statement of good practice requirements.

On an operational level, IPS are using intelligence received and data on known frauds to actively manage passport fraud identified after the issue of the passport. It is currently investigating some 2000 cases. Utilising intelligence on known fraud patterns, other fraud will be identified through the searches IPS are conducting on its database of 50 million passport records. This will be a similar set of exercises to that successfully conducted on infant deaths. This is an ongoing process and will be strengthened in November 2007 when IPS has access to adult death information. IPS are also developing plans to use facial recognition to check for duplicate identity fraud.

All the information uncovered on fraudulently obtained passports is passed to the UK Immigration Service for use at all UK ports. Experience shows that this is successful in disrupting criminal activities.

Passports: Photographs

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1363W, on passports: photographs, how many and what proportion of applications were rejected from applicants living in Scotland in each of the last three years. [125494]

Joan Ryan: Data on passport photograph rejections are not kept in a way that allows a figure to be obtained for a specific area. Although passport applications originating from Scotland are dealt with by the Glasgow passport office, they also deal with applications emanating from elsewhere in the UK as a consequence of their catchment area which includes part of England. Additionally, IPS routinely transfers work between offices in order to provide the most efficient and effective service to the public.

The figures that are available show that the reject rate for the Glasgow office is in keeping with the overall reject rate of around 5.5 to 6 per cent.

Passports: Somerset

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department had with Somerset county council before determining the location of passport interview centres. [128941]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 26 March 2007]: Consultation on the proposed location of passport remote interview facilities in sparsely populated parts of the UK, as defined by the Office for National Statistics (ONS), was undertaken with local and regional bodies in those areas. Somerset is not defined as a sparsely populated area in this context.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the merits of hosting remote access facilities for passport interview centres in Frome in Somerset. [128942]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 26 March 2007]: Passport remote interview facilities are located in sparsely populated parts of the UK, as defined by the Office for National Statistics (ONS). Somerset is not defined as a sparsely populated area in this context.

Prison Service: Vacancies

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officer vacancies there were in each prison establishment at the end of each quarter since January 2000; what the expected vacancy rate is projected to be at each establishment for each quarter in the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [126324]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on past shortfalls of officers for each establishment is contained in the tables. Information on staff shortfalls is not available for the public sector before March 2001. The shortfalls incorporate the contribution of contracted supplementary hours.

Although projections of vacancy levels are not available for public sector establishments, officer staffing levels are monitored regularly to ensure that they are within acceptable operating margins. Four contracted establishments have been able to provide projected vacancy numbers.

Prisoners: Foreigners

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted prisoners in England and Wales are foreign nationals; and what percentage of the total number of convicted prisoners this represents. [128493]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There were 8,328 convicted foreign national prisoners detained in prisons in England and Wales at the end of January 2007. This represents 12 per cent. of the total number of convicted prisoners detained.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Prisons: Deaths

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people aged over 65 years died in prison in each of the last three years. [129925]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested in respect to deaths of prisoners above the age of 65 is provided in the following table:

Total number of deaths for prisoners aged over 65 years

	Number
2004	33
2005	25
2006	22

Prisons: Drugs

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) resources available to prisons to provide drug misuse rehabilitation and (b) number of prisoners requiring this treatment. [129932]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table shows details of funding allocated for the totality of prison drug treatment for the years 2005-06 and 2006-07:

Intervention	2005-06	£ million 2006-07
Clinical services (maintenance-prescribing, detoxification)	11.3	23.3
CARATs (Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice and Through-care service)	26.7	31.7
Drug rehabilitation programmes	19.4	19.4
YPSMS (Young Persons Substance Misuse Service)	2.9	2.9
Total drug treatment	60.3	77.3

Data on the number of prisoners requiring drug treatment are not recorded in the way requested. Instead, prisons rely on epidemiological data which show that, on average, approximately 55 per cent. of prisoners report a serious drug problem prior to prison, with 80 per cent. reporting some prior misuse.

The following table shows the number of prisoners who have benefited from drug treatment over the past two years (for which full-year data are available). Individual prisoners may engage in more than one form of treatment:

Intervention	2004-05	2005-06
Clinical services—entrants to maintenance-prescribing and/or detoxification programmes	53,903	53,323
CARATs—substance misuse triage assessments conducted	59,025	[1]74,588
Drug rehabilitation programmes—
Entrants	7,621	10,743
Completions	4,902	8,011

Prisons: Mental Health

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the proportion of prisoners in need of mental health care who should be treated in secure NHS facilities. [129929]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Responsibility for prison health care services now rests with the Department of Health.

Although large numbers of people in prison have a diagnosed mental disorder(s), most do not meet the criteria for detention set out in the Mental Health Act 1983. Those prisoners who are assessed as being too ill to remain in prison are already being transferred to a hospital setting appropriate to their care and security needs.

In 2006, 31 per cent. more prisoners with mental illness too severe for prison were transferred to hospital than in 2002—up to 941 from 722. There has also been a significant decrease in the number of people waiting over 12 weeks for a transfer. In the quarter ending December 2006, 38 prisoners were waiting, down from 62 in the quarter ending June 2005.

Prisons: Patient Complaints

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether NHS patients' complaints procedures have been available for use by prisoners since the NHS assumed responsibility for prison health. [129930]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In April 2006, the NHS assumed responsibility for the provision of primary healthcare services in all publicly run prison establishments. Under this responsibility, prisoners in England and Wales are able to access the NHS complaints procedure.

Prison Service instruction 14/2005, "Handling Complaints about Prison Health Care" gives further detail about the process and is available on the Prison Service website at:

http://psi.hmprisonservice.gov.uk/PSI_2005_14_complaints_about_prison_healthcare.doc.

A copy has been placed in the Library.

Romania/Bulgaria

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate the Government have made of the number of people who may come to the UK seeking work from (a) Romania and (b) Bulgaria in 2007. [112664]

Mr. Byrne: The Government have not made any official estimates of the numbers of migrants from Bulgaria and Romania that might migrate to the UK to seek work.

Secure Accommodation: Young Offenders

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2007, Official Report, column 2329W, on secure accommodation: young offenders, what measures are (a) in place and (b) under consideration to create contingency places in the Youth Justice secure estate; how many places each measure is expected to create; and if he will make a statement. [129636]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The Youth Justice Board has been developing extra capacity in the secure estate for children and young people in response to recent increased demand and has added 342 additional places since April 2004. On 22 March, 237 available places in the estate were unoccupied.

The Board's Strategy for the Secure Estate for Children and Young People sets out plans for further developing the estate over the longer term.

The following measures are in hand to create extra capacity in the short- to medium-term:

the Board is exploring the possibility of purchasing more places at Feltham YOI - which is in an area of high population demand. If this can be achieved, some places elsewhere in the estate would be made over to the over-18 estate. There would be a net increase of 24 under-18 places; the Board is increasing capacity at Hindley YOI. It is planned that the programme of work will be completed by July 2007, with a net increase of 48 places.

As a contingency measure, the board is considering spot-purchasing up to 20 additional places in secure children's homes.

In the longer term, the board plans to create several high-dependency units in the Prison Service estate for more vulnerable boys. The first will be at Wetherby YOI and is scheduled to open in summer 2008. The opening of the unit will secure a net increase of 48 places.

Security: Heathrow Airport

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people took part in the miSense scheme at Heathrow Airport Terminal 3. [128021]

Mr. Byrne: 2,159 volunteers were enrolled in the miSense scheme at Heathrow airport terminal 3.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the outcome of the (a) miSense scheme, (b) miSenseplus scheme and (c) miSenseallclear scheme. [128051]

Mr. Byrne: The Simplifying Passenger Travel United Kingdom Regional Group is currently conducting a detailed evaluation of all three miSense schemes. As a key partner the Home Office is fully involved in this process and is keen to identify and build on the lessons learned. A summary of the evaluation is expected to be made available to the public in April and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people enrolled in the miSenseplus scheme at Heathrow Airport Terminal 3. [128053]

Mr. Byrne: 1,007 volunteers enrolled in the miSensePlus trial at Heathrow airport terminal 3.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which UK Government agencies he expects to be involved in the miSenseallclear scheme. [128054]

Mr. Byrne: MiSenseallclear ran for a two-week period during February 2007 and was operated by the Joint Border Operations Centre which is staffed by officers from HMRC, IND, Police and UKVisas.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what central government funding was made available to fund the (a) miSense, (b) miSenseplus and (c) miSenseallclear scheme. [128091]

Mr. Byrne: This trial was a collaborative venture between members of the International Air Transport Association (IATA) and the Simplifying Passenger Travel (SPT) initiative. Led by BAA, the UK Regional Group also comprised Accenture, Cathay Pacific, Emirates, IER, Raytheon, Sagem, SITA and IND along with a number of associate partners. Each partner provided resources at their own cost; in the case of central Government this amounted to staff costs only. The use of collaboration groups enables low cost, low risk trial delivery as costs and risks are distributed to the collaboration partner that is best able to manage the risk.

Wellingborough Prison

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Independent Monitoring Board members are (a) allocated to and (b) in post at HM Prison Wellingborough; and if he will make a statement. [125307]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Independent Monitoring Board at HMP Wellingborough as at 6 March 2007 had an official complement of 11 members and at that date 10 members were in post.

Young Offender Institutions: Ethnic Groups

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners in each young offender institution are from ethnic minorities, broken down by (a) race and (b) religion. [126885]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 15 March 2007]: Information on (a) numbers and percentages of ethnic minority detainees in all young offender and juvenile institutions in England and Wales as at 31 January 2007 and (b) the numbers by religious affiliation can be found in the following tables.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Young Offenders

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders in custody committed (a) acts of self-harm and (b) suicide in each year since 2001. [126090]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The exact information requested is not available. The table provides estimates in respect of those aged 18 to 20 inclusive derived from a national recording system of each incident of self-harm, the majority of which are minor. The improved system was only introduced in 2003 and figures before this time should not be compared directly with those since that date.

The Home Office definition of prisoner self-inflicted deaths is broader than the legal definition of suicide and includes all deaths where it appears that a prisoner has acted specifically to take their own life. Annual figures may change slightly as inquest verdicts and other information becomes available, although the figures presented here are a fair reflection of the number of self-inflicted deaths among young offenders.

	Number of offenders aged 18 to 20 who self-harmed	Number self-inflicted deaths of offenders aged 18 to 20
2001[1]	707	10
2002[1]	694	12
2003	950	11
2004	906	6
2005	1,079	10
2006	1,138	2

[1] Not comparable to later years due to change in reporting system.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many supervision orders with conditions were (a) issued to and (b) breached by young offenders aged 18 years and under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement; [126104]

(2) how many curfew orders were (a) issued to and (b) breached by young offenders aged 18 years and under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement; [126103]

(3) how many community punishment and rehabilitation orders were (a) issued to and (b) breached by young offenders aged 18 years and under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement; [126106]

(4) how many community punishment orders were (a) issued to and (b) breached by young offenders aged 18 years and under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement; [126107]

(5) how many detention and training orders were (a) issued to and (b) breached by offenders aged 18 years and under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement; [126110]

(6) how many (a) reparation orders, (b) action plan orders and (c) attendance centre orders were (i) issued to and (ii) breached by young offenders aged 18 years or under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement; [126112]

(7) how many supervision orders without conditions were (a) issued to and (b) breached by young offenders aged 18 or under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement; [126139]

(8) how many drug treatment and testing orders were (a) issued to and (b) breached by offenders aged 18 years and under in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [126103]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For sentencing purposes, juveniles are defined as being aged 17 and under; 18-year-olds are treated as adults. This response therefore is confined to young offenders aged 10 to 17 in the interest of clarity.

Statistics on sentencing of young offenders (persons aged 10 to 17) are published in "Sentencing Statistics 2005" (Home Office Statistical Bulletin No. 03/07), a copy of which is in the Library.

Table 2.8 on page 42 includes numbers of detention and training orders made and Table 3.7 on page 70 includes number of drug treatment and testing orders, supervision orders, curfew orders, community punishment and rehabilitation orders, community punishment orders, reparation orders, action plan orders and attendance centre orders made.

Although care is taken in collating and analysing the returns used to compile the figures in this publication, the data are of necessity subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large-scale recording system. Consequently, although figures are shown to the last digit in order to provide a comprehensive record of the information collected, they are not necessarily accurate to the last digit shown.

The bulletin referred to is also available on the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs07/hosb0307.pdf

Supervision orders with and without conditions are not published separately due to data quality problems, and in relation to statistics on breaches of all these orders, quality checks have shown that breach data are unsuitable for publication. Statistics on breaches can therefore only be published when significant improvements have been made to the submissions of these data to the Home Office.

Young Offenders: Foreigners

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of prisoners in young offender institutions are foreign nationals, broken down by nationality. [126081]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 14 March 2007]: At the end of January 2007 8 per cent. of all prisoners held in young offender and juvenile institutions were foreign nationals. Information on their nationalities can be found in the following table.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Biofuels

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he made of the impact on the wood panel industry of increasing the level of subsidy for co-firing using a wood-based raw material. [129531]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government support co-firing through the renewables obligation (RO). Currently, all technologies under the RO receive the same level of support. The Energy Review Report proposed banding the RO so that it provides different levels of support to different technologies. As co-firing is one of the most economic technologies, we have consulted on proposals to decrease the level of support it receives. These proposals would require amendments to the Electricity Act 1989 and will be the subject of an announcement later this year. At present, the level through which suppliers can meet their obligation through co-firing is capped at 10 per cent. having fallen from 25 per cent. in 2006. This cap not only protects the RO certificate market but also restricts the volumes of biomass, including wood, that can be used.

The Government also commissioned an independent report to look at the current and future impact of co-firing on the wood panel industry (ILEX, September 2005). The report concluded that allowing more waste wood (which is not suitable for use by the wood panel industry) to qualify for support through the RO would ease competition for the industry's preferred feedstock. We accepted these recommendations and have implemented them through changes to the biomass definition in the Renewables Obligation Order 2006 and will make further changes through the Renewables Obligation Order 2006 Amendment Order 2007 from 1 April 2007.

Business: Competition

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Ofcom on its plans for fostering competition in the market for business and small and medium-sized enterprises communications services as part of its policy objectives for 2007 and 2008. [123431]

Margaret Hodge: I meet regularly with representatives of the independent regulator Ofcom (the Office of Communications) to discuss a wide range of issues. SMEs use a number of communication services including voice lines, calls, internet access/broadband and leased lines. In each of these Ofcom is taking various steps to increase the level of competition and choice for businesses including:

Supporting development of local loop unbundling (LLU) by allowing BT's competitors to install equipment in BT exchanges. Where this occurs, for the first time, consumers have a choice of companies from which to rent telephone lines, as well as a wider choice than before of telecommunications packages.

Improving wholesale line rental (WLR) product and moving to "equivalence". This means that BT Retail has to purchase WLR from BT Wholesale in exactly the same manner as its competitors, and ensures a more level playing field, particularly in areas where no competitors of BT have decided to install equipment in the BT exchange.

Reviewing the leased line market (typically used by businesses needing a network to connect offices around the country) to ensure that remedies introduced in 2004 to improve retail competition remain appropriate.

In addition, I have had several discussions with Ofcom about their ongoing approach to spectrum management, so as to provide a competitive environment for SMEs and others conducive to innovation.

European Union Research and Development Framework Programme

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many British companies have (a) applied to and (b) received the European Union Research and Development Framework programme in each of the last three years. [130060]

Malcolm Wicks: The European Commission is responsible for providing member states with data on the implementation of the Framework programme.

The Sixth Framework Programme (FP6) covered the years 2003 to 2007. The data provided by the European Commission on total applications for funding are by member state total and not broken down by organisation type.

The data provided by the European Commission show that, in 2004, there were 9,105 UK applicants; 2,341 applicants received funding in this year, of which 429 were classified as industry participants.

In 2005 11,711 UK participants applied for funding from FP6; 2,328 applicants received funding in this year, of which 432 were classified as industry participants.

The European Commission data for 2006 cover the entire year for total applicants, but only cover projects signed up to July 2006 for specific organisation type. 4,036 UK participants applied for funding; with 2,049 applicants receiving funding; 70 of these were classified as industry participants.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment was made by his Department of the future commercial viability of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority prior to his agreement to provide further public money to support its continuing operation; [124777]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the commercial revenues generated by the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority will be sufficient to fulfil the Authority's needs. [124789]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are committed to funding the costs of the decommissioning and clean-up of the historic civil public nuclear liabilities arising at the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's (NDA) sites. The Consolidated Fund is the mechanism for funding this, with a mixture of grant in aid and commercial income. Over time the contribution from income will fall off, as productive units are progressively taken out of service. The NDA's commercial income is taken fully into account in setting its budget. We have agreed a budget for 2007-08 that will ensure that the NDA delivers a small increase in programme funding and which will ensure the NDA can meet its core objectives and maintain safety. We are now discussing longer term funding for the NDA in the context of the Spending Round.

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total cost to date has been of the creation and operation of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority. [124788]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department was advised by consultants, by means of a contract for services, on matters relating to arrangements for setting up the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA). Services under the contract included providing strategic management and direct technical and commercial functions to both the Department and the 'shadow' NDA. The contract was signed on 12 August 2002 and was novated to the NDA on 25 May 2005. The final cost was £23.16 million. The NDA's operational costs as given in their management accounts are as follows:

	Audited actual 2004-05	Audited actual 2005-06	Period 10 forecast 2006-07 (unaudited)
NDA Total Spend	9	2,420	2,683
NDA HQ Spend	9	36	50
Efficiency savings	0	124	140

Notes:
1. Expenditure in 2004-05 represents the 'shadow' NDA. Figures for 2005-06 and 2006-07 show the NDA established with its full staff complement.
2. Expenditure is stated on a near-cash basis and includes capital expenditure but excludes non-cash items such as depreciation and movement in provisions.

Post Offices

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department expects to report on the findings of the Post Office Network consultation. [129128]

Jim Fitzpatrick: We are currently reviewing the responses and hope to be able to announce our conclusions and final decisions in May.

Public Bodies

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much funding his Department gave to the (a) UK Atomic Energy Authority, (b) Nuclear Decommissioning Authority and (c) Civil Nuclear Police Authority in each of the last five years; and how much has been provided to each body in 2006-07. [106948]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 4 December 2006]: The DTI's departmental report shows payments to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA) for the funding of decommissioning, as follows:

	£ million
2002-03	277.411
2003-04	260.505
2004-05	288.500

In addition the DTI's departmental report shows other grant in aid payments to UKAEA, as follows:

	£ million
2002-03	0
2004-05	28.6

The Energy Act 2004 produced a reorganisation of the Government's nuclear decommissioning. The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) and the Civil Nuclear Police Authority (CNPA) were established with effect from 1 April 2005. The NDA acquired the responsibility for the nuclear liabilities which were previously the responsibility of UKAEA and the CNPA took over the responsibility for nuclear policing. These changes were reflected in a change to the funding arrangements provided by the DTI in 2005-06. The NDA received the major part of the decommissioning funding and the CNPA received minor sums. The funding to UKAEA was reduced accordingly.

The DTI's 2007 departmental report will disclose the following funding for 2005-06 and budgeted funding for 2006-07.

	2005-06	£ million 2006-07[1]
NDA (less NDA income)	1,051	1,508
UKAEA	9.7	12.6
CNPA	6	3

[1] Spring Supplementary Estimate.

Renewable Obligations

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of householders who have received renewable obligations certificates (ROCs) in the last year; and what the average value was of the ROCs received. [129851]

Malcolm Wicks: Ofgem administer the issuing of ROCs to renewable generators. They do not keep data on the number of generators who are households; however 57 of the 975 accredited generators were small generators below 50KW, and accredited to individuals rather than businesses. These 57 small generators claimed 952 ROCs in the 2005-06 period.

We do not keep data on average ROC prices for generators; however the nominal value of a ROC to suppliers for 2005-06 was £42.54.

Changes we have introduced in the Renewables Obligation Order 2006 (Amendment) Order 2007—currently before Parliament—will remove the requirement for sale and buyback agreements and allow agents to act for small generators, including householders. It is expected these changes will make it easier for householders to claim ROCs. Ofgem are expecting a consequent rise in the number of applications from small generators.

Research: Capital Investment

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the net balance of research and development investment is in (a) each UK region, (b) the United Kingdom and (c) the European Union. [129548]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the net balance of research and development investments is not available.

The OECD has for many years provided the most reliable and consistent international analyses of R&D expenditures, under the guidance of the Frascati Manual which sets out how to describe and measure R&D activities. In line with the Frascati Manual, the UK national statistics on R&D are at gross level.

The following table shows the latest available R&D statistics at regional level. Private non-for-profit expenditure on R&D (PNPERD) is not available at regional level. In 2004, PNPERD accounted for 3 per cent. of the UK gross domestic expenditure on R&D (GERD).

[1] Figures include estimates for those areas of central Government not available from the Government survey and local authorities.

Note:

1. Information on GERD at the UK level for 2005 was released by the Office of National Statistics (ONS) on 23 March. GERD amounted to £21,764 million in 2005.
2. For international comparisons, because of movements in exchange rates, it is more meaningful to express R&D as a percentage of GDP. The latest figures for 2005 were 1.8 per cent. both for the EU25 (OECD data) and 1.8 per cent. for the UK (ONS).

Royal Mail

Mr. Flello: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any proposals are under consideration for further consolidation in the Royal Mail sorting office sector. [129808]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This is an operational matter for which Royal Mail has direct responsibility. I have therefore asked the chief executive of Royal Mail, Adam Crozier, to provide a direct reply to my hon. Friend.

HEALTH

Cancer: Irish Community

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to reduce the (a) incidence of and (b) mortality from cancers in the Irish community in England. [128205]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We do not have any programmes to reduce cancer incidence or mortality specifically targeted at the Irish community in England.

However, as a result of the White Paper "Your health, your care, your say", there are a number of programmes and initiatives underway to encourage people to improve their health and to improve their health knowledge. These programs and initiatives should help reduce incidence, by helping people to lead healthier lives and make healthier life choices.

An important part of reducing mortality from cancer is early detection and we are working with the healthy communities collaborative, part of the improvement foundation, to test locally developed approaches to raising awareness of cancer symptoms in local communities, including black and minority ethnic communities. We would hope that if a person developed symptoms that may be cancer, that they would recognise the symptoms as abnormal and seek medical advice.

The NHS Cancer Plan sets out our strategy for improving cancer services for all patients and we have seen significant improvements in the management and provision of cancer services for all cancer patients, regardless of their ethnicity. The plan noted the need to provide patients with culturally sensitive information.

As announced in November 2006, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, the Cancer Reform Strategy will build on the success of the NHS Cancer Plan and will look at ways that we can improve awareness of cancer, the early detection of cancer and patient experience.

Developing policy which benefits all sectors of the community is central to the role of the Department, and we have a strong commitment to promoting race equality.

Community Hospitals: Cumbria

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has made to Cumbria Primary Care Trust prior to its announcement that no community hospitals within Cumbria will close. [124109]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There have been no such representations.

Dental Health: Children

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by her Department in the last five years on providing information to parents on preventing tooth decay in children. [128380]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Oral health promotion can take the form of educational and awareness campaigns aimed at population groups, or personal information and advice given by dentists, hygienists or other members of primary and community dental teams in the course of examining or treating individual patients.

Information on local national health service oral health promotion campaigns is not collected centrally although over the period 2003 to 2006 the Department contributed £1.1 million to pilot the Brushing for Life scheme intended to get families with young children into the habit of brushing their teeth regularly with fluoride toothpaste.

It is also not possible to quantify what proportion of the activity supported by the £2.2 billion gross budget in 2005-06 for NHS primary dental care services contributed to raising awareness of oral hygiene and the prevention of dental disease. One of the Government's objectives in introducing from April 2006 local commissioning arrangements for primary dental care services and changing the basis of remuneration for dental practices away from item of service fees was to give dentists more scope to focus on preventative care. Primary care trusts are also now required to provide oral health promotion programmes to the extent that they consider it necessary to meet all reasonable requirements within their areas. To assist them, we published an oral health plan for England "Choosing Better Oral Health" in November 2005.

Dental Services

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made on the level of access to NHS dentistry in (a) Portsmouth, (b) Hampshire and (c) England; and if she will make a statement. [126260]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Information Centre for health and social care publishes quarterly data on the number of patients receiving care or treatment from national health service dental services in the previous 24 months.

Information is held at primary care trust (PCT), strategic health authority (SHA) and England level. The data for the 24-month periods ending March, June and September 2006 for England and the then existing PCTs within the geographical areas of Portsmouth and Hampshire are provided in the following table. Information could be provided in the exact form requested for Portsmouth and Hampshire only at disproportionate cost.

Portsmouth City Teaching PCT	114,710	609	111,086	589	106,777	566

Notes:
1. PCT boundaries are as at 30 September 2006. The Information Centre will publish information on patients seen in the 24 month periods ending 31 March, 30 June, 30 September and 31 December 2006 by the new PCT boundaries (PCT boundaries as at 1 October 2006) on 23 March 2007.
2. Portsmouth City Teaching PCT remains a PCT after 1 October 2006. The other PCTs listed are those that now form Hampshire PCT as a result of the 1 October 2006 PCT boundary changes.
3. Patients have been identified by using surname, first initial, gender and date of birth. Each unique patient ID is normally assigned to the dental contract (and therefore PCT) against which the most recent claim for routine treatment was recorded in the 24 month period.
4. The information shows number of patients seen by dentists and the location in which these patients were seen. It does not show the patients home address. Most patients live within the PCT area in which they receive primary care dental services but some will attend a dentist further afield (near work for example).
5. The count of patient IDs is a robust statistical indicator of the overall level of patient involvement with NHS primary dental care. As with the previous registration system there will be some duplications and omissions. Patients will be omitted if two or more share the same surname, initial, sex and date of birth. Patients may be counted twice if they have two or more episodes of care and their name is misspelled or changed (for example on marriage) between those episodes of care. The risk of duplication increases if the episodes of care are at different practices.
6. None of the above factors is likely to affect the overall count by more than one or two percent. but at a PCT level there may be local demographic factors which make the local total more susceptible, e.g. a high proportion of women changing names after marriage, a local concentration of surnames prone to be misspelled, and or a transient patient base.

Dental Services: Manpower

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she plans to take to review dental manpower in England; and what mechanisms she plans to put in place to satisfy dental manpower needs over the next five years. [128378]

Ms Rosie Winterton: "The Report of the Primary Care Dental Workforce Review" published in 2004 identified a shortage of dentists to which the Department responded with two major initiatives. Through the Project 1000 campaign, the Department supported the national health service in recruiting the equivalent of 1,453 additional whole time dentists including some 500 overseas dentists. For the longer term, the Department increased the number of undergraduate training places in English dental schools by 170, a 25 per cent. increase in capacity. The first cohort of students to take these additional places will graduate in 2009 by when there will have been three years experience of the devolution of the commissioning of primary care dentistry to primary care trusts (PCTs). As part of these new arrangements, PCTs are responsible for assessing local needs and commissioning services to reflect these needs. The Department will work with the NHS to allow local need assessments and commissioning plans to feed into long term work force planning at national level.

Dentistry

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what forecasts were made for revenue from patient charges for NHS dental treatment in 2006-07; and what her most recent forecast is. [129894]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A table listing the primary dental service resource allocations for 2006-07 for all primary care trusts (PCTs) in England as at 31 July 2006 is available in the Library. This set out the net allocations awarded to PCTs and the assumed gross budgets based on illustrative assumptions about levels of patient charge income for each PCT. Strategic health authorities agreed with their PCTs locally how these allocations would be redistributed within the new PCT areas that took effect from 1 October 2006.

It is for PCTs to monitor and manage patient charge revenue locally in the context of managing their overall net financial commitments. The Department is not in a position to make a reliable estimate of patient charge revenue at national level ahead of receiving final outturn data for the full financial year. The Information Centre for health and social care will be publishing information on income from dental patient charges in due course.

Dentistry: Training

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental schools provide training for dentists in England; and how many places were offered by each dental school in each year since 1990. [128379]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of home and European Union students admitted to dental schools in England is available from 1993 onwards and is set out in the following tables.

Diabetes: Screening

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions there are upon the (a) availability, (b) type and (c) numbers of home blood testing strips for people diagnosed with diabetes. [129398]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Testing strips for blood glucose monitoring available on national health service prescription are restricted to those listed at Part IXR of the Drug Tariff. However, as with any medicine or appliance, which type is best for the patient and how many are prescribed are matters for discussion between the patient and their healthcare professional.

Food: Labelling

Mr. Cranmby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to discuss with manufacturers of confectionery and fizzy drinks the potential for warnings on packaging informing the consumer of the risks of tooth decay. [128377]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have no specific plans for the labelling of these foods, but improving diet and reducing sugar intake is one of the main themes of our oral health promotion programme. "Choosing Better Oral Health", the oral health plan for England, which we issued in November 2005, included advice to reduce both the frequency and the amount of added sugars consumed in line with the Department's target of reducing average intake of added sugar to 11 per cent. of food energy.

Health Services: Neurology

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of access to (a) physiotherapy, (b) respiratory support, (c) orthotics and (d) other NHS services for people with neuromuscular conditions; what recent changes there have been to those services; and if she will make a statement. [128923]

Andy Burnham: We have no made no recent assessment of NHS services for people with neuromuscular conditions.

The recently published "National Service Framework for Long-term Conditions" and the "Musculoskeletal Framework" have been designed to transform the provision of health and social services for those living with long-term neurological and musculoskeletal conditions.

Hospitals: Waiting Lists

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in Westminster Primary Care Trust waited for (a) 18 months and over, (b) 12 months and over and (c) six months and over for in-patient admission in each of the last four years. [126619]

Andy Burnham: The following table shows in-patient admissions for the last four-year period in the Westminster primary care trust (PCT) area.

Time Waited	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
More than 6 months to 12 months	948	1,089	967	901

Time Waited	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
More than 12 months to 18 months	216	127	87	76
More than 18 months	16	22	18	26
Number of elective waiting list and booked admissions where it is not possible to calculate accurate waiting times	1,875	1,683	1,926	2,594

Notes:
1. Finished in-year admissions: A finished in-year admission is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one health care provider, excluding admissions before 1 April at the start of the data year. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. Ungrossed data: Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in the data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).
3. Time waited (days): Time waited statistics from HES are not the same as the publicised waiting list statistics. HES provides counts and time waited for all patients admitted to hospital within a given period whereas the published waiting list statistics count those waiting for treatment on a specific date and how long they have been on the waiting list. Also, HES calculates the time waited as the difference between admission and the decision to admit dates. Where there is no recorded entry for decision to admit, or when decision to admit and admission date are the same this creates an invalid waiting time. Unlike published waiting list statistics, this is not adjusted for self-referrals or periods of medical/social suspension. The time bands "more than 6 months to 12 months" includes those who waited 183 to 364 days, the "more than 12 months to 18 months" includes those who waited 365 to 547 days, the "more than 18 months" includes those who waited 548 and more days.
4. Data quality: HES are compiled from data sent by over 300 NHS trusts and PCTs in England. The Information Centre for health and social care liaises closely with these organisations to encourage submission of complete and valid data and seeks to minimise inaccuracies and the effect of missing and invalid data via HES processes. While this brings about improvement over time, some shortcomings remain.

Influenza

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doses of which antivirals have been contributed by the UK to the WHO stockpile maintained in the event of a pandemic flu outbreak. [129905]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The United Kingdom has not contributed antivirals to the World Health Organisation (WHO) stockpile, but has donated £500,000 to the WHO to assist its rapid response activities and to improve epidemiological surveillance in south-east Asia for pandemic influenza. This corrects the information given in the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Lynne Jones), regarding the WHO's stockpile, on 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1552W.

Mental Health Services

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding the Department of Health provided to (a) the mental health charity Combat Stress and (b) Hollybush House in each year between 2001 and 2006; [120447]

(2) what funding her Department plans to allocate to the mental health charity Combat Stress in each of the next five years. [120459]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department in England has not provided funding to Combat Stress or any of its treatment centres in the last five years and currently has no plans to do so.

The Ministry of Defence meets individual costs relating to war pensioners who undergo remedial treatment at one of the two Combat Stress homes in England for conditions related to their individual war pensioned disablement. For details of Ministry of Defence expenditure since 2001 in respect of individual remedial treatment of qualifying war pensioners at Combat Stress Homes in England, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for Defence, my hon. Friend the Member for Halton (Derek Twigg), on 12 December 2006, Official Report, column 933W. The Ministry of Defence also made a grant of £100,000 towards the costs of modernising accommodation at Hollybush House. Separate funding is provided from the Scottish Health Board for treatment of war pensioners at Hollybush House and towards its modernisation.

Mental Health Services: Children

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long (a) children and (b) looked-after children waited to gain access to mental health services on average in each of the last five years. [127033]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected in the format requested. The most recent information available is from the 2005 Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service (CAMHS) mapping exercise. In November 2005, there were 26,207 children and young people waiting to be seen by specialist CAMHS in England, a reduction of 2,674 from the previous year.

In November 2005 52 per cent. of new cases were seen by specialist CAMHS within four weeks, an additional 33 per cent. within 13 weeks, and a further 10 per cent. within 26 weeks. 5 per cent. of children and young people waited over 26 weeks to be seen by specialist CAMHS. In 2002 only 24 per cent. of new cases were seen within four weeks and just over 50 per cent. were seen with 13 weeks.

Andy Burnham: The information requested is shown in the table.

NHS: Finance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of payment by results on the financial position of hospital trusts (a) in England and (b) in North Yorkshire; and if she will make a statement. [128313]

Andy Burnham: The financial position of national health service trusts is subject to continual monitoring. The impact of the implementation of payment by results is the focus of an independent evaluation project being undertaken by the University of Aberdeen, supported by the University of Dundee and the Office of Health Economics in London.

NHS: India

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to outsource a proportion of the NHS's accounting and finance jobs to India; and if she will make a statement. [126215]

Andy Burnham: There are no plans to outsource a set proportion of the national health service's accounting and finance jobs to India. NHS shared Business Services Ltd. (SBS) is a 50:50 joint venture with Xansa, a listed plc, which offers a range of finance and accounting services to the NHS on a commercial basis.

It is for each trust to decide if it wants to contract for these services, a decision which will be based on price, quality and service. Given that the United Kingdom business is based in Wakefield, a decision to contract with NHS SBS results in staff being displaced locally. NHS SBS, on receiving the contracted work, without the staff necessary to undertake the work, must make decisions as to whether to allocate that work to UK based staff or sub-contract it to India.

North Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget was of North Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust in each of the last five years. [130158]

Andy Burnham: The allocations made to the North Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust are shown in the following table:

	£ million	Increase in real terms (Percentage)	Increase in cash terms (Percentage)
2003-04	135.1	6.0	8.4
2004-05	147.5	6.5	9.1
2005-06	160.5	6.2	8.9
2006-07	190.4	6.3	9.1
2007-08	209.0	6.8	9.7

Nurses: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies for nurses there are in the NHS in Cumbria. [128731]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The latest data collected were for March 2006 through the national health service vacancy survey. This collects vacancies that the trusts have actively been trying to fill for the last three months.

For Carlisle and District primary care trust (PCT), Eden Valley PCT and West Cumbria PCT there were no vacancies for nurses recorded in the March 2006 vacancy survey.

Palliative Care

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by her Department on palliative care services in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by health authority. [129519]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Primary care trusts are responsible within the national health service for commissioning and funding services for their resident population, including palliative care.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average number was of people on waiting lists for (a) radiotherapy, (b) chemotherapy and (c) other treatments for prostate cancer in the latest period for which figures are available; and what the average waiting time was in the same period. [128520]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Statistics on average waiting times for cancer patients and average waiting times for different types of cancer treatment are not collected centrally. Cancer waiting times' standards of a maximum wait of 31 days from diagnosis to first cancer treatment, and a maximum wait of 62 days from urgent referral for suspected cancer to first cancer treatment were introduced for all cancer patients from December 2005. In the last quarter (October to December 2006) performance against these standards was 99.6 per cent. and 96.3 per cent. respectively.

Prostate Cancer: Ethnic Groups

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that men with prostate cancer receive equal treatment regardless of ethnic background. [129263]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Developing policy which benefits all sectors of the community is absolutely central to the role of the Department, and we have a strong commitment to promoting race equality. The Department welcomed the Prostate Cancer Charter for Action's report, "Tackling Prostate Cancer in Black and Minority Ethnic (BME) Groups", published in September 2006. We know that men of African origin are more at risk of developing prostate cancer, and the Department funded two of the key studies featured in the report, the successful African Caribbean Awareness Project and the Prostate Cancer in Ethnic Subgroups research study.

Good progress has been made in considering the recommendations of the report. The recommendations were included for consideration in the cancer equality action plan, which fed into the Department action plan to support the publication of the single equality scheme on 4 December 2006.

With specific reference to treatment, the cancer action team (CAT) have appointed to the post of Associate Director: Patient Experience. This post is being funded by the National Audit Office, and the postholder begins work on 1 April 2007. Responsibilities will cover equality issues for cancer, including prostate cancer, as follows:

"provide leadership on BME issues within the CAT;

promote the establishment of a forum of the key stakeholders working with BME communities and work with them to facilitate the sharing of good practice; and work with key stakeholders and specialist cancer networks to develop best practice guidance for cancer networks (including needs of local population, awareness raising, information and support for patients, end of life care and promoting the implementation of guidance)."

Thyroid Gland: Fluoride

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the relationship between fluoridisation and thyroid disorders. [129284]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has commissioned and funded two research studies on fluoridation and health. "A Systematic Review of Public Water Fluoridation" published by the University of York in 2000 identified two studies, which found no significant association between thyroid disorders and water fluoridation, and one study with a positive association. However, the positive study looked at combined fluoride/iodine intakes and has not been published in a peer review journal.

"Water Fluoridation and Health" published by the Medical Research Council (MRC) in 2002 endorsed York's recommendation on the need for further research into fluoridation, but accorded low priority to further research on thyroid disorders. This was because the MRC judged the scientific plausibility of an association between water fluoridation and thyroid disease to be low.

We are committed to a continuing programme of research on the effects of fluoridation on health.

Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust: Ophthalmology

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) occupied consultant posts and (b) locums there are in the opthalmology units of the (i) Alexandra and Princess of Wales, (ii) Worcester Royal and (iii) Kidderminster hospitals; and what population is served by each. [128839]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not available in the format requested.

The Department collects data on the number of consultants and locums working in the ophthalmology speciality, but these are at national health service trust level rather than by individual hospital. Data on the number of consultants and locums working in ophthalmology in Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust, which runs the Alexandra, Worcester Royal and Kidderminster hospitals as at 30 September 2005, are shown in the table. The same data source show that Worcester primary care trust (PCT), which runs the Princess of Wales community hospital, did not have any ophthalmology staff working for them in the same time period.

	Number
All staff	18
Of which consultants	7
Of which locums	0

Note:
Locum data are not collected to the same level of detail and validation as the main workforce census. Locum figures are therefore rounded to the nearest 10 due to data quality. Locum data exclude staff who already hold a substansive contract.

Source:
The Information Centre for health and social care medical and dental workforce census.

The Department holds data on population numbers, but this is at PCT-level rather than by individual hospital. The general practitioner (GP) population data collected in April 2005 for GP relevant populations as at April 2004, showed Worcester PCT as serving a population of 542,261. Please note that these data have been constrained to the Office for National Statistics 2004 mid-year population estimates, based on the 2001 Census, but do not include armed forces and some prisoners.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Absent Voting

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what representations the Electoral Commission has received from Equifax on the reliability of signature scans to verify postal votes. [129145]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it has received no such representations.

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission if he will place in the Library copies of the correspondence between the Electoral Commission and the Department of Constitutional Affairs on remote electronic voting pilots in the 2007 local elections. [129148]

Peter Viggers: This is a matter for the parties concerned. However, I am informed by the Electoral Commission that copies have been placed in the Library, along with a note setting out the context of the correspondence. The Electoral Commission's letter of 1 December 2006 to the Department for Constitutional Affairs commenting on the pilot scheme applications for the May 2007 elections is also available on its website at:

http://www.electoralcommission.org.uk/elections/pilotsmay2007.cfm.

Elections: Administration

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1015W, on elections, if he will place in the Library a copy of the new guidance manual and polling station handbook. [129262]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that copies of these documents have been placed in the Library.

Elections: Fraud

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what the timetable is for the Electoral Commission to complete its analysis of the Crown Prosecution Service records of cases of alleged offences under electoral legislation; and whether its analysis is planned to be placed in the public domain. [129149]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it will be publishing on its website later this week an initial analysis of the relevant Crown Prosecution Service files. It will also place a copy in the Library. The Commission intends to continue this work, and will report further in due course.

Electoral Commission: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how much the Electoral Commission spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper or publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers or publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic of each was. [129147]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it spent £4,800 in 2005-06 on funding advertorials in eight regional newspapers in Northern Ireland to provide registration and voter information prior to the 2005 general election. It also spent £1,736 on sponsoring a student magazine in Northern Ireland, with the specific aim of conveying the same information to young people, an under-registered section of society.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Absent Voting

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps local authorities have taken to protect the personal identifiers collected from postal voters from being (a) sold to third party companies and (b) used by (i) credit reference agencies and (ii) other non-governmental bodies. [129421]

Bridget Prentice: Personal identifiers for postal voters are personal data held by an Electoral Registration Officer (ERO) not a local authority. Under the Electoral Administration Act 2006, they may only be disclosed to: other EROs to help them carry out their duties; returning officers at an election; persons involved in the preparation or conduct of legal proceedings under the Representation of the People Act 1983, such as the police or an election petition court.

Also, at the checking of postal votes at an election, candidates and their agents may see the personal identifiers relating to any postal votes that the returning officer is minded to reject, and they may also be disclosed to election observers, but only to the extent required to permit them to observe the proceedings.

There is no provision in legislation for personal identifiers collected from postal voters to be sold to third party companies or to be used by other non-governmental bodies such as credit reference agencies.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department takes to prevent coercion and intimidation being used in postal voting. [129456]

Bridget Prentice: We have inserted new secrecy warnings on postal voting papers to deter any unlawful attempts to influence another person's vote.

The Electoral Administration Act 2006 strengthens the existing offence of undue influence to cover both successful and unsuccessful attempts at exerting undue influence on another voter. This should make it easier to secure conviction where there is evidence of intimidation.

More generally, the Government have fully supported the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) and the Electoral Commission in the development of guidance for police officers to raise awareness of electoral fraud issues. ACPO and the Electoral Commission have issued jointly updated guidance on fraud prevention and detection at the May 2007 elections. The guidance sets out the main electoral offences—including the offence of undue influence—and suggests appropriate police action in response to any allegations of fraud or impropriety that are made.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that the procedures in place to verify the personal identity of those people who vote by post are consistent with those in place to verify the identity of those who vote in person. [130072]

Bridget Prentice: Under provisions in the Electoral Administration Act 2006, as approved by Parliament, a greater level of security has been put in place for postal voting than for voters in polling stations, in order to address particular concerns about the security of postal voting.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether her Department intends to extend to other parts of the UK the system in place in Northern Ireland which uses national insurance numbers as a means of ensuring greater checks upon the validity of (a) voting in person and (b) voting by post. [130278]

Bridget Prentice: The national insurance database is primarily used, by the Elections Office for Northern Ireland, to verify the identity of a person registering to vote. It is not used to verify the identity of persons voting in person, although it is also used to verify postal vote applicants.

The Government are currently monitoring the arrangements in Northern Ireland. However, we presently have no plans to verify the identity of registrants, postal voters or persons voting in person against the national insurance database.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what mechanisms are in place to prevent the fraudulent filling in of a postal ballot obtained with false identification. [129321]

Bridget Prentice: Applicants for a postal vote must be included on the electoral register. The Electoral Administration Act 2006 imposes a duty on the Electoral Registration Officer (ERO) to ensure electoral registers are accurate and comprehensive. It also strengthens the objections procedures, and enables EROs to act upon any objections made to a person's entry on the register, and to initiate an investigation into a person's entry on the register if the ERO is in doubt about whether the person is entitled to be registered.

The Act creates the new offence of falsely applying for a postal vote.

The Act also establishes a scheme that provides for the use of personal identifiers by postal voters. They require persons voting by post to provide their signature and date of birth, both when they apply for a postal vote and when they return their postal vote at an election. Checks will be done to ensure the personal identifiers match.

If an ERO is in doubt about the validity of a postal vote application he may make further inquiries with the applicant, and if necessary, he may report the matter to the police. Signatures and dates of birth will be stored by the ERO, and will be important evidence in the event of any investigation into suspected fraudulent applications.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what estimate she has made of the costs of countering fraud in postal voting across the UK during the next (a) national and (b) local elections; [129336]

(2) what the estimated costs are of countering fraud across the UK during the next (a) national and (b) local elections. [129455]

Bridget Prentice: The Government have provided £21.1 million to cover the new measures introduced within the Electoral Administration Act 2006, and Representation of the People Regulations 2006, including new anti-fraud measures. In addition, we have committed up to £12.2 million, spread over 2006-07 and 2007-08, to provide to local authorities in England and Wales to cover the specific costs of implementing the absent voter personal identifiers provisions in the Electoral Administration Act 2006.

The precise amount of ongoing funding provided by local authorities to electoral services is not known at present. However, under the Electoral Administration Act 2006, the Electoral Commission will be able to obtain financial information from electoral administrators which will enable accurate data on electoral spending to be made available.

Funding for the running of the next General Election will be agreed at the appropriate time. That funding will include money for postal voting arrangements.

Courts: Drugs

Mr. Malins: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will extend the pilot scheme for drugs courts. [130357]

Ms Harman: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer of 22 January 2007, Office Report, column 1495W. Dedicated drug courts are being piloted by the Department for Constitutional Affairs at Leeds and West London magistrates courts and an independent evaluation of the pilots will be complete by summer 2007. This will determine if this drug court model delivers benefits and will inform the potential for extended operation.

Courts: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many incidents of violence were recorded on the Northern Ireland courts estate in each of the past three years for which figures are available, broken down by location; and what steps she is taking to reduce such incidents. [129512]

Bridget Prentice: The following table sets out recorded incidents of violence on the Northern Ireland courts estate in the last three years.

	2004	2005	2006
Belfast combined courts	3	2	1
Craigavon	1	—	—
Lisburn	—	1	—
Coleraine	—	—	1
Strabane	—	—	1
Newtownards	—	—	1
Total	4	3	4

Court security is provided by a private contractor. Sufficient numbers of security personnel and a range of security measures are deployed to deter incidents of violence, including archway and hand-held scanners at entrances and segregation of opposing parties. If required, additional security is provided by the Police Service of Northern Ireland who also respond to reported incidents.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many security officers were employed in each location on the Northern Ireland court estate in each of the last three years for which figures are available, broken down by grade. [129704]

Bridget Prentice: The following table details how many security officers were employed in each location on the Northern Ireland courts estate in the last three years.

Elections: Petitions

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints have been made to the police about election petitions in the last five years. [129346]

Bridget Prentice: This information is not held centrally.

Electoral Commission: Powers

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether her

Department plans to strengthen the Electoral Commission's powers to take investigative and enforcement action. [129320]

Bridget Prentice: The Government are considering the recent review of the Electoral Commission by the Committee on Standards in Public Life and also the recommendations of the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee and Sir Hayden Phillips that relate to the regulatory role of the Electoral Commission.

The Government will provide a considered response in due course.

Electoral Register

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) whether her Department plans to ensure that a consistent approach is adopted by all local authorities in ensuring that individuals register to vote; [129423]

(2) how the Government plan to enforce registration of all voters at a local authority level. [129344]

Bridget Prentice: Sections 9 and 10 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 and section 9 of the Electoral Administration Act 2006 (EAA 2006), set out the necessary steps that all local authorities must follow to ensure that eligible individuals are registered to vote.

These steps include sending the canvass form more than once to any address, conducting house to house enquiries and making contact by such other means as appropriate. Each local authority will adopt an approach which is appropriate to local circumstances, within the context of the necessary steps.

Section 67 of the EAA 2006 allows the Electoral Commission to set and monitor performance standards for electoral services. The Commission is currently developing electoral registration indicators and these should be implemented across England and Wales during December 2007. The aim of these indicators is to improve performance in electoral services, which will help to increase registration levels and compile a more accurate register.

European Land Information Service

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what funding from the public purse has been provided for the European Land Information Service. [129364]

Bridget Prentice: There has been no funding of the European Land Information Service (EULIS) from public expenditure. The service has been developed and financed by a consortium of European land registration authorities, including HM Land Registry, with support from the European Commission's eContent and eTEN funding programmes. Land Registry is a trading fund and, as such, finances its operations from fee income and makes no call on public expenditure.

Incapacity Benefit: Appeals

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 19 March 2007, Official Report, column 622W, on incapacity benefit appeals, what the reasons are for the average clearance time for incapacity benefit appeals; and what measures she is putting in place to improve performance. [129391]

Vera Baird: The figures given in response to the previous question relate to the average time from when the appeal is lodged in the Department for Work and Pensions until the date for the first hearing.

The average waiting time performance and actual performance within the Tribunals Service is contained in the following table.

Weeks

	Performance target	Actual performance
2003-04	13	11.2
2004-05	11	10.4
2005-06	11	10.4

The aim of the Tribunals Service is to list incapacity benefit appeals to the first available session on receipt of the pre-hearing enquiry form from the appellant. In determining this date, a balance needs to be struck between how soon an appeal can be heard and giving customers sufficient time in which to prepare for their hearing including seeking representation and further medical evidence in support of their appeal.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average success rate is of appeals against refusal of incapacity benefit (a) overall, (b) made in person and (c) made on the basis of written evidence alone. [129392]

Vera Baird: The latest available data are contained in the following tables.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she expects to reply to the letter to her dated 20 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester Gorton with regard to Anwar Mortlock. [129349]

Bridget Prentice: My right hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor responded to my right hon. Friend's letter on 21 March. I apologise for the delay.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she expects to reply to the letters of (a) 23 November 2006 and (b) 1 March 2007 on Mr. Nettleingham from the hon. Member for Billericay. [130159]

Vera Baird: My hon. Friend Baroness Ashton of Upholland replied to the hon. Gentleman's letter on 22 March. I apologise for the delay.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Drugs

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Afghan law permits the cultivation of opium for medicinal use. [127690]

Margaret Beckett: The Afghan counter-narcotics law was passed as a decree in December 2005. In order to allow Afghanistan to fulfil its obligations under the 1972 UN convention on drugs and its protocols, the law has provisions for the licensed cultivation of opium poppy.

However, the counter-narcotics law is currently being redrafted. This follows representations from members of the Afghan Parliament asking for the provision for legal cultivation to be removed, as opium cultivation is against Article 7 of the Constitution.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mandate the UK has as the G8 lead nation for counter-narcotics in Afghanistan; whether this mandate has changed in the last 12 months; and what plans there are for the mandate to be changed before 2010. [127691]

Margaret Beckett: Following the Bonn Agreement in 2001, a number of G8 countries took on lead responsibility for specific Security Sector Reform work. The UK took lead responsibility for counter narcotics. When the Afghan Compact was agreed at the London Conference in early 2006, the international community recognised the progress that had been made since the Bonn Agreement. It was agreed with the Afghan Government that the concept of lead nation was now redundant, they now had lead responsibility for all aspects of Security Sector Reform, and that the G8 countries should become partner nations. There are no plans for our mandate to change before 2010.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's counter-narcotics strategy is in Afghanistan in relation to the production of cannabis; and if she will make a statement. [127693]

Margaret Beckett: The cultivation of cannabis is against Afghan law and is covered by the Afghan Government's national drug control strategy. The UK's counter narcotics effort in Afghanistan is focused on supporting implementation of the national drug control strategy with regards to the heroin trade.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role the UK plays in the Good Performance Initiative in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [127694]

Margaret Beckett: The UK supports the Good Performers Initiative (GPI) which is a partnership between the international community and the Afghan Government, established in late 2006, designed to assist and encourage provinces in Afghanistan to reduce poppy cultivation by providing funds for development projects. To date, the six provinces that were opium poppy free in 2006 have been awarded US $500,000 each, and eight provinces that cultivated less than 1,000 hectares of opium poppy in 2006 have been awarded US $150,000. Funding of the GPI will in future be discussed through the Counter-Narcotics Trust Fund, to which the UK is a contributor.

Afghanistan: Overseas Aids

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to provide UK officials and development advisers in Helmand province in Afghanistan, as set out in the Enduring Relationship Action Plan 2006-07; what their role is expected to be; and from which Government Departments she expects them to come. [128396]

Margaret Beckett: Advisers from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Department for International Development, Post Conflict Reconstruction Unit and the police are already working out of our provincial reconstruction team in Helmand province. They are involved in a range of good governance activities designed to extend the Government's influence across the province.

Colombia: Human Rights

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment her Department has made of abuses of human rights in Colombia; and if she will make a statement. [129617]

Mr. McCartney: Human rights are at the heart of our policy towards Colombia and we keep the human rights situation in Colombia under constant review.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Right's (UNHCHR) latest report on Colombia, published on 15 March, provides a thorough assessment of the human rights situation in the country. It highlights continuing areas of concern, but also recognises the positive commitment by the Colombian Government, and the concrete progress made in several key areas. We very much agree with the thrust of the report and believe that it is important to recognise advances as well as challenges facing Colombia. We will continue to support the UNHCHR Office in Colombia in their valuable work with the Colombian Government, international community and civil society.

A copy of the report will be placed in the Library of the House.

Colombia: Trade Unions

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the UK Government have made to the (a) Government of Colombia and (b) International Labour Organisation on the rights of trade unions to operate in Colombia. [129616]

Mr. McCartney: I met with Colombian Vice President Santos at the UN Human Rights Council in March. While I welcomed the significant progress that Colombia had made, I pointed out that civil society and trade union development in Colombia continued to present big challenges.

My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, has met with both British and Colombian trade unionists in the UK and Colombia. This close contact was enhanced during his visit to the region in September 2006 when he met again with trade unions in order to strengthen, links, learn from shared experiences and to demonstrate the importance the UK attaches to the role of civil society in Colombia. There was detailed discussions of the role of the new International Labour Organisation (ILO) office in Bogota, Colombia. Our Embassy in Bogota also regularly communicates with Colombian trade unions.

We remain concerned that threats against trade unionists and human rights defenders remain in Colombia. However, we are encouraged by the positive steps the Government of Colombia have been taking to improve the human rights situation. For example, a new unit of specialised prosecutors has been established to deal with cases of human rights abuses involving trade unionists, with greater resources—a point specifically welcomed by the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights in his report on Colombia, published on 15 March.

We continue to urge the Government of Colombia to meet their international obligations in regard to workers' rights. But we believe that change can be best achieved through a supportive approach; and consider the ILO's Special Technical Co-operation Programme for Colombia to be one of the most effective ways of helping to bring about real and positive improvement in workers' rights in that country. We are encouraged that the ILO has established an office in Colombia and hope that this will be a step forward in improving labour issues in the country.

Cyprus

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received on (a) proposals for the development of land in the Morphou area of Cyprus for tourist purposes and (b) proposals to distribute Greek Cypriot-owned land in the area to young Turkish settlers; and what steps she plans to take in response to the proposals. [130003]

Mr. Hoon: We are aware of property development in the Morphou area, and have received representations from hon. Members, including the question tabled by my hon. Friend in February of last year. As explained in the response the previous Minister for Europe on 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 738, we maintain dialogue with the Turkish Cypriot community leaders on the issue of property, but are unable to control property development in northern Cyprus. We believe that the difficult and complex issue of property is only likely to be resolved in the context of a comprehensive settlement. To this end, we continue to urge both sides to engage constructively with the United Nations to enable settlement negotiations to start as soon as possible.

European Movement

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has met representatives of the European Movement since assuming her position. [129245]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not formally met representatives from the European Movement since assuming her position, but I have had the opportunity to meet a range of contacts. For instance, in January 2007, I spoke at a panel-style debate organised by the European Movement as part of a series of "Speak Up Europe" debates being held across the European Union. On 22 March, I gave a keynote speech at a European Movement conference at Chatham House called "Celebrating 50 years of the Treaty of Rome".

European Union

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what involvement the UK Government have had on the drafting of the Declaration of Berlin. [129542]

Mr. Hoon: Chancellor Merkel wrote to Heads of State and Government in January asking each member state to nominate a 'focal point' and accompanying aide to liaise with the Presidency in their consultations in preparation for the 50th Anniversary Declaration. The UK 'focal points' are Mr. Kim Darroch (Head of the Cabinet Office European Secretariat) and Ms Shan Morgan (EU Director in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office).

The German Presidency drafted the Berlin Declaration. During that process they consulted all member states on what they wished to see included in the text.

Sudan: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there is a deadline for a formal response by the President of Sudan to the UN Secretary-General's letter of 24 January requesting Sudanese agreement to the heavy support package of United Nations support to the African Union Mission in the Sudan; and if she will make a statement. [127163]

Margaret Beckett: The UN Secretary-General did not set a deadline for President Bashir to respond to his letter of 24 January. However, President Bashir's delay in doing so, and now his refusal to endorse the Heavy Support Package as agreed between the AU and UN, highlights Sudan's reluctance to have the UN deploy in Darfur. This is part of a wider pattern of non-co-operation with the international community. The UK will be pushing for tougher measures in the Security Council against Sudan, including a country-wide arms embargo and further targeted sanctions.

Venezuela

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the US Administration on their attempts to prevent Venezuela from attending the Community Democracies meeting in Malawi scheduled for June 2007. [129502]

Mr. Hoon: Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers and officials have made no representations to the US Administration on their position on Venezuelan attendance at the Community of Democracies meeting scheduled for Bamako, Mali, in November 2007.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Carer's Allowances

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were in receipt of both carer's allowance and working tax credits in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [127965]

Mrs. McGuire: The requested information is not currently available.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans his Department has to ensure that single parents receive the same weekly rate of carer's allowance as a parent living with a spouse, civil partner or another person; and if he will make a statement. [129603]

Mrs. McGuire: The rate of carer's allowance is the same whether being claimed by a single parent or a member of a couple.

Children: Maintenance

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether regulations on time limits which apply to the collection of civil debts also apply to the collection by the Child Support Agency of historical arrears of child maintenance. [128084]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 27 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, whether regulations on time limits which apply to the collection of civil debts also apply to the collection by the Child Support Agency of historic arrears of child maintenance. [128084]

When a non-resident parent has defaulted on child support payments, and arrears have accrued, as a result the Child Support Agency may instigate debt recovery by alternative measures such as of civil court action or by employing the services of an external collection agency. If the non-resident parent is employed then a Deduction from Earnings Order may be implemented to recover both ongoing child support maintenance and an amount towards arrears.

Although in England and Wales most civil debt is subject to the Statute of Limitations, the time bar relating to collection of child maintenance debt is determined by the Child Support (Collection and Enforcement) Regulations 1992, Regulation 28 (2A) as amended by the Child Support (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 2006. When pursuing collection and enforcement through the courts this legislation has the effect of removing the 6 year limitation in respect of all amounts that became due after 12 July 2000. The Prescription and Limitation (Scotland) Act 1973, limits the age of debt recoverable through the Scottish civil courts to twenty years.

Where a Deduction from Earnings Order has been implemented there is no time bar limiting the age of the arrears that can be recovered using this method.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of repeat applications for disability living allowance for under 18-year-olds (a) were down rated and (b) received no new award in the last period for which figures are available; what proportion of such applications were appealed in that period; and what proportion of those appeals were successful. [129796]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the take-up rate of disability living allowance for children; and if he will make a statement. [129797]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of households in receipt of disability living allowance for a child receive it for (a) two children and (b) three or more children. [129798]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households receiving disability living allowance for a child are in receipt of carer's allowance for an adult. [129806]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Full Employment Agency: Manpower

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of staff who will be employed by the new Full Employment Agency in Scotland. [120311]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Full Employment Agency is a matter which we are discussing with the Scottish Executive. No estimate has been made by DWP of the cost of the number of staff who will be employed by the proposed agency.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many thefts of the Independent Living Fund's back-up tapes of personal data there have been in the last 12 months. [122851]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been advised by the trustees that in the last 12 months there has been one theft of an Independent Living Fund's back-up tape containing personal data.

New Deal Schemes

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of (a) all leavers, (b) female leavers and (c) male leavers from new deal 50 plus (i) found unsubsidised jobs and (ii) returned to jobseeker's allowance on leaving the programme in each year since 2000. [118806]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is in the table.

3. Data are held quarterly so the figure given is for August 2001.
4. NDYP is a mandatory programme for claimants aged 18-24 who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for six months.
5. ND25+ is a mandatory programme which was initially introduced for claimants aged 25 and over who had been claiming JSA for two years.
6. NDLP is a voluntary programme. Lone parents can participate if they are not working, or working less than 16 hours per week, and their youngest child is under 16 years old.
7. NDP is a voluntary programme. When it was initially introduced in April 1999, partners of claimants who had been claiming JSA for at least 26 weeks were eligible to join the programme.
8. ND50+ is a voluntary programme which supports people aged 50 or over who have been claiming benefits including JSA, income support, incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance for six months or more.
9. NDDP is a voluntary programme for disabled people who are in receipt of certain qualifying benefit (for example, incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance).

Pathways to Work

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have passed through Pathways to Work programmes in each year since their inception, broken down by (a) area and (b) whether the participants had a physical or mental disability; and what proportion obtained work in each case. [102173]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the tables.

Note that the figures for those entering work are for those recorded as doing so on Jobcentre Plus systems and will understate true work outcomes.

Jobs measured by the Job Entry Target (JET) up to March 2006 are for the most part job opportunities that customers have been submitted to by JCP staff and that JCP staff have followed up to confirm the job entry, or jobs from NDDP brokers. Not all jobs obtained by people who have made an IB claim in a Pathways to Work area will be obtained in this manner as they would also be looking at newspaper ads, employment agencies, the internet, word of mouth, etc.

Since April 2006 jobs have been measured via the Job Outcome Target (JOT). This is based on HMRC income tax payment records it not a complete measure of all job entries for a number of reasons. For example; a large proportion of part-time/lower paid jobs will not be reported as they are below the tax threshold.

[1] The proportions entering work for this period are based on new claimants only, excluding the small number of existing customers brought in during this period.
[2] Jobs recorded in Jobcentre Plus systems—the true proportion entering work will be higher than this.
Notes:
1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10. A value of '-' indicates a nil or negligible value. A value of '.' indicates that the value has not been calculated.
2. As pathways began in October 2003, the first year covers approximately six months. The second and third years, based on an operational year, run from April until March. The last year covers approximately three months, until the last recorded data in June 2006.
3. Data for starts on pathways are to end of June 2006. Data for job entries are to end of March 2006. No more recent data are available for job entries because the previous job entry measure was terminated in March 2006, and the new job outcomes target data which replaced it have an approximate six month reporting lag, so that April 2006 data are not yet available. Because of the time it takes for pathways participants to find work, the latest cohort of entrants for whom it is possible to give a meaningful figure for proportion entering work is those starting in September 2005. Even then, this figure is potentially misleading if compared with earlier cohorts, as many find work more than six months after joining. To give a more useful comparison over time, the proportion finding jobs within six months is also given.
4. Additionally, this understates total job entries since it only counts those recorded in Jobcentre Plus systems. Survey data from the independent evaluation suggest for example that 42 per cent. of pathways participants had done at least some paid work in the 10 months after starting..
5. Job entry figures include all recorded job entries plus return to work credit (RTWC) awards for which no job entry is yet recorded. (By definition, an RTWC award must indicate that a job entry has occurred). Figures for job entries include new deal for disabled people (NDDP) job starts.
6. Data for physical disability are based on those participants for whom a medical condition is recorded, but whose condition is not classified as a mental health condition.
7. The data on medical condition for Pathways to Work participants are incomplete. This is because they are drawn from incapacity benefit data that appear in the National Benefits Database (NBD). This impacts on the completeness of pathways medical condition data in two ways; (1) NBD lags behind other Pathways Evaluation Database sources by some three to four months, and (2) The NBD incapacity benefit data are based on a six-weekly snapshot, which means that some short-term claims of less than six weeks are not included.

Personal Income

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people earned over the (a) £5, (b) £10 and (c) £20 per week earning disregard and had their income support for incapacity reduced in each of the last three years. [127907]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The information is not available.

Poverty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the next publication of Households Below Average Income is due. [129818]

Mr. Plaskitt: The next publication of Households Below Average Income is due on 27 March 2007.

Social Security Benefits

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was paid to individual (a) male and (b) female recipients aged (i) 18 to 25, (ii) 26 to 30, (iii) 31 to 40, (iv) 41 to 50, (v) 51 to 60, (vi) 61 to 70, (vii) 71 to 80 and (viii) over 80 years excluding pensions and pension credits in the last period for which figures are available. [127009]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available other than at disproportionate cost.

Social Security Benefits: Benefits Rules

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what recent estimate his Department has made of the number of people who are undertaking permitted work; [130243]

(2) how many people claiming (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance and (c) income support for incapacity are recorded as undertaking permitted work. [130247]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the written answer I gave on 22 March 2007, Official Report, column 1079W.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department records the number of people undertaking permitted work. [130246]

Mrs. McGuire: Yes.

Social Security Benefits: Carers

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the level of benefits provided to carers working more than 35 hours per week who receive (a) income support, (b) jobseeker's allowance and (c) the carer's allowance; what the basis is for the differences in the amounts paid via the different channels; and if he will make a statement. [128477]

Mrs. McGuire: These benefits are designed to help carers in very different circumstances. Income support and the income-based element of jobseekers allowance, both of which include extra help for carers, are intended to ensure that people of working age and their families can meet all their normal daily living needs when they are out of work. Carer's allowance provides a measure of income-maintenance to those carers who provide at least 35 hours of care each week for a severely disabled person, but who are not entitled to additional means-tested support from the benefit system.

We have introduced improvements for carers in all these benefits, in addition to the normal annual uprating. We also review the adequacy of these benefits at regular intervals.

Social Security Benefits: Disabled

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent estimate his Department has made of the cost of increasing the earning disregard for (a) incapacity benefit, (b) income support for incapacity and (c) carer's allowance. [127819]

Mrs. McGuire: Part-time work while on incapacity benefit is covered by the permitted work rules and while on carer's allowance by an earnings limit, rather than the earnings disregards.

DWP has no reliable estimate of the cost of changing the earnings disregard limit in income support for sick and disabled people. The cost varies widely according to the nature of the change being proposed.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what projects his Department has undertaken with the Staffordshire Police Authority to combat fraudulent activities in relation to benefits in the last 12 months. [128330]

Mr. Plaskitt: Investigators from the Department for Work and Pensions collaborates with officers from Staffordshire police authority on cases where they have a common interest and where the Department requires police assistance.

An example of current joint working with Staffordshire police authority is Operation Oblique. This was set up to investigate a number of girocheques which were reported as missing but were subsequently discovered to have been cashed. The investigation is continuing and at least one person has so far been arrested.

As well as investigations relating to benefit fraud, DWP also works with Staffordshire police on investigations which relate to the integrity of the national insurance number system.

State Retirement Pensions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what methodology the Government use to decide what annual pension increase to award. [129619]

James Purnell: The level of the uprating for state pensions is calculated using the increase in the retail prices index for the 12 months ending in the preceding September. This enables us to complete the action necessary to ensure that the new rates for over 11 million pensioners are put into payment in April.

TREASURY

Breast Cancer: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many women (a) were diagnosed with and (b) died from breast cancer in each of the last five years; and what the figures were for each London borough. [130241]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 27 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many women (a) were diagnosed with and (b) died from breast cancer in each of the last five years; and what the figures were for each London borough. [130241]

The latest available figures for newly diagnosed cases (incidence) of malignant neoplasm of breast are for the years 2004. Figures for 2000-2004 for England and the London boroughs are given in Table 1 below.

The latest available figures for deaths are for the year 2005. Figures for 2001-2005 for England and the London boroughs are given in Table 2 below.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the timetable is for the proposed rewrite of corporation tax law. [129417]

Dawn Primarolo: The first of the proposed corporation tax rewrite Bills is expected to be enacted early in 2009 and the second a year later. This will complete the proposed rewrite of corporation tax legislation. The timetable has been agreed by the Tax Law Rewrite project's Steering and Consultative Committees.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of the corporation tax rewrite to (a) the Government and (b) business. [129694]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of the work of the Tax Law Rewrite project in relation to the rewrite of corporation tax is estimated to be £10 million spread over the years 2005-06 to 2009-10.

The cost of the rewrite to business will mainly arise through tax professionals spending time becoming familiar with the rewritten legislation. It has not been possible to quantify this cost. But users have expressed confidence that the clearer legislation in those Acts will result in efficiency savings many times greater than this initial cost.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the tax code on corporation tax has been determined since (a) 1997 and (b) 2000. [129086]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not currently available and the cost of providing a precise answer would be disproportionate.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on his proposals for a corporation tax law rewrite Bill. [129087]

Dawn Primarolo: The Tax Law Rewrite project was set up in 1996 under the right hon. and learned Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke), the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Shortly after this the project issued a consultation document outlining proposals for taking the work forward. There were over 70 written responses including responses from most of the representative bodies in the tax field.

There was unanimous support for the general proposals and nearly the same level of support for rewriting and separating the income tax and corporation tax codes, a proposal which has been adopted.

Extensive consultation has always been a key aspect of the project's work. It has a steering committee and a consultative committee made up of representatives of professional bodies. Its work is also published on the internet for wider consultation.

The first draft corporation tax clauses were published for consultation in 2006 and a response document will be published shortly. The project has also published papers on the scope of the corporation tax rewrite. Its scope has been agreed by both the steering and the consultative committees. The intention is to complete the rewrite of corporation tax in two Bills.

Debt and Derivatives

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on proposals to rewrite the tax law in relation to debt and derivatives. [129085]

Dawn Primarolo: The Tax Law Rewrite project's work involves widespread consultation with representative bodies and others interested in tax legislation. In the ordinary course of this process, representations have been received by the project about whether the loan relationships and derivative contract legislation should be rewritten and if so, when.

The Consultative Committee of the Tax Law Rewrite project is made up of a wide range of representative bodies including those that made representations about this issue. It recently agreed the proposal to include these rewritten provisions in the first of the two corporation tax rewrite Bills. This decision was endorsed by the project's steering committee.

Departments: Conflict of Interests

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many instances there have been under Section 5.17 of the Ministerial Code of a Minister in his Department having duties removed to avoid a potential conflict of interest in the last five years. [120695]

John Healey: All provisions of the Ministerial Code, including those relating to financial interests, have been observed by Treasury Ministers.

EC Budget

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the gross cash contribution from the UK to the EU (a) was in each year since 1997 and (b) is expected to be in each year to the end of the 2007 Budget period; what the gross cash receipts from the EU to the UK (i) were and (ii) are expected to be in each year; what the net cash contribution to the EU from the UK (A) was and (B) is expected to be in each year; what the main elements making up the (1) gross contribution and (2) gross receipts (x) were and (y) are expected to be in each year; and what the main factors affecting changes from year to year (aa) were and (bb) are expected to be in each case. [130155]

Ed Balls: The UK gross contribution to the EU budget, receipts, net contribution and the elements thereof for 2000-06, as well as the factors affecting the variations from one year to the next can be found in chapter 3 and the tables on pages 42 and 43 the EC Finances White Paper "Statement on the 2006 EC Budget and measures to counter fraud and financial management" (Cm 6670). The period 1997-99 is covered by the 2003 edition of the EC Finances White Paper (Cm 5800). The 2007 edition of the White Paper, which will cover the years 2001 to 2007, will be published later this year.

A more recent forecast for UK net contributions to the EC budget in the years 2005-06 to 2007-08 can be found in the footnote to table C11 of the 2007 Financial Statement and Budget Report (HC 342). 2007-08 is the final year of the current public expenditure planning cycle and revised forecasts for the later years will be included in the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007.

For estimated gross and net contributions to the EC budget and receipts over the next Financial Perspective I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply to the hon. Member for Surrey Heath (Michael Gove), 31 January 2005, Official Report, column 399W.

The main factor affecting the changes in both contributions and receipts in the 2007-13 Financial Perspective with respect to earlier years is the accession of 10 new member states in 2004 and of Bulgaria and Romania in 2007.

Housing: Valuation

Martin Horwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many valuations were made under section 128 of the Housing Act 1985 by the district valuer in (a) Gloucestershire and (b) Sheffield between 1 September 2005 and 1 February 2006. [127988]

Dawn Primarolo: Within the time frame 1 September 2005 and 1 February 2006, the number of determinations made by the district valuer under section 128 of the Housing Act 1985 are as follows:

Gloucestershire (to include districts of Cheltenham, Cotswold, Forest of Dean, Stroud, Tewkesbury and City of Gloucester)—17;

South Gloucestershire (Unitary Authority)—10.

The Sheffield office of the Valuation Office Agency is responsible for determinations in the former Metropolitan county of South Yorkshire. Information has been provided for each district:

City of Sheffield—47;

Metropolitan borough of Rotherham—23;

Metropolitan borough of Doncaster—12;

Metropolitan borough of Barnsley11.

Inheritance Tax

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the inheritance tax threshold was in each year since 1996-97. [129106]

Dawn Primarolo: The nil rate bands for inheritance tax in each of the last 10 financial years are given in table A.8 of HMRC National Statistics, available from the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/inheritance_tax/appendix_a8.pdf.

At Budget 2007 the Chancellor announced that the IHT nil rate band will rise by more than expected statutory indexation to £350,000 in 2010-11.

Isle of Man

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the common purse agreement on VAT between the UK and the Isle of Man; and how much the UK paid to the Isle of Man under this agreement in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [129497]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The UK-Isle of Man revenue-sharing arrangement applies to a number of indirect taxes including VAT, customs duty and most excise duties, referred to as the "common duties". The Isle of Man's share of the common duties for each of the last 10 years is contained in the Isle of Man Annual Account. This account is certified by the National Audit Office, laid before Parliament and is therefore available from the House of Commons Library.

The formula for calculating the Isle of Man's share of the common duties has recently been jointly reviewed by the UK and the Isle of Man and it has been agreed that a new formula will apply from 1 April 2007. A copy of the revised Treasury Direction, which sets out how the new revenue sharing formula will operate, will be placed in the House of Commons Library at the earliest opportunity.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Government has made of the effect of the landfill tax escalator on (a) local authorities' costs of dealing with waste, (b) frequency of waste collections and (c) council tax bills. [129204]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no net effect on the total cost to local authorities as a whole of increases in the standard rate of landfill tax above 15 per tonne. Provision has been made in the increases in the total revenue support grant for local authorities for the estimated additional revenue.

The impact on the costs of individual local authorities, and so on council tax bills, will depend on the extent of the use of landfill by the authority.

It is for local authorities to determine the nature and frequency of their waste collection service within the legal framework and taking account of local circumstances. Cost will be one consideration in such decisions.

Planning Gain Supplement

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the revenue from planning-gain supplement from English developments in areas outside London he expects to be allocated to the English regional assemblies. [129099]

John Healey: At least 70 per cent. of planning-gain supplement (PGS) revenues would be returned to the local planning authority from which the planning permission was granted, and to which the PGS liability was attached. The Budget announced that the remaining share of all PGS revenues raised in a region would be returned to that region. Regions would have access to a fund for spending in support of regional infrastructure priorities in pursuit of the objectives identified in regional spatial strategies (RSSs).

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the revenue from planning gain supplement in Wales he plans to allocate to (a) the Welsh Assembly and (b) Welsh local authorities. [129103]

John Healey: As announced at the 2006 pre-Budget report, all planning-gain Supplement (PGS) revenues generated in the devolved Administrations would be returned to the country in which they were generated. The use of PGS funds in the devolved Administrations would be determined by the relevant Administrations, although it is proposed that PGS revenues should be dedicated to infrastructure throughout the UK.

Revenue and Customs: Manpower

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many full-time equivalent posts were (a) lost and (b) created in HM Revenue and Customs between April 2006 and February 2007 at (i) grades Administrative Assistant to Senior Officer, (ii) Grades 6 and 7 and (iii) Senior Civil Service grades. [129872]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 March 2007]: The information requested is not available. HMRC does not record centrally details of all posts created within the department.

However, HMRC has a target to reduce its number of full-time equivalent posts by 16,000 between 1 April 2004 and 31 March 2008, and redeploy 3,500 of these to additional frontline posts. HMRC reports regularly on progress towards these efficiency targets in its Spring and Annual Reports, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Social Security Benefits: Orders and Regulations

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the advice provided by the Social Security Advisory Council to his Department on (a) the Child Benefit (General) Regulations 2005, (b) the Child Tax Credits (Amendment) Regulations 2005, (c) the Child Tax Credits (Amendment) Regulations 2006, (d) the Tax Credits (Claims and Notifications) (Amendment) Regulations 2006 and (e) the Tax Credits (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 2006; and if he will make a statement. [128938]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer hon. Gentleman to the memorandum of understanding under which terms HMRC and the Social Security Advisory Committee conduct their business. The memorandum is available from the hmrc.gov.uk website or the Committee's website. The links are:

Stamp Duty: Carbon Emissions

David Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of homes built during 2006 which would have been eligible to be exempt from stamp duty as being zero carbon. [130277]

Ed Balls: No data exist on the exact number of homes built in 2006 that would meet the qualifying criteria set out in the Budget for zero carbon homes. As set out in the Budget, the relief will help to kick start the market for new highly efficient technologies in homes. The Government's aim is that within a decade all new homes will be zero carbon.

Students: Loans

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 March 2007 to question 127940, what estimate he has made of the percentage of student loan repayments made to HM Revenue and Customs in financial years (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2003-04 that have not yet been passed on to the Student Loan Company; what estimate he has made of the total value of these payments; and how many people made student loan repayments during 2003-04. [129076]

Dawn Primarolo: For the financial year 2005-06 HM Revenue and Customs will only know the total number of borrowers who have had repayments deducted by their employer when they have finished processing all the employers' annual returns for that year.

However, at the current date, the best estimate is that information on 83 per cent. of all student loan repayments has already been passed on to the Student Loans Company.

For the financial year 2003-04 HMRC has passed information on student loan repayments for 277,499 borrowers to the Student Loans Company. HMRC is in the process of resolving queries that have delayed 21 cases (0.008 per cent.) being passed to the SLC.

With regards to the total value of these payments, no student loan amounts are passed to the SLC at any stage. All student loan amounts recovered by HMRC are passed to the Department for Education and Skills on a quarterly basis for investment in education. It is only the information about borrower repayments that is included in the employer's annual return that is passed to the SLC once that information becomes available after the end of the financial year. Published 2003-04 and 2004-05 student loans cash receipts figures are available in the 2005 and 2006 HM Revenue and Customs annual report which can be accessed at:

Tax Havens

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the 2006 US Senate report into tax havens; and what meetings he has had in the last 12 months with the Isle of Man authorities on this issue. [129498]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 March 2007]: I am not aware of any representations in relation to the 2006 US Senate report on tax havens.

My officials have had a number of meetings with officials from the Isle of Man on tax matters.

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department has taken to reduce (a) tax evasion and (b) money laundering in tax haven states. [129499]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The Government support and promote measures that aim to reduce tax evasion and money laundering internationally. In particular, we have worked in partnership with the EU and the OECD to introduce measures that enhance transparency and exchange of information, which is the key to tackling tax evasion. Specific measures include the EU Savings Tax Directive and its framework of agreements with other countries and territories and the OECD initiative on tackling harmful tax practices.

From July 2007, the Government are taking action through the UK's Presidency of the Financial Action Taskforce (FATF—the international standards setter on money laundering and terrorist finance), to identify and tackle the most serious financial threats posed by criminals and terrorists.

Taxation: Hotels

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which organisations have made written representations to his Department on new, additional local taxation on hotel accommodation in the last 12 months, excluding submissions to the Lyons Inquiry. [129588]

John Healey: The Treasury receives numerous written representations on a range of tax issues, including tourist taxes.

In line with the recommendation made by Sir Michael Lyons in his final report into the role and funding of local government that a robust evidence base has not been developed to support the introduction of a tourist tax, the Government do not intend to introduce a tourist tax. Tax policy is kept under constant review and changes are normally announced by the Chancellor at the Budget.

Tax Law Rewrite Project

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Tax Law Rewrite Project has identified changes in the law which would be beneficial but which require a policy decision. [129769]

Dawn Primarolo: Policy suggestions are sometimes made by those responding to draft clauses published by the Tax Law Rewrite project for comment.

These are passed to officials with responsibility for the relevant policy areas for them to consider. All policy suggestions received in response to each draft Bill are listed in the response document for the relevant Bill.

Taxation: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of tax relief for approved pension schemes in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [130104]

Ed Balls: Latest detailed estimates of the annual cost of tax relief on approved pension schemes are available in table 7.9 on Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/pensions/menu.htm

In addition a provisional estimate of the overall net cost of tax relief for the current year is given in table A3.1 of the Budget report. This is £16.3 billion for 2006-07.

Taxation: Small Businesses

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of business taxation was paid by small businesses in the last period for which figures are available. [129367]

John Healey: The proportion of corporation tax paid by small companies in 2004-05 was 23 per cent.

It is not possible to apportion other tax receipts between business taxpayers and others, or between business taxpayers of different sizes. This is due to a number of taxes (for example fuel duty) being paid by both businesses and individuals, and because markets adjust to shift the incidence of taxation throughout the economy.

Figures on total receipts from individual taxes are available in tables 2.1A to 2.1E in Financial Statistics published by the Office for National Statistics.

www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/tsdtables1.asp?vlnk=fsf

Valuation Office: Manpower

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many full-time equivalent staff were employed by the Valuation Office Agency in each year since 2000. [129104]

Dawn Primarolo: The numbers of full-time equivalent staff employed by the agency as at the end of March each year are shown in the following table.

	Number
2000	3,803
2001	3,771
2002	3,740
2003	4,000
2004	3,803
2005	4,812
2006	4,850
2007[1]	4,326

Welfare Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times Tax Credit Office staff reported technical problems with the computer system in each month since January 2006. [124272]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many manual tax credit payments have been made since April 2003; how many claimants have received such payments; and what proportion of all (a) payments and (b) claimants these represent. [126512]

Dawn Primarolo: Around 1.6 million tax credits payments were made manually from April 2003 to January 2007 inclusive. This represents around one quarter of one per cent. of all payments made since April 2003. Information is not available on the number of claimants who have received manual payments in the same period.

Around 34,500 households are currently receiving manual payments representing around 0.5 per cent. of households currently benefiting from tax credits.

Welfare Tax Credits: EC Accession

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what checks are made on claims for child tax credit by citizens of (a) Poland, (b) Slovakia, (c) Lithuania, (d) Estonia and (e) Latvia resident in the UK; [127702]

(2) how many citizens of (a) Poland, (b) Slovakia, (c) Latvia, (d) Lithuania and (e) Estonia are claiming (i) child tax credit and (ii) working tax credit in the UK; [127703]

(3) how many citizens of (a) Poland, (b) Slovakia, (c) Lithuania, (d) Latvia and (e) Estonia are claiming child benefit in the UK; [127704]

(4) what checks are made on claims for child benefit from citizens of (a) Poland, (b) Slovakia, (c) Latvia, (d) Lithuania and (e) Estonia. [127705]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 20 March 2007]: The detailed breakdown requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the last Accession monitoring report, published on 27 February 2007 on the Home Office immigration and nationality directorate's website, http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/aboutus/reports/accession_monitoring_report, provides detailed information including the total number of workers from the new member states of the EU who have made a claim for child benefit and tax credits.

All claims for tax credits and child benefit are subject to a wide range of checks throughout the life of each claim. It would be inappropriate to disclose a complete list of checks as to do so may provide assistance to those attempting to defraud the system.

Welfare Tax Credits: ICT

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many service credits he has made Capgemini liable for in each month since they took over the tax credit IT system; what the value is of these credits; and how many hours of online service disruption there have been to the system. [126509]

Dawn Primarolo: Under the terms of the Aspire contract, service credits are administered on a quarterly basis. The Aspire contract is the contract by which information technology is provided to the Inland Revenue and its successor department, HMRC.

Capgemini assumed responsibility for the management of the Aspire contract in June 2004. The following table shows all service credits and their value since Capgemini took over the contract.

The amounts represent a very small proportion of the annual cost of the Aspire contract and are commensurate with the low-level technological problems that are typically experienced in a service delivery of this size, complexity and value.

It is very difficult to make comparisons with other public IT contracts where details are available due to widely differing approaches in the use of service credits and liquidated damages.

The Aspire service credit figures are proportionately larger than Capgemini experience in their other outsourcing work in the UK, reflecting the tougher contractual conditions in a second generation outsourcing contract.

Quarter	Number of service credits	Value of service credits (£)
Q4 2004	4	1,504,000
Q1 2005	1	40,000
Q2 2005	2	1,082,000
Q3 2005	2	320,000
Q4 2005	4	220,000
Q1 2006	2	117,000
Q2 2006	5	868,000
Q3 2006	9	297,000
Q4 2006	3	37,000

In March 2006 HMRC paid £270,000 back to Capgemini for overpayments made by Capgemini on service credits in previous quarters.

Since Capgemini took over the tax credit IT system in June 2004 there have been 18 hours and 30 minutes of unscheduled online service disruption against a contracted time of 13,962 hours and 30 minutes. This represents 0.1 per cent. of unscheduled online service disruption. Of these 18 hours and 30 minutes, 15 hours and 45 minutes fell in the first year. In calendar year 2006 no hours were lost.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new IT releases there have been to the tax credit system in each month since the contract transferred to Capgemini. [126510]

Dawn Primarolo: Capgemini assumed responsibility for the management of the Aspire contract in June 2004. The Aspire contract is the contract by which information technology is provided to the Inland Revenue and its successor department, HMRC.

Since June 2004 there have been new IT releases to the tax credit system in September 2004, April 2005, November 2005, April 2006 and October 2006.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been paid to Capgemini for running the IT tax credits system, exclusive of VAT. [126511]

Dawn Primarolo: The amount paid to Capgemini in respect of IT service charges for running the tax credits system during the period from July 2004 to January 2007 is £64 million, exclusive of VAT.

Welfare Tax Credits: Overpayments

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many legal actions were instigated against tax credit claimants in respect of overpayments in each month of the last two years for which figures are available; and in how many cases in each month the claimant was continuing to dispute the claim. [129024]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the monthly basis requested is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Before instigating legal proceedings HMRC make a number of attempts (by telephone and a personal visit) to contact the customer. They also check to see if there is any existing dispute about the overpayment before commencing legal action. Where the issue of a court summons produces a defence claiming that the overpayment is in dispute proceedings are suspended until the claim is resolved.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the contribution of official error in determining the level of write-offs of disputed overpayments of tax credits in 2005-06 and 2006-07; [129157]

(2) what assessment he has made of the reasons for the difference in the amounts written off for disputed overpayments of tax credits in 2006-07 as compared to 2005-06. [129158]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the oral evidence given before the Treasury Committee on 14 March 2007.

Welfare Tax Credits: Personation

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claimants have disputed their payment on the grounds that their identity has been stolen and a fraudulent claim has been made on their behalf. [128540]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 March 2007]: The information requested is not available but where a customer does contact HMRC to report possible abuse this is acted upon by the Department to stop any incorrect payments and prevent any further distress to the genuine claimant by correcting the claim as quickly as possible.

TRANSPORT

A628

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what factors he took into consideration when authorising the budget increase for the A628 Mottram Tintwistle bypass; what the main reasons were for agreeing to the increase; and upon what date he agreed to the increases. [130424]

Dr. Ladyman: I took account of a number of factors in agreeing to an increase in the approved cost estimate for this scheme. In particular, I noted that important causes of the cost increase were, firstly, the decision, arising from the North West's advice on priorities for major transport schemes, to slip the proposed start date of this scheme to 2012-13; secondly, the use of more realistic forecasts of construction inflation up to the scheme's new start date; and thirdly, the inclusion of additional works to restrain the amount of traffic passing through the Peak District National Park following the construction of the scheme. I also took account of all the impacts, including the benefits that the scheme will provide. These include relieving the communities of Mottram, Hollingworth and Tintwistle of high volumes of through traffic and providing improved journey times for travellers. In the light of the overall balance of costs and benefits I decided that it was appropriate to agree the increase.

I took this decision on 30 January 2007. However, I recognise that at the higher cost estimate this scheme represents an additional pressure on the funding allocation for major schemes in the North West region. Officials will be discussing this with the North West region shortly and I will take account of any views that they may wish to offer on the provision of funding and timing of delivery of this scheme in the light of the higher cost.

A69: Greenhead

Mr. Gregan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he paid £103,974.92 to the account of Brims and Company Ltd., mentioned at item 5 in the third interim award of 16 October 1998 in the Greenhead A69 diversion arbitration. [129038]

Dr. Ladyman: Brims and Company Ltd. were contractors working on the A69 Greenhead diversion scheme. The company went into receivership in 1990. Receivers were appointed and an arbitration was brought against the Secretary of State. A settlement figure was agreed and ratified by the arbitrator in November 2002. This was a full and final settlement and explicitly included the payment of interest and costs. The agreed settlement figure was paid to Brims and Company Ltd. shortly thereafter. The settlement was enshrined in a consent award which attracts the confidentiality which is implicit in the arbitration process. The confidence is owed to the administrative receiver of Brims and Company Ltd.

Official Cars

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Ministers were entitled to the services of an official Government car in each year between 1997 and 2006. [130284]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) is responsible for providing ministerial transport in line with the Ministerial Code and the Prime Minister's guidance 'Travel by Ministers'.

All serving Cabinet Ministers, Ministers of State and Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State since 1997 were entitled to an official Government car.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which Ministers with an entitlement to an official Government car have chosen to be driven in (a) a Jaguar and (b) a Toyota Prius. [130285]

Dr. Ladyman: Guidance on the use and provision of government cars is set out in Travel by Ministers and the Ministerial Code. It is for individual Ministers to account for their travel arrangements.

Railway Stations

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) rail and (b) tram stations there are in England and Wales; and (c) how many bus stations there are in England. [129161]

Mr. Tom Harris: The information is as follows.

(a) The Network Rail's Annual Return to the Office of Rail Regulation published 1 August 2006 shows that there were 2,167 stations in England and Wales.

(b) There are 391 tram stops in England, although currently no light rail systems in Wales (excluding those, such as the Great Orme Tramway, which is operated primarily as a tourist attraction and not as a transit system). There is no distinction in this figure between a tram stop and a tram station. These figures do not include MerseyRail or the London Underground, which are considered "heavy" rail, but does include the Docklands Light Railway.

(c) Unfortunately, we are unable to provide the number of bus stations in England. We do not define bus stations in our data as there is no clear definition as to what a bus station is i.e. at what point are bus stops clustered close enough in order to call it a bus station. Therefore, we only recognise individual bus stops. The number of bus stops available relates to Great Britain only, as it is extremely hard to count bus stops for individual countries. There are currently 361,745 active bus/coach stops in Great Britain as a whole.

Railways: Electric Cables

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he is taking to reduce the amount of cable theft on the railways; [130397]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effects of cable theft on the railways. [130398]

Mr. Tom Harris: The British Transport Police are well aware of the seriousness of cable theft and, working with Network Rail, have initiated a wide range of measures to address the problem.

The effects of cable theft on the railways is an operational matter for Network Rail, as the owner and operator of the national rail network. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Network Rail's Chief Executive at the following address for a response to her question.

John Armitt
Chief Executive
Network Rail
40 Melton Street
London NW1 2EE

Railways: Freight

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has undertaken any research on the impact of railfreight interchanges on reducing the number of heavy goods vehicles movements and carbon dioxide emissions. [130478]

Mr. Tom Harris: Each railfreight interchange is unique to its specific location and the impact it has on heavy goods traffic is therefore particular to that individual site. Because of this it has not been possible to produce generic modelling on heavy goods vehicle movements at railfreight interchanges.

Roads: Halifax

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much capital has been allocated by local authorities to new road projects in Halifax since 1997. [130406]

Gillian Merron: Figures for the Halifax constituency are not specifically available. The following table sets out how much capital spending on integrated transport improvements has been reported by Calderdale metropolitan borough council (which includes Halifax) to my Department from 1997-98 to 2005-06.

	Amount (£000)
1997-98	1,002
1998-99	1,333
1999-2000	873
2000-01	1,810
2001-02	2,041
2002-03	2,263
2003-04	2,967
2004-05	2,799
2005-06	1,700

Integrated transport improvements are new road and local public transport related projects. The totals exclude investment made in the area by West Yorkshire Passenger Transport Authority, as this is primarily related to public transport.

South West Trains: Fares

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the proposal by South West Trains to increase (a) off-peak, (b) super off-peak and (c) first class fares; and if he will make a statement. [130416]

Mr. Tom Harris: These fares are unregulated and therefore Stagecoach need not seek the approval of the Department. Unregulated fares are for train operators to set at their discretion.

The Department has received three letters on the subject.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many speed cameras there are in Halifax constituency. [130403]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not hold this information, but does have the information for the area covered by the West Yorkshire Safety Camera Partnership, analysed by local authority. The details are shown in the following table.

Local authority	Number
Calderdale MBC	20
City of Bradford MDC	26
City of Wakefield MDC	13
Kirklees	13
Leeds CC	15
Grand total	87

Vehicle Emissions

Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to arrange flexibility of implementation for a Europe-wide agreement on exhaust emissions to allow UK-based car manufacturers to respond fully and positively whilst maintaining their manufacturing operations; and if he will make a statement. [129845]

Dr. Ladyman: Following the European Commission's announcement of its intention to legislate on new car fuel efficiency, the Government intend to hold a consultation with stakeholders to ensure that impacts are fully assessed, including issues of flexibility and cost-effectiveness, before a final legislative proposal is produced.

SCOTLAND

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128064]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999. The Office does not record separate figures for campaigns by television, radio and print. Figures for 1999-2000 are not available; the Office spent the following on advertising:

2000-01	270,694
2001-02	186,564
2002-03	10,390
2003-04	0

Most of the expenditure in 2000-01 and 2001-02 relates to electoral registration matters; since 2001, this has been the responsibility of the Electoral Commission.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper and publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers or publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic of each was. [129949]

David Cairns: Nothing.

Devolution: Scotland

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent devolution issues the Advocate General has considered. [129054]

David Cairns: Since 24 February, 43 devolution issues have been intimated to the Advocate-General. Of these 43 devolution issues, 14 related to civil proceedings and 29 related to criminal proceedings.

Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he expects the Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007 to be implemented in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [129096]

David Cairns: The Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007 extend to Scotland and I would expect them to be implemented in exactly the same way as in England and Wales.

Orkney

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to his answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2028W, on Orkney, how many visits were made by Scottish Office Ministers to (a) Orkney and (b) Shetland in each year from 1983 to 1999. [127331]

David Cairns: I regret that this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent (a) representations he has received on and (b) assessment he has made of the reliability of .50 ammunition for the heavy machine gun used by UK troops in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [129324]

Mr. Ingram: We are experiencing no performance problems with any ammunition and a rigorous testing system is in place to assure this.

Reports of stoppages on the 0.5 calibre heavy machine gun were received from Afghanistan last year. Comprehensive technical investigations confirmed that the cause was a weapons system problem, not the ammunition, which was quickly resolved.

In an unrelated investigation, some ammunition was found to have substandard links, which were causing wear to feeding blocks. The decision was swiftly taken to withdraw all of this ammunition from theatre, and the stock was replaced.

The weapon system, including its ammunition is currently operating efficiently in all theatres of operation.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) for what reason Eurofighter aircraft are being deployed in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement; [129472]

(2) when he expects Eurofighters to be deployed in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [129473]

Des Browne: There are no plans to deploy Eurofighter aircraft to Afghanistan.

Air Force: Military Bases

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which RAF bases (a) have been closed since 1997 and (b) are due to be closed. [119256]

Derek Twigg: I will write to the hon. Member with information on the number of RAF bases that have been closed since 1997.

The following RAF bases have been announced as currently scheduled for closure:

RAF Bentley Priory
RAF Brampton
RAF Innsworth
RAF Lyneham
RAF Uxbridge

Hercules Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the reasons for the fuel leaks on the Hercules aircraft after they have been fitted with suppressant foam; and if he will make a statement. [129352]

Mr. Ingram: We are currently collating and evaluating data in connection with the fuel leaks that have occurred on some Hercules aircraft fitted with explosion suppressant foam. This work is being undertaken by a joint MOD/industry team.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2007, Official Report, column 205W, on Hercules aircraft, whether the Fit For Purpose Hercules aircraft available to the Front Line Command provided by The Hercules Integrated Operational Support contract includes (a) explosive suppressant foam and (b) defensive aids suite; and if he will make a statement. [129706]

Mr. Ingram: All of the RAF's Hercules aircraft are maintained under the Hercules Integrated Operational Support contract. I am withholding the number of aircraft that are equipped with explosion suppressant foam and defensive aid systems as its disclosure would be likely to prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of the armed forces.

Hospital Ships

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department plans to order the two hospital ships recommended in the 1998 strategic defence review. [128582]

Mr. Ingram: It is planned that the Maritime Role Three Medical Capability programme, previously called the Joint Casualty Treatment Ship, will address the capability referred to in the strategic defence review.

Lynx Helicopters: Procurement

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) information and (b) evidence informed the decision to procure the new Lynx helicopter; and if he will place in the Library copies of such material. [129446]

Mr. Ingram: The decision to procure the new Lynx helicopter was informed by the Main Gate Business Case submitted to the Investment Approvals Board supported by a broad range of supporting evidence. This provided information and evidence about the required military capability, affordability, value for money and coherency with the defence industrial strategy.

I am withholding further information on the business case as its disclosure would prejudice commercial interests.

Navy: Lynx Helicopters

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Royal Navy's fleet air arm, with particular reference to the Lynx Mk7 Attack Helicopter; and whether he plans to replace the existing Lynx Mk7 with a more modern helicopter. [129734]

Mr. Ingram: 847 Naval Air Squadron at RNAS Yeovilton is the only Fleet Air Arm unit to operate the Lynx Mk7. The Joint Service Future Lynx programme to replace the Lynx Mk7 helicopters of the Fleet Air Arm and the Army with the new Battlefield Reconnaissance Helicopter has a projected in service date of 2013.

Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty: Opinion Polls

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what public opinion polls his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the United Kingdom's obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. [130370]

Des Browne: The Department has neither commissioned nor evaluated any opinion polls concerning the UK's obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. We are aware of our obligations under this treaty and continue to meet them in full.

Trident Missiles

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the introduction of the Mk4A Arming, Fusing and Firing system on the (a) ability to accurately adjust the height of burst of the Trident warhead and (b) probability that the Trident warhead will be effective against hardened targets. [129539]

Des Browne: The MK4A Arming, Fusing and Firing system is a non-nuclear component being introduced into the UK Trident warhead to replace a similar component which is becoming obsolete. This is necessary to ensure that we can keep the existing warhead in service in the 2020s. I am not prepared to discuss the detailed performance characteristics of our nuclear weapons.

PRIME MINISTER

E-petitions

David Maclean: To ask the Prime Minister what the cost is of providing administrative support services to the e-petition facility on the Downing street website. [129867]

The Prime Minister: Since it is potentially part of the work of all those involved in e-petitions and handling correspondence in my office, information on the cost of administrative support services in not available in the format requested.

Prime Minister: Speeches

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Prime Minister what the names and job titles were of those invited to his speech on the arts at Tate Modern on 6 March 2007. [129534]

The Prime Minister: This is a matter for Tate Modern.

Sudan: Sanctions

Mr. Drew: To ask the Prime Minister what sanctions he is proposing should be imposed upon the Sudanese government following his letter to Chancellor Merkel. [130248]

The Prime Minister: The UK has proposed further targeted sanctions against those responsible for atrocities in Darfur, and an extension of the arms embargo to the whole of Sudan. I wrote to EU leaders on 21 March to make the case for this, and Chancellor Merkel and I raised sanctions with EU colleagues at the 25 March Informal Summit. We are now taking forward a UN Security Council Resolution in New York.

The situation in Darfur remains appalling. There are continued attacks on civilians, peacekeepers and the humanitarian agencies. The arms embargo on Darfur continues to be violated. No side is making a serious effort to find a peaceful settlement to the conflict. President Bashir has repeatedly gone back on his government's commitments, in particular with regard to the UN support for African Union peacekeepers and the rapid deployment of a hybrid/ UN force.

Visits Abroad: Expenditure

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions a special adviser accompanied him on official business abroad; and at what cost to the public purse in each year between 1997 and 2006. [130292]

The Prime Minister: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more along with the total cost of all ministerial travel. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. The number of officials, including special advisers, accompanying Ministers on visits overseas and the total cost of each visit is included in the list.

All Ministers' travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 10 of the 'Ministerial Code', and the accompanying guidance document, 'Travel by Ministers'.

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions his wife accompanied him on official business abroad at the public expense, and at what cost, in each year between 1997 and 2006. [130293]

The Prime Minister: My wife accompanies me on official visits overseas as appropriate. The costs of official visits are included in the annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more. Since 2005, the details of the visits where I have been accompanied by my wife have also been included in the annual list. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

British Aid

7. Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the relative effectiveness of British aid provided through the independent sector, through the EU and bilaterally. [130166]

Hilary Benn: Our assessment is that, to maximise the benefits to poor people, it makes sense to give our aid in different ways, depending on the circumstances.

DFID's bi-lateral aid, given directly to governments or through NGOs and the UN, helps provide essential services. We also support NGOs to help citizens hold their governments to account.

Aid given through the European Commission and the World Bank enables us to reach a larger number of countries and people.

Zimbabwe: Aid Distribution

8. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the involvement of the government of Zimbabwe in the distribution of aid from (a) the UK and (b) the UN. [130167]

Hilary Benn: None of the UK's humanitarian or food aid goes through the government of Zimbabwe; it is all distributed through the UN and non-governmental organisations. As donors, we will not tolerate the politicisation of aid, and we suspend projects if we need to. The UK funds a local civil society organisation to monitor food aid distribution, and works with humanitarian partners to ensure the most vulnerable people are reached.

Micro-credit Fund: Africa

9. Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department plans to support the German proposal to create a microcredit fund for African entrepreneurs at the forthcoming G8 summit. [130168]

Mr. Thomas: We are working closely with our G8 partners to agree concrete proposals to expand access to financial services in Africa. We support the 'Making Finance Work for Africa' initiative proposed by the German Presidency and the World Bank.

We are waiting for further more specific details of the regional micro credit fund proposal.

Reproductive Health

10. Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to reduce the number of women who die in pregnancy and childbirth in developing countries. [130169]

Mr. Thomas: DFID set out its priorities for action to "improve maternal health" in our 2004 strategy 'Reducing maternal deaths: evidence and action'. This strategy guides DFID's approach to helping developing countries to improve the availability of and access to life saving services for pregnant women. For example in Nigeria DFID has a £55 million programme of support for health system strengthening with a focus on maternal health. In Ekiti state this support has resulted in a 100 per cent. increase in the number of women who are cared for by a health professional during childbirth.

Latin America: Aid

11. Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding he has allocated as aid for Latin American countries in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [130170]

Mr. Thomas: DFID currently has plans to allocate £8 million in 2007-08 to the Latin American regional programme, and £4 million to the bilateral programme in Nicaragua. Decisions about funding allocations to Latin American countries from 2008-09 will be taken in the context of the comprehensive spending review.

Maternal Health Progress Report

12. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he plans to publish the Maternal Health Progress Report. [130171]

Mr. Thomas: The 2nd Annual Progress Report on Maternal Health is due to be published in April 2007.

Anti-corruption Standards

13. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the efforts of the international aid agencies to promote anti-corruption standards in developing country programmes. [130173]

Hilary Benn: In promoting anti-corruption standards in partner countries it is very important that international agencies ensure a consistent message on corruption. We do this by assessing and influencing the approaches of other agencies. Recently we have been involved with; the World Bank process to develop a Governance and Anti-Corruption Framework and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Development Assistance Committee to formulate common approaches to corruption in partner countries. This initiative included a joint mission to Cameroon to enable agencies to assess each other's approaches to addressing corruption; and other bilateral donors on implementation of the UN Convention against Corruption.

Zimbabwe

14. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to increase the delivery of humanitarian aid to the people of Zimbabwe. [130174]

Hilary Benn: DFID spent £33 million in 2006-07 to tackle food insecurity and HIV/AIDS in Zimbabwe, through United Nations agencies and non governmental organisations. DFID has provided £3 million to support the World Food Programme; and committed £30 million to help over a million vulnerable people through longer-term NGO initiatives. DFID is providing £5 million to the International Organisation for Migration to help internally displaced people. Our health programmes will supply antiretroviral drugs to 30,000 people and save the lives of mothers and newborn babies. We are monitoring the situation closely, and stand ready to contribute more resources if humanitarian needs increase significantly.

Afghanistan: Overseas Aid

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the value is of humanitarian aid provided by his Department to Afghanistan in the 2006-07 financial year to date. [129490]

Hilary Benn: The UK has committed the following humanitarian aid to Afghanistan in this financial year to date: £1 million for drought mitigation; £1.2 million to support HALO Trust's de-mining programme; and £30,000 to provide food and other essential items like soap and blankets for 3,000 internally displaced families in Helmand.

Final expenditure data for 2006-07 are not yet available. Provisional data will be released in June, prior to final estimates being published in statistics on international development in October. Data for the five years to 2005-06 were published in table 12.3 of the latest edition of "Statistics on International Development 2001-02 to 2005-06", copies of which are available in the Library. The figure for humanitarian aid to Afghanistan in 2005-06 was £3.39 million.

Africa: Drugs

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking to limit the spread of counterfeit drugs and medicines in Africa. [129420]

Mr. Thomas: DFID supports the World Health Organisation (WHO), through its core funding, in its efforts to help African countries strengthen their pharmaceutical legislation, good manufacturing practices, national drug regulatory capacity and performance. The WHO also promotes information exchange among drug regulatory authorities to help combat drug counterfeiters.

The UK Government are working closely with developed and developing country governments, international institutions such as the World Health Organisation, non government organisations and the private sector to develop the Medicines Transparency Alliance (MeTA) to build support for transparency in medicines procurement and supply to help to drive out counterfeiting as well as corruption, excessive mark-ups and inefficiencies. We expect to launch MeTA in a number of pilot countries in mid 2007.

DFID has provided support to Nigeria's National Agency for Food and Drug Administration and Control which has taken an active lead in reducing counterfeit drugs throughout the country.

Africa: Family Planning

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the Government will take steps to encourage member states of the African Union to implement the Maputo plan of action on allocation of resources for sexual reproductive health services, maternal health care and contraception. [129594]

Hilary Benn: DFID fully supports the aims of the African Union Maputo plan of action on maternal health which is consistent with the DFID strategy 'Reducing maternal deaths: evidence and action'. DFID will continue to work with and encourage partner governments to improve access to sexual and reproductive health services and commodities through DFID funded country programmes, and through regional and global advocacy.

At regional level, DFID works closely with the African Union Commission and other regional partners responsible for the Maputo plan and will continue to do so.

At country level, DFID will continue to work closely with national governments. In Nigeria, DFID has a £55 million programme of support for health system strengthening with a focus on maternal health. The programme works closely with state and federal health ministries and in Ekiti state this support has resulted in a 100 per cent. increase in the number of women who are cared for by a health professional during childbirth. In Burundi, DFID is supporting the Ministry of Health to implement a free health care policy for pregnant women and children under five. In Sierra Leone DFID is developing a 10-year £50 million programme with the Ministries of Health and Finance specifically to improve sexual, reproductive and child health. In Zimbabwe DFID will invest £25 million pounds over five years to improve maternal and newborn health. The project will reduce the number of maternal deaths and reduce the number of children becoming infected or dying from HIV infection.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress his Department has made in encouraging partner governments to improve access to maternal health care and contraception services so as to reduce the levels of maternal mortality encountered in regions including sub-Saharan Africa. [129610]

Hilary Benn: As set out in DFID's strategy 'Reducing maternal deaths: evidence and action', DFID continues to work with partner governments to improve access to sexual and reproductive health services and commodities through DFID funded country programmes, and through regional and global advocacy. Increasingly DFID supports nationally led programmes for essential health services through budget support, as well as specific programmes for improving maternal and child health. For example, in Malawi and Uganda DFID works with national partners to strengthen health services, particularly human resources for health, and is pressing for the expansion of evidence-based sexual and reproductive services.

While reducing maternal mortality remains a major challenge, progress is being made. In Nigeria, DFID has a £55 million programme of support for health system strengthening with a focus on maternal health. The programme works closely with state and federal health ministries. In Ekiti state this support has resulted in a 100 per cent. increase in the number of women who are cared for by a health professional during childbirth. In Kenya a regional safe motherhood programme supported overall health system strengthening and was used to argue for more support to maternal and child health within essential health services programme. In Burundi, DFID is supporting the Ministry of Health to implement a free health care policy for pregnant women and children under five. In Sierra Leone, DFID is developing a 10 year, £50 million programme with the Ministries of Health and Finance specifically to improve sexual, reproductive and child health. The programme will strengthen the health system as a whole and address human resources for health, supplies of commodities, policy planning and financing. It will also contribute towards reducing key social, cultural and economic barriers to accessing basic health services.

Bolivia: Floods

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial support he plans to allocate to deal with problems caused by floods in Bolivia. [130059]

Mr. Thomas: The EC Humanitarian Aid Office (ECHO) is providing €1 million emergency funds for flood victims in Bolivia. DFID contributes to this through its 18 per cent. share of the European Community's external assistance programme. Beyond that, DFID's Conflict, Humanitarian and Security Department's assessment is that the urgent humanitarian needs have been met by other donors. In view of this, DFID does not plan to provide further direct financial support.

EC Grants and Loans

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development to which countries (a) the European Commission and (b) his Department has committed funds under European Development Fund 10. [125536]

Mr. Thomas: The 10th European Development Fund (EDF10) will provide €22.7 billion (£15.3 billion) for development, economic and trade co-operation for the period 2008 to 2013 to 79 countries in Africa, Caribbean and the Pacific. Global Fund to Fight AIDS Tuberculosis and Malaria

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was allocated to the Global Fund to fight AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria in each calendar year since 2002. [130233]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has allocated £359 million to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria from 2002 to 2007 as follows:

Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria—DFID spend 2000-06

	£ million
2002	50
2003	25
2004	33
2005	51
2006	100
2007	100
Total	359

DFID's commitment of £100 million for 2007 is subject to performance.

Guinea

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the humanitarian situation in Guinea. [129607]

Hilary Benn: The UK has been concerned by the unrest and political instability in Guinea arising from the general strike earlier this year, and has supported the efforts of ECOWAS and regional leaders in helping mediate during the crisis.

The situation has calmed with the lifting of martial law on 23 February, the ending of the strike, and the appointment of Lansana Kouyate as Prime Minister. We hope that he will soon appoint a new, broadly-based and consensus government which will work to move Guinea forward. But the recent crisis has brought the already devastated economy to a near standstill. It has severely affected the provision of health and other public services and the population's access to them. Food supplies have been disrupted, with the price of staples such as rice, flour, sugar and vegetables, as well as fuel, increasing sharply.

DFID is monitoring the humanitarian situation, and is in contact with international partners and agencies based in Guinea. In response to the crisis and the increased humanitarian risks, we have agreed to provide £350,000 through the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), to be focused on meeting urgent medical and nutritional needs, and to maintain preparedness in case of further civil unrest with humanitarian consequences.

DFID has also recently agreed to provide £270,000 to the World Food programme humanitarian air service for West Africa, which facilitates the movement of humanitarian personnel and urgently needed non-food items between Cote d'Ivoire, Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone. The air service recently demonstrated its importance during the civil unrest in Guinea, allowing agencies to respond and facilitate security evacuations.

India

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many departmental staff are located in India; and where they are located. [129930]

Mr. Thomas: DFID India has total 117 staff. Of these, 21 are UK based Home civil servants and 96 are staff appointed in country. DFID India has offices in Delhi (Headquarters), Bhubaneshwar (Orissa), Kolkata (West Bengal), and Bhopal (Madhya Pradesh). Of the current total, 107 staff are based in New Delhi, four staff in Bhopal and three each in Kolkata and Bhubaneshwar.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of India's progress towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals. [129952]

Mr. Thomas: DFID India regularly assesses progress towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) in India. These assessments are based on official Government of India statistics, but take into account concerns over the quality of data and independent assessments where appropriate.

Sources for recent assessments of progress in India include the Government of India's 11th Five year plan approach paper, the Government of India's Millennium Development Goals India Country Report, and the United Nations and World Bank database of progress indicators for Millennium Development Goals.

A summary of results is available on the World Bank website at:

Malaria: Drugs

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the rollout of the new fixed-dose combination drug artesunate and amodiaquine (ASAQ) in tackling malaria in (a) Africa, (b) Asia and (c) Latin America. [129356]

Mr. Thomas: The new fixed-dose combination drug artesunate and amodiaquine (ASAQ) was launched on 1 March 2007 and it is too early to assess the rollout. Although countries can buy the drug now, most will wait until it passes through the World Health Organisation (WHO) pre-qualification process. After this the drug can be procured through international drug purchasing facilities, such as the global fund for AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria.

The drugs for neglected diseases initiative (DNDi) will monitor all aspects of the rollout to ensure that the drug is taken up by countries and delivered to patients. ASAQ has been produced in partnership with the pharmaceutical company Sanofi-Aventis who have extensive distribution networks in Africa. Artemisinin-based combination therapies (ACTs) are recommended by WHO for the treatment of malaria, and ASAQ is an ACT recommended first line treatment in 20 African countries. Because of this and the fact that ASAQ is easier to use and less expensive than existing ACT drugs, DNDi expects quick take up by countries.

ASAQ can only be used where there is no pre-existing resistance to amodiaquine, so it is most relevant for use in sub-Saharan Africa, especially in the 20 countries where it is already recommended for first line treatment. It is less likely to be used in Asia (although it may be used in parts of India and Indonesia) and Latin America.

Overseas Aid

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to promote the independent evaluation of British aid. [130172]

Hilary Benn: UK aid is subject to external scrutiny through independent monitoring (by the IDC), audit (by the NAO) and peer review (by the OECD). DFID's policies and country programmes are evaluated by external experts and findings are published.

However we can go further: I intend to establish a mechanism to ensure more independent evaluation of DFID's impact and I will inform the House of my proposals in due course.

Palestinians: EC Aid

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many projects have been cancelled or suspended in the Palestinian authority area since the European Commission's decision of 7 April 2006 to stop funds being transferred to that authority, broken down by type of project; and how the funds being withheld are being treated. [128994]

Hilary Benn: Since the election of the Hamas-led Palestinian authority (PA), ten European Commission (EC) projects have been suspended. These are:

1. Health sector support programme
2. Support to tax administration in Ministry of Finance
3. Support to customs administration in the Ministry of Finance
4. Infrastructure for judiciary sector
5. Vocational education and training facilities centre
6. Nablus old city renovation
7. Schools construction
8. Gaza airport
9. Infrastructure facility for Ministry of Finance (apart from activities directly managed by the EC)
10. Support to the energy and transport sectors

Not all of these projects were suspended as a result of the Hamas-led Government's failure to meet the quartet principles. For example, the Gaza airport project was very unlikely to move forward during 2006, regardless of Palestinian political developments. The EC re-designed some projects in order to achieve the same results without channelling funds through the PA. Funds for other projects remain available for when the EC restarts business with the PA.

The EC re-designed its 2006 programme in order to deliver support to the Palestinian people without channelling funding through the Hamas-led Government. This did not result in significant amounts of funding being blocked or suspended. In fact, the EC spent €348 million in 2006, compared to €277 million in 2005. This included support to: the temporary international mechanism; the Office of the Palestinian president; local and international non-governmental organisations; projects implemented by international organisations (such as the World Bank, and UNESCO); and humanitarian assistance delivered by the European Community

Humanitarian Office (ECHO) and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA).

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) technical assistance, (b) budgetary support and (c) humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian authority has been suspended by the (i) EU and (ii) UK following the election of the Hamas Government. [128995]

Hilary Benn: Following the election of the Hamas-led Government, the European Union (EU) has suspended a number of technical assistance projects. A breakdown of specific projects from all member states is not available. Ten European Commission (EC) projects have been suspended, though some of these might have been suspended regardless of Palestinian political developments. The EC re-designed some projects in order to achieve the same results without channelling funds through the Palestinian authority (PA). No new budget support agreement was put into place (though budget support was not technically suspended). EU (EC and member states) humanitarian assistance commitments were €165 million in 2006, more than double the 2005 figure. Overall, EU assistance increased by 27 per cent. in 2006 to £442 million, including £123 million for Palestinian basic needs through the temporary international mechanism. This compares to £42 million which the EU gave in budget support to the PA in 2005.

DFID has re-oriented its technical assistance to comply with the quartet statement of 30 January. The only UK-led project that has been suspended is a planned project covering hydrometric monitoring to the Palestinian water authority (PWA) worth £431,000. No new budget support agreement was put into place. In 2005-06 (prior to the election of Hamas) DFID provided £10 million in budget support to the PA. DFID humanitarian assistance has remained unaffected. The UK maintained the same level of support (£30 million) in 2006-07 as in 2005-06, and will increase this slightly to £30.6 million for 2007-08.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Admissions: Greater London

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will rank London education authorities by (a) the (i) number and (ii) percentage of admission appeals lodged relating to secondary transfer and (b) the (A) number and (B) percentage of such appeals that were successful. [118465]

Jim Knight: This information is not collected in the form requested. A table giving details of appeals lodged by parents against non-admission of their children to their preferred school in 2004/05 can be found at

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000656/SFR20-2006.pdf

This provides data on all appeals made for any primary or secondary school year group at any point in the school year, including secondary transfer.

Adoption: Catholic Church

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children are being managed by Catholic adoption agencies. [129875]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children who are currently being managed by Catholic adoption agencies is not collected by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES).

After School Clubs

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether staff and volunteers from outside a school who run breakfast or after-school clubs are required to have undertaken training on how to tackle bullying. [126566]

Jim Knight [holding answer 9 March 2007]: There is no specific requirement for staff and volunteers from outside a school to have training in relation to bullying, although we would expect those who operate extended school schemes to be equipped with the necessary skills to tackle it when it occurs.

Trainee teachers receive training in tackling bullying and there is a wide range of courses available for qualified teachers. We supplement this training with guidance and advice designed to address the specific needs which school staff have in this area, for example, with regards to tackling prejudice-driven bullying. We are also currently revising our over-arching guidance to schools 'Don't Suffer in Silence' to ensure that schools have practical advice on how successfully to address and prevent bullying when it occurs.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether schools' anti-bullying policies are required to cover activities on school property which occur outside regular school hours. [126567]

Jim Knight [holding answer 9 March 2007]: While there is not a specific legal requirement for school anti-bullying policies to cover activities that take place outside of regular school hours, there is a duty on schools to tackle all forms of bullying and so we would expect school policies to be couched in sufficiently broad terms that bullying on school premises outside school hours would be covered. The guidance to accompany the school discipline provisions in the Education and Inspections Act 2006, 'School Discipline and Pupil Behaviour Policies', will make clear that the Government believe extended school activities, sports events and breakfast/after-school clubs should be covered by the school behaviour policy and that schools should apply disciplinary penalties for poor behaviour (including bullying) that occurs at such activities.

Work has also been undertaken at local level to deal specifically with bullying in extended schools. In some schools, work funded by Positive Activities for Young People (PAYP) has helped to identify children and young people at risk of being bullied, or of bullying others, and provides positive diversionary activities out of school hours and during school holidays. There is also evidence to suggest that the provision of extended services by schools may, in itself, help to counter bullying. In particular, we know that on-site provision of family and community services can have a positive impact on pupil behaviour and attendance generally. Part of the Behaviour Improvement Programme included the development of 'full service' extended schools, and the 'core offer' of extended services which we want all schools to provide by 2010 includes services of direct relevance to issues around bullying such as parenting support and easy access to a wide range of specialist support services.

Aldridge Foundation

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether payments from the public purse have been made to the Aldridge Foundation in the last 12 months. [129328]

Bill Rammell: The Department for Education and Skills has not allocated any public funding for further education or schools to the Aldridge Foundation in the last 12 months.

Bishops Park College

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 21 February 2007, Official Report, column 1818W, on Bishops Park College, what the (a) staying on rate, (b) number of exclusions, (c) number of teenage pregnancies and (d) level of parental satisfaction were at the College in each year since 2002. [124800]

Jim Knight: The information is as follows.

(a) Bishops Park College does not have a sixth form. The Department does not currently produce school level staying on rates.

(b) Bishops Park College has reported no permanent exclusions since its opening in September 2002. The first year for which information on fixed period exclusions is available relates to the 2003/04 academic year. No fixed period exclusions from Bishops Park College were reported for 2003/04. There were 57 fixed period exclusions during the 2004/05 academic year.

(c) The Department does not collect information on teenage conceptions by school.

(d) The Department does not collect data on parental satisfaction in individual schools.

Building Schools for the Future

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether all types of schools can be granted building schools for the future funding. [111585]

Jim Knight: All types of secondary school are eligible for capital investment under building schools for the future, where they need it. This includes: community (including voluntary controlled), voluntary aided and foundation (including trust) schools; academies and city technology colleges; 11-16 and 11-18 secondary schools, and middle-deemed secondary and upper schools; the secondary part of all-through (primary and secondary) schools; sixth form centres established under school regulations; secondary and all-age special schools and pupil referral units; non-maintained special schools and music and dance schools where the majority of pupils are publicly funded; and boarding facilities in maintained secondary schools.

Children's Centres

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children's centres within each local authority have been (a) opened and (b) closed in the last 12 months. [130307]

Education: Information and Communications Technology

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department is taking to encourage online learning in Coventry. [126039]

Jim Knight [holding answer 12 March 2007]: The Government's e-strategy for education and children's services seeks to ensure all learners have access to an online learning space. The British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (Becta) is responsible for leading on enabling this access, and their delivery plan for the e-strategy aims to harness technology for the overall benefit of learners and the education system. Enabling online learning where and when appropriate is just one element of the strategy's aims.

ContactPoint will only hold basic identifying information about a child and contact details for parents, carers and practitioners who are providing services to a child. This will enable practitioners quickly to identify a child and to see who else is involved, making it easier to deliver more co-ordinated support.

This intention is clearly specified in section 12 of the Children Act 2004 and in the draft regulations on which we consulted between September and December 2006. Subject to the will of Parliament, we intend the regulations to be in place by the summer recess.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casino Advisory Panel

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which members of the Casino Advisory Panel were appointed because of their experience in assessing the regenerative impact of a regional casino. [129986]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 26 March 2007]: The skills and experience required by the Chair and members of the Casino Advisory Panel were set out in the role specification that formed part of the recruitment pack. Ministers were seeking people with skills and experience at a senior, strategic level in one or more of the following areas:

the local or regional planning system;
regeneration of disadvantaged areas;
the leisure and tourism industries;
the evaluation of economic change and its social impact.

Biographical details of the five individuals selected to become the Chair and members of the Casino Advisory Panel were included in the press release, issued on 30 September 2005, which announced the establishment of the panel.

The press release is available on the Panel's website at www.culture.gov.uk/cap. Copies have been placed in the House Library.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the implementation of the Casino Advisory Panel's guidance issued to the participants in the Examinations in Public. [129989]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 26 March 2007]: None. The Casino Advisory Panel is independent from Government and the conduct of the examinations in public (EiP) was entirely a matter for the Panel.

The House of Lords Merits Committee of Statutory Instruments held an evidence session on the Draft Gambling (Geographical Distribution of Casino Premises Licences) Order 2007 on 13 March 2007.

Prior to the hearing, interested parties, including the local authorities that bid for the regional casino licences, were invited to submit written evidence to the Committee. It was clear from the evidence submitted that some parties were concerned about some aspects of the EiPs but that many others were satisfied that the Panel had conducted the examinations in a fair and open manner.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions the Casino Advisory Panel had with Government departments other than her Department on the definition of regeneration benefits in drawing up its report. [130351]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 27 March 2007]: The Casino Advisory Panel was set up to operate entirely independently of the Government. The manner in which it carried out its work, within its agreed terms of reference and remit, was entirely a matter for the panel.

The panel drew on a large amount of material and evidence in preparing its report. In chapters 4 and 5 of its report, the panel considered regeneration issues and took account of the Department for Communities and Local Government's indices of multiple deprivation.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions there have been between the Casino Advisory Panel's Chairman and her Department on how the panel reached its definition of social impact since the publication of the panel's report on 30 January. [130352]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 27 March 2007]: There has been no discussion between the Department and the chairman of the Casino Advisory Panel on this topic since the publication of the panel's report on 30 January.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what briefing on (a) social impact and (b) regeneration officials in her Department gave to the Chair of the Casino Advisory Panel prior to his appearance before the House of Lords Merits of Statutory Instruments Committee on 13 March. [130353]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 27 March 2007]: DCMS officials did not provide Professor Crow, Chairman of the Casino Advisory Panel, with briefing on any topic prior to his appearance before the House of Lords Merits of Statutory Instruments Committee on 13 March.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper or publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers or publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic of each was. [129471]

Mr. Lammy: The Department has had a zero spend on sponsoring newspaper or publication supplements or funding advertorials in newspapers or publications in the last year.

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what mechanisms are in place to ensure her Department's economical use of paper. [128010]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport's policy on the economic use of paper contains the following elements:

deployment of multifunctional devices for printing and copying that default to double sided output;

staff are instructed to read on screen rather than print emails and documents unnecessarily; internal publications, instructions and manuals are issued online through the Department's intranet;

the Department uses recycled paper; and, the Department uses electronic tendering solutions to reduce the amount of paper work and postage created through the use of manual systems.

Digital Switchover

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 18 December 2006, Official Report, column 1596W, on digital switchover, if she will break down by category of eligibility the estimate of the number of Whitehaven households entitled to targeted assistance. [129118]

Mr. Woodward: Our current estimate of the number of people potentially eligible to assistance from the digital switchover help scheme in the Whitehaven area is set out in the table.

Households eligible for support free of charge	Number
Households 75 plus, receiving pension credit	1,900
Disabled households, receiving pension credit/income support/ income-based job seekers allowance	1,200
Total	3,100
Households eligible for support for the £40 charge
Households 75 plus	2,600
Disabled households	2,900
Total	5,500
Total households eligible for help	8,600

Notes:

1. Totals rounded to the nearest hundred. The figures are based on information from the whole Copeland constituency rather than the Whitehaven transmitter coverage area (which covers about 90 per cent. of households in the Copeland constituency)
2. Eligibility for help from the digital switchover help scheme will be by "benefit unit" rather than the whole household definition used by the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) the Scottish Executive, the Welsh Assembly Government and the Northern Ireland Office to forecast future household growth.
3. The definition of a "benefit unit" is a couple and any dependent children. It excludes adults deemed to be non-dependents who, if eligible, will be able to claim assistance from the help scheme in their own right.

Gambling

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of whether there was a variance between the Casino Advisory Panel's definition of social impact and the Gambling Act's objective of reducing problem gambling, as referred to in the conclusions of the 13th Report of the House of Lords Select Committee on the Merits of Statutory Instruments, Drawing special attention to the Draft Gambling (Geographical Distribution of Casino Premises Licences) Order 2007. [129988]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 26 March 2007]: I wrote to the Lord Filkin, Chairman of the Merits Committee, on 21 March to clarify, among other matters, the remit of the Casino Advisory Panel with regard to social impact. In my letter I said:

"One of the most fundamental arguments made by the Committee, and one which runs throughout the report, is that the Casino Advisory Panel should have placed greater emphasis on the minimisation of harm from gambling. I should explain that this was not the primary consideration we set for the Panel.

The criteria against which the Panel would assess submissions were set out in the Government's national policy statement on casinos, published on 16 December 2004, which makes reference to the protection of children and vulnerable people. In paragraph 10 of its report, the Panel noted that the Department had asked it to have due regard to the national policy statement.

The Panel's primary consideration was to ensure that the locations provide the best possible test of social impact. Subject to this, the criteria were also:

to include areas in need of regeneration (as measured by employment and other social deprivation data) to ensure that those areas selected are willing to licence a new casino.

I did not ask the Panel to make final recommendations based exclusively on the minimisation of harm from gambling. This is because it is the role of the Gambling Commission to monitor and minimise any harm that might arise from new casino gambling. It was the job of the Casino Advisory Panel to select locations that are best able to be monitored rigorously. I am satisfied that is exactly what they have done."

A copy of my letter has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions her Department has had with HM Treasury on the level of Exchequer funding spent on tackling problem gambling; and if she will make a statement. [130032]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State regularly discusses a wide range of gambling subjects with Treasury Ministers.

The NHS funds via Exchequer funding a number of addiction services many of which will treat problem gamblers.

The gambling industry also provides funding to tackle problem gambling via payments to the Responsibility in Gambling Trust. The trust has recently announced that the gambling industry has committed to meeting the 3m funding target for 2006.

Judo

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether access to a judo UK coaching certificate is dependent on membership of any organisation. [130097]

Mr. Caborn: Sports coach UK is the lead agency responsible for supporting the recognised governing bodies to develop and implement the UK coaching certificate (UKCC).

Sports coach UK advise that a UKCC qualification for judo has now been submitted but is not yet endorsed. Access to existing sport specific UKCC qualifications is not limited to members of specified governing bodies.

Manchester City Council

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was discussed at her meeting with the leader and chief executive of Manchester city council on 5 February. [129983]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 26 March 2007]: I discussed a range of issues with the leader and chief executive of Manchester city council on 5 February.

As part of this discussion I explained the next steps in the process of finalising the local authority areas for the 17 new casinos permitted under the Gambling Act 2005, following the publication of the Casino Advisory Panel report on 30 January; the requirement to consult Scottish and Welsh Ministers; the need to give the panel's report detailed consideration before deciding whether to accept their recommendations; and the need for Parliament to approve that decision.

Millennium Commission

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the topics were of the 10 Millennium Commission documents destroyed in the Iron Mountain fire in July 2006. [130549]

Mr. Caborn: As noted in the reply given by Lord Davies of Oldham in another place on 2 November 2006, House of Lords, Official Report, column WA65, 509 boxes of Millennium Commission records were destroyed in a fire at the warehouse in Twelvetrees Crescent, Bow, London in July 2006. As further noted in the reply given by Lord Davies in another place on 22 January 2007, House of Lords, Official Report, column WA205, 10 documents within these 509 boxes are likely to have contained references to the millennium dome.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Asylum Seekers

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much was paid (a) gross and (b) net of asylum support in backdated payments of income-related benefits to those granted refugee status in each year since 2000; [129946]

(2) how many asylum seekers have received backdated payments of income-related benefits since 2000. [129947]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of benefit fraud he estimates to be due to identity fraud, broken down by benefit; and if he will make a statement. [116589]

Mr. Plaskitt: Identity-related benefit fraud represents between 3 and 6 per cent. of total fraud.

We are not able to provide a breakdown by benefit but the evidence suggests that identity-related benefit fraud is concentrated mainly in the income-related benefits.

Where identity fraud is discovered, we take strong action. So far, in 2006-07, we have undertaken 315 successful prosecutions.

We intend to go further, and will take advantage of the opportunities from biometric development and other cross-government initiatives as they become available.

Benefit Overpayments

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much (a) pension credit, (b) income support and (c) jobseeker's allowance was overpaid to claimants due to the claimant in question moving abroad in each of the last five years; and how much in each category was overpaid due to (i) fraud and (ii) error; [118810]

(2) what estimate he has made of the total amount of social security benefits overpaid to claimants due to (a) fraud and (b) error who were ineligible for benefits (i) because they lived abroad, (ii) due to long-term hospitalisation, (iii) due to prison detention, (iv) because the claimant had a partner and claimed as a single person, (v) because of claimant identity discrepancies and (vi) because of false claimant documentation in each of the last five years. [118816]

Mr. Plaskitt: Estimates are not available for all benefits as a whole. Estimates of overpayments due to false claimant documentation are not available.

The available information is in the following tables.

3. Estimates for 2003-04 were not published as National Statistics due to concerns about data quality.
4. Not all of the overpayments will necessarily relate to customers who were ineligible for benefit. In some cases they will have been eligible, but to less benefit than they were being paid.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128041]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed on 8 June 2001 from parts of the former Department for Social Security, the former Department for Education and Employment, and the Employment Service. Information prior to 2001 is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The following tables detail spend on all advertising and promotional campaigns run by the Department for Work and Pensions for each complete financial year since June 2001.

details of highly localised publicity activity by the Department's customer-facing businesses recruitment or procurement advertising

Departments: Contracts

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which functions of his Department have been privatised or outsourced since May 2005. [127447]

Mrs. McGuire: Since May 2005 the Department has outsourced the following functions:

The processing of winter fuel payments;

The pension credit application line;

Clerical case management for some Child Support Agency cases;

Support for Child Support Agency debt collection.

In addition since 2005 the Department has re-let a number of deals for services that had originally been outsourced before 2005. These were:

Office services—contract awarded September 2006.

Medical services—contract awarded September 2005.

None of these outsourced services are delivered outside the United Kingdom.

Departments: PFI

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) for which future projects his Department is considering a private finance initiative deal; what the estimated lifetime value of each potential contract is; and what period each will cover; [125187]

(2) what percentage of his Department's budget was taken up by private finance initiative commitments in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and if he will make a statement; [125192]

(3) what percentage of his Department's budget will be taken up by private finance initiative commitments in each of the next 10 years assuming that the budget grows in line with the Treasury's estimates for gross domestic product over the period; and if he will make a statement. [125193]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department will consider PFI as an option when assessing the best value for money route to deliver its services. The Department for Work and Pensions uses a PFI route to obtain estates services under the Private Sector Resource Initiative for the Management of the Estate (PRIME) contract. PRIME is a 20 year PFI partnership deal, competitively let to Trillium (now Land Securities Trillium) on 1 April 1998. The deal involved the transfer of ownership and management of the majority of the then Department of Social Security premises to the private sector. Following the creation of the Department for Work and Pensions, PRIME was expanded in 2003 to cover ex-Employment Service estate. The Department secured a range of important new value for money mechanisms, bringing the deal in line with new Government guidelines for PFI deals.

The Department currently has no plans to use PFI in new areas, but the option will be considered for future services, except IS/IT which under Government policy are not considered suitable for PFI.

The percentage of the Department's total budget taken up by PFI commitments in each of the years since the Department was formed in 2001 is shown in the following table.

	Percentage
2000-01	0.30
2001-02	0.29
2002-03	0.29

	Percentage
2003-04	0.37
2004-05	0.53
2005-06	0.54
2006-07	0.50

The forecast percentage of the Department's total budget that will be taken up by PFI commitments in each of the years to the end of the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007 period is shown in the following table. In line with Treasury guidance it is not considered appropriate to model the Department's budget beyond 2011 based on the gross domestic product projections.

	Percentage
2007-08	0.48
2008-09	0.46
2009-10	0.45
2010-11	0.44

In line with Treasury guidance the total budget figure comprises both the Department's Delegated Expenditure Limit and Annually Managed Expenditure. However, it should be noted that this Department's Annually Managed Expenditure largely covers the cost of benefit payments; it is not therefore a potential target for PFI in the way that other departments expenditure might be, for example deals for bridge or school building or maintenance.

Disability Living Allowance

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households are in receipt of each component of disability living allowance for a child, broken down by (a) region, (b) local authority and (c) parliamentary constituency. [129805]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available by household. Information on the number of children receiving disability living allowance in each region, local authority and parliamentary constituency has been placed in the Library.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received on the 16 hour rule; and if he will make a statement. [128729]

Mr. Plaskitt: The 16 hour rule, defined in regulations, affects entitlement to housing benefit and jobseeker's allowance (JSA). People may study for up to 16 hours a week and still be entitled to those benefits, but their benefit entitlement ends if they exceed 16 hours. Financial support for full-time students (with some exceptions) is the responsibility of the education and not the benefits system. The 16 hour rule exists to support that principle and, in the case of JSA, to ensure that people concentrate on looking for a job.

Members of the Foyer Federation continue to lobby for changes to the housing benefit rules to allow young people at risk of homelessness to receive housing benefit while in full-time study. We accept that some young people in these circumstances may need a second chance at learning and are considering how we might be able to help. We also continue to receive approaches to waive the JSA 16 hour rule in specific circumstances. Our response is to clarify the rule's purpose and effect and that the Employment and Training Act 1973 allows us to target unemployed people who face particular labour market disadvantage, by removing them from JSA and the requirement to actively seek work, instead paying them training allowances to undertake full-time training. We are using these arrangements in the 'Adult Learning Option' pilots which are supporting our customers towards achieving a Level 2 qualification. The budget that supports training allowances is finite and this route to full-time learning has to be carefully targeted on those most in need.

Pensions: Armed Forces

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women in total have received a pre-1950 widow's pension arising from their husbands' service in the armed forces prior to August 1950; how many women are receiving such a pension; what the value is of such a pension; what the cost of such pensions was in the last year for which figures are available; and what the total cost of such pensions has been since their inception. [126555]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 12 March 2007]: I have been asked to reply.

Neither the Department for Work and Pensions nor the Ministry of Defence holds the specific information requested on the number of women who received—or are still receiving—a widow's pension arising from their husband's service in the armed forces prior to August 1950.

I can confirm that there are 38,425 War Widows pensions in payment arising from their spouse's service both before and after August 1950. We cannot ascertain how many of those will be before August 1950 without trawling through the individual records which would require disproportionate administrative effort.

In relation to the question of costs I can confirm that the current average weekly value of a widow's pension is £100.76 for all war widows irrespective of date. This gives an annual cost for all widows' pensions of approximately £200 million for the period up to 31 December 2006. The overall average weekly payment to widows or widowers including supplementary allowances is £191.09.

Detailed financial information relating to war pension costs has been issued on a quarterly basis by the Defence Analytical Services Agency since 2001 and the relevant publications are available in the Library of the House.

Social Security Benefits: Disabled

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate his Department has made of the number of people who claimed (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance and (c) income support for incapacity who moved from permitted work into employment of 16 hours a week or more in each of the last three years. [127818]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested.

Evaluations carried out by the Institute for Employment Studies on behalf of the Department for Work and Pensions, which consider the stepping stone effect of permitted work, have been published.

Copies of the following reports have been placed in the Library:

A Stepping Stone to Employment: An Evaluation of the Permitted Work Rules—Wave 2 (2004) [wave 2]; and

Final Outcomes from the Permitted Work Rules, Department for Work and Pensions Research Report No.268. (2005) [wave 3]

Social Security Benefits: Overseas Residence

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many types of benefits are paid to UK citizens who live outside the UK but within the European economic area under European Community Regulation 1408/71. [126428]

Mr. Plaskitt: The following benefits are payable to UK citizens living outside the UK but within the European economic area, subject to the EU social security regulations and the individual benefits' rules.

Widows' and bereavement benefits: widowed mother's allowance, widow's pension, bereavement allowance, widowed parent's allowance and bereavement payment.

Benefits for accidents at work and industrial diseases: industrial injuries disablement benefit, industrial death benefit, retirement allowance, constant attendance allowance, reduced earnings allowance, exceptionally severe disablement allowance, unemployability supplement.

Family benefits: guardian's allowance (administered by HM Revenue and Customs), child benefit (administered by HM Revenue and Customs), child tax credit (administered by HM Revenue and Customs).

Disability living allowance or attendance allowance (payable if the claimant started receiving it before 1 June 1992 while living in the UK).

Carer's allowance (payable if the claimant started receiving it before 1 June1992 and the person being cared for is also getting disability living allowance or attendance allowance).

Winter fuel payment (payable if the claimant first started receiving the winter fuel payment while living in the UK).

Statutory sick pay/statutory maternity pay (paid by the employer and administered by HMRC).

State pension.

Maternity allowance.

Contribution-based jobseeker's allowance.

Incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance.

Social Security Benefits: Telephone Services

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been spent on administering the benefit fraud hotline in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [124709]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available broken down by month.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what mechanisms are in place to ensure his Department's economical use of paper. [128004]

Mr. Hain: The NIO's overall policy on the consumption of any resource is to reduce, reuse and recycle. In taking this forward we give advice and guidance to staff on a range of sustainability issues via our intranet and through awareness seminars.

With regard to economical use of paper the policy is to avoid printing or copying documents unnecessarily, and if printing or copying is necessary to use a printer or copier capable of double sided printing. In addition we have greatly reduced the circulation of information on paper in favour of circulation by electronic means.

In order to measure the effectiveness of this policy we have initiated a mechanism whereby we monitor the purchase of A4 paper.

Elections

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many election petitions have been heard in the courts in Northern Ireland since 2000; what the outcome was of each case in which no proceedings are active; which election each concerned; and what the nature was of the petition. [129411]

Mr. Hanson: There has only been one election petition heard in the courts in Northern Ireland since 2000. This was in relation to a polling place at the parliamentary election in 2001 which remained open after the statutory closing time of 10.00 pm. The court determined that the votes polled after 10.00 pm had not affected the result.

Electoral Register

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of individual registration in the recent Northern Ireland elections. [128936]

Mr. Hanson: The Electoral Commission will be commenting on individual registration and other administrative matters to do with the Assembly election in its statutory report to be published in June 2007.

English Language

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Government is taking to provide free English language courses for foreign citizens living in Northern Ireland. [128394]

Maria Eagle: In Northern Ireland the Department for Employment and Learning's Strategy is to provide English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) courses as part of its mainstream Further Education provision.

Provision is accessible through the network of Further Education Colleges located across all areas of NI. Although most colleges offer access to ESOL free of charge (subject to standard residency requirements, applicable across the UK) some colleges exercise their right to charge a small registration fee.

The Department gives the highest weighting within the Further Education Funding Formula to ESOL provision. There is no cap on provision and the funding incentive for colleges has clearly benefited the uptake and delivery of this provision.

Fly Tipping

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were charged with dumping offences in each local authority area in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years; and what penalty was imposed in each case. [129556]

David Cairns: The Environment and Heritage Service took over responsibility for waste management from the district councils in December 2003. Information is not available prior to that date. Details on convictions, acquittals and associated fines for each district council area from late 2003 to date are set out in the following tables.

David Cairns: Incidents of illegal dumping investigated by Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) are set out for each district council area in the following table. Records on the clean-up costs of illegal dumping are not held either by district councils or EHS.

Hearing Aids: Digital Technology

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have received a digital hearing aid in each health trust area since their introduction in Northern Ireland; and what the average number of people on waiting lists for digital hearing aids was in each health trust area in the same period. [129580]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of people receiving digital hearing aids in Northern Ireland was first collected for the quarter ending 31 March 2006, and is presented in Table 1. More recent information is not available at this time.

Homeopathy

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people requested homeopathic treatment in each health trust area in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [129332]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of people who have requested homeopathic treatment in each of the health trusts is not available.

However, a survey of 452 cancer patients in Northern Ireland carried out by Action Cancer and the Gerard Lynch centre, Belvoir Park hospital, in 2004 found that 24.6 per cent. would like the opportunity of using homeopathy if it was provided as part of their health service treatment. The survey was carried out at outpatient facilities which deliver chemotherapy and outpatient review appointments at Altnagelvin, Antrim, Craigavon and the Ulster hospitals. Results were also gathered from the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre which refers to Belvoir Park, Belfast City and Royal Victoria hospitals.

Lung Cancer

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he intends to implement the objectives of the Lung Cancer Patients' Charter in Northern Ireland. [129581]

Paul Goggins: On 9 November 2006 my Department published a Cancer Control Programme for Northern Ireland. This plan sets out recommendations and actions for the further strengthening of cancer services, including lung cancer services, and the setting of standards for the delivery of those services. In addition the Northern Ireland Cancer Network has established a Regional Lung Cancer Group which reviews existing standards and guidelines and develops regionally agreed standards of care. I am confident that this programme of work aligns effectively with the principles set out in the Lung Cancer Patients' Charter.

Motor Vehicles: Excise Duties

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vehicle tax evasion offences were recorded in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years; and what range of penalties were imposed for vehicle tax evasion offences over the same period. [129663]

David Cairns: Before the implementation of a new IT system in April 2002, the information was not held in a format which enables the figures requested to be collated without disproportionate effort.

	Offence
	On-the-road unlicensed detections	Failure to make a Statutory Off Road Notification (SORN)[1]	Continuous Registration (CR)[1]

2005-06	34,957	—	66,779
2006-February 2007	30,218	—	46,394

[1] The offence of failing to make a Statutory Off Road Notification (SORN)was superseded by the introduction of the Continuous Registration legislation in December 2003.

Penalties for on-the-road detections of unlicensed vehicles penalties are based on a standard calculation of 1.5 or 2 times the arrears of duty outstanding, depending on the offence, plus a £30 administration fee. The maximum fine that can be imposed by the court on conviction is a level 3 (£1,000) or level 4 (£2,500) fine, depending on the offence, or 5 times the amount of the vehicle excise duty chargeable, whichever is the greater.

Statutory Off Road Notification legislation was introduced in December 2002 requiring the keeper to renew their vehicle licence or to complete a SORN declaration if the vehicle remained unlicensed. The penalty for failure to comply was £45, reduced to £25 if paid within 28 days. The maximum fine that could be imposed by the court on conviction was at level 3 (£1,000).

The penalty for failure to comply with Continuous Registration legislation is £80, reduced to £40 if paid within 28 days. The minimum fine that could be imposed is at level 3 (£1,000).

Recycling

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public recycling facilities are in operation in each district council area in Northern Ireland. [129578]

David Cairns: Statistics for such facilities in each district council area have been included in the three regional Waste Management Plans. The following table contains a breakdown of the numbers of facilities by district council area.

Schools: Fires

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much fires in schools in Northern Ireland cost in each of the last 10 years. [128392]

Maria Eagle: Information on the cost of damage to schools in Northern Ireland caused by fires in each of the last 10 yeas is not readily available. This information has been requested from the Education and Library Boards and will be provided to the hon. Gentleman in writing as soon as possible.

Social Housing

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new social housing dwellings he expects to be built in Northern Ireland in the next financial year. [129779]

Mr. Hanson: The target is to start 1,500 social houses in 2007-08.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in his Department were assigned to benefit fraud investigations in each of the last six years, broken down by grade. [129533]

Mr. Hanson: The number of staff in the Department for Social Development who were assigned to benefit fraud investigations, broken down by grade, is shown in the following table. Reliable information can be provided only for the current year and the previous two years.

Taxis: Disabled

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Government is taking to increase the availability of licensed disabled access taxis in Northern Ireland. [130329]

David Cairns: Regulations already require all Belfast Public Hire taxis to be wheelchair accessible and their numbers have increased from 239 in 2002-03 to 380 in 2005-06.

In August 2006 I announced that a Door-2-Door transport scheme will operate in 27 towns and cities providing services across Northern Ireland for disabled and older people who find it difficult or impossible to use conventional public transport. This has led to the licensing of a further 25 accessible taxis, bringing the estimated total to 1,500—equivalent to approximately 14 per cent. of all licensed taxis.

The draft Taxis Order (Northern Ireland) 2007 laid on 9 January contains measures intended to increase the availability of accessible taxis by requiring taxi operators to provide more taxis designed to meet the needs of older people and people with disabilities and to allow only accessible taxis to use taxi ranks. On restoration, responsibility for policy and legislation on taxis will transfer to the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Teachers: Pensions

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will amend the Teachers' Superannuation Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1998 to allow teachers from independent schools to join the Northern Ireland Teachers' Superannuation Scheme; and what estimate he has made of the number of teachers affected as a result of the exclusion of independent schools from the scheme. [129666]

Maria Eagle: The Teachers' Pensions etc (Reform Amendments) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2007, coming into operation on 1 April 2007, make provision for teachers in an independent school to join the Northern Ireland Teachers' Superannuation Scheme, subject to certain conditions being met by the governing body.

There are currently 18 independent schools in Northern Ireland employing approximately 158 teachers.

Translink: Crimes of Violence

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff assaults were recorded on the Translink network in each of the last five years; how many people were charged with assaulting a member of Translink staff over the same period; and how many convictions occurred as a result. [128125]

David Cairns: Translink has advised that figures for the number of assaults on Translink staff are as set out in the following tables.

Northern Ireland Railways (by financial year)

	Number of assaults
2006-07	7
2005-06	9

Translink has also advised that it does not have information to produce accurate statistics on the number of persons charged with assault of Translink staff. Translink has advised that it instigated prosecution against no more than 10 individuals in the period.

Translink: Fares

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of fare evasion were recorded on the Translink network in each of the last five years; and what penalties were imposed in each case. [128124]

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the percentage change in fares was across the Translink network in each of the past 10 years. [129514]

David Cairns: The following table sets out details of average fare increases for 2007-08 together with increases in each of the previous nine years. The Department does not hold data for cross border rail services for all the years in question.

Translink: Vandalism

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were (a) convicted and (b) charged with vandalising Translink property in each of the last five years; and what the average penalty imposed in each case was. [128122]

David Cairns: Translink has advised that it does not maintain records of unsuccessful prosecutions. The number of successful prosecutions for vandalism is as set out in the following table.

	Number of convictions	Average penalty (£)
2006	5	400.00
2005	8	92.10
2004	7	291.70
2003	6	105.50

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of vandalism to Translink property were recorded in each of the last five years; and what steps he is taking to reduce such figures. [128123]

David Cairns: Translink has provided details of incidents of vandalism in the following tables.

Table 1 refers to vandalism on Northern Ireland Railways property, covering damage to buildings, track and trains. The majority of incidents relate to damage caused to trains.

Table 1: Recorded number of incidents

2006	449
2005	367
2004	408

Translink is seeking to tackle vandalism by expanding CCTV coverage both at Translink premises and on board buses and trains. Translink may also employ covert surveillance, where appropriate.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture: Subsidies

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of single farm payments in England are paid to persons who do not own farms. [129050]

Barry Gardiner: People who claim under the single payment scheme (SPS) must be farmers with eligible land and payment entitlements. Under the scheme rules a farmer is defined as a natural or legal person, or a group of natural or legal persons, whatever legal status is granted to the group and its members by national law, whose holding is situated within the EU and who exercises an agricultural activity.

SPS claimants will include farmers who own farms, rent land and new entrants to the scheme who have land and have brought or leased in entitlements, allowing them to claim.

Air Pollution

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the legal consequences are for the United Kingdom of breaches of European standards for particulate matter air pollution in London in 2005 and 2006. [129856]

Mr. Bradshaw: The primary legal consequence of breaches of air quality limit values is that the European Commission may bring the matter before the European Court of Justice under Article 226 of the European Community Treaty. Further sanctions are available to the Commission in cases where any member state fails to comply with the resulting Court judgment.

In the UK, compliance problems are not widespread—they generally apply at highly localised hotspots (such as a street corner, which are greatly influenced by traffic). In 2005, most people (around 99.9 per cent. of the population) were already breathing air that complied with the PM_{10} standard.

The Ambient Air Quality Directive places a statutory obligation on the Government to produce a plan which explains action that we will take to bring areas of exceedence back into compliance.

Our national air quality strategy review, currently under way, considers additional policy measures that may be needed to help us achieve national and European air quality standards.

Badgers: Disease Control

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has made for arrangements for badger culling by farmers in the event of a decision to license culling. [128105]

Mr. Bradshaw: No decision has been made on badger culling for control of TB including on the organisational questions. Therefore, no arrangements have been put in place.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department has (a) conducted and (b) evaluated on the separation of healthy from bovine TB-infected badgers for the purposes of culling. [128106]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have not conducted specific research on the separation of healthy from bTB-infected badgers in order to identify badgers to be culled.

The research we have evaluated, such as the results emerging from the randomised badger culling trial, shows that bTB is a chronic disease which is endemic and self-maintained at a substantial level in the badger population over large areas of the country. This means that with the available limited blood test having to be repeated three times at intervals on individual animals, it is impractical and verging on the impossible to confidently separate healthy badgers from bTB-infected badgers. Even if a more accurate and rapid test were available, tackling bTB in this chronically infected wildlife reservoir by removing test-positive individuals is not considered a scientifically sound or practical policy.

We have also considered what use the polymerase chain reaction (PCR) test for detection of Mycobacterium bovis in the environment could be in this instance. While this is yet to be validated for use in the field, it is clear from the researchers that, at the most, it may be possible to use this to identify areas, such as setts, where Mycobacterium bovis is present. However, this would still mean we could not identify individuals that were infected or, at this stage, whether the bacteria detected were viable and infectious.

British Waterways: Finance

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what effect the claim on the reserve of non-cash programme resources to cover provision for disallowance arising from Common Agricultural Policy schemes will have on (a) the previously announced 2007 budget costs to British Waterways and (b) the future funding levels of British Waterways; and if he will make a statement. [128180]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 14 March 2007]: None.

Common Agricultural Policy

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects the European Commission to make a decision on disallowances arising from Common Agricultural Policy schemes. [128049]

Barry Gardiner: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2182W. Detailed discussions will take place with the Commission over a number of years before a final figure is reached. The Government are committed to defending the UK's interests in these discussions.

Departments: Orders and Regulations

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the total administrative cost of complying with his Department's regulations, as defined in The Defra Simplification Plan "Maximising Outcomes, Minimising Burdens" November 2006, in each year since 2001. [128836]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA, in common with other Government Departments, took part in an exercise during 2005 and 2006 to measure the total administrative burdens imposed by regulations that were in force in May 2005. This exercise had not been undertaken before. The total annual administrative burden imposed on business by DEFRA regulations was assessed to be £527.8 million per year. DEFRA has made a commitment to reduce this burden by 25 per cent. by 2010.

My Department's simplification plan 'Maximising Outcomes, Minimising Burdens' which was published in December 2006 provided an update on progress so far. During the year June 2005-May 2006 an additional £13.5 million of administrative burdens was imposed by new regulations. Against this, simplification initiatives during the period have delivered savings of £51.5 million, a net reduction of £38 million.

DEFRA will publish its next simplification plan toward the end of 2007.

Environmental Stewardship Scheme

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Higher Level Stewardship Scheme applications were (a) received and (b) approved by (i) English Nature in each month from 2004 until the transfer of the scheme to Natural England and (ii) by Natural England since its inception; and if he will make a statement. [122485]

Barry Gardiner [pursuant to the reply, 28 February 2007, Official Report, c. 1325W]: The figures in the Natural England column for August 2006, November 2006 and February 2007 were incorrect. The correct figures are in the table. The rest of the answer remains correct.

The first Higher Level Stewardship agreements commenced on 1 February 2006 and were administered by the Rural Development Service (RDS) rather than English Nature. The environmental land management functions of the Rural Development Service then transferred, on 1 October 2006, to form part of Natural England.

The Higher Level Stewardship (HLS) scheme accepts applications on a quarterly rather than monthly basis. The following table sets out applications received and approved by both the RDS and Natural England during the quarterly timeframes the hon. Member refers to:

Quarterly cycle date	Applications received	Applications approved
Rural Development Service
February 2006	322	287
May 2006	304	269
August 2006	387	319
Natural England
November 2006	588	357
February 2007	385	114

The data contained in this table is a snap-shot. As such, it will be subject to future change as Natural England finalises HLS processing. This particularly applies to the February 2007 agreements. There are still a number of cases to be finalised between applicants and Natural England, and figures will change accordingly.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1325W, on the Environmental Stewardship Scheme, how many higher level stewardship scheme applications approved in 2006 were received prior to 1 February 2006. [128536]

Barry Gardiner: Regrettably, I have to advise that I am unable to provide a figure which shows precisely the number of applications approved in 2006 that were received prior to 1 February 2006. This is because the IT system necessary to record such data was not fully in place for the period referred to. In order to now provide this data would necessitate a large-scale manual exercise which would be of disproportionate cost.

Farms: Pupils

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations he has received on the role of school visits to farms in educating children. [124984]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has not received any recent representations on the importance of school visits to farms for educating children. However, through the Growing Schools programme, we work very closely with organisations that promote children's understanding of food and agriculture, either through visits to farms or through growing within the school grounds.

We support Access to Farms, a national partnership that encourages school visits to farms, and part funded it to develop training and accreditation for farmers who host school visits. We also support and part-fund the Federation of City Farms and Community Gardens, which publicises farms and gardens to schools and manages a network of more than 60 school farms. We are working closely with DEFRA on the forthcoming Year of Food and Farming, and will publicise it to schools though the Growing Schools programme.

Gyrodactylus Salaris

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what measures he is taking to keep rivers safe from Gyrodactylus salaris; and if he will make a statement; [128905]

(2) what his contingency plans are for dealing with an outbreak of Gyrodactylus salaris; what risk assessment he has made of Gyrodactylus salaris entering into the UK; and if he will make a statement. [128906]

Mr. Bradshaw: Gyrodactylus salaris (Gs) is a parasite that has the potential to cause widespread losses in both wild and farmed Atlantic salmon. The disease Gyrodactylosis, caused by the parasite, is subject to the notification requirements and control arrangements of the Diseases of Fish Act 1937 (as amended).

The UK is free of Gs and we are doing all we can to ensure that remains the case. In March 2004, following intensive discussion in the EU, we succeeded in re-negotiating robust additional fish health guarantees to safeguard against the introduction of Gs through trade in live fish (Commission Decision 2004/453). The guarantees, in effect, allow movement of live fish of susceptible species only from areas that are considered free of the parasite.

The revised additional guarantees were agreed only after they had been scrutinised by leading UK fish health scientists and assessed by them as posing a negligible risk of introducing Gs into the UK. Subsequently, the EU Permanent Advisory Network for Disease in Aquaculture, made up of international fish health scientists, also considered the measures and came to the same conclusion.

DEFRA has contingency plans in place which have been drafted in close consultation with the Environment Agency, the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science and other interested parties. In the event of identification of Gs in either farmed or wild freshwater fish stocks, the objective would be to contain and, if possible, eradicate the parasite. Officials are also in regular contact with their counterparts in other Departments and the devolved Administrations about contingency planning.

My Department has also carried out publicity campaigns to raise awareness among the general public (especially those involved in angling) about the dangers of introducing Gs and other diseases through travel to and from high-risk areas. A further campaign is being considered for the near future. Advice on how to keep Gs out of the country is contained in our "Keep Fish Diseases Out" series of guidance leaflets.

Hunting

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Countryside Alliance on the operation of the hunting legislation. [127571]

Barry Gardiner: The Secretary of State has not had any recent discussions with the Countryside Alliance about the Hunting Act 2004.

International Whaling Commission: Poland

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Polish Foreign Minister on Poland's possible membership of the International Whaling Commission; and if he will make a statement. [129541]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Secretary of State and the Foreign Secretary have recently jointly written to Poland and 11 other EU and accession states encouraging them to join the International Whaling Commission (IWC).

In support of the UK's position, I raised the issue of IWC membership at a recent meeting of EU Environment Ministers in Luxembourg. I also sent copies of our recent publication 'Protecting Whales—A Global Responsibility' to 57 countries, including Poland, encouraging them to join the effort to protect these species.

DEFRA officials also ensure that Foreign and Commonwealth Office posts in the relevant capitals are briefed, and engage in discussion with their counterparts on whaling at every appropriate opportunity. This ensures that these countries are in no doubt of the importance that the UK attaches to whale conservation. This is particularly important as we approach the next IWC meeting, to be held in Anchorage, Alaska in May.

Litter: Fixed Penalties

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people were issued with a fixed penalty by local authorities as a result of (a) dropping litter and (b) permitting dog fouling in each of the last five years. [129921]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 27 March 2007]: The number of fixed penalty notices (FPNs) issued by local authorities in England in each of the last five years for litter and dog fouling offences is shown in the following table.

April to March each year	FPNs issued for litter offences	FPNs issued for dog fouling offences
2005-06	33,033	4,066
2004-05	25,216	3,557
2003-04	7,565	2,742
2002-03	12,820	2,036
2001-02	11,615	2,311

Plastics: Recycling

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with European Union environment ministers on ways in which recycling for low density polyethylene (Type 4), Polypropylene (Type 5), Polystyrene (Type 6) and other (Type 7) plastics can be advanced. [129350]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have regular discussions with European Union environment ministers on a range of issues, but none have been held specifically on this issue.

However, the Government are taking action to both support the reduction of plastic packaging in the waste stream and encourage the recycling of plastics more generally. The Waste and Resources Action programme (WRAP) is also working to create stable markets for a range of recycled materials, including plastics. In 2003, WRAP commissioned Enviros Consulting Ltd to undertake a study of the markets, applications and growth opportunities for recycled plastics in the UK.

For example, expanded polystyrene can readily be used for insulation in housing and other types of plastics can be recycled into lower grade plastics and used in construction or packaging.

WRAP's targets for 2004-06 are to work with the plastics industry to increase the acceptance of recycled plastic throughout the supply chain, to deliver an additional 20,000 tonnes of domestic plastic bottle recycling capacity, and to ensure that an additional 11,000 tonnes of non-bottle plastics are recycled.

A common use of low density polyethylene is in the production of carrier bags. DEFRA is working closely with the devolved administrations, WRAP, the Scottish Waste Awareness Group and businesses to both promote reusable bags and reduce the number of plastic bags entering the waste stream.

In addition, the packaging regulations set targets for recovery and recycling of packaging waste to be met by obligated businesses each year to enable the UK to meet the targets in the EU Packaging Directive. This requires the UK to recycle 22.5 per cent. of the plastic packaging waste entering the UK waste stream by 2008. Currently, around 20 per cent. of plastic packaging waste is recycled in the UK.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authorities in England offer facilities for recycling (a) low density polyethylene (Type 4), (b) polypropylene (Type 5), (c) polystyrene (Type 6) and (d) other (Type 7) plastics. [129351]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data from the 2006 Waste and Resources Action programme/Recoup UK plastic bottle recycling survey indicate that 86 per cent of local authorities (LAs) already offer some form of collection facilities for plastic bottles.

LAs normally collect plastics by application and not by polymer type. They may, for example, request types of bottles and trays for recycling, instead of distinguishing between different types of plastic. Data are not, therefore, collected on the different types of plastic collected by individual LAs.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding each regional development agency received from (a) rural development programmes and (b) other programmes run by his Department in each of the last five years; and how much each agency spent on policy areas which are his Department's responsibility in each year. [127396]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA is one of five departments which fund regional development agencies (RDAs) through a single programme budget (the "single pot"). This funding gives RDAs the ability to address regional priorities, while at the same time contributing to the delivery of national public service agreement targets—including DEFRA's public service agreement targets on sustainable development, rural productivity and access to services, and sustainable farming and food. Funding is allocated using a funding formula.

DEFRA funding to the RDAs since 2002-03 is as follows:

£ million

	DEFRA contribution to RDA single pot	BREW[1]
2002-03	41	—
2003-04	41	—
2004-05	46	—
2005-06	72	5
2006-07	73	12

[1] Funding for RDA regional co-ordination of the business resource efficiency and waste programme

The significant increase in the DEFRA contribution to the single pot from 2005-06 is the result of the transfer of additional funding from the Countryside Agency for rural socio-economic activities (£21 million per annum), a commitment made in rural strategy 2004.

How each RDA utilises its single pot allocation will vary according to regional need. Details of RDA priorities and planned spending can be found in individual RDA corporate plans, (approved by Government), with six-monthly reports on performance, setting out what has been achieved. These documents can be found on each RDA website.

Responsibility for the delivery of the socio-economic measures of the Rural Development Programme for England (and legacy of the earlier England Rural Development Programme) was passed to the RDAs on 1 October 2006. This implemented another of the commitments from the rural strategy 2004. The level of funding for the new programme has yet to be finalised but RDAs will have access to a minimum of £40 million per annum over the period 2007-13.

The move to devolve funding to the regions through RDAs is part of the Government's devolving decision-making agenda. RDAs, working in partnership, will decide how to spend their resources to meet national targets and address regional needs. However, DEFRA is confident that by devolving these responsibilities to the RDAs and having increased the resources it makes available to them, rural delivery will become more responsive to local priorities and better focused on areas and people who need it most.

Waste Disposal: Greater London

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans there are to dispose of London's residual waste to landfill sites outside London. [129695]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Mayor of London is making strong efforts to reduce London's reliance on landfill outside its boundaries. The Mayor's spatial development strategy envisages London becoming 85 per cent. self-sufficient with regard to waste management by 2020.

The London boroughs, which are the waste planning authorities, are required to draw up plans which are in general conformity with the Mayor's spatial development strategy. The Government have proposed a strengthening of the Mayor's planning powers, which is intended to increase his ability to ensure that appropriate development takes place.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of London's waste was disposed of at Newton Longville landfill site in the last 12 months; and how much he estimates will be disposed of at the site in each of the next 10 years. [129696]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency holds records of waste arising in London disposed of at the Newton Longville landfill site. Their data, which is based on operator returns, shows that 17,724.41 tonnes of London's waste were disposed of at the site in 2006.

The Environment Agency does not hold, or have access to, data on future disposal rates and waste origins for this site. This is a commercial matter between the landfill operator, The Waste Recycling Group, and any London boroughs that have contracts with the operator.

White Fish: Conservation

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) for what reasons he did not proceed with his plans to increase the minimum landing size of bass to 40cm from 6 April; [129060]

(2) what evidence he expects to consider before fulfilling his commitment to increase to minimum landing size for bass; [129061]

(3) what studies his Department has carried out on the effect on discards of increasing the minimum landing size of bass to 40 cm; and if he will make a statement. [129074]

Mr. Bradshaw: I listened carefully to the concerns expressed by the National Federation of Fisherman's Organisations (NFFO) at a meeting on 14 March. It presented a number of issues relating to the impact it said the measures would have on both the stocks of bass and the livelihoods of bass fishermen, and asked me to reconsider my decision.

The Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (Cefas) has recently conducted a study on the levels of bass discards from trawlers and the relative impact of an increase in the minimum landing size for bass. I will assess the implications of this report, the points raised by the NFFO and any new evidence before considering whether, and on what date, legislation will come into force.

Wood: Trade

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding has been provided by his Department for the timber trade action plan (TTAP); when he expects the TTAP report on mills in China to be made available; and if he will make a statement. [127454]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA is not funding the timber trade action plan (TTAP) but has provided a grant of £151,692 from the World Summit On Sustainable Development Implementation Fund to The Tropical Forest Trust, which also manages TTAP. This funding supports a project which aims to help Chinese wood processing firms achieve market demands for legal and sustainable timber. A public report on the first phase of the project—an industry supply chain study—will be available at the end of March.

TREASURY

Average Earnings

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2007, Official Report, column 406W, on average earnings, what information can be extracted from the Labour Force Survey relating to the pay gap for (a) women with dependent children, (b) ethnic minorities, (c) workers with disabilities and (d) workers with the fewest qualifications. [129909]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 28 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the pay gap, as represented by average hourly earnings, between men and certain other groups of employees. (129909)

In your earlier question, Official Report Volume 458, column 406, to which you refer, you requested a time series of data from 1997. I pointed out that while the data was available from the Labour Force Survey (LFS), it could only be provided at a disproportionate cost. I have therefore only provided data for 2006.

The attached table gives a breakdown of the average hourly earnings of employees of working age, and the percentage pay gap between all male employees and employees who are either women with dependent children, people from ethnic minorities, workers with disabilities, and employees for each of the main qualification groups.

Average hourly earnings shown are based on the statistical mean. The ONS also publishes information for both the mean and median hourly earnings in table 38 of the LFS Historical Quarterly Supplement, which can be found at:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_labour/LFSHQS/Table38.xls

The results shown are not comparable to those provided in the earlier reply as that information was provided from the Annual Survey of Hourly Earnings (ASHE). The estimates relate to the three months ending June 2006. These estimates have not been seasonally adjusted.

Estimates are taken from the LFS. As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what forecast he has made of the number of births in England in each strategic health authority area in (a) 2010, (b) 2020 and (c) 2030. [129886]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 28 March 2007:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question about the number of births forecast in each strategic health authority area of England for (a) 2010, (b) 2020 and (c) 2030. I am replying in her absence. (129886)

The most recent projection of the number of births at strategic health authority area was made as part of the 2004-based subnational population projections published by the Office for National Statistics in October 2006.

The attached table gives the projected figures for each strategic health authority for the year to mid-2010) 2020 and 2029 (the final year of the 25 year projection horizon) as used in the 2004-based subnational population projections.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of capital gains tax taper relief for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [130105]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the cost of capital gains tax taper relief for 2005-06 and 2006-07 were published in Table A3.3 of the 2007 'Financial Statement and Budget Report'. Estimates for later years are not available.

Central Government Funding: Health Service/Local Government

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the net cost or saving to public funds if central government contributions to local government expenditure and the financing of the health service and of policing were allocated by applying throughout the United Kingdom the same needs-based formulae as are currently used to allocate public spending in England in those fields. [129812]

Mr. Timms: Under the devolved funding arrangements set out in the Statement of Funding Policy published in July 2004 it is for the devolved administrations to determine how much is spent on the health service and local government expenditure, and similarly for policing in Scotland, within their overall block budgets.

We do not have the data to attempt to apply spending formulae for England to local authorities and health trusts in other countries in the UK.

Child Care

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the amount and proportion of disposable income spent on formal child care by people in each income quintile; and if he will make a statement. [129908]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government do not hold information on the amount and proportion of disposable income spent on formal child care by income quintile. Child care costs vary depending on a number of different factors, including type of care, age of child, time of care, region, whether or not the child is disabled and whether the care is part or full-time.

Child Tax Credit

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households receive the disability element of child tax credit, broken down by (a) region, (b) local authority and (c) parliamentary constituency. [129800]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the average number of in-work families benefiting from the disabled child element of the Child Tax Credit (CTC) in each area requested, are shown in 'Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. Finalised Awards 2004-05. Geographical Analyses'. This publication can be found on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-stats.htm

Information for 2005-06 finalised awards will be published in May 2007.

Complete information on the number of out of work families in each area benefiting from the disabled child element of CTC, or the equivalent in benefit payments, is not available.

Council Tax: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what media evaluation reports the Valuation Office Agency has produced on council tax in the last 12 months. [129697]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency has produced no media evaluation reports on council tax in the last 12 months.

Council Tax: Wales

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) had with the Welsh Assembly Government on the implementation of the VOA's automated valuation model in Wales for council tax valuation purposes. [129593]

Dawn Primarolo: The automated valuation model was not used for valuation purposes in the 2005 council tax revaluation in Wales. The possibility of its future use to keep the banding lists up to date to reflect new or altered properties has been raised with Welsh Assembly Government officials.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department has spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper or publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers or publications in the latest year for which figures are available; and what the topic was of each publication. [129452]

John Healey: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Wealden (Charles Hendry) on 19 December 2006, Official Report, columns 1738-39W. Further analysis of the spending could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Air Pollution

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what monetary value is assigned by his Department to the social cost of carbon in assessing Government projects; what value was recommended by the Stern review on climate change; and if he will make a statement. [128468]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

In January 2002, "Estimating the Social Cost of Carbon Emission" a Government Economic Service (GES) working paper, was published jointly by DEFRA and the Treasury. It suggested £70 per tonne of Carbon (tC) (within a range of £35 to £140 per tC) as an illustrative estimate for the global damage cost of carbon emissions. This would rise by £1 per tC per year in real terms to reflect the increasing marginal cost of emissions over time. The GES paper also recommended periodic reviews of the illustrative figures as new evidence became available. The UK was almost unique in issuing official guidance on the social cost of carbon (SCC). The scientific and socio-economic uncertainties behind these calculations are very significant.

The Stern Review estimates the SCC for a scenario of unmitigated climate change averaging over time and over different possible outcomes, is $85 per tCO2 in year 2000, rising over time. The equivalent value in 2007 might be around £264-269 per tC.

However, the Stern Review also notes that, if the world converges on a trajectory towards stabilisation at a level that reduces the risks and damages of climate change, the SCC will be lower, perhaps $25-30 per tCO2 in year 2000. Again, this would rise over time. The equivalent value in 2007 might be around £90-95 per tC.

Economists from relevant government departments are currently developing revised guidance on the calculation and use of shadow prices of carbon in informing UK policy decisions in the light of the Stern Review work on the social cost of carbon as well as previous work by DEFRA in this area. The aim is to publish revised guidance by the summer.

Departments: Conferences

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what conferences funded by his Department in February 2007 had over 100 attendees. [128373]

John Healey: None.

Departments: Teaching Aids

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) commissioning, (b) distribution and (c) other costs have been of providing updates to the Red Box teaching pack in the last six months. [128825]

John Healey: The Red Box website has been updated and went live early March. The cost was £24,461.

The printed Red Box has not been updated in the last six months.

Economic Growth

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which independent variables he uses to make his projections of GDP growth; and what form the growth model takes. [129347]

John Healey: The Treasury's approach to economic forecasting is described in the 2007 Budget Report (HC342, paragraphs B30 to B35); and the latest forecast for GDP growth is set out in Chapter B of that report. The Treasury's approach to projecting the economy's trend rate of growth is set out in 'Trend growth: recent developments and prospects', HM Treasury, April 2002; and for a full discussion of the most recent review of the Treasury's trend growth projections see 'Trend growth: new evidence and prospects', HM Treasury, December 2006.

Excise Duties: Motor Vehicles

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the graduated rates of tax for vehicle excise duty introduced in 2001 on ownership of cars in the different tax bands. [129739]

John Healey: The Government inherited a one band system of VED in 1997, but now has environmentally graduated carbon dioxide bands. VED's environmental signal to motorists to purchase more fuel efficient cars and to vehicle manufacturers has been progressively refined and sharpened.

This is one of the reasons why the proportion of least polluting cars on our roads has risen by 30 per cent. while that of the most polluting cars has fallen.

The numbers of vehicles in the three lowest carbon dioxide emissions VED bands is forecast to grow significantly in the longer term in part due to VED reform.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he has taken steps to encourage cars with large engines that might incur the highest rate of vehicle excise duty to be converted to liquified petroleum gas or other cleaner fuels; [130038]

(2) whether cars which are converted to cleaner fuels will be subject to lower vehicle excise duty. [130096]

John Healey: When CO_2 emissions graduated vehicle excise duty was introduced in 2001 the CO_2 banding structure included a discount for cars capable of using alternative fuels. This discount remains in place and is worth £20 for cars in bands B-E, and £15 for cars in bands F and G. Cars capable of running on liquefied petroleum gas, compressed natural gas and E85 high blend bioethanol are eligible to receive this.

A fuel duty differential has been in place for bioethanol since 2005 and Budget 2007 announced the extension of the 20 pence per litre biofuels duty incentive until 2009-10, offering further certainty to the industry and motorists. As acknowledged in the Chancellor's 2007 Budget report road fuel gases such as compressed natural gas and liquefied petroleum gas can deliver carbon and air quality benefits over conventional road fuels. Duty support is given to these fuels in line with the principles in the Government's alternative fuels framework.

Liquefied petroleum gas currently benefits from a fuel duty incentive over main road fuels which equates to 39.79 pence per litre.

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on the exemption of motorists with disabilities from vehicle excise duty; what account is taken of the age of such motorists in eligibility for such exemptions; and if he will make a statement. [130328]

John Healey: Exemption from vehicle excise duty for cars is offered to severely disabled people who are in receipt of war pensioners mobility supplement (WPMS) or the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA).

The recipient can nominate someone else to drive the car, and the car may be registered either to the recipient or the nominee. However, for the car to remain exempt all journeys must be for the recipient's purposes—for example for taking the recipient to the doctor or for doing the recipient's shopping—otherwise the appropriate rate of Vehicle excise duty must be paid. Vehicle excise duty must be paid on any additional vehicles—the exemption can only be claimed once.

The Government believe that using WPMS and the higher rate mobility component of DLA is the most effective way of delivering this exemption to the people most in need. DLA is only available to people claiming before the age of 65, but once granted can continue in payments beyond the age of 65 so long as the conditions of entitlement remain satisfied.

Gila Sacks

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1490W, on Gila Sacks, whether Gila Sacks is one of his special advisers. [129329]

John Healey: As set out in the PM's annual statement to the House on special advisers, Members of the Council of the Economic Advisers are employed on special adviser terms.

Gross Gaming Yield Band

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the impact on Exchequer revenues of the introduction of a 50 per cent. gross gaming yield band; and if he will make a statement. [130041]

John Healey: Revenue estimates of the 2007 changes to Gaming Duty were published in the 2007 Financial Statement and Budget Report (HC342).

HM Revenue and Customs

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 31 January 2007, Official Report, columns 342-3W, on HM Revenue and Customs, if he will break down the £850,000 expenditure on implementation of proposals and projects arising from the Angels and Demons scheme by proposal or project. [120745]

Dawn Primarolo: Accrued costs of £844,000 (in the period up to the end of 31 January 2007) break down as follows between three projects:

£50,000 spent by the HMRC Northern Ireland Overseas repayment unit on the introduction of scanning capacity for the processing of VAT reclaim forms and supporting documentation, helping to speed up processing and to prevent fraud.

£558,000 spent on a national project to enable the quicker closure of PAYE schemes when employers cease trading, improving the accuracy and generating efficiencies in the management of PAYE records.

£236,000 on a national project targeted at taxpayers for whom English is not a first language, enabling easier checking and payment of income tax liabilities, generating efficiencies in the reduction of taxpayer errors, and their subsequent correction.

As explained in a previous answer I gave on 31 January 2007, Official Report, column 342W, overall expenditure on the portfolio of projects in this scheme is intended to generate returns of 110 per cent. in terms of greater efficiency and reduced administration.

Motor Vehicles: Exhaust Emissions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the progress of motor manufacturers towards meeting the targets for new car emission levels set out in the 1998 agreement between the European Automobile Manufacturers Association and the European Commission. [129738]

John Healey: I refer my hon. Friend to the response given by the Minister of State for Transport on 26 March 2007, Official Report, column 1244W.

National Minimum Wage

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many alleged breaches of the national minimum wage legislation by media companies have been presented to HM Revenue and Customs since (a) 1 May 2004 and (b) 1 January 2007; how many investigations HM Revenue and Customs has carried out into such alleged breaches since each date; and how many prosecutions for breaches of the national minimum wage by media companies there have been since each date. [130027]

Dawn Primarolo: In line with the requirements of the DTI, for whom HMRC enforces the minimum wage, HMRC holds statistical information for 10 employer trade sectors. It does not hold specific information for the media sector and is therefore unable to provide the statistical data requested.

Non-domiciled UK Taxpayers

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what investigations he undertakes into the income and assets held overseas by non-domiciled UK taxpayers. [129969]

Dawn Primarolo: Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) carries out investigations into the income and assets held overseas by UK resident non-domiciled taxpayers where this may be relevant to their UK tax liability. Such investigations may occur to verify information given to HMRC by individuals completing self-assessment tax returns or making other claims for non-domiciled status; as a result of third-party disclosure; or because of the outcome of other HMRC inquiries.

No information is available on the number of investigations undertaken by HMRC.

Planning Gain Supplement

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) of 15 January 2007, on planning gain supplement, why each individual response to the consultation exercise has not been placed in the Library. [129515]

John Healey: The responses to the December 2005 publication "Planning-gain Supplement: a consultation" were placed in the Library of the House on 19 December 2006. The reference number for the set of documents is Dep. 06/2350.

A summary of consultation responses is also available in the Library of the House; the reference number for this document is Dep. 07/461. This document is also available on the Treasury's website.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the increase in the budget for regional development agencies referred to in Paragraph 7.65 of the Budget Red Book, HC 342, is targeted to be used to support the energy efficiency initiative for small and medium-sized businesses in the business resource efficiency advice service. [130031]

John Healey: The nine English regional development agencies (RDAs) are increasing the advice, support and incentives available for environmental improvement and innovation from £140 million in 2006-07 to £240 million in 2007-08. It is for the RDAs to decide the amount of expenditure from their single programme budget used to support the business resource efficiency advice service.

Sainsbury Review

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2232W, on the Sainsbury Review, whether Lord Sainsbury agreed to conduct the review before it was announced. [128455]

John Healey: There is nothing I can add to my earlier answer.

Senior Civil Servants

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether each Treasury managing director has a private secretary. [129326]

John Healey: Every Treasury managing director has access to a private secretary or personal assistant.

Smuggling: Alcoholic Drinks

Mr. Scott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value was of (a) alcohol and (b) tobacco products seized by HM Customs in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [129454]

John Healey: The amount of seized alcohol and tobacco products can be found in the HMRC Annual Report (http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/reports.htm),
and is shown in the following table.

	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Cigarettes seizures (including overseas) (billion)	2.6	1.9	1.3	2.0	2.0
Tobacco seizures (tonnes)	385	258	185	166	160
Spirits seized (million litres)	2.15	0.92	0.41	0.30	0.24
Beer seized (million litres)	2.61	2.95	2.77	2.18	2.52
Wine seized (million litres)	0.61	0.65	1.13	0.63	0.29

Stamp Duty

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what exemptions there are to stamp duty on new houses in Wales; what the cut-off threshold is on stamp duty in Wales; what plans he has for changes in the stamp duty system in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [130022]

Ed Balls: Stamp duty land tax (SDLT) rates and thresholds, like all other national taxes, apply equally to the whole of the UK and have never been set on a regional basis.

The starting residential threshold is currently £125,000 and a higher £150,000 threshold is available in 2,000 disadvantaged wards across the UK.

As announced at Budget 2007, there will be an exemption from SDLT for new zero-carbon homes from 1 October 2007. All qualifying homes under £500,000 will be exempt from SDLT and qualifying homes over £500,000 will have their SDLT bill reduced by £15,000. No exemption from SDLT exists for other types of new homes.

SDLT rates and thresholds, like all other taxes, are kept under constant review as part of the Budget process, and any changes made are announced also as part of this process.

Tax Credits

David Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Penrith and The Border constituency have appealed against a demand for return of overpayments of tax credits since April 2006; and if he will make a statement. [129862]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available.

Taxation

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many changes of the law have been necessitated by inadvertent errors introduced as a result of the tax rewrite project. [130056]

Dawn Primarolo: The Tax Law Rewrite Project has to date produced four Acts—The Capital Allowances Act 2001 (CAA), The Income Tax Earnings and Pension Act 2003 (ITEPA), The Income Tax Trading and Other Income Act 2005 (ITTOIA) and the Income Tax Act 2007 (ITA). These Acts cover more than 2000 pages of legislation.

Nine errors in CAA and eighteen errors in ITEPA were corrected in the Finance Acts 2001 and 2004 respectively.

Four errors in each of ITTOIA and ITA have been corrected using Order-making powers contained in those Acts.

In a number of these cases the corrections have the effect of making the law explicit, rather than changing its substantive effect.

Taxation: Overseas Residence

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the results of HM Treasury's review of non-domiciliary tax status. [130249]

Dawn Primarolo: As was confirmed in the Budget on 21 March, the review of the residence and domicile rules as they affect the taxation of individuals is ongoing.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2007, Official Report, column 1219W, on the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), if he will place in the Library a CD-ROM of the learning and training documents on the VOA's intranet. [129488]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to provide a CD-Rom of all the learning and training documents on the VOA's Intranet. To attempt to configure it for standalone viewing would involve disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what access the Valuation Office Agency has to the National Register of Social Housing. [129492]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) on 20 March 2006, Official Report, column 73W.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2007, Official Report, column 1141W, on the Valuation Office Agency, whether the agency has a data strategy document separate from the agency's annual report, forward plan and accounts. [129579]

John Healey: The Valuation Office Agency has many documents which support the data strategy outlined in the agency's annual report, forward plan and accounts.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 26 January 2007, Official Report, column 2134W, on the Valuation Office Agency, what the agency's expenditure was on HIYA! magazine and the Network Gazette magazine. [129709]

John Healey: The Valuation Office Agency spent £3,228 on the publication of HIYA! and £3,232 on the publication Network Gazette.

Valuation Office Agency: ICT

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department's estimate is of the value of the tangible fixed asset of the Valuation Office Agency's automated valuation model. [129495]

John Healey: The Valuation Office Agency's (VOA's) automated valuation model (AVM) has an estimated value of £6 million.

VAT: Bingo

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to abolish VAT on bingo receipts. [130296]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government's policy of applying VAT and duty on bingo participation fees is consistent with our treatment of other player-to-player gaming in a bricks and mortar environment, such as player-to-player card games in casinos.

Welfare Tax Credits

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether CCM15540 (Undisclosed Partners) in the Tax Credits Compliance Manual is being revised; what guidance is available on assessments covered by these circumstances; and if he will make a statement. [130228]

Dawn Primarolo: The Claimant Compliance Manual (CCM) is kept under regular review and updated when required. Chapter 15 of the CCM provides guidance on how to work cases where HMRC find that a claimant has not disclosed that they have a partner.

Welfare Tax Credits: Lancashire

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people living in (a) Ribble Valley and (b) Lancashire received overpayments of (i) child tax credit and (ii) working tax credit in each of the last five years. [130428]

Mr. Timms: Child and working tax credits were introduced in April 2003.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1421W.

Estimates for 2005-06 of the numbers of in-work families with tax credits awards, including information on overpayments and underpayments by constituency based on final family circumstances and incomes are due to be published in May, as set out in the annual scheduled updates section of the HMRC website:
http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/updates/index.htm

Welfare Tax Credits: Overpayments

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of appeals against overpayment of tax credits have not been successful since April 2006; and if he will make a statement. [130323]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Holloway) in the House on 1 March 2007, Official Report: column 1045.

Young People: Employment

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people aged under 25 years are in full-time employment; [130192]

(2) how many people are employed to work fewer than 30 hours per week; [130193]

(3) how many people aged 16 to 18 years are in (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment. [130194]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 28 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking (1) how many people aged under 25 years are in full-time employment, (2) how many people aged 16 to 18 years are in (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment and (3) how many people are employed to work less than 30 hours per week and. Responses to these questions have been combined in this reply. (130192, 130193, 130194)

Table 1, attached, gives estimates of the numbers of men and women, in full-time and part-time employment for the age bands, 16 to 17 and 16 to 24. Table 2 shows those who work less than 31 hours and 31 or more hours per week, for the three months ending December 2006. These estimates are not seasonally adjusted.

Each month the Office for National Statistics publishes estimates of the number of people working full-time and part-time in the UK, in table 3 of the Labour Market Statistics First Release available in the attached link:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_labour/LMS_FR_HSAVebTable03.xls.

Similarly, estimates of usual weekly hours are available from Table 8 of the same release:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/pdfdir/lmsuk0307.pdf.

Estimates are taken from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

HEALTH

Dental Services: Pay

Mike Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average annual income of a dentist is from the work done for the national health service. [121798]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The gross remuneration paid to providers of national health service dental services covers both the practice expenses incurred in providing services and the dentists' net income. For the financial year 2005-06, the average NHS income for general dental services dentists in England and Wales with a reasonable commitment to the NHS was estimated at £76,500 in net terms, plus £88,500 to cover practice expenses. Dentists' gross contract values were increased by 3 per cent. from April 2006 as recommended by the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration.

Average net earnings in the current year, 2006-07, will also be affected by any change in the relative level of practice expenses. The Department has made available £100 million over the two-year period 2006-07 and 2007-08 to support capital investment in dental practices.

Hospitals: Rehabilitation

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1939W, on residential rehabilitation, which (a) nine services provide residential rehabilitation beds for single parents with children and (b) five services provide beds for couples with children; and how many beds of each type are provided by each service. [119861]

Caroline Flint: This answer corrects information provided in the answer of 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1939W.

There are five services in England which provide residential rehabilitation beds for single parents with children, three of which also provide services for couples with children as residents. Information about the services is shown in the table.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Commission for Equality and Human Rights

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent discussions she has had with the chair of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights on the (a) mandate and (b) involvement of the Commission's Race Equality Group. [127450]

Meg Munn: The Race Equality Group referred to in the question was set up by Ministers to advise them on the establishment of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights—it is not a group of the Commission itself. The group met three times and discussed a variety of issues including the policy agenda of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights and issues of internal governance.

The Secretary of State has now appointed the chair of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights alongside a Board of Commissioners, and the Commission will determine how it wishes to engage with stakeholders. Officials and I have briefed the chair of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights about the group's work to enable the Commission to determine how it wishes to proceed.

Council Tax: Valuation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what obligations householders have to co-operate with requests from the Valuation Office Agency to fill in questionnaires to assist with council tax valuations; [129255]

(2) if she will place in the Library a copy of the questionnaire and covering letter which the Valuation Office Agency has sent to householders in the last 12 months in relation to requesting information to assist with council tax valuations; [129230]

(3) whether the Valuation Office Agency obtains property data from any estate agent industry business or organisation other than Rightmove; [129231]

(4) how the Valuation Office Agency identifies whether a domestic dwelling has a conservatory; [129223]

(5) which estate agent companies provide information to the Valuation Office Agency via the Rightmove interface; [129214]

(6) which external organisations have provided (a) information on individual domestic properties and (b) geo-spatial data to the Valuation Office Agency since 2000. [129213]

Mr. Woolas: I am today placing in the Library an information note about the Valuation Office Agency's valuation practices. The Government take the view that this, together with the detailed information on valuation which the VGA has already made available on its website and the additional information which has previously been placed in the Library or otherwise provided in response to a number of questions, constitutes a clear and satisfactory statement of how properties are valued for council tax purposes in England.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Absent Voting

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that the qualifications required to vote by post in England, Scotland and Wales are the same as those required in Northern Ireland. [130262]

Bridget Prentice: The availability of postal voting on demand in England, Scotland and Wales has proved very popular, with many electors finding it a convenient way to vote.

Through the Electoral Administration Act 2006, as approved by Parliament, we have put in place a range of measures to strengthen the security of postal voting in England, Scotland and Wales, and to ensure postal votes are securely cast and counted.

The Government do not consider there is sufficient justification to make further changes that would restrict the availability of postal voting in England, Scotland and Wales, as is the case in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how her Department intends to ensure appropriate checks in the monitoring of the trials into (a) internet and (b) telephone voting to prevent electoral malpractice and fraud. [130268]

Bridget Prentice: The e-voting election systems used in the pilots are subject to rigorous quality assurance assessment by independent experts on behalf of my Department and also to extensive testing by suppliers and local authorities prior to use. All e-voting systems will also include audit processes and records to allow returning officers to have confidence that the numbers of votes cast electronically tallies with those cast.

Additionally the requirement for electors to provide a personally generated passcode or username reduces the potential for credentials to be stolen and misused.

The independent Electoral Commission is required to evaluate all electoral pilot schemes and publish their findings following the elections.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department is taking to prevent coercion and intimidation being used in the trials of (a) internet and (b) telephone voting. [130274]

Bridget Prentice: If an elector does not feel comfortable with using an e-vote or any form of remote voting they can still vote in person in a polling station.

Electors will be using identifiers that are specific to them in order to access the system and, as with a traditional ballot, there will be no receipt that can be shown by the elector to anyone else afterwards to show how an elector has voted.

My Department is also working with local authorities to ensure that there are good links with local police so that any instances of alleged coercion and intimidation can be investigated as in any normal election. Under new powers contained in the Electoral Administration Act 2006 any attempt to unduly influence an elector could result in a custodial sentence or unlimited fine.

Absent Voting: Proof of Identity

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department will take to verify the identification of people voting (a) by mobile telephone and (b) via the internet in the forthcoming trials. [130065]

Bridget Prentice: Electors wishing to vote remotely using via the internet or by phone as part of an election pilot scheme will be required to pre-register to use these voting channels, as they are for postal voting.

A combination of two codes, one provided by the elector and one by the local elections office, will be used to identify electors when they log on to vote.

Citizenship

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the UK is taking under the Fundamental Rights of Citizenship programme (EU budget code 18 04 06); and if she will make a statement. [130637]

Vera Baird: We expect the decision establishing the Fundamental Rights and Citizenship programme 2007-13 formally to be adopted at the Justice and Home Affairs Council of 19-20 April 2007. Once the decision comes into force, the European Commission will propose an Annual Work programme determining the thematic areas to pursue.

Coroners: Armed Forces

Anne Main: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what her most recent estimate is of the backlog of HM Coroner's Service inquiries into deaths of soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [130434]

Ms Harman: I shall shortly be making a further written ministerial statement which includes the information requested.

Council Tax: Personal Records

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance she has issued on the use of personal information held for collecting and administering council tax in each of the last three years. [130563]

Vera Baird: The Information Commissioner's revised guidance on the use of personal information held for collecting and administering council tax differs from previous guidance by focussing on the questions to be considered when deciding how council tax information can be used.

Departments: Offices

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the (a) purpose and (b) functions of her Department's regional offices will be. [130063]

Bridget Prentice: The Department does not have regional offices.

Electoral Commission

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department (a) has taken and (b) intends to take to enforce the imposition of financial penalties for parties which fail to comply with the regulatory requirements of the Electoral Commission; and whether her Department intends to introduce additional financial penalties. [130064]

Bridget Prentice: The imposition of financial penalties on political parties that fail to comply with regulatory requirements is entirely a matter for the Electoral Commission.

The Government are currently considering the recent review of the Electoral Commission by the Committee on Standards in Public Life and also the recommendations of the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee and of Sir Hayden Phillips that relate to the regulatory role of the Electoral Commission.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the future role of the Electoral Commission in determining electoral boundary matters will be. [130314]

Bridget Prentice: The Political Parties Elections and Referendums Act 2000 currently provides for the transfer of the functions of all the parliamentary boundary commissions, and the local government boundary commissions for England, Wales and Scotland to boundary committees of the Electoral Commission.

However, in its eleventh report, published on 18 January, the Committee on Standards in Public Life recommended that "the Electoral Commission should no longer have any involvement in electoral boundary matters".

The Government are currently considering its response to that recommendation alongside the others made by the Committee in its eleventh report.

Electoral Register

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to encourage local authorities to enforce the requirement for people to complete and return an annual registration canvass form. [130061]

Bridget Prentice: Electoral registration officers (EROs) are aware of their powers to enforce the requirement that electors complete and return annual registration canvass forms and use them at their discretion if they consider this would be effective.

The Electoral Administration Act 2006 (EAA 2006) sets out the necessary steps that local authorities must follow to ensure that eligible individuals are registered to vote. These include:

Sending the canvass form more than once to any address.

Conducting house to house inquiries and making contact by such other means as appropriate.

The Act also contains other measures to improve registration rates, such as:

Enabling registration up to 11 days prior to polling day.

Introducing performance standards for EROs.

These are all significant changes and their impact will be kept under review.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average fine was for failing to complete and return an annual registration canvass form in the latest period for which figures are available. [130066]

Bridget Prentice: This information is not collected.

Electoral Register: Proof of Identity

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make it a requirement for individuals registered to vote at polling stations to have to sign the electoral register so that their signatures can be compared against the signature of the person casting the vote. [130275]

Bridget Prentice: While the Government are committed to ensuring the security of UK elections, we have no plans to require all electors to supply a signature when registering to vote.

Land Registry: Digital Technology

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Land Registry is participating in the European Land Information Service (EULIS) project. [130562]

Vera Baird: Yes, the Land Registry is participating in the EULIS project. The service has been developed and financed by a consortium of European land registration authorities, including HM Land Registry.

Legal Services Commission

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of Legal Services Commission costs are accounted for by administration. [129121]

Vera Baird: The latest figures available (2005-06) show that the Legal Services Commission's administration costs equate to 4.8 per cent. of expenditure on legal aid.

Maintenance: Children

Mr. Laws: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 867W, on maintenance: children, what information is collected by the courts IT system in relation to child maintenance cases. [129912]

Ms Harman: In the County courts and the Principal Registry of the Family Division "FamilyMan" is the case management system. It is used to record the key events in each case, such as the date of listing of an application, and the date of making and nature of an order (i.e. interim order/final order/order by consent). The information collected by the courts' IT system in relation to child maintenance cases is limited to this. There is no unified IT system in the Family Proceedings Courts. Where a Family Proceedings Court and the County court administrations have been co-located, the Family Proceedings Court can use "FamilyMan".

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Lobby Correspondents

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) how many passes were awarded to lobby correspondents in each year since 2002; [130106]

(2) to which individuals (a) press and (b) passes have been awarded; and which publication employs each; [130107]

(3) if he will list the categories of passes which have been awarded to lobby correspondents; [130108]

(4) what role (a) the Serjeant at Arms Department and (b) the Metropolitan police play in the awarding of passes to lobby correspondents; [130109]

(5) how many passes awarded to lobby correspondents have been revoked in the last five years; and for what reasons; [130110]

(6) under what circumstances an individual's press pass may be revoked; [130111]

(7) whether it is the policy of the House authorities to remove press pass privileges from anyone involved in the publication of information relating to the internal security of the House; [130112]

(8) what processes apply to (a) applying for and (b) issuing (i) standard press passes and (ii) lobby correspondent passes. [130238]

Nick Harvey: The number of passes in issue to lobby correspondents, including temporary passes, in each calendar year since 2002 is as follows:

	Number
2002	261
2003	246
2004	256
2005	244
2006	242
2007	250

Details about which individuals have press passes and the publications they work for can be found at the parliamentary press gallery website at the following address:
http://www.thepressgallery.co.uk/.

Details about which individuals are lobby correspondents and the publications they work for can be found at the parliamentary press gallery website at the following address:
http://www.thepressgallery.co.uk/.

The Serjeant at Arms is responsible for awarding passes to lobby correspondents. This is carried out on his behalf by the Deputy Serjeant at Arms. The Metropolitan police have no role in awarding passes.

No passes awarded to lobby correspondents have been revoked in the last five years.

A press pass may be revoked if the individual constitutes a security risk to the House or if they fail to comply with the rules of the House.

If an individual was involved in the publication of information relating to the internal security of the House, consideration would be given to whether the individual constituted a security risk to the House or if they had breached the rules of the House.

There are no differences in the process for applying for and issuing standard press and lobby correspondent passes.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of India on (a) policy towards Burma, (b) human rights in Burma, (c) the humanitarian needs of displaced peoples living on the India-Burma border and (d) the export of gas from Burma. [129967]

Mr. McCartney: My right. hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with the Indian Government about Burma.

We have regular discussions with the Indian Government about their policy towards Burma. The Indian Government is fully aware of the UK's policy towards Burma, including our concerns about human rights and the lack of democracy there.

Most recently, I raised Burma with the Indian Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs in Delhi on 27 November 2006.

I shall continue to raise the issue of Burma with the Indian Government.

Cambodia: Human Rights

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations her Department has made to the Government of Cambodia on the human rights situation in that country; and if she will make a statement. [129562]

Mr. McCartney: With our EU partners, we regularly raise our concerns on human rights with the Government of Cambodia. We underline the importance of adhering to international obligations and the need to respect human rights and the rule of law.

Cambodia: Industrial Relations

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the observance of the rights of organised labour in Cambodia by the Government of that country. [129564]

Mr. McCartney: We are concerned at the reports of the recent murder of Hy Vuthy, trade union activist. This is the third trade union official to be killed in three years. The local EU representatives have requested the Government of Cambodia ensure that a full enquiry into the circumstances of the death is conducted without delay and that appropriate action is taken to bring to justice those responsible. We, with our EU partners, will continue to follow developments closely.

Cambodia: Politics and Government

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the political situation in Cambodia. [129561]

Mr. McCartney: Cambodia is a developing democracy, seeking to overcome decades of war and misrule. It has achieved peace and stability and democratic institutions have taken root. There have been three increasingly open national elections since 1993. Despite significant progress since the Paris Accords in 1991, the country faces continuing problems around governance, corruption and human rights. Cambodia is a member of the Association of South East Asian Nations.

Cambodia is making good progress in reducing poverty, but remains one of the poorest countries in Asia. The economy has enjoyed double-digit growth over recent years.

The Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC) has been established to address the crimes committed under the Khmer Rouge regime of 1975 to 1979. It represents a milestone for Cambodia and an opportunity to break with the past will be in the success of the ECCC, bringing to justice those responsible for serious crimes during the Khmer Rouge period.

Central African Republic

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Government of France on the situation in the Central African Republic. [129007]

Mr. McCartney: The UK has not recently engaged in substantial talks with the Government of France on the current situation in the Central African Republic. However, our embassy in Paris and our high commission in Yaounde are in regular contact with French colleagues and continue to monitor the security and humanitarian situation.

China: Family Planning

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has made to the Chinese National Population and Family Planning Commission on its enforcement of the one child policy; and if she will make a statement. [129526]

Mr. McCartney: We do not take a position on China's right or need to implement family planning policies. However, we did raise our concerns with the Chinese Government following reported abuse of the system, including forced abortion and sterilisation, highlighted by human rights lawyer Chen Guangcheng. We raised the case of Chen Guangcheng at the most recent round of the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue on 5 February and the Chinese government provided information on his case. We continue to monitor Mr. Chen's situation and that of his family.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much her Department spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper and publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers and publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic was of each. [130012]

Mr. Hoon: In the last year the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has made the following expenditure:

£20,000 was paid for a special supplement on UK-Israel relations in English and Hebrew. This was published with the Haaretz newspaper (in Tel Aviv) on 27 June 2006. This project was funded by the Public Diplomacy Challenge Fund, financial year 2006-07 from programme expenditure.

£103,330 was used to sponsor newspaper or publication supplements and fund advertorials in newspapers or publications in the last year as part of the Know Before You Go Campaign, which is an ongoing travel safety campaign run by the FCO. It encourages all British nationals to be better prepared for their overseas trips with a view to avoiding common travelling traumas, risks and dangers. It is not possible to give a further analysis of this expenditure without incurring disproportionate cost.

It is possible that additional expenditure has been made at Posts. This information is not held centrally at the level of detail which would enable us to answer this question. It could only be researched by contacting each Post, and to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

European Union

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how her Department plans to raise the awareness of the public on the Declaration of Berlin. [129543]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are committed to raising public awareness and debate on all EU issues, including the Berlin Declaration. In this 50th anniversary year, we will continue to support a wide range of activities to raise awareness and engage the public in debate on key challenges and the EU's role in helping to address them. For example, I recently launched the "Learning Together" initiative, to encourage more schools in the UK to take part in educational partnerships with schools across Europe. This initiative is making information available to schools across the UK about the exciting opportunities available. Teachers and heads with experience of joint learning projects with other countries will become "Learning Together Ambassadors", and share their experience with other schools interested in joining. We have also put a wide range of information, speeches and other relevant links on activities to mark the 50th anniversary onto the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's europe.gov.uk website. This includes a link to the text of the Berlin Declaration.

Gibraltar: Spain

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the incentive payments offered to Spanish pensioners related to contributions to the Gibraltar Social Security Fund up to 1969, as set out in individual letters sent to those eligible to be paid directly from the UK, have been calculated. [129733]

Mr. Hoon: The payments offered to affected Spanish pensioners relate in part to individuals' contribution records to the Gibraltar Social Insurance Fund.

Incentive payments form part of the wider Cordoba pensions settlement, which removes a substantial liability from the UK taxpayer, as the Spanish Government has agreed not to claim healthcare costs for the affected Spanish pensioners for whom it would be entitled to do.

As under existing arrangements for pension payments, incentive payments are being managed by the Department for International Development, and administered by Crown Agents Bank.

Iran: Capital Punishment

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had on use of the death penalty in Iran in the last two years, and with whom. [129341]

Mr. McCartney: We remain deeply concerned about the continued use of the death penalty in Iran. After China, Iran executes more people than any other country in the world. Despite announcing a moratorium on juvenile executions in 2005, Iran still imposes the death penalty for crimes committed before the age of 18. Reports suggest that between five and eight juvenile executions took place in 2005, and at least two in 2006. This is a clear contravention of Iran's obligations under the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. We are also concerned that basic standards surrounding the application of capital punishment are absent in Iran and that death sentences are often carried out in public.

We make frequent representations to the Iranian authorities about the use of the death penalty, both bilaterally and through the EU. On 11 December 2006 our ambassador in Tehran raised our concerns about death sentences handed down to 10 men, with the head of Iran's International Department of the Judiciary. On 21 January and 4 March, the EU presidency in Tehran raised our concerns about specific juvenile death penalty cases and reiterated the EU's longstanding objection to the death penalty in all circumstances. In the last two years, through the EU, we have raised the death penalty with the Iranian authorities at least 15 times.

We also take action through the UN, and were pleased that all EU countries supported a resolution on human rights in Iran at the UN General Assembly in December 2006, which expressed serious concern at "the continuing of public executions, including multiple public executions, and, on a large scale, other executions in the absence of respect for internationally recognized safeguards" and "in particular, deplores the execution of persons who were under the age of 18 at the time their offence was committed".

Malaysia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the (a) human rights and (b) humanitarian situation of refugees living in Malaysia. [129961]

Mr. McCartney: The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) reports that there are 40,000-60,000 "persons of concern" in Malaysia. There are concerns about the treatment of refugees, and those claiming refugee status, and there are problems over recognition of refugee papers issued by the UNHCR. Access to people claiming refugee status, or facing deportation, can be difficult.

The UNHCR believes that many refugees or those seeking refugee status are able to find work in the 'black economy' to support themselves, or find support from their ethnic communities in Malaysia.

The UNHCR reports that recent moves to clamp down on suspected illegal immigrants have resulted in human rights violations. Around 20,000 arrests were made in 2006. Those arrested are usually placed in detention camps prior to deportation. The camps are overcrowded, unhygienic, and fail to provide properly for women and children.

Our high commission in Kuala Lumpur keeps in regular contact with the UNHCR in Malaysia. The high commission has consistently supported the work of the UNHCR, including in addressing the issue of recognition of UNHCR-certified persons of concern. We are working with the UNHCR on the way forward.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by her Department to address the issue of the deportation of UNHCR-registered refugees from Malaysia. [129963]

Mr. McCartney: Our high commission in Kuala Lumpur keeps in regular contact with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in Malaysia. The high commission has consistently supported the work of the UNHCR, including in addressing the issue of deportations from Malaysia. We are working with the UNHCR on the way forward and will continue to do so.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Malaysian government on recognition of UNHCR-certified persons of concern. [129964]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed this issue with the Malaysian government. However, our high commission in Kuala Lumpur keeps in regular contact with the UN high commissioner for refugees in Malaysia.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Malaysian government on recognition of the authority of the UNHCR. [129965]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not made any representations to the Malaysian government on this issue.

Pakistan: Religious Persons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of imams granted entry clearance to work as ministers of religion who could not speak English in each year since 1995. [129075]

Mr. McCartney: Since 2004 ministers of religion applying for entry clearance to the UK to preach are required to have an international English language training system score of four or above in order for their applications to be successful.

There are no figures available from our High Commission in Islamabad to show how many imams who could not speak English may have been issued with visas before this became a requirement of the Immigration Rules.

Research: EC Action

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards the Lisbon Agenda target of increased investment in research and development activities to 3 per cent. of GDP in EU member states by 2010. [129547]

Mr. Hoon: Every EU member state is working towards a national research and development target. The UK has a target of spending 2.5 per cent. of gross domestic product on research and development by 2014. The target aims for one third funding from the public sector and two thirds from the private sector, which puts a particular emphasis on raising business research investment.

The EU has taken a number of steps to support member states in making progress towards their targets and to create strong framework conditions for business investment. In particular the recently established Framework programme seven will increase direct EU funding for research and development by 75 per cent.

EU Heads of State and Government reiterated the importance of making progress in this area at this month's European Council.

Sudan: Armed Conflict

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the G-19 rebel group in Darfur. [129008]

Mr. McCartney: The Group of 19 (G-19) was a grouping of rebel commanders who broke away from the Sudan Liberation Movement (SLM) following the signing of the Darfur Peace Agreement in May 2006. The group has subsequently divided and in practice no longer exists. Many of its commanders have now re-aligned themselves as the SLM/Non-Signatory Front (NSF), while others remain closer to the Justice and Equality Movement (JEM).

Our ambassador in Khartoum and the UK permanent representative-designate to the United Nations in New York, John Sawers, met NSF and JEM representatives in El Fasher on 7 March. They pressed them on the need for a comprehensive ceasefire, to protect access for humanitarian workers and to be part of a renewed political process led by the African Union (AU) and UN.

The UK supports the efforts of the AU and UN special envoys for the peace process, Salim Ahmed Salim and Jan Eliasson, to re-start urgently political negotiations between the Government of Sudan and rebels on Darfur. We have also been supporting efforts by the SLM to organise a commanders' conference in North Darfur, which aims at unifying the rebel movements with the aim of participating in new negotiations with a clearer voice.

Sudan: Human Rights

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will seek discussions with the Organisation of the Islamic Conference following its rejection of the recent UN report on the human rights situation in Darfur. [129006]

Mr. McCartney: The UN Human Rights Council (HRC) Mission to Sudan issued a damning report on 12 March, confirming what we already knew about the grave human rights situation in Darfur. The Organisation of the Islamic Conference (OIC), and some Asian states, said that the council should not discuss the report on procedural grounds because the mission had not gone to Sudan.

I, and the UK permanent representative to the HRC, called on the council to take effective action on Darfur and not become mired in procedural debates. We do not accept that the mission report is not valid as the mission failed to go to Sudan. The Government of Sudan reneged on their commitment to co-operate with the mission and refused to grant visas to all members of the mission, so, rightly, none of the members went. The report is based on the assessments of UN humanitarian agencies, the African Union in Addis Ababa and UN High Commissioner for Refugees in eastern Chad. All of these organisations, which have large numbers of staff operating in Darfur and eastern Chad, continue to report an appalling human rights and humanitarian situation there. We will continue to press all members of the HRC, including those from the OIC, to take forward the recommendations in the report.

I also raised this with the Sudanese Justice Minister. I made clear that it was unacceptable that Sudan had not co-operated with the human rights mission to Sudan, which the council had authorised last December.

Sudan: War Crimes

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action she plans to take in response to Sudan's announcement that it will not recognise the International Criminal Court indictment of individuals allegedly by responsible for the atrocities upon civilians in Darfur. [129283]

Mr. McCartney: The Government welcome the fact that the International Criminal Court (ICC) prosecutor's investigation has got to the point at which he is able to ask for the issuing of summonses against two individuals. It is now for the ICC judges to decide whether to approve this request.

The UK has made clear to the Government of Sudan that, as required by UN Security Council Resolution 1593, they must co-operate fully with the ICC in any action the Court decides to take. We are concerned by suggestions that the Government of Sudan will not co-operate and will be monitoring their actions extremely carefully. I raised the ICC investigation with Sudanese Justice Minister El-Mardi when we met in Geneva on 13 March.

Taha Yassin Ramadan

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response she has made to the decision of the Iraqi Appeals Chamber hearing in the case of Taha Yassin Ramadan; what representations she has received, and from whom, on this case; and if she will make a statement. [129569]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did not receive any direct representations in this case. The EU presidency, on behalf of all member states and the European Commission, reiterated its opposition to the death penalty to the Government of Iraq and requested that Taha Yassin Ramadan's sentence be commuted. We repeated our concerns to the Government of Iraq on 19 March.

Tibet

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her policy is on (a) China's and (b) the Dalai Lama's proposals for the status of Tibet. [129574]

Mr. McCartney: We continue to urge the Chinese Government to engage with the representatives of the Dalai Lama, without preconditions, to find a legitimate, long-term solution which is acceptable to the Tibetans. Successive Governments have regarded Tibet as autonomous while recognising the special position of the Chinese authorities there. This continues to be the Government's view.

USA: Foreign Companies

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations her Department has made to the US Embassy on the proposed implementation of extra-territorial legislation in the territory of the UK by the Hilton Group and other US companies. [129503]

Mr. McCartney: I welcome the news in Hilton Hotel Group's recent press release that it will not discriminate against customers and potential customers on the grounds of their nationality. The UK Government opposes all assertions of extraterritorial jurisdiction of other states on UK companies.

The European Commission has competence within the European Community for dealing with extraterritorial measures taken by third countries against EU member states. The Commission is considering how best to take these issues forward.

World Trade: USA

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Chairman of the EU Council of Ministers on progress towards a barrier-free transatlantic market. [129055]

Mr. Hoon: As I set out in my written answer to the hon. Member on 27 February 2007, Official Report, columns 1196-97W, the Doha Development Agenda (DDA) remains our top trade priority, but we welcome German proposals to tackle non-tariff barriers between the EU and US, which are not part of the DDA negotiations.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister attended the 8-9 March European Council in Brussels. Discussions covered a wide range of issues, including the EU-US relationship. Council Working Groups in Brussels have been discussing deepening EU-US Economic Co-operation and preparations for the EU-US summit more broadly.

We remain a strong supporter of promoting EU-US economic co-operation and integration in this sense and are keen to see further progress under the German presidency. Deepening economic co-operation between the EU and the US will not only bring the benefits of helping to remove remaining barriers to trade and investment but also serve as a positive step towards a more flexible and efficient global economy.

We will continue discussions with the Commission, our EU partners and the US in the run up to the EU-US summit on 30 April.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

BAE Systems: Saudi Arabia

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1165W, on BAE Systems: Saudi Arabia, whether remuneration was paid other than fees or commissions. [128469]

Mr. McCartney: Remuneration, whether commission, fee or other, was not, to the knowledge of ECGD, paid to agents having any part in obtaining or negotiating the sale of Eurofighter aircraft to Saudi Arabia. ECGD was told by BAES in its application that there were no agents who played such a part. In that case no remuneration could be payable.

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 1165W, on BAE Systems: Saudi Arabia, whether BAE Systems' application for cover for the sale of Eurofighter aircraft for Saudi Arabia received by the Export Credits Guarantee Department on 28 June 2006 was made in accordance with the old anti-corruption procedures or those which came into effect on 1 July 2006; and which form the company completed. [128473]

Mr. McCartney: The application for cover was made prior to 1 July 2006 on the then-current proposal form. The Indemnity was issued after 1 July 2006 and contained the anti-bribery and corruption provisions which were introduced on 1 July 2006, with cross-references, where appropriate, to declarations in the application for cover.

Contracts

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what analysis he has undertaken of the potential impact of outsourcing of business functions abroad on (a) employment trends in the UK and (b) economic growth in the period to 2011; and if he will make a statement. [120868]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 20 February 2007]: Current evidence suggests that while there has been some outsourcing of business functions abroad, this has had little significant impact on UK employment or growth. From 2001 to 2005 UK employment grew fastest in exactly the services, IT and call centres, that were regarded as most likely to be outsourced overseas, although a survey of the UK IT industry last year suggested there may be a small fall in its employment in the UK over the next few years. Therefore, while outsourcing of business functions abroad is generally expected to increase in the future, it is not clear that this will have a significant impact on UK employment or growth.

I do not propose to make any further statement.

Departments: Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [130141]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and publicised in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' code of practice. This shows that no former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 have since been appointed to public bodies sponsored by the Department.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings his Department's officials held with (a) business representatives, (b) trade union representatives and (c) consumer representatives in 2006. [128749]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department's officials held numerous meetings with business, trade union and consumer representatives in 2006 but the number is not held centrally and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Domestic Accidents

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress his Department is making in reducing the number of serious accidents in the home. [125721]

Mr. McCartney: DTI is responsible for the safety of consumer products and we provide the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents (RoSPA) with an annual grant of £166,050 to meet the costs of regional safety liaison officers whose role is to provide support—information, advice and training—towards improving the effectiveness of home safety practitioners in the voluntary sector and local government. The grant also helps fund the RoSPA press office, information service and website. DTI also gives RoSPA £60,725 per annum to provide the query service for the HASS/LASS (Home/Leisure Accident Surveillance System) database. DTI Ministers and officials meet RoSPA on a regular basis. DTI does not have a significant role in the prevention of accidents due to causes other than unsafe products.

Drugs: Licensing

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers are available to trading standards officers to prevent the marketing to UK mainland consumers of unlicensed medicinal produced by companies based in the Channel Islands; what steps he plans to take to address this issue; and if he will make a statement. [122307]

Mr. McCartney: Medicines licensing is primarily the responsibility of the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), ă Department of Health Agency.

Export Credit Guarantees: Sakhalin Island

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the uncompleted British elements are of the Sakhalin II project which are still seeking support from the Export Credits Guarantee Department. [127993]

Mr. McCartney: The uncompleted elements include supply of goods and related services in relation to the following:

Offshore Facilities and Pipes
Analyser Metering Package
Equipment and Bulk Materials and Services
Engineering and Detailed Design Engineering
A Component of the Mains Power Generation Package
Integrated Mud Mixing and Solids Control
Cuttings Re-Injection Package
Switchgear and Transformers
Switchgear Package
Maintenance and Integrity Strategy

Hilton Group: Jurisdiction

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what conclusions his Department has reached on its investigation into the proposed implementation of extra-territorial legislation in the territory of the UK by the Hilton Hotel Group and other US companies. [129505]

Mr. McCartney: I welcome the news in Hilton Hotel Group's recent press release that it will not discriminate against customers and potential customers on the grounds of their nationality. The UK Government oppose all assertions of extraterritorial jurisdiction of other states on UK companies.

The European Commission has competence within the European Community for dealing with extraterritorial measures taken by third countries against EU member states. The Commission is considering how best to take these issues forward.

IT: Labour Market

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how average salaries for IT professionals in the UK have changed over the last five years; and how they are expected to change over the next 10 years. [129675]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 25 March 2007:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how average salaries for IT professionals in the UK have changed over the last five years; and how these are expected to change over the next 10 years. I am replying in her absence. (129675)

Average levels of earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates of pay whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect information on the self-employed and people who do unpaid work.

The attached table shows Gross Weekly Pay, for all full time employees classified as IT professionals for the years 2002-2006. Estimates on how earnings are expected to change are not available.

IT professionals are defined as minor group 213 in the Standard Occupational Classification 2000 - "Information and Communication Technology Professionals". This classification group includes the occupations "IT Strategy and Planning Professionals", for example computer consultants, and "Software Professionals", for example computer programmers.

Guide to quality:

The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality.

The true value is likely to be within +/- twice the CV—for example, for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent., we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.

All of the figures on this table have a CV of less than 5 per cent.

The median is the value below which 50 per cent. fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less by extreme values and because of the skewed distribution of earnings data.

Malcolm Wicks: In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there are plans to increase the budget of the low carbon buildings programme. [126733]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 March 2007]: In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

Before deciding how to make best use of the extra funding, the household stream is to be suspended for the monthly allocation in April so that it can be re-shaped. Proposals will be brought forward in May.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what average number of households per month was receiving grants under the low carbon buildings programme in the 12 months prior to the introduction of a monthly cap; and how many households were allocated grants on 1 March. [126827]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 March 2007]: Prior to the introduction of the monthly cap, we made an average of 540 grant awards per month to low carbon buildings programme household applicants.

The purpose of the cap was to ensure the resources did not run out before June 2008. In March 2007, we allocated grants to 189 household applicants.

In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

Before deciding how to make best use of the extra funding, the household stream is to be suspended for the monthly allocation in April so that it can be re-shaped. Proposals will be brought forward in May.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry at what time on 1 March the March funding became available for household projects under the low carbon buildings programme; at what time on that day it was allocated in full; and if he will make a statement. [126966]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 March 2007]: At 9.00 am on 1 March, the monthly allocation for the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme opened to new applicants. In less than 2 hours, we had been successful in allocating £635,340.47 to 189 projects.

In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

Before deciding how to make best use of the extra funding, the household stream is to be suspended for the monthly allocation in April so that it can be re-shaped. Proposals will be brought forward in May.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of likely household demand for low carbon buildings programme grants to March 2009; and whether he expects additional funding from the Treasury to be required to meet that demand. [127104]

Malcolm Wicks: In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

We aim to continue funding until June 2008, by which time some of our wider measures to promote microgeneration should be taking hold.

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of monthly grant capping under the low carbon buildings programme on consumer demand for micro-renewables; [127248]

(2) what alternative means of support his Department offers to householders who failed to secure grant support for micro renewable installations under the low carbon buildings programme on 1 March; and if he will make a statement. [127249]

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice his Department is offering to householders who encountered internet access problems while attempting to apply for a grant under the low carbon buildings programme on 1 March. [127253]

Malcolm Wicks: In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

Before deciding how to make best use of the extra funding, the household stream is to be suspended for the monthly allocation in April so that it can be re-shaped. Proposals will be brought forward in May.

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date he expects the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme to end; and if he will make a statement. [127251]

Malcolm Wicks: In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

The low carbon buildings programme is a demonstration not deployment programme, and we believe that the current funding made available to the household stream will allow us to meet the key objectives of the scheme.

We aim to continue funding until June 2008, by which time some of our wider measures to promote microgeneration should be taking hold.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the level of household demand for capital grants under the low carbon buildings programme to March 2009. [127931]

Malcolm Wicks: In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

We aim to continue funding until June 2008, by which time some of our wider measures to promote microgeneration should be taking hold.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons his Department introduced a limit on the amount of capital grants to be allocated to households in any calendar month under the low carbon buildings programme; and if he will make a statement. [127932]

Malcolm Wicks: The purpose of the monthly cap was to ensure the resources did not run out before June 2008.

In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

Before deciding how to make best use of the extra funding, the household stream will be suspended for the monthly allocation in April so that it can be reshaped. Proposals will be brought forward in May.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on the UK household micro renewable market of his Department's introduction of a monthly cap for household grants under the low carbon buildings programme. [128719]

Malcolm Wicks: Prior to the introduction of the monthly cap, we made an average of 540 grant awards per month to low carbon buildings programme household applicants.

The purpose of the cap was to ensure the resources did not run out before June 2008. In March 2007, we allocated grants to 189 household applicants.

In the Budget 2007, it was announced that a further £6 million will be made available to the household stream of the low carbon buildings programme, taking the total available for householders to more than £18 million.

Before deciding how to make best use of the extra funding, the household stream is to be suspended for the monthly allocation in April so that it can be reshaped. Proposals will be brought forward in May.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice he is giving to householders who did not obtain a grant under the low carbon buildings programme on 1 February and 1 March. [128835]

Overseas Companies: Colombia

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to ensure British-based companies fulfil their social obligations when pursuing mining interests in Colombia. [129618]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 27 March 2007]: The Government are a signatory to the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. These are voluntary standards of responsible corporate behaviour. UK companies are expected to adhere to the guidelines wherever they operate. Allegations of breaches of the guidelines can be investigated.

Post Offices

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of post offices that will be required for the Post Office to meet the new access criteria that he has proposed. [130375]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No such estimate has been made. Following Government's final decisions, which I expect to announce in May, Post Office Ltd. will develop specific plans for the network which ensure that the access criteria are met. Those plans will also reflect the Government framework of a maximum of 2,500 compensated closures of sub-post offices.

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the reasons were for delaying the response to the consultation on the future of the Post Office from March to May. [130376]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department received over 2,500 representations to its consultation on the Post Office network. We need more time to give full consideration to the comments submitted and hope to be able to announce our final decisions in May.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will assess the merits of appointing a chief engineer to advise the Government on sustainable infrastructure. [130053]

Malcolm Wicks: The role of the Government's Chief Scientific Adviser (GCSA) is a broad one, covering all scientific, engineering and technological disciplines.

The GCSA, currently Sir David King, has provided advice on a wide range of issues relating to sustainable infrastructure, for example in connection with climate change and energy, and including via previous Foresight projects on Intelligent Infrastructure Systems and Flooding and Coastal Defence, and the current Sustainable Energy Management and the Built Environment project.

Venture Capital: Takeovers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of recent takeover activities of private equity organisations on trade, industry and business. [121829]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have not undertaken an assessment of the impact of recent takeover activities of private equity organisations.

The regulatory control of mergers and acquisitions which qualify under the Enterprise Act 2002 is a matter for the relevant independent competition authorities which assess mergers on the grounds of their impact on competition in the market.

Separately, the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers supervises and regulates takeovers in accordance with the rules set out in the Takeover Code. The panel is an independent body which issues and administers the code. The code provides an orderly framework within which takeovers are conducted and so contribute to the integrity of the financial markets. The code is designed to ensure that shareholders are treated fairly and are not denied an opportunity to decide on the merits of a takeover. The code is not, however, concerned with the financial or commercial advantages or disadvantages of a takeover; these are matters for the company and its shareholders.

Whales

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with his foreign counterparts on whaling in the last 12 months. [128646]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 194W.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Servants: British Nationality

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, in which Departments Ministers have the power to designate posts as reserved to UK nationals; how many designations have been made by Ministers, broken down by department; and if she will make a statement. [129718]

Mr. McFadden: Each Minister responsible for a Department has the authority to designate a post as reserved if it meets one of the categories set out in the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007. If a post does not fall within these categories, then it is not capable of being reserved. The Cabinet Office will be collecting information in due course on the number of posts designated by Ministers as reserved.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, what estimate she has made of the (a) number and (b) percentage of Civil Service posts that need to be reserved to UK nationals in the public interest; and if she will make a statement. [129719]

Mr. McFadden: It is estimated that about 5 per cent. (27,000) of Civil Service posts will need to be reserved to UK nationals.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, how many certificates under the Aliens' Employment Act 1955 permitting employment of aliens in the Civil Service are in force; how many there were in 2006-07; and in which Departments those holding such a certificate work. [129724]

Mr. McFadden: Figures for 2006-07 are still to be finalised. For information on earlier years, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 27 June 2006, Official Report, column 314W.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much her Department spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper or publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers or publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the subject was of each. [129226]

Hilary Armstrong: Cabinet Office communication group commissioned two sponsored supplements and no advertorials in 2005-06. These supplements were commissioned to promote the 'Transforming Public Services' conference, as part of the UK presidency of the EU and to promote the 10-point diversity plan for the civil service. These were commissioned at a total cost of £44,000.

Departments: Credit Cards

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many staff in her Department have corporate charge cards. [129142]

Hilary Armstrong: There are five staff within the Cabinet Office who have corporate charge cards.

We are currently phasing out the corporate charge card with the intention to replace them with the Government procurement card.

European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what (a) consultations she held and (b) representations she received on the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 (i) prior and (ii) subsequent to its introduction; and if she will make a statement. [129714]

Mr. McFadden: The European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 was drawn up after extensive consultation exercises within Government and with the support of the Council of Civil Service Unions. These also involved bilateral meetings between senior officials from the Cabinet Office and those Departments and agencies responsible for 98 per cent. of all reserved posts. Cabinet Office officials continue to liaise with departments and agencies while the new arrangements are being put in place.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps she is taking to publicise the effects of the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 to (a) potential civil service recruits and (b) the public; and if she will make a statement. [129715]

Mr. McFadden: The civil service recruitment gateway, the guidance on the civil service nationality rules and the civil service management code are currently being revised to reflect the new arrangements under the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 and will be placed shortly on the Cabinet Office website. Central guidance on the new legislation was issued on 6 March by the Cabinet Office to HR directors and chief executive officers throughout the civil service to allow them to amend their recruitment literature.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what guidance she has issued to Government Departments following the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 on the employment of (a) non-Irish EEA nationals in a public service reserved post, (b) an alien in any civil service post without a certificate and (c) an alien spouse of a UK national in the civil service; and if she will make a statement. [129716]

Mr. McFadden: The European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 has no effect on the position of (a) non-Irish EEA nationals in public service reserved posts, (b) an alien in the civil service without a certificate issued under the Aliens' Employment Act 1955, and (c) an alien spouse of a UK national. They remain ineligible.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, what Government policy is on employment of (a) Commonwealth, (b) Irish and (c) EEA nationals in the Civil Service, following the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007; and if she will make a statement. [129717]

Mr. McFadden: Commonwealth, Irish and EEA nationals are already eligible to apply for all non-reserved posts in the Civil Service. The European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 defines more clearly the categories of post which may be reserved. It is anticipated that, following the Order, something in the region of a further 70,000 posts in the Civil Service will be open, in addition to UK nationals, to Commonwealth, Irish and EEA nationals.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, what assessment she has made of the effect of the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007 on the (a) number and (b) percentage of posts reserved for UK nationals; and if she will make a statement. [129720]

Mr. McFadden: It is anticipated that the number of posts reserved for UK nationals will be reduced by about 70,000 following the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007. This represents a reduction of 13 per cent. against the previous number of reserved posts within the Civil Service.

Ministerial Activities

Mike Penning: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what activities she has undertaken in a ministerial capacity in the last 12 months; and what costs were associated with each activity. [129177]

The Minister without Portfolio: My ministerial activities include membership of Cabinet and 20 Cabinet committees, participation in the ongoing policy review process, and involvement and discussion with ministerial colleagues in specific policy areas as appropriate.

The costs associated with these activities are not held separately.

Project George

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will publish the business case for Project George. [129141]

Hilary Armstrong: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2198-99W.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Administration of Justice: Females

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2007, Official Report, column 391W, on the administration of justice: females, whether he plans to make an estimate of the cost implications of implementing the recommendations of the Corston report. [130335]

John Reid: Yes. We welcome Baroness Corston's report and will now be looking at the recommendations in detail. This work will include an assessment of the resource implications of her proposals.

Bronzefield Prison: Foreigners

Mr. Wiltshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners housed in HMP Bronzefield are not British citizens, broken down by nationality. [128402]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the numbers of prisoners held in Bronzefield under immediate custodial sentence on 31 January 2007 showing the numbers of non-British nationals can be found in the following table.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing. It is for this reason that the information on all nationalities is not provided by individual prison establishment, as the numbers are not necessarily accurate to this level of detail.

Cannabis

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons (a) under 18 and (b) over 18 years were (i) cautioned and (ii) convicted by the courts in each of the last five years for possession of cannabis. [130355]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 27 March 2007]: Available information relates to persons in England and Wales dealt with under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 of unlawfully possessing cannabis between 2000 and 2004. Figures are in the following table.

Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts, police forces and other agencies. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Number of persons (a) aged under 18 and (b) aged 18 and over cautioned or found guilty of unlawfully possessing cannabis: England and Wales, 2000 to 2004

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
(a) Persons aged under 18:

Found guilty	28,528	27,903	31,234	33,965	18,850

[1] Separate figures for reprimands and warnings, which replaced cautions for persons aged under 18 in selected areas of England and Wales on 30 September 1998, are not available for 2000 to 2002.

[2] Formal warnings data for cannabis possession have been available since April 2004. Those aged 18 and over who are caught in simple possession of cannabis can be eligible for a police formal warning which would not involve an arrest. Police issued 27,520 formal warnings between April and December 2004.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of those convicted by the courts for possession of cannabis in each of the last five years (a) received a custodial sentence and (b) received a fine. [130356]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 27 March 2007]: Available information relates to persons found guilty in England and Wales under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 of unlawfully possessing cannabis between 2000 and 2004. See following table.

Percentage of persons found guilty of unlawfully possessing cannabis who (a) received a custodial sentence and (b) were fined: England and Wales, 2000 to 2004

	Custodial sentence[1]	Percentage Fined
2000	6	52
2001	6	51
2002	5	50
2003	4	50
2004[2]	5	43

[1] Includes suspended sentences.
[2] Formal warnings, which do not involve an arrest or court appearance, were introduced nationally in April 2004 for persons aged 18 and over caught in simple possession of cannabis. Police issued 27,520 such warnings between April and December 2004.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department has undertaken of the capacity of the UK emergency services to cope with a chemical attack on UK populations and towns. [129168]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office reviews such capacity on a regular and ongoing basis and through a variety of means. These include direct contact with individual area emergency services; exercising of response capability; audits and assessments as part of the Cabinet Office led Capabilities Programme, and analysis of the results of the National Capabilities Survey.

Chemical Weapons: Training

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training exercises have been undertaken by (a) UK emergency services and (b) UK Government Departments on chemical attacks since 2001. [129169]

Mr. McNulty: Of the large-scale live counter terrorism exercises led by the Home Office since 2001, two have had a specific chemical attack element. In addition to such national exercises, a wide range of regional and local counter terrorism and consequence management exercises (both live and table top) are held each year. The Home Office does not collate details of all of these, nor of exercises involving other Government Departments, and does not therefore have information on the total number of such exercises held since 2001 which may have included chemical attack scenarios.

Community Service Orders: Finance

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the average daily cost of supervising an offender on a community order. [127877]

John Reid: For 2005-06 the average annual cost per case for a community sentence (including Suspended Sentence Orders) has been estimated as £3,265. This gives a simple average figure of £9 per day.

As 2005-06 was a transitional year, with sentences running under both the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and the previous regulations, this estimated cost should be treated with caution.

Crime Statistics: Somerset

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 30 January 2007, Official Report, column 189W, on crime statistics: Somerset, how many people were charged with (a) possession of illegal drugs and (b) possession with intent to supply in each of the last 10 years, broken down by police authority area; and how many of those charged were (i) found guilty and (ii) under the age of 18 years. [125459]

Mr. Coaker: Information on charging for these offences is not held centrally.

Available information relates to persons dealt with under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 by police force area in England and Wales between 1995 and 2004 who were: (a)i found guilty; (b) aged under 18 years and found guilty; (c) cautioned by police; (d) aged under 18 years and cautioned. The information has been placed in the House Libraries.

Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts, police forces and other agencies. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Crimes against the Person: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were charged with assaulting a police officer in Lancashire in each of the past five years. [127098]

Mr. McNulty: Data on charging are not collected centrally.

Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of people proceeded against at magistrates courts and convicted at all courts for the offence of assaulting a constable in Lancashire, 2001 to 2005, are shown in the following table.

The number of persons proceeded against at magistrates' courts and convicted at all courts for the offence of assaulting a constable in Lancashire police force area 2001-05[1,2]

Crimes of Violence: Police Cautions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cautions for the offence of common assault were issued in 2006. [128173]

Mr. McNulty: Information on cautions given to offenders for common assaults in 2006 will be available in the autumn of 2007.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much compensation was granted by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority in each of the last five years, broken down by postcode area of the address of the recipient. [127879]

John Reid: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many applications for compensation have been received by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority in the last 12 months; [128431]

(2) how many applicants for compensation through the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority have received payments in the last 12 months; [128432]

(3) what the cumulative total is of payments made to applicants for compensation through the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority in the last 12 months. [128433]

John Reid: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Criminal Injuries Compensation scheme: Data for the 12 months 1 March 2006 to 28 February 2007

	Tariff scheme	Old (pre-1996) scheme
New applications received	59,316	0
Applications re-opened on medical grounds[1]	150	53
Number of payments made[2]	33,901	78
Compensation paid (£ million)	171.3	18.9
Total compensation paid (£ million)	190.2

[1] This records the number of cases re-opened on medical grounds in the 12 months ending 28-02-2007.

[2] This records the number of payments made during the period. If a claim has had more than one payment during the period, it is only counted once. If the same victim has had payments on separate claims during the period, these are counted, but again only once for each claim. The table does not show the number of claimants whose applications are unsuccessful. On average, some 46 per cent. of claimants do not qualify for compensation under the scheme.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps his Department is taking to improve the performance of the Criminal Records Bureau; and if he will make a statement; [129604]

(2) how many people are awaiting the completion of their criminal records check prior to working with children and vulnerable adults; and if he will make a statement; [129605]

(3) what the average time taken was for the Criminal Records Bureau to process a criminal records check for people working with children and vulnerable adults in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [129606]

Joan Ryan: Data concerning the average waiting time taken to complete a disclosure are not a performance target and are not collated by the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB). The CRB operates to a set of published service standards (PSS) which include to issue 93 per cent. of standard disclosures within 10 days and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within 28 days. For January 2007, the CRB issued 99.2 per cent. of standard disclosures and 90.8 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within PSS.

Within these overarching performance standards, there are a number of targets that are the responsibility of the CRB that the Bureau has been meeting consistently.

There are a number of other factors that can affect the timely completion of checks by the CRB, including but not restricted to the length of time it can take for an employer to deal with the initial application, the accurate completion of the application form, the clarity of the information provided, the existence of conviction or non-conviction information and the operational effectiveness of the disclosure units of the police forces involved in the enhanced disclosure process.

In order to address these, the CRB has provided more support to all counter-signatories and customers in the form of detailed guidance notes which accompany the application forms to ensure that applications are completed accurately and are accompanied by all relevant supporting documentation. The CRB has also established a rigorous compliance and assurance function to ensure that registered bodies make the best use of the disclosure service.

There have been fluctuations in the performance of some of the police disclosure units, caused by a combination of factors including a significant increase in disclosure applications and a combination of local staffing and IT problems.

However, the police and the CRB have been working closely together to identify ways of tackling these problems in forces, which have included additional resources for disclosure unit managers and a greater degree of monitoring performance and support. These initiatives have been strengthened by a new service level agreement in April 2006 between the CRB and all the 43 forces in England and Wales, which focuses on service delivery. These measures have led to a substantial improvement in the overall disclosure process in recent months.

The CRB has issued approximately 285,000 applications each month in the last six months and as at 23 March 2007 162,826 applications are in progress.

Custodial Treatment: Young Offenders

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many under-18 year olds are serving sentences of less than three months; and how many were given sentences of less than three months in each quarter of the last two years. [127576]

John Reid: Following the introduction of the detention and training order nationally on 1 April 2000 under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, the minimum custodial sentence length for persons under 18 has been four months.

Dangerous Dogs Act 1991

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) (i) arrests and (ii) charges were made and (b) convictions were secured under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in each London basic command unit in each of the last five years. [128795]

Mr. McNulty: Information on arrests for recorded crime offences under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 is not separately identifiable within the arrests collection held by the Office for Criminal justice Reform. The collection is based on persons arrested for recorded crime (notifiable offences) by main offence group (i.e. violence against the person, robbery, burglary, criminal damage etc.) and at police force area level only.

Information on charging is not collected centrally.

Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of people proceeded against at magistrates courts and convicted at all courts for offences under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in London, 2001 to 2005 can be viewed in the following table.

Hence guilty figures can exceed prosecutions where they reflect cases of people being Found guilty in the magistrates court and committed for sentence to the Crown court, the two events being counted in two different years.

Drugs

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to review the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. [129916]

Mr. Coaker: There are no plans to review the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

Drugs: Crime

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women are in prison for drug offences; how many were in prison for drug offences in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [126435]

John Reid: At the end of January 2007 there were 1,241 women held in prison in England and Wales for drugs offences. On 30 June 1997 the number was 815.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Drugs: Misuse

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the prevalence of (a) heroin, (b) cocaine, (c) cannabis, (d) ecstasy and (e) amphetamines use in each of the last 10 years. [128098]

Mr. Coaker: Estimates of the prevalence of drug use among the household population in England and Wales are provided by the British Crime Survey (BCS), which has included a comparable self-completion module on drug use since 1996.

The prevalence of self-reported drug use in the past year amongst those aged 16-59 in England and Wales from the BCS is shown in the following table. This shows that use of amphetamines and cannabis has declined significantly since 1998. Cocaine powder use has increased over the same period but most of this increase took place prior to 2000, since when use has remained generally stable.

It should be noted that general population surveys such as the British Crime Survey provide poor coverage of more problematic users, who are more likely to use heroin and crack. These figures are therefore likely to be an underestimate of use of these drugs. A three year research programme is currently underway which will provide us with a better assessment of trends in the prevalence of problematic opiate and crack use in the future.

Drunkenness: Crime Prevention

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the timetable is for the (a) introduction and (b) designation of alcohol disorder zones by local authorities. [129475]

Mr. Coaker: Sections 15-20 of the Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 empower local authorities to designate Alcohol Disorder Zones (ADZs) where there is nuisance, disorder or annoyance associated with the consumption of alcohol in the area or the consumption of alcohol supplied in the area which is likely to be repeated. The Act allows the Secretary of State to make regulations enabling local authorities to charge certain licensed premises in ADZs for additional enforcement activity.

The Act requires the Secretary of State to issue guidance to cover the use of ADZs and requires him to consult stakeholders before that guidance is issued. The guidance will be subject to formal consultation shortly. Following the consultation, regulations will be placed before Parliament at the earliest opportunity. The earliest possible date for commencement of ADZs will be 1 October 2007, in line with the Common Commencement Date (CCD) initiative for regulation bearing on business.

Local authorities may designate an ADZ, in their area, following commencement provided that the statutory criteria are met. These include undertaking a 28 day consultation period and an opportunity for licensees to take steps to implement an Action Plan within eight weeks of its publication. The guidance will place ADZs as a last resort intervention.

Fingerprints: Pilot Schemes

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the results of the pilot project codenamed Lantern on the use of mobile fingerprint scanners. [129120]

John Reid: The Lantern pilot is still in its early stages and the initial results and feedback received to date indicate that Lantern is delivering the expected business benefits and that officers are finding it easy to operate and a useful tool that they would not want to be withdrawn. Currently results are being returned to the device in less than two minutes with an accuracy rate of approximately 97 per cent. and a hit rate of 40 per cent. (i.e. 40 per cent. of people checked are recorded on IDENT1). This high hit rate reflects the environment in which the devices are being used—proactive, intelligence led policing.

A number of arrests have been made, particularly of disqualified drivers presenting false ID. Lantern has also been used to identify a vehicle occupant who presented a false identity but was wanted by three forces for fraud and ATM card skimming. In another case Lantern played a large part in apprehending a man described by police as 'the most wanted nominal' in the area. In many of these cases the individuals would not have been arrested without the identifications provided by Lantern.

Results indicate that Lantern is showing time savings beyond expectations and hence allowing officers to spend more time on the streets and providing a visible deterrent. Establishing a person's identity at the roadside avoids the need to arrest a person and take them to a custody suite to do this—a process which typically takes about three hours. Early results show that in encounters where officers have reported a time saving using Lantern, the average time saved has been about 90 minutes. There have also been a number of cases where Lantern has provided early identification of deceased persons carrying no ID and hence saved a considerable amount of police and coroners time and also enabled next of kin to be informed sooner. Cases have included fatal road traffic collisions, sudden deaths and suicide victims on railway lines.

Firearms: Imports

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many assault rifles and machine guns imported in 2005 from Bosnia, Herzegovina and Croatia have been destroyed. [130154]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 27 March 2007]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Identity and Passport Service: Contracts

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contracts the Identity and Passport Service has with Whitehead Mann; what the value and remit of such contracts are; and if he will make a statement. [127874]

John Reid: IPS has one Contract with Whitehead Mann to provide executive search Services in relation to the recruitment of Executive Directors. The value of this contract is commercially confidential.

Identity Cards

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the oral answer from the Minister for Immigration of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 1, on identity cards, which 55 countries propose to introduce biometric passports; and which two do not have plans for biometric passports. [127718]

John Reid: My hon. Friend identified 53 countries that have introduced or indicated that they propose to introduce biometric passports (containing a facial biometric image) as stated on 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 1. Since then, updated research has identified 54 such countries.

These include all 27 member states of the European Union and the following other countries:

Australia
Canada
China
Egypt
Hong Kong (Special Administrative Region)
India
Indonesia
Japan
The Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia
Malaysia
Morocco
New Zealand
Nigeria
Pakistan
Philippines
Russian Federation
Serbia
Singapore
South Africa
South Korea
Switzerland
Taiwan
Thailand
Turkey
United Arab Emirates
United States
Venezuela

On the basis of the latest information obtained by the Identity and Passport Service, Brazil, Argentina and the Ukraine do not have plans at present to introduce e-Passports, although such information may be subject to change. We also understand that Mexico does not have any plans at present to introduce e-Passports but does record the fingerprints of individuals prior to the issue of a passport.

Kongra-Gel

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reviews of the ban on Kongra-Gel under anti terror legislation have recently taken place. [129792]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 26 March 2007]: Kongra-Gel was added to the list of proscribed organisations as an alternative name for the already proscribed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in August 2006. A rolling programme of reviews of each of the groups on the list is currently in train; Kongra-Gel has not yet been reviewed as part of this process.

Metropolitan Police: Civilians

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Metropolitan Police civilian staff are based in each London borough. [129461]

Mr. McNulty: The available data are at the Basic Command Unit (BCU) level and are given in the table.

Within the Metropolitan Police force area, borough boundaries are coterminous with BCU boundaries with the addition of the Heathrow airport BCU and the Central Services BCU (Central Services does not have a geographic boundary).

[1] Police staff include police community support officers, traffic wardens and designated officers.

[2] Full-time equivalent figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number, due to rounding there may be an apparent discrepancy between totals and the sums of constituent items. Figures include those officers on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave.

[3] In addition to the BCUs which are coterminous with London boroughs, Heathrow airport BCU has 185 staff, and Central Services has 10,640 staff.

National Identity Register

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1752-3W, on the national identity register, what percentage of the (a) set up and (b) running costs of the national identity scheme will not be funded by fee revenue. [126400]

John Reid: It is intended that the cost of the National Identity Scheme, which includes the National Identity Register, will be primarily funded by fee revenue from the products and services that arise from the scheme.

The schedule of fees for the National Identity Scheme cannot be finalised until (a) contracts with suppliers connected to the operation of the scheme are signed and (b) the schedule of fees are approved by Parliament. Hence, while funding will still come predominantly from fee income, it is not possible to provide precise details of the proportion of costs that will be not be covered by fee revenue until such issues are finalised.

Offensive Weapons: Greater London

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made concerning weapons offences since the deployment of additional armed police in London in February. [124953]

Mr. McNulty: These data are not collected centrally.

Passports: Applications

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the net cost of introducing interviews into the passport application process. [129873]

Joan Ryan: The estimated cost of providing and running interview offices for the first year of operation in 2006-07 was published on 21 April 2006 in the Identity and Passport Service Corporate and Business Plan.

Police

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to provide ring-fenced funding to police authorities who incur significant costs in the provision of translation and interpretation services; and if he will make a statement. [129623]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 23 March 2007]: The police service in England and Wales has benefited from a significant increase in resources over a sustained period. On a like-for-like basis Government grant and central spending on services for the police will have increased by over 62 per cent. or over £4.2 billion between 2000-01 and 2007-08.

Government funding for police authorities is chiefly allocated using a funding formula that provides an assessment of the relative need of each police force in England and Wales.

Funding for translation and interpretation services is not separately identified. Decisions on the distribution of resources are matters for the chief officer and the police authority.

Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which aspects of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 he plans to review following his announcement on 6 March; and if he will make a statement. [127762]

Mr. McNulty: A written ministerial statement was made on 14 March 2007 announcing the commencement of a public consultation exercise on the Review of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) 1984. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library and can be obtained from:

http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/operational-policing/powers-pace-codes/pace-code-intro/

Police Custody

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were placed in police cells overnight in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [127409]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Between 11 July and 20 December 2002 prisoners were held in police cells under Operation Safeguard on a total of 28,650 occasions.

Between 12 October and 22 December 2006 police custody under Operation Safeguard was used on 4,617 occasions.

Operation Safeguard was reactivated on 22 January 2007.

Between 22 January and 9 March it was used on 4,861 occasions.

Police Leadership and Powers Unit

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual salary cost is of the Head of the Police Leadership and Powers Unit. [129182]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 22 March 2007]: It is civil service policy to disclose salary details for senior civil servants at board level only. These are published in the Annual Home Office Resource Accounts. The head of Police Leadership and Powers Unit is not a board level post.

Police: Defence Equipment

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who is responsible for procurement of counter nuclear, biological and chemical protection and detection equipment in his Department. [129167]

Mr. McNulty: The end to end procurement process for any product involves a number of stages and a number of different units within the Home Office and is carried out in accordance with the relevant legislation and Government procurement guidance. Where, following this process, equipment is centrally procured by the Home Office for use in chemical, biological, radiological or nuclear (CBRN) incidents, such procurement is managed by the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) on behalf of the Counter-Terrorism and Intelligence Directorate of the Home Office.

Police: Standards

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of police time was spent on frontline duties in each police force area and in each year since 2003-04; and what targets have been set for each police force area. [126433]

John Reid: Front line policing is measured using the Frontline Policing Measure, which is based on the proportion of police officers engaged in front line activities.

Figures for frontline policing are set out in the following table.

The Frontline Policing Measure is not just a measure of visibility. It measures time spent carrying out all core policing duties. Examples of frontline activity include dealing with incidents, visible patrol, searches, dealing with informants, interviewing suspects and special operations.

Full details of the formula used to calculate the measure and complete lists of frontline roles and activities are contained in the "Guidance on Statutory Performance Indicators for Policing 2006/07", published by the Police Standards unit and available at:
http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/news-and-publications/publication/performance-and-measurement/SPI_Technical_Guidelines_204.pdf?view=Binary

Copies of this guidance have been place in the House of Commons Library.

Prison Service: Hepatitis

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers who are at occupational risk have been required to pay for vaccination against chronic hepatitis B since January 2006. [130569]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Where the risk of contracting hepatitis B is identified prison officers are offered hepatitis B immunisation free of charge.

Prisoners: Females

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women were sentenced to custody of less than three months in each of the last five years. [127758]

John Reid: The number of women sentenced to immediate custody of less than three months in England and Wales for the years 2001 to 2005 is shown in the following table. 2006 figures are due for publication in the autumn.

Women sentenced to immediate custody of less than three months, England and Wales

	Number
2001	2,951
2002	3,254
2003	3,280
2004	3,245

Women sentenced to immediate custody of less than three months, England and Wales

	Number
2005	3,106

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Prisoners: Pay

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the current average weekly rate of pay is for prisoners. [129973]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prison Service Order 4460, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, devolves responsibility to Governors and Directors of contracted prisons to set rates of pay for their establishment. Central records of individual pay are not kept but, based on total spend, the average rate is approximately £8.00 per week.

Prisons

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 138W, on prisons, what funding has been formally allocated for prison capital works in each of the next five years; what proportion of the 10,000 proposed new prison places this will deliver; and when he expects the formal allocation of the remainder of the £1.7 billion figure to be finalised. [127886]

John Reid: The funding for capital expenditure for the next five years has not yet been formally allocated. It is expected that funding for 2007-08 will be allocated shortly. This will make provision for the capital cost of the programme in that year. Indicative funding for the following three years, 2008-09 to 2010-11, will be allocated during 2007. 2011-12 falls beyond the period of the comprehensive spending review.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2006, Official Report, column 1691W, on prisons, how many of the 18 claims have been settled (a) out of court and (b) in court; what the settlement was in each case; how many of the claims are ongoing; and whether any further claims have been lodged. [127887]

John Reid: The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February 2007 and provided the latest information held by the Department on the issue of compensation paid out to foreign national prisoners.

A copy of this letter is available from the Library of the House.

Prisons: Alcohol

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the implementation of the Prison Service policy on alcohol misuse and hazardous drinking. [129972]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The alcohol strategy for prisoners was introduced in 2004. The focus is on improving consistency and building on good practice for the delivery of treatment within existing resources. As resources allow, prisons will look to expand services.

A range of interventions is available in prisons to support those with an alcohol problem:

clinical management—including detoxification—is available in all local and remand prisons;

where alcohol is part of a wider substance misuse problem, the full range of drug interventions is available;

Alcoholics Anonymous run groups in around 50 per cent. of prisons; an information pack and awareness video is available for all prisoners;

some offending behaviour programmes address offenders' underlying criminogenic factors which occur in alcohol related crime; and the substance misuse service for all 16-18 year-old prisoners includes a particular focus on alcohol.

Prisons: Computers

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance his Department has issued on the use of Sony Playstations in prisons in the last five years. [126542]

John Reid: Advice was issued to all prisons in December 2005 that the Sony Playstation 3 was barred from the prison estate because of the equipment's ability to send and receive radio signals.

Prisons: Drugs

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which drugs prisoners are tested during mandatory drug tests. [129915]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All samples collected under the mandatory drug testing programme are tested for the following standard panel of drugs: amphetamines, barbiturates, benzodiazepines, cannabis, cocaine, methadone, and opiates. In addition, prisons can request that individual prisoners' samples be tested for LSD and tests for buprenorphine are conducted at a number of prisons where intelligence indicates it is a problem.

Prisons: Food

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average daily cost for food is per person in prisons directly run by the Prison Service. [129938]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For 2005-06, the last full financial year for which figures are available, the average public sector Prison Service daily food cost per prisoner was £1.93.

Prisons: Mental Health

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many mental health in-reach teams operate within the Prison Service; [129927]

(2) how many prisons have dedicated mental health teams. [129928]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Responsibility for prison healthcare services now rests with the Department of Health.

There are currently 102 mental health in-reach teams working within prisons. Every prison establishment in England and Wales has access to these services.

Mental health services have been a key part of the Government's recent reforms of prison health services and the Department of Health is now investing £20 million a year in NHS mental health in-reach services for prisoners.

Prisons: Mobile Phones

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) mobile telephones and (b) SIM cards were confiscated from prisoners by prison staff in each of the last five years. [129917]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained at disproportionate cost only.

Prisons: Overcrowding

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners shared a cell intended for one prisoner in each of the last three years. [129944]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table shows the average monthly number of prisoners doubled up in cells designed for one and the proportion of the prisoner population this represents. There are no instances of more than two prisoners sharing a cell designed for one. The practice of three prisoners sharing a cell designed for one (trebling) ended in 1994.

Doubling information since 2003-04

Financial year	Average monthly doubling[1]	Proportion of prisoners doubled (percentage)
2003-04	16,363	22.2
2004-05	16,878	22.6

Racial Violence

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests, (b) charges and (c) successful prosecutions for incitement to racial hatred were made in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [125576]

Mr. McNulty: Information requested on arrests is not collected centrally.

The following table shows data extracted from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform in respect of the number of persons proceeded against and found guilty of incitement to racial hatred offences for 2004 and 2005. Prior to 2004, data for these offences were collected as part of a miscellaneous group of offences which cannot be separately identified on the database.

Number of defendants prosecuted at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts, for various offences concerning Incitement to Racial Hatred, England and Wales, 2004-05[1, 2]

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Respect Task Force

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the roles and responsibilities are of each person employed by the Department's Respect taskforce. [127350]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Respect taskforce is a unit that works across Government, based at the Home Office. The taskforce includes a mix of substantive civil servants from the Home Office and other Government Departments, staff with specialist backgrounds in research and communications and practitioners from local government and the voluntary sector who are experienced in front line work to tackle antisocial behaviour, deal with problematic families and establish youth and sport activities.

In addition to the Government's Co-ordinator for Respect, the Respect taskforce consists of a director with three main teams focusing on implementation, policy and communications. These teams are responsible for programme management of Respect action plan commitments across Government, working with local agencies and communities to ensure that the Respect programme is making effective progress on the ground, formulation and development of policy and communication through a range of media, campaigns and events. The Respect taskforce also has a small research function to evaluate action taken.

Seafarers

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of the Seafarers Identity Documents Convention of the International Labour Organisation in the United Kingdom, with particular reference to the development of an identity card scheme. [115692]

Joan Ryan: The United Kingdom is a party to the International Labour Organisation (ILO) Seafarers' Identity Documents Convention of 1958 (ILO 108). Seafarer Identity Documents (SIDs) issued under this Convention have been issued to British seafarers for many years. ILO SIDs held by nationals of other party states are accepted by the United Kingdom Immigration Service for shore leave and transit purposes.

SIDs issued under this convention are issued solely for the purpose of facilitating shore leave and transit of seafarers in connection with seafaring activities and, as such, serve a different purpose to national identity cards. The ID cards scheme is intended for those legally resident or working in the UK for a specified period (likely to be three months) or longer.

The United Kingdom is currently evaluating, with other relevant stakeholders, the practicalities of ILO Convention 185.

Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people (a) received an official police warning, (b) received an official police caution and (c) were arrested under section 132 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 in each month since August 2005. [128743]

Mr. McNulty: Section 132 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 came into force on 1 August 2005.

Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform show that there were no cautions, final warnings, or reprimands, issued by the police for offences under section 132 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, in England and Wales, in 2005.

Court proceedings data for 2006 will be available in the autumn. However, at present I understand from the Metropolitan Police Commissioner that no cautions or final warnings or reprimands have been issued for offences under section 132 in 2006.

The information requested on arrests is not collected centrally by the Home Office. However I understand from the Metropolitan Police Commissioner that since section 132 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 came into force until the end of December 2006, there have been 91 arrests of individuals for a range of offences connected to demonstrations in the vicinity of Parliament. The commissioner is unable to break down the arrests month by month without incurring additional costs.

Sexual Offences: Shrewsbury

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many registered sex offenders there are in Shrewsbury and Atcham borough; [125835]

(2) how many sexual and violent offenders as defined by sections 327(3)(c) and (5) of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 were registered as living in the Shrewsbury and Atcham borough as at 31 March (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006; [125836]

(3) how many Sexual Offences Prevention Orders (SOPOs) were applied for in (a) Shrewsbury and Atcham borough, (b) the West Midlands and (c) England between 1 April 2005 and 1 March 2007; and how many (i) interim and (ii) full SOPOs were granted in (A) Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough, (B) the West Midlands and (C) England in that period; [125837]

(4) how many sex offenders in the Shrewsbury and Atcham borough having a registration requirement were (a) cautioned and (b) convicted for breaches of this requirement between (i) 1 March 2006 and 1 March 2007 and (ii) 1 March 2005 and 1 March 2006. [125838]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The available data on the number of registered sex offenders are not collated on a borough or constituency basis. Data on registered sex offenders are collated at multi-agency public protection arrangements (MAPPA) area and police basic command unit (BCU) levels within areas. MAPPA areas are co-terminous with police and probation areas. The data are published in (MAPPA) annual reports which are available in the House Libraries and at:

http://www.probation.homeoffice.gov.uk/output/page30.asp

Shrewsbury and Atcham borough is not co-terminous with an area or BCU but is covered by data relating to West Mercia area. The following information relates to the number of registered sex offenders in the West Mercia area, as at 31 March 2006:

Category 1

Registered sex offenders	Number
South Worcs	174
North Worcs	145
Hereford	106

In respect of information relating to how many sexual and violent offenders as defined by sections 237(3)(c) and (5) of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 were registered as living in the Shrewsbury ands Atcham borough as at 31 March (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and 2006:

The available information is not broken down to borough level, nor classified in the way requested. Data on all offenders qualifying for multi-agency public protection arrangements (MAPPA) are published in MAPPA annual reports and are broken down into three categories. These are as follows [with corresponding reference from the Criminal Justice Act 2003]

Category 1—Registered sex offenders [section 327(2)]

Category 2—Violent and other sex offenders [section 327(3), (4) and (5)] and Category 3—Other offenders [section 325(2)(b)].

The data is not available at a borough level. West Mercia's Area MAPPA annual report for the period 1 April 2005 to 31 March 2006 shows that 34 offenders were either cautioned or convicted for breaches of notification requirements last year. Caution and conviction data are not collated separately.

Special Constables: West Midlands

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables were recruited by the West Midlands police force in each of the last three years. [128853]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 20 March 2007]: Figures on the recruitment of special constables are collected by the Home Office, but are not published in the Police Service Strength Bulletin. Recruitment figures exclude specials on transfer from other forces and those rejoining. The figures are in the following table.

	Number
2003-04	174
2004-05	278
2005-06	278

Terrorism

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UN listed terror suspects are (a) present and (b) suspected by his Department to be present in the United Kingdom. [104665]

Mr. McNulty: United Nations Security Council Resolutions 1333 (2000) and 1390 (2002) and subsequent renewing UN Resolutions, most recently Security Council Resolution 1617 (2005), are directed against Osama bin Laden, al-Qaeda and those terrorists and terrorist organisations associated with them. The Resolution imposes restrictive measures, including a travel ban, against those individuals and entities listed by the UN Committee established by UN Resolution 1267(1999). The latest list of individuals (dated 12 December 2006) subject to restrictive travel measures is available at the following website:

http://www.un.Org/Docs/sc/committees/1267/1267ListEng.htm

A copy has been placed in the Library.

Terrorism: Crime Prevention

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much has been spent on advertising the anti-terrorism hotline since its introduction; [129183]

(2) what the cost was of the full page advertisement for the anti-terrorism hotline in The London Paper on 15 March. [129184]

Mr. McNulty [holding answers 22 March 2007]: This is a matter for the Metropolitan Police Service.

Vetting

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bodies are registered for Criminal Records Bureau checks; and how many of these are umbrella bodies. [129178]

John Reid: At the end of February 2007 there were 10,096 organisations registered with the Criminal Records Bureau; of these, 2,429 are umbrella bodies.

Written Questions

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to question 122932, on police stop forms, tabled by the hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs on 20 February 2007. [127731]

Mr. McNulty: I replied to the hon. Member on 19 March 2007, Official Report, column 675W.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre: Health Services

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to register healthcare given in Yarl's Wood Detention Centre with the Healthcare Commission. [127632]

Mr. Byrne: The registration of the contracted healthcare provider at Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre under the Care Standards Act 2000 is a matter between the provider concerned and the Healthcare Commission.

Young Prisoners

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners aged under 18 years were assessed as vulnerable in each year of the last period for which figures are available. [129940]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The table shows how many young people in custody at the end of February in each year since 2003 were assessed by their Youth Offending Team as being vulnerable. The figures were provided by the Youth Justice Board. (It is worth noting that a substantial number of young people in custody may be assessed as vulnerable on two or more occasions so whole year figures may involve some double counting).

Vulnerability is a concept that embraces a wide range of possible factors, including physical and mental health and other special needs and can include specific risks that a young person may pose to others.

Young people assessed as vulnerable by the youth offending team are not all at high risk. And the degree of vulnerability may change in the course of their period in custody. The youth offending team's assessment is therefore only a starting point. While the most vulnerable young people are accommodated in establishments with high staff-to-trainee ratios, safeguarding arrangements are in place in all establishments.

Departments: Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [130139]

Mr. Thomas: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and publicised in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' code of practice. DFID has made no public appointments of former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many meetings (a) he and (b) his Department's Ministers held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128761]

Mr. Thomas: A number of Trade Unions take a close interest in International Development. The Secretary of State for International Development and myself attended a small number of civil society events and forums in 2006 at which Trade Unions were represented, and development issues discussed.

The Public and Commercial Services (PCS) Union and the Association of the First Division Civil Servants (FDA) both have members in the Department for International Development. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development and myself held no official meetings with representatives from these unions in 2006 but did meet with PCS union representatives in March 2007.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many work permits were applied for by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [128804]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has helped four people to apply for work permits over the past five years.

The work permits were linked to staff appointed in country coming to the UK on short-term learning and development attachments.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to prevent women being trafficked into the UK. [128828]

Mr. Thomas: Poverty and social exclusion make people vulnerable to human trafficking. DFID supports long-term development programmes to help eliminate the underlying causes of poverty.

Most of the poorest people in the world are women and girls. Part of what makes them poor is discrimination because of their gender. DFID is making gender equality a priority across its work. This commitment is set out in our Gender Equality Action Plan. Our programmes are helping to improve the education of girls, and the livelihood opportunities, security and political participation of poor women, so that they are less vulnerable to trafficking.

Iraq: Overseas Aid

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding his Department committed in each year since the invasion to (a) water and sanitation projects and (b) electrification projects in Iraq. [120236]

Hilary Benn: Since 2003, DFID has spent the following amounts to improve electricity and water and sanitation in Iraq:

£ million

	Electricity	Water and Sanitation
2003-04	12.1	10.3
2004-05	6.2	1.6
2005/06	5.2	6.6
2006-07	8.2	3.3

In addition, DFID has contributed £70 million to the International Reconstruction Fund Facility for Iraq (IRRFI). This has financed electricity, water and sanitation projects across Iraq. We have also contributed £36 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross so that they can provide emergency assistance to Iraqis. This includes access to clean water and sanitation.

Latin America: Debts

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had on debt relief in (a) Nicaragua and (b) other Latin American countries. [128277]

Mr. Thomas: Since 1999 Nicaragua (US$ 4.5 billion), Honduras (US$1 billion) and Bolivia (US$ 2.06 billion), have all received substantial debt relief through the heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC) initiative. In addition, since its implementation last year these countries have also benefited from the 100 per cent. cancellation of debt stock owed to the World Bank, IMF and African Development Bank under the multilateral debt relief initiative (MDRI). Last year, the MDRI relieved debts of $968 million to Nicaragua, $1.3 billion to Honduras and $1.75 billion to Bolivia. DFID has monitored the spending of this money through our work with the World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank and the International Monetary Fund. This helps to ensure that the money gets targeted to items in the budget that directly impact on the poor, such as health and education. We have cancelled all outstanding bilateral debt owed to the UK, including contributing to the debt relief provided under HIPC and MDRI.

Despite good progress on multilateral debt relief, Nicaragua still has about $1.3 billion in outstanding debt from commercial creditors who are not part of either HIPC or MDRI. This debt hinders how Nicaragua can use other debt relief to address poverty, and is subject to 'vulture funds' which buy the debt when Nicaragua is least able to pay, and then press for repayment at several times the debt's face value, when economic prospects are looking better. DFID has just committed $3.5 million to the elimination of this debt, in a deal with the World Bank and other donors. The deal itself reduces the debt to $64 million. The Nicaraguan Government itself will contribute $3.5 million. With contributions from the Government of Nicaragua, World Bank, DFID and others, it is hoped that this will fully eliminate the outstanding commercial debt owed by Nicaragua.

In addition, the Inter-America Development Bank has recently announced debt relief to the five poorest countries in the region. This amounts to $3.4 billion and $1.0 billion of future interest payments from its fund for special operations (FSO). This will provide immediate relief of $1 billion for Bolivia, $984 million for Nicaragua, and $467 million for Guyana among others. However, the UK has abstained from voting on this deal, along with several other European countries. This was because of concerns that the deal would hinder access of the poorest countries to concessionary IADB financing in the future. Access to continued flows of concessionary lending from the FSO of the IADB will be important to the achievement of the millennium development goals in countries such as Nicaragua. The UK is currently in discussions with IADB and other shareholders on this matter.

Nepal

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the humanitarian situation in Nepal. [126272]

Mr. Thomas: DFID, like other international donors, monitors the humanitarian situation in Nepal primarily through the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UNOCHA). UNOCHA provides leadership to and co-ordination of the international humanitarian community, and works with DFID and other international bodies to monitor and respond to emerging and ongoing humanitarian crises. In 2006-07 DFID provided £700,000 to support humanitarian monitoring and co-ordination, and the provision of food aid in response to drought.

Food security problems, particularly related to drought, are severely affecting more than 900,000 people. Health indicators remain at a critical level, with acute malnutrition among children under five having increased to 12 per cent. over the last five years. Protection remains a central issue, including for children directly affected by the conflict. Significant numbers of those displaced during the conflict have been returning—either spontaneously, or with facilitation, though many internally displaced persons (IDPs) and returnees continue to face protection concerns. 107,000 Bhutanese refugees remain dependent on international aid. In addition to the humanitarian challenges exacerbated by the conflict, Nepal's mountainous terrain means that it continues to be vulnerable to natural disasters including landslides, floods, and earthquakes.

The UN has just launched a Common Appeal for Transition Support which provides a framework for a co-ordinated international response to these issues. The appeal focuses on issues of particular importance in the short term, including food security, health, displacement, disaster preparedness, and protection. DFID is currently examining the appeal document to assess which elements it might support, and will continue to monitor the humanitarian situation jointly with UNOCHA and other partners.

Zimbabwe: Overseas Aid

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid was provided to Zimbabwe by the UK in 2006-07. [130175]

Hilary Benn: The UK is one of the largest bilateral donors of humanitarian support to Zimbabwe, supporting over 1.5 million of the poorest people. DFID spent £138.9 million bilaterally in Zimbabwe in financial years 2001-02 to 2005-06. Our funding prioritises HIV/AIDS, food insecurity and supporting orphans and vulnerable children. Our current programmes will help ensure that an additional 30,000 people receive anti-retroviral treatment, will provide health care for around 350,000 children, promote food security in both urban and rural areas and assist extremely vulnerable displaced people. The UK does not give direct funding to the Government of Zimbabwe. All DFID's bilateral funding is channelled through NGOs and UN agencies, much of it programmed jointly with other donors. We do not believe in cutting direct assistance to poor Zimbabweans and thus punishing them further for their unaccountable government.

Through the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool, jointly funded by DFID, FCO and MOD, the UK supports civil society organisations to promote better governance and human rights. Allocations totalled £2 million in 2006-07 and will be £2.5 million in 2007-08. The British embassy in Harare also supports community groups with small grants (£800,000 per year). The UK contributions to multilateral aid to Zimbabwe (United Nations, European Commission, World Bank and others) totalled £37.5 million from 2000 to 2004 inclusive.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Elections: Expenditure

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment has been made of the case for decentralising responsibility for monitoring and regulating campaign and constituency expenditure in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland to its regional offices. [130068]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it set out its views on the role of its regional and devolved offices on 19 March in its response to the 11th report from the Committee in Standards in Public Life. This is available in the House of Commons Library and on the Commission's website.

Elections: Local Government

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment the Electoral Commission has made of the potential change in local government electoral turnout in an elected mayoral system. [130561]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it has made no assessment of the potential change in local government electoral turnout in an elected mayoral system.

Electoral Commission

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment he has made of the effect of proposals to allow party members to serve as (a) staff of the Electoral Commission and (b) Electoral Commissioners on the effectiveness of the Electoral Commission. [130062]

Peter Viggers: In its Eleventh Report, the Committee on Standards in Public Life made recommendations aimed at changing the extent of the statutory restrictions on grounds of political activity on appointment as an Electoral Commissioner, and at reducing the duration of the similar restrictions on appointments to the Commission's staff. The Speaker's Committee will be considering this report soon. I also refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 25 October 2006, Official Report, column 1868W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Crewe and Nantwich, (Mrs. Dunwoody).

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how many staff of the Electoral Commission have worked for the Commission (a) for less than one year, (b) for between (i) one and two years, (ii) two and three years, (iii) three and four years, (iv) four and five years and (c) for more than five years. [130270]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that the figures for current staff are as follows:

	Number
(a) less than 1 year	37
(b) (i) 1-2 years	25
(b) (ii) 2-3 years	17
(b) (iii) 3-4 years	26
(b) (iv) 4-5 years	22
(c) more than 5 years	15

Note:
As at 23 March 2007. 'Current staff' includes all permanent and fixed term staff members, but excludes consultants and temporary workers.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

House of Lords: Powers

Andrew George: To ask the Leader of the House pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2007, Official Report, column 173W, on the House of Lords: powers, what timetable he has set for (a) the reconvening of the cross-party talks and (b) the setting of a date for a detailed statement on the way forward. [130468]

Mr. Straw: The Government are currently considering the next stages and once discussions are complete I will make a detailed statement to the House.

Political Parties: Finance

Jo Swinson: To ask the Leader of the House what representations he has received on the propriety of front companies acting as conduits to allow anonymous donations to political parties. [130678]

Mr. Straw: I have received many representations on this issue from hon. Members over recent months.

Its importance has also been recognised by Sir Hayden Phillips in his recent report—'Strengthening Democracy: Fair and Sustainable Funding of Political Parties'—where he states:

"Unincorporated associations and companies that make donations to political parties should be required to identify the people involved in making the decisions to give money to the parties."

The Government share this concern and agree that this is an area which would benefit from further consideration.

Written Questions

Mr. Heald: To ask the Leader of the House if he will bring forward proposals for the electronic provision of answers to hon. Members who ask written parliamentary questions. [129414]

Mr. Straw: The proof of concept database which allows the electronic exchange of parliamentary answers between Government Departments and the House of Commons (ePC) has recently been reviewed by Domain Technologies. The review was funded by the Leader's office and the authorities of the House of Commons.

It is my intention to proceed to the next stage in its development.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Leader of the House if he will place in the Library a copy of the internal guidance detailing the administrative procedure by which written parliamentary questions are (a) placed in the Library, (b) sent to the hon. Member who asked the question and (c) made available to the Press Gallery. [129457]

Mr. Straw: Good practice followed by all Government Departments is that the answers should be available to hon. Members prior to them being distributed elsewhere in the House, e.g. Library, Hansard, Press Gallery etc.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture: Biofuels

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking to encourage the use of anaerobic digestion of farm waste to create biogas for energy production. [127541]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are committed to making the most of the potential of anaerobic digestion to contribute to a number of our key objectives, notably, reducing greenhouse emissions from waste management and agriculture and improving air and water quality, as well as providing a source of renewable energy.

The UK Biomass Strategy and the national Waste Strategy, both of which will be published later this spring, will set out the important contribution which anaerobic digestion can make to achieving these objectives.

In order to encourage the greater uptake of anaerobic digestion, I am pleased that the Environment Agency has agreed to develop a standard for digestate in 2007-08. This will allow modern regulatory principles to be applied to the use of this material and bring certainty to when this material is considered to be "fully recovered". This should help to facilitate the development of markets for digestate.

Air Pollution: Small Businesses

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice his Department makes available to small businesses on meeting emission targets. [129368]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 27 March 2007]: The Department funds the Carbon Trust, a not-for-profit company that works closely with business to encourage sustainable use of energy, establish energy efficient practices and systems, and develop low carbon technologies.

The Carbon Trust's products and services for small/medium enterprises (SMEs) include an interest-free loan scheme of £5,000 to £100,000 for approved energy saving measures. The trust also provides advice via their website and a dedicated customer call centre, supports various trade bodies that work directly with SMEs and provides site survey visits to companies with energy bills over £50,000.

Animal Welfare

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the animal welfare enforcement database; [127367]

(2) what discussions he has had with (a) the Home Office, (b) the Department for Constitutional Affairs and (c) the Information Commissioner regarding the animal welfare enforcement database. [127369]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA Ministers and officials have not yet discussed this issue with the Home Office, the Court Service or the Information Commissioner. However, we do see merit in establishing a central database for enforcers to access information such as details of convictions for offences relating to animals, disqualifications from keeping an animal, and certain records relating to previous licences. At present, there is no central record of those subject to disqualification orders and this is regarded as a significant handicap to effective law enforcement. The database could also contain a register of specialist experts, which would ideally be accessible to enforcers.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps he has taken to establish the new arrangements for securing scientific advice on bovine TB following the Government's strategic framework; [130300]

(2) what steps he has taken to implement the proposals put forward by his Department's Science Advisory Council in 2005 for the establishment of a new bovine TB Science Advisory Board. [130301]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are committed to establishing a new bovine TB Science Advisory Body (bTB SAB) to provide independent expert advice, to inform policy decisions on bovine TB issues.

Defra has broadly accepted the recommendations put forward by the Science Advisory Council (SAC) and has had lengthy discussions with SAC members to receive advice on reporting channels, body composition and terms of reference for its proposed bTB SAB. Agreement has been reached to establish an overarching bTB SAB with an independent external chair and membership drawn from existing, strengthened, independent expert advisory subgroups covering all aspects of the bTB science programme.

The Department continues to obtain independent expert peer review at all stages of its procurement and management of research and, last July, a quinquennial review of Defra's Bovine Tuberculosis Research programme was carried out. The report is available on the Defra website.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the purpose is of a disease report form; and how the data collected are used to provide a better understanding of bovine TB; [130302]

(2) what use is made of the data obtained from the bovine TB disease report form; and if he will list the notices, reports and other documents that have been collected as a result of the process. [130304]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since 1 January 2005, the TB Disease Report Form (DRF) has been used to collect the information required for dealing with each new TB incident.

When cattle react positively to a TB test, or TB is detected in a carcase or animal, an investigation is initiated into the circumstances of the incident. Information is collected to establish, whenever possible, the origin of infection.

The DRF is used to capture on-farm information, and collate results from the incident. The collection of data and the epidemiological section are used to consider the possible origins of infection and potential risks of further disease spread, set up lists of animals to be traced and identify which neighbouring premises require additional testing.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what data from the bovine TB disease report form is entered into the electronic data retrieval system; how many forms are held by (a) the State Veterinary Service and (b) his Department; for how long are they retained; and what average time is taken for a veterinary officer to complete a form. [130303]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information in the TB Disease Report Form (DRF) is collated and used by local State Veterinary Service (SVS) Officers to manage TB incidents. At the present time, the majority of the information captured is not normally entered onto an electronic database. However, such information may be routinely captured by other means as part of normal SVS business. The SVS are currently updating their information technology (IT) systems and plan to capture such information electronically in the future.

Information relating to neighbouring farms and cattle movements is used by the SVS to identify cattle 'at risk' of spreading TB. This information is entered into IT systems to trigger TB testing for neighbouring animals or herds. Information such as TB testing results and post-mortem results are taken from other IT systems and added to the DRF.

SVS staff are instructed to initiate a DRF for each TB incident. Between the beginning of 2005 and the end of 2006 there were 7,103 new TB incidents. Records are held by the SVS, not the core Department. DRFs are retained for up to 25 years.

SVS staff initially complete parts of the DRF with the farmer involved, then complete it later at the local office; this can take, in total, between three and four hours. The DRF is subsequently updated with case-related results as required.

Bovine Tuberculosis: Disease Control

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations have been received by his Department from (a) farmers and (b) landowners seeking licences to cull badgers infected with bovine TB. [127583]

Mr. Bradshaw: Natural England has received three applications in the last 12 months under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 section 10(2)(a) for the purpose of preventing the spread of bovine tuberculosis (bTB). These applications resulted in the issue of one licence, which was to permit an animal hospital to euthanase rescued badgers testing positive to bTB. Of the two remaining applications, both from farmers, one application, which was seeking to interfere with a badger sett, was refused after due consideration, while the other application has been placed on hold.

Most TB applications would currently be placed on hold while scientific evidence base is being assessed and organisational questions around possible badger culling are addressed. However, there may be exceptions, for example, applications to euthanase captive badgers testing positive to bTB will still be processed.

Cattle Identification

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cattle have been (a) seized and (b) slaughtered due to inadequate identification in the past 12 months. [129809]

Mr. Bradshaw: Between 23 March 2006 and 23 March 2007, 875 cattle were slaughtered under provisions within the Cattle Identification Regulations on 11 separate occasions. One of these compulsory slaughters accounts for 567 of these animals.

Climate Change

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to Clause 4.8 of the draft Climate Change Bill, by what mechanisms he expects to put into law the climate change framework to drive innovation among domestic firms for low carbon solutions. [129109]

Ian Pearson: Paragraph 4.8 of the consultation document on the draft Climate Change Bill refers to provisions aimed at driving innovation among domestic firms. The Bill provides a clear, credible and (crucially) a long-term legal framework for reducing emissions. This will provide greater certainty and confidence for businesses to be able to plan and make the long term investment decisions needed to drive innovation and to deliver the changes needed to move to a low carbon economy.

The Government hope to receive a wide range of views.

Departments: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much his Department provided in grants for projects in the London borough of Bexley in each of the last five years. [129463]

Mr. Bradshaw: In addition to funding given under the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services (EPOS) block of Government grant, the London borough of Bexley has also been awarded other grants for waste management as follows:

Funding type	Funding amount (£)	Funding description	Start date	End date
London waste minimisation and recycling fund	691,000	Fund to improve waste minimisation and recycling in London	1 April 2002	31 March 2004
London waste minimisation and recycling fund	264,076	Fund to improve waste minimisation and recycling in London	1 April 2004	31 March 2006
Grant to relieve spending pressures on waste	122,991	£20 million allocated to LAs according to need to spend on waste services	1 April 2004	31 March 2005
Local authority support unit: direct consultancy support	56,400	Assessment of cross-border use and re-use and recycling centres	1 April 2004	31 March 2005
Waste and resources action programme: civic amenity sites grant	35,000	LA grant scheme round 1 2004-05	1 April 2004	31 March 2005
Local authority support unit: direct consultancy support	40,730	Waste composition audit	1 April 2005	31 March 2006
Local authority support unit: direct consultancy support	19,600	Waste composition audit	1 April 2006	31 March 2007
Waste performance and efficiency grant	175,651	Capital: £98,803.44; Revenue: £76,847.12	1 April 2005	31 March 2006
Waste performance and efficiency grant	459,788	Capital: £229,894; Revenue: £229,894	1 April 2006	31 March 2007

Hazardous Substances: Waste Management

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department has undertaken on the use of thermal depolymerisation as a process for recycling hazardous medical and sewage waste into fuel. [127544]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department has not undertaken any research into the use of thermal depolymerisation as a mechanism for generating fuel or disposing of waste.

Pet Animals

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government plan to ratify the European Convention on Pet Animals. [129968]

Mr. Bradshaw: We recognise that the European Convention has been an important catalyst in raising animal welfare standards. The introduction of the Animal Welfare Act 2006 in England and Wales, as well as the Animal Health and Welfare (Scotland) Act 2006, means that our laws are now consistent with the principles set out in the convention. Nevertheless, there are aspirations in the convention, in particular the resolution on breed standards, which may not necessarily be the most effective way of promoting welfare.

DEFRA is currently working with the devolved administrations to identify the implications of the convention, were the Government to sign it, and areas that may cause mutual concerns.

Rats

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to his answer of 16 January 2007, Official Report, column 979W, on rats, if he will break down the rat population in England by (a) region and (b) local authority area as indicated by the English House Condition Survey 2001. [129011]

Mr. Bradshaw: The data on rodent infestation in domestic dwellings as revealed by the English House Condition Survey (EHCS) 2001 are broken down by region in the report "Rodent infestations in domestic properties in England, 2001".

My Department does not have data on the rat population broken down by local authority. The EHCS data only provides an estimate of the proportion of dwellings with rat infestations inside or outside. It does not provide definitive data on numbers of rats.

Waste Disposal

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent steps his Department has taken to counteract pollution caused by unauthorised chemical waste dumping; what recent assessment he has made of the extent of such dumping; and if he will make a statement. [129846]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are strict controls on the management and disposal of all wastes, including waste chemicals, and producers of waste have a duty to ensure that it is lawfully managed. Section 33 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 makes it an offence to illegally dispose of waste and carries a maximum penalty of an unlimited fine, or five years imprisonment, or both. The Government have been developing and implementing its waste crime strategy for a number of years now. We will continue to do so as I believe that all forms of illegal waste disposal need to be prevented as far as possible. Where they do happen, incidents and offenders must be dealt with promptly and efficiently by the enforcing authorities.

The Environment Agency (EA) has the leading role in the enforcement of waste regulation and works with local authorities to tackle the fly-tipping of waste. Over the last five years, the EA has been called out to 134 incidents involving organic and inorganic wastes which would include 'chemical wastes'. In 2006, there was a small drop in the number of incidents compared to previous years. At incidents, the EA take action to ensure that wastes are cleared up to prevent harm to human health and the environment.

Flycapture, the national fly-tipping database, was set up in 2004 by Defra, the EA and the Local Government Association to record the number of fly-tipping incidents dealt with by the EA and local authorities. There are 15 categories of waste that are recorded on the database but none of these specifically record chemical wastes. However, one category records chemical drums, oil and fuel and, in 2005-06, there were 4,927 incidences recorded.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what discussions he has had with relevant EU directorates concerning the adoption of the composting protocol by the Environment Agency; [129941]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Environment Agency concerning compliance with the Waste Framework Directive (Amendment) 2006 of the agency's waste protocols programme. [129942]

Mr. Bradshaw: The European Commission has been kept informed of the work undertaken by the Environment Agency (EA) and the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) to develop an end of waste protocol for compost.

Officials from DEFRA and the EA attended a recent seminar by the Commission's Joint Research Centre in Seville to discuss Commission-funded research into a methodology for developing end of waste criteria at EU level.

The EA is a member of the DEFRA project board which is steering the UK input to the negotiations on the proposed revisions to the Waste Framework Directive, under which the Commission has proposed a mechanism to set end of waste criteria for the EU. These negotiations are still in progress. The EA's experience in developing end of waste criteria for compost and other materials should help provide valuable input to future EU discussions.

Waste Management

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1641W to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman), on waste management, whether a local authority can unilaterally leave a joint waste authority of its own accord once it has voluntarily decided to join one. [129107]

Mr. Bradshaw: No. As stated in my previous answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1641W to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) the Secretary of State will only be able to dissolve a joint waste authority in two situations: (i) if he/she receives a request to do so from all the appropriate local authorities; (ii) if he/she considers it necessary.

Other models of partnership working are available for those authorities that do not wish their partnership to be placed on a statutory footing.

Whaling

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which foreign governments were represented at the recent meeting hosted by Japan to encourage more countries to support their position in the International Whaling Commission; and if he will make a statement. [130114]

Mr. Bradshaw: All 72 members of the International Whaling Commission (IWC) were invited to a recent meeting in Tokyo, known as the 'Normalization' meeting, organised by the Government of Japan. As far as my Department is aware, the following Governments attended the meeting:

Antigua and Barbuda
Cambodia
Cameroon
People's Republic of China
Cote D'Ivoire
Denmark
Dominica
Gabon
The Gambia Grenada
Guatemala
Republic of Guinea
Iceland
Japan
Kiribati
Republic of Korea,
Mali
Republic of Marshall Islands
Mauritania
Mongolia
Nauru
Norway
Oman
Republic of Palau
Russian Federation
Senegal
St. Kitts and Nevis
St. Lucia
St. Vincent and The Grenadines
South Africa
Surinam
Switzerland
Togo
Tuvalu.

The UK, along with 26 other anti-whaling countries, respectfully declined the invitation. While we are grateful to the Japanese Government for trying to further discussions on issues of division in the IWC, we believe this initiative serves to further polarise and distract its members from the important conservation work that the IWC undertakes. Furthermore, the IWC is the only body mandated to discuss, at plenipotentiary level, issues relating to the conservation and management of whales. The UK therefore considers that the IWC is the only recognised forum in which to hold intergovernmental discussions on whaling.

PRIME MINISTER

Departments: EC Action

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a list of attendees, with their affiliations, of public events hosted at 10 Downing street in the last two years on European Community matters. [130631]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 October 2006, Official Report, column 788W.

Departments: Silverfish Productions

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Prime Minister what contracts his office awarded to Silverfish Productions Limited in each of the last three years; and what the cost was of those contracts. [128324]

The Prime Minister: As part of World Aids Day 2005, Silverfish Productions Limited produced a video about HIV/AIDS in Malawi, at a cost of £869.

Honours

Harry Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister why the reason for the removal of an honour from an individual is not routinely included with the notice of forfeiture placed in the London Gazette; if he will make it his policy that such reasons be so included; and if he will make a statement. [130486]

The Prime Minister: The Sovereign may, on the advice of Ministers, cancel an award if the holder is considered unworthy to retain it. It would be unnecessary to repeat this in the London Gazette on every occasion of forfeiture.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces: Deployment

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidelines govern the advance notice to be given of a battalion's flight dates prior to deployment on operations overseas; and if he will make a statement. [130251]

Mr. Ingram: It is established practice that we give all our soldiers the maximum flight notice possible. Battalions are normally notified of the departure date between 10 and 30 days in advance and actual flight timings are notified at least 10 days in advance.

There may be occasions where unavoidable factors, either operational or aircraft related, result in further changes to the day or time of a flight. In all cases, battalions are contacted as soon as changes appear likely.

Armed Forces: Training

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2006, Official Report, column 626, on training, what steps he is taking to address consequences for the training of troops of the operational tempo. [130592]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence constantly assesses the impact of operational pressures on the force structure and adjusts programmes accordingly. To accommodate the training for current levels of operational deployment, the focus of training across defence, particularly in the land and air environments, has shifted towards training for specific operations rather than for general contingencies. Training for general contingencies continues, however, to form a significant part of Commander Joint Operations' exercise programme, which ensures that the knowledge and experience required to command and control such operations is maintained over time.

Armed Forces: Working Conditions

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to how many days rest and recuperation a soldier serving on operations is entitled after (a) four, (b) six, (c) 10 and (d) 12 months active duty is entitled. [130071]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 27 March 2007]: Rest and Recuperation (R and R) is not leave and is to be taken at a time, location and duration specified by the operational commander. R and R may only be granted to individuals or units on periods of continuous operations in excess of four months. The maximum permissible period for each instance of R and R is 14 nights inclusive of travelling time. The number of permissible periods of R and R is dependent upon expected tour length and is subject to the following restrictions:

Over four months (120 days) but less than seven months (210 days)—one period of R and R.

Over seven months but less than 11 months (330 days)—two periods of R and R.

Over 11 months—three periods of R and R.

Army: Publications

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the summer 2006 report of the Chief of the General Staff's briefing team. [124497]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 5 March 2007]: A copy of the Chief of the General Staffs briefing team summer 2006 report will be made available in the Library of the House.

Merlin Helicopters

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Merlin Mark 1 helicopters are (a) in service, (b) under repair and (c) being cannibalised; and if he will make a statement. [128260]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1437W.

Military Aircraft: Procurement

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Britten Norman Defender 4S AL Mk1 aircraft have been procured; and how many of these have been delivered to Iraq for use by the Army. [130325]

Mr. Ingram: Four Britten Norman Defender AL Mk1s have now been procured and delivered for use by UK Joint Forces.

All four aircraft have now served in Iraq. To allow for scheduled maintenance, modification/upgrade programmes and/or training requirements only two of the aircraft may have been operational at any one time.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the acquisition cost was at 2006 values of the Britten Norman Defender 4S AL2 Mk1 aircraft procured by the army; and what the estimated hourly running cost is of these aircraft. [130326]

Mr. Ingram: The acquisition cost of a Britten Norman Defender AL Mk1, based on the Economic Conditions of mid 2006, was in the order of £4.5 million.

The estimated hourly running cost during 2006 is £1,500 per hour.

Military Fatalities: Iraq and Afghanistan

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fatalities were sustained by UK armed forces resulting from improvised explosive devices attack on (a) USA RG31 vehicles and (b) Canadian RG31 Nyala vehicles in (i) Iraq and (ii) Afghanistan in each of the last two years. [130016]

Mr. Ingram: There have been no fatalities sustained by the UK armed forces in USA RG31 vehicles or Canadian RG31 Nyala vehicles during the last two years in Iraq or Afghanistan, as a result of improvised explosive devices.

Tucanos

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which versions of the Tucano are operated by the Royal Air Force; what the acquisition cost was of each aircraft; and what the average total operating cost is per hour of Tucanos operated by the Royal Air Force. [130015]

Mr. Ingram: The version of the Tucano operated by the RAF is the T Mark 1 for which the full acquisition cost for each aircraft was just over £1 million. The total cost per funded flying hour for the Tucano T Mark 1 is £5,411.

Unmanned Aerial Vehicles

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the acquisition costs were of (a) the unmanned aerial vehicles deployed by the UK in Afghanistan and (b) the coalition unmanned aerial vehicles to which the UK has operational access in Iraq. [130024]

Mr. Ingram: The acquisition costs of the Desert Hawk mini unmanned aerial vehicles deployed by the UK to Afghanistan were around £1.8 million. We do not comment on the costs of equipment acquired by coalition partners such as the unmanned aerial vehicles to which we have access in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Zimbabwe: British Nationality

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contingency plans his Department has put in place to evacuate British citizens in the event of a crisis in Zimbabwe. [130591]

Des Browne: With the FCO, the Ministry of Defence conducts periodic reviews of contingency plans that provide support to the FCO for Non-Combatant Evacuation Operations of British citizens from a range of countries, including Zimbabwe. Should the situation in Zimbabwe deteriorate to the extent that the FCO decides to evacuate British citizens, the MOD would provide assistance to the FCO if requested.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what mechanisms are in place to ensure her Department's economical use of paper. [129011]

Vera Baird: My Department has set in place a contract that provides recycled paper for printing and copying. In addition to this our HQ has piloted a successful paper recycling scheme. Best practice from this pilot is being used to assist development of the Department's waste strategy and action plan.

Departments: Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by her Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [130147]

Vera Baird: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and publicised in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. These show that no former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 have since been appointed to public bodies sponsored by the Department.

Sir Hayden Phillips: Pay

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how, and at what rate, Sir Hayden Phillips was remunerated for undertaking the inquiry into the funding of political parties; and how much he has been paid to date for that work. [130481]

Bridget Prentice: Sir Hayden Phillips was appointed by the Prime Minister to conduct a review of the funding of political parties in March 2006.

Sir Hayden Phillips' gross rate of pay for conducting the review was £700 per day, paid through the DCA. The total amount that he has been paid to date (up to the end of February 2007) has been £40,100 gross.

Politics and Government: South West Region

Andrew George: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what distinct constitutional status applies to (a) Cornwall, (b) the Isles of Scilly, (c) the Cornish people, (d) the Duchy of Cornwall, (e) the Council of the Isles of Scilly, (f) Cornish stannary organisations and (g) any other Cornish or Duchy based institution which does not apply to England; [123754]

(2) what (a) treaties, (b) Acts of Parliament, (c) regulations and (d) statutory instruments provide distinct status to (i) Cornwall and (ii) the Isles of Scilly which does not apply to England. [123755]

Bridget Prentice: The Government addressed the question about the constitutional status of Cornwall, the Isles of Scilly, and the Duchy of Cornwall on 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1892W. The position of the Council of Isles of Scilly is recognised in UK legislation where it applies to the Isles. On the question about stannary organisations, there are no valid Cornish stannary organisations in existence. It is noted that stannary courts were abolished under the Stannaries Court (Abolition) Act 1896.

Cornwall has always been an integral part of the Union. There are no treaties today that apply to Cornwall only. With the exception of geographically limited matters such as Private Acts of Parliament for infrastructure works, Acts of Parliament, regulations and statutory instruments apply in Cornwall as they do throughout England, but do not always apply to the Isles of Scilly. There is no special status for legislation which applies to Cornwall or to Cornish localities.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Animal Welfare: Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which animal welfare organisations benefited from National Lottery funding in each of the last five years; and how much each received. [130495]

Mr. Caborn: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost as animal welfare organisations are not a separate category on the Department's Lottery Grants Database.

The Big Lottery Fund does not support animal welfare groups, but it does support some charities involving animals.

The Heritage Lottery Fund's (HLF) key focus for funding animals is through the conservation of priority UK Biodiversity Action Plan (UKBAP) species and priority UKBAP habitats. As HLF is concerned with the conservation and recovery of the UK's most endangered animals and not the general wellbeing and welfare of animals, HLF has not funded, as far as we are aware, any animal welfare organisations.

Details of individual Lottery awards appear on the Department's Lottery Grants Database, which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors and can be searched at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk

Consultation Papers

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2007, Official Report, columns 903-4W, on consultation papers, what fee she expects to be paid to the Work Foundation for the creative economy project. [130379]

Mr. Woodward: The agreed cost of the Department's contract with the Work Foundation for their contribution to the creative economy programme is for a sum not exceeding £84,000 (excluding VAT). The terms of the contract will be reviewed in the light of the actual demands of the programme.

Departments: Conferences

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which industry summits her Department has (a) hosted and (b) co-hosted with other Government Departments in each of the last five years; what policy initiative each summit was associated with; and what the cost of each such summit was. [130381]

Mr. Woodward: The Department has an ongoing programme of meetings with industry representatives from across all of its sectors. A relatively small proportion of which have been specifically termed Industry summits'. The most recent examples of these are the events being held to inform the Creative Economy programme and those which were held on ticket touting issues. In these cases, the costs incurred (in addition to those for internal administration) are as set out in the table.

An analysis of all of the industry summit' events held over the last five years, the policy initiative each was associated with, and the cost of each, could only be provided at disproportionate expense.

Film

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2007, Official Report, columns 904-5W, on film, what the budgets are for the summits on (a) software, (b) games, (c) design, (d) performing arts, (e) advertising and (f) fashion. [130378]

Mr. Woodward: In addition to internal administrative costs, an overall budget of £1,000 has been allocated to cover the incidental costs of the current round of 12 industry summits being held to inform the creative economy programme. Support for these events also forms part of the Department's contract with the Work Foundation.

Summits have been held on broadcasting, film, architecture, music, publishing, software, computer games and design. Further summits are planned on advertising, fashion, the performing arts and arts, antiques and crafts.

Gaming Clubs: Energy Consumption

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the small, large and regional casinos recommended to her by the Casino Advisory Panel will be required to use energy saving light bulbs in and around their premises. [129002]

Mr. Caborn: Any new casino development will be required to comply with relevant planning and building requirements, including relevant requirements designed to protect the environment and promote energy saving.

Hotels: Taxation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which organisations have made written representations to her Department on taxation on hotel accommodation in the last 12 months. [130580]

Mr. Woodward: DCMS has received 57 written representations on this subject since 1 March 2006. These include four submissions to the Department's Welcome>Legacy consultation which raised the matter of an accommodation tax. A significant number of proforma letters, written as part of the Caterer and Hotelkeeper's campaign against an accommodation tax, were sent to the Prime Minister and forwarded to the Department.

These representations were received from tourism and hospitality trade associations, individual businesses, local authorities, representatives of attraction businesses, Members of Parliament and public and private sector partnership organisations.

Since the publication of Sir Michael Lyons' report on 21 March, the Government have stated there is no intention to introduce a local bed tax.

Internet

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when she expects a new text-based labelling system for internet sites to be introduced; [129174]

(2) what studies have been commissioned by her Department on the (a) feasibility and (b) cost of introducing a text-based labelling system for internet sites. [129175]

Mr. Woodward: The Department has not commissioned any studies. The independent regulator Ofcom has a duty for media literacy in the Communications Act 2003. In pursuit of the duty Ofcom have been developing proposals for a common labelling framework.

I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to write with more details. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Licensed Premises: Safety Measures

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on the use of plastic glasses in licensed premises. [130127]

Mr. Caulker: I have been asked to reply.

Other than previous debates in the House and representations made by individual MPs on behalf of their constituents, no specific representations have been made by the drinks industry or other stakeholders on the use of plastic in licensed premises. The Licensing Act 2003 already provides for the police to apply for licence reviews and for conditions to be attached to licences. For example, that the licensed premises should use toughened drinks glasses and bottles. The Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 will in due course also provide a new fast track alcohol licence review process that could lead to such conditions being applied in cases of serious crime and disorder. We are also committed to reviewing the Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy for England that was published in March 2004, later this year.

Licensing Laws

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many licencees have had their licences revoked since the Licensing Act 2003 came into force; [130384]

(2) how many licences have been (a) challenged and (b) placed under review due to the selling of alcohol to minors. [130383]

Mr. Woodward: We do not hold this information. However, extrapolating from data collected by the Department in November 2006 from a small sample of licensing authorities, we broadly estimate there were around 600 completed licence reviews in the first year of the new regime which resulted in approximately 100 licences being revoked. Sales or attempted sales to persons under 18 would have been a factor in a number of those cases.

Public Libraries

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the percentage of the population that used a public library in each of the last five years. [130405]

Mr. Lammy: The information necessary to estimate the percentage of population using public libraries in England across the whole period sought by my hon. Friend is not held centrally.

The DCMS 'Taking Part' cultural participation survey shows that 48.2 per cent. of all adults in this country visited at least one library during 2005-06. However, this was the survey's first reporting year so we do not have comparable information for previous years. Neither does this figure include library usage by children and young people under 16.

The Public Library Statistics, published annually by the Chartered Institute of Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) show that the following percentages of people in England borrowed at least one item from a public library ("active borrowers") in the period 2001-02 to 2005-06:

	Active borrowers as a percentage of total population
2001-02	27.6
2002-03	26.2
2003-04	24.8
2004-05	23.0
2005-06	22.2

The table, although focused on individual users, only reflects the number of people that used the library to borrow an item including books, DVDs and CDs. It does not take account of those people who used a library for other purposes such as reading a book or newspaper on the library premises, attending a reading or learning group or accessing information (whether in paper or online form). Increasingly, public libraries are becoming wider community resources that offer an increasing range of services.

The following table, shows the average number of visits to libraries in England per head of resident population in England as well the total number of visits overall.

	Average number of visits to libraries in England per head of resident population	Visits overall (000)
2001-02	5.5:1	270,775
2002-03	5.5:1	274,053
2003-04	5.7:1	285,365
2004-05	5.8:1	288,382
2005-06	5.8:1	290,979

Tickets: Touting

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with industry on the illegal selling of tickets to events. [130516]

Mr. Woodward: The Department has hosted four separate meetings with key stakeholders from the ticketed events' industry over the last year to discuss the problems associated with ticket resale, to identify solutions to those problems and work continues. Only the resale of tickets for designated football matches, the resale of tickets for the London 2012 Games and the trading of tickets on the street without a licence are illegal.

Illegal activity is a matter for enforcement agencies to take appropriate action.

Tourism: Hartlepool

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the potential effects on the (a) Hartlepool economy and (b) Hartlepool tourist and culture sector of the 2010 Tall Ships event. [130907]

Mr. Woodward: This Department has made no such assessments. However, the national marketing organisation, VisitBritain, has worked with previous Tall Ships venues in the past (such as Newcastle Gateshead in 2005) to promote the event and will offer its support to Tall Ships Hartlepool 2010.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grants facilities in Hartlepool will be able to apply for in connection with the 2010 Tall Ships event. [130908]

Mr. Woodward: This Department provides no such grants. However, the national marketing organisation, VisitBritain, will work with organisers to promote the event and One NorthEast, the regional development agency for the North East of England, will consider applications for support.

Tourism: North East Region

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many tourists visited (a) Hartlepool constituency, (b) Tees Valley sub-region and (c) the North East region in each of the last five years. [130891]

Mr. Woodward: The following tables show the number of visits to the North East from (i) UK residents (with an overnight stay) and (ii) overseas residents, for the latest years for which data are available. Data for Tees Valley are only available for inbound visits and no information is available at a constituency level.

Domestic overnight visits[1]

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
North East	4,300	4,500	4,800	3,800	4,640

[1] The methodology for the UKTS changed in 2005 meaning that comparisons with previous years should be treated with caution. This change occurred as a result of concerns with the quality of 2004 data, which are thought to be an under-representation of the true position.

Inbound visits

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005

North East	440	529	505	539	590

In addition, account should be taken of the number of day visits made to, or within, the North East. The Leisure Day Visits Survey in 2002-03 recorded a total of around 30 million tourism day visits to destinations in the North East. It is not possible to provide a time series for this information as the surveys are run intermittently.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children: Conferences

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which conferences targeted at schoolchildren were funded by the EU in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [130670]

Bill Rammell: I am not aware of any conferences in the UK targeted at schoolchildren that have received funding from the EU.

Connexions

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on the Connexions service in each year since it was established; and how many people received advice from the service in each of those years. [130648]

Mr. Dhanda: Connexions was introduced in a staged way from April 2001. The following table provides information on the budgets and numbers of interventions with young people for each year since the service's inception. The intervention data are included as information on the number of people receiving advice is not collected.

	Connexions budget (£ million)	Careers Service budget (£ million)	Interventions
2001-02	151	173	1,257,437
2002-03	378	52	3,090,000
2003-04	455	—	3,656,000
2004-05	470	—	3,908,000
2005-06	475	—	4,264,000
2006-07	476	—	[1]—

[1] Not yet available

Notes:
1. The above figures reflect the staged way in which Connexions was introduced.
2. Young people also receive support from Connexions through group activities and events and from Connexions Direct, none of which are included in the above intervention figures. There are over 130,000 visits per week to the Connexions Direct website, with around 6,000 contacts per week to the helpline.

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what mechanisms are in place to ensure his Department's economical use of paper. [128009]

Mr. Dhanda: An environmental housekeeping policy, published on the Department's internal website, promotes economical use of paper through advice to reduce printing to essential only, printing double sided documents, using the phone or email to contact people and circulating papers instead of sending out copies.

DFES is currently implementing electronic management of records storage and on-line delivery of services which will transform the way our services are managed and delivered by helping to reduce the need for hardcopy paper production and handling.

The programme of upgrading to printers and multifunctional devices that allow double sided printing is in progress as part of planned improvements to flexible working arrangements in our Headquarters offices.

The Department has implemented a sustainable operations management system to help it meet sustainable development in Government targets. The system contains a strategic site-specific action plan on waste reduction and management for each of its headquarters offices.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many young people have been in receipt of education maintenance allowance (EMA) in each London local authority since its introduction; and how many were in receipt of EMA in 2005-06. [128672]

Phil Hope: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate the education maintenance allowance (EMA) for the DfES and hold the information about take-up and payments made under the scheme. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 28 March 2007:

I am writing in response to your recent Parliamentary Question that asked; "How many young people have been in receipt of educational maintenance allowance (EMA) in each London local authority since its introduction; and how many were in receipt of an EMA in 2005-06."

EMA take-up is defined as young people who have received one or more EMA payments in the academic year.

National EMA was phased in over time to successive 16 year old age groups. 2004/05 was the first year of National EMA and therefore we can only give data for 16 year olds in that year.

The attached tables show EMA take-up data for each London Local Authority area during each academic year since the scheme's inception.

I hope you find this information useful.

English: Teaching Methods

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 15 January 2007, Official Report, columns 800-1W, on English language teaching, (1) if he will assess the merits of using the skills and materials available in the learning English section of the BBC World Service to maintain the accessibility of online/distance learning English for Speakers of Other Languages courses; and if he will make a statement; [120255]

(2) when he expects to reply to Question 120255, on the BBC World Service and English language teaching, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 6 February. [130508]

Phil Hope: There are a wide variety of materials and resources to support the learning of English and we would encourage those that are effective and of high quality.

The Skills for Life Strategy has implemented national standards for adult literacy and numeracy and all provision eligible for funding as basic skills has to be mapped to these. The standards are reinforced and supported by national core curricula for literacy, numeracy, ESOL and ICT which provide a context within the learning environment. Learners wishing to improve their English skills should follow approved courses based on the Skills for Life national standards and curriculum and which lead to nationally recognised qualifications.

We recognise the value and potential of delivering English language online and via distance learning and we are currently investigating this area.

Mathematics: Secondary Education

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of mathematics lessons in mainstream maintained secondary schools is observed by Ofsted, broken down by school year group. [129708]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to the hon. Member and a copy of her reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Christine Gilbert, dated 28 March, 2007:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply.

You asked what proportion of mathematics lessons in mainstream maintained secondary schools is observed by Ofsted, broken down by separate school year group.

The number of mathematics lessons that take place in schools nationally is unknown and therefore the proportion observed by Ofsted cannot be calculated. I am able to report that one in seven lessons observed by inspectors in mainstream secondary schools in 2005/06 was a mathematics lesson. The details are broken down by year group in the table beneath.

Proportion of lessons observed in maintained secondary schools which were mathematics lessons

Year group	Percentage
7	14
8	15
9	14
10	14
11	15
All	14

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jim Knight MP, Minister of State for Schools, and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Nurseries: Qualifications

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the viability of playgroups in circumstances where staff of those groups are found by Ofsted to have insufficient qualifications. [130067]

Beverley Hughes: Ofsted regulates to the National Standards for under 8s day care and childminding and makes a judgment about whether all managers, staff and volunteers have the appropriate experience skills and ability to do their jobs. National Standards 1 and 2 of the sessional care standards sets the qualification requirements for playgroups. Where providers do not currently meet these requirements Ofsted will normally accept an action plan showing how they intend to fulfil them and over what timescale, and monitor progress at the next inspection.

Public Sector Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the cash equivalent transfer value is of the public sector pensions of the 10 highest paid members of staff in his Department and its executive agencies; and if he will make a statement; [113816]

(2) when he will answer Question 113816, on public sector pensions, tabled on 5 January 2007 by the hon. Member for Yeovil. [120260]

Mr. Dhanda: The cash equivalent transfer value (CETV) of the pensions of the 10 highest paid departmental employees at 31 March 2006 was £4,340,480.00. This includes the CETV of the members of the senior management team named in the Department's remuneration report, which is published annually and which is in the public domain. The Department has no executive agencies.

Special Educational Needs

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what recent representations he has received on the availability of textbooks for blind, partially sighted and dyslexic children in accessible formats; and if he will make a statement; [130337]

(2) what assessment he has made of the availability of textbooks in formats accessible to blind, partially sighted and dyslexic children; [130338]

(3) what steps he will take to improve blind, partially sighted and dyslexic children's access to books in accessible formats in the next two years. [130339]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department regularly discusses the provision it makes for children with special educational needs and disabilities through the SEN and disability frameworks with key stakeholders both in the voluntary sector and across Government, including support for visually impaired and dyslexic children. A central record is not kept of the approaches made to the Department on individual issues.

We continue to invest significant resources to support the education of children with SEN and disabilities—some £4.5 billion in 2006/07. It is for schools and local authorities to plan to improve access to the curriculum and written materials for disabled pupils over time and the Disability Equality Duty requires schools them to promote disability equality.

To assist the provision of materials in accessible alternative formats for blind, partially sighted and dyslexic children specifically, the Government supported the Copyright (Visually Impaired Persons) Act 2002 which reduces delays in gaining copyright clearance to produce books and other printed materials in formats accessible to visually impaired people. The Department of Trade and Industry is also working on a feasibility study to look at opportunities for publishers to provide education material in accessible formats more quickly and this Department is involved in the process.

Vocational Training

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many hours of training on average were undertaken by participants in the Train to Gain programme; [123390]

(2) what percentage of participants in the Train to Gain programme received no training as a result of first stage assessment; [123391]

(3) what percentage of participants in the Train to Gain programme have received training of more than (a) 60 hours, (b) 70 hours and (c) 100 hours; [123392]

(4) what percentage of the Train to Gain programme budget has been spent on (a) training, (b) accreditation and (c) skills brokers. [123393]

Bill Rammell: Train to Gain is an ongoing service and as such performance is updated on a regular basis. Detailed operational information is not held centrally by the Department but is collected by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). Mark Haysom the LSC chief executive has written to the hon. Member and a copy of his replies has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 28 March 2007:

I am writing in response to your recent parliamentary question about the number of hours Train to Gain learners take to achieve qualifications.

As the majority of learners take more than 6 months to achieve a qualification, there is currently only a small amount of data available to use in responding to this question.

However, analysis of nearly 10,000 learners starting in the period April-July 2006 who have now completed their training shows the average number of hours to be about 33 hours.

I hope this response is helpful to you.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 12 March 2007:

I am writing in response to your recent parliamentary question about what percentage of participants in the Train to Gain programme budget is spent on (a) training (b) accreditation and (c) skills brokers.

The Learning & Skills Council is not clear what is meant by the terms 'training' and 'accreditation' as used in this question. However, the following details of 2006/07 budget expenditure may answer the question:

Provision i.e. paid to providers to train employees to achieve a qualification. = 68% of budget.

Skills Brokerage including broker training and accreditation to new national standards in business advice = 11% of budget.

I hope this response is helpful to you.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 12 March 2007:

I write in response to your Parliamentary question asking what percentage of participants in the Train to Gain programme have received training of more than (a) 60 hours (b) 70 hours and (c) 100 hours.

Train to Gain has been available nationally since August 2006. The use of the term 'training' in the question is unclear as it could cover a wide range of activities. LSC collects data on the number of hours learners spend on training programmes working towards qualifications. As the majority of learners take more than 6 months to achieve a qualification, there is currently only a small amount of data available to use in responding to this question. Based on 7,103 records to date, the breakdown is:

(a) 60-70 hours = 4%

(b) 70-100 hours = 10%

(c) 100 hours + = 1%

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 12 March 2007:

I write in response to your Parliamentary question asking what percentage of participants in the Train to Gain programme received no training as a result of first stage assessment.

The Learning & Skills Council is unable to respond to this question without clarification as the term 'first stage assessment' is not recognised. It is also unclear whether the term 'participants' refers to employers or employees.

If you can clarify this point, we would be happy to respond.

Written Questions

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, when he expects to answer Question 110609, on young people in London, tabled by the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green on 18 January. [130602]

Mr. Dhanda: The hon. Member's question will be responded to by the Department for Work and Pensions. The question was transferred on 26 January.

Young People: EC Action

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps the UK is taking under the EU Youth in Action programme (EU budget code 15 01 04 55); and if he will make a statement. [130658]

Bill Rammell: The EU Youth in Action Programme started on 1 January 2007 and will run until 31 December 2013. I have appointed Connect Youth, part of the British Council, to manage the programme in the UK and to maximise the take up by eligible young people in this country.

Youth Opportunities

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the degree to which the Youth Opportunity and Youth Capital funds are reaching the disadvantaged young people in Greater Manchester following submission by local authorities of reports to the Government Office in the North West. [129981]

Mr. Dhanda: Local authorities are required to report to Government offices on delivery of the Youth Opportunity and Youth Capital Funds on a six monthly basis. The first six monthly reports received at the end of October 2006 provided evidence predominantly on set up of the funds in each area. As a result, levels of participation by disadvantaged young people in the funds are not identifiable. The second reports due at the end of April 2007 will include full management information on participation, and will provide information on how the funds are reaching disadvantaged young people in each local authority.

TRANSPORT

A21: Compulsory Purchase

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Highways Agency plans to issue compulsory purchase orders along the A21 between Flimwell and Robertsbridge. [130594]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 1 February 2007, Official Report, column 425W.

Aerodrome Charges

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to consult on how to determine the interests of persons who live in the area in which an aerodrome is situated in determining the use of his powers under the Civil Aviation Act 1982 to fix charges. [129998]

Gillian Merron: Section 1 of the Civil Aviation Act 2006 inserts a new section 38 into the Civil Aviation Act 1982. Subsection 5 of this section requires that where the Secretary of State is considering whether to exercise his power, conferred by subsection 4, to direct an airport operator to fix its charges by reference to aircraft noise or emissions, he must > "have regard (among other things) to the interests of persons who live in the area in which the aerodrome is situated".

We do not plan to consult on a general process for determining those interests. Rather, we recognise that the interests will depend on specific local circumstances. If the Secretary of State were to consider the use of section 38(4) in a specific case, we would expect a public consultation giving local authorities, amenity groups, the airport's Consultative Committee, other local interest groups and individuals an opportunity to make their views clear. Decisions following consultation would depend on the merits of the case.

Aircraft

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the aircraft for the use of the Prime Minister will be ready to enter service; and what the estimated whole life cost of such aircraft is estimated to be. [125931]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport plans to introduce the new air travel service as early as possible, consistent with best procurement practice and the need to deliver value for money and appropriate levels of safety, security and reliability. The timetable for delivery will depend upon the contractual arrangements and the lead-in times needed by suppliers to meet the new requirement.

Sir Peter Gershon's "Independent Air Travel Review" estimated that the new service would cost between £104 million and £107 million in net present value terms over a ten year period. This compares with a cost of £98 million over the same period of continuing with the existing arrangements. Sir Peter Gershon's Review calculated that such an arrangement would add no further burden to the public purse.

British Transport Police: Community Support Officers

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Transport Police community support officers were based in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex in each of the last five years, broken down by location of post. [130937]

Mr. Tom Harris: This information is not held by the Department for Transport but by the British Transport Police who can be contacted at: British Transport Police, 25 Camden Road, London NW1 9LN, e-mail: general.enquiries@btp.pnn.police.uk.

Bus Services: Grants

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid to bus operators through the Bus Service Operators Grant in each year since the grant was introduced. [130058]

Gillian Merron: Bus Service Operators Grant (BSOG) was introduced under the Transport Act 2000. It replaced the Fuel Duty Rebate scheme which had been in place since 1965.

The amount of BSOG paid by the Department to operators of local bus and community transport services since 2000 is as follows:

	£ million (cash prices)
2000-01	301
2001-02	304
2002-03	317
2003-04	341
2004-05	359
2005-06	369
2006-07	[1]380

[1] Estimated.

Cycleways

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on cycling facilities in local authority areas (a) in London and (b) in England outside London in each year since 2000-01; what his expectations are for future spending; and if he will make a statement. [129400]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department provides a central budget for cycling programmes and initiatives. Since 2005-06 this has been the responsibility of Cycling England and investment in cycle facilities is as follows:

	£ million
2002-03	2.2
2003-04	2.2
2004-05	10.5
2005-06	3.2
2006-07	6.0

In 2000-01 and 2001-02 the budget was revenue spend on promotion of cycling.

The majority of expenditure on cycling is committed by local highway authorities who receive funding from the Department through the Local Transport Plan settlement and it is for them to determine their priorities. English authorities outside London have informed the Department that their investment in cycle facilities for each year is as follows:

	£ million
2001-02	29.6
2002-03	39.9
2003-04	32.1
2004-05	40.0
2005-06	34.1

London boroughs also receive funding from the Department via a block settlement through Transport for London (TfL) and with their other revenue streams TfL has informed the Department that their investment in cycling facilities for each year since 2001-02 is as follows:

	£ million
2001-02	12.5
2002-03	11.6
2003-04	12.7
2004-05	13.1
2005-06	18.3

The Department does not require local authorities to provide an estimate of future spend on cycling so no data are available for 2006-07 and 2007-08. TfL though have informed the Department that they forecast £24.1 million will be spent on cycle facilities in 2006-07 and £36.1 million in 2007-08. Cycling England forecast that their expenditure on cycle facilities in local authority areas in 2007-08 will be £3.8 million to be spent in the cycling demonstration towns and on 'Links to Schools'.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper and publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers and publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic was of each. [130010]

Gillian Merron: The Department has not sponsored newspaper or publication supplements in fiscal year 2006-07. We have however purchased advertorial space to reinforce specific campaigns as follows:

Campaign	Cost (net) (£)
THINK! Road safety campaign: Mobiles phones	50,000
THINK! Drink Drive	162,000
THINK! Driving for Work	57,000
Transport Direct	73,183
VOSA Automatic Number Plate Recognition/Weigh in Motion Sensors	6,000
DVLA Electronic Vehicle Licensing	2056.25
DVLA Continuous Registration	3,300

Departments: Golden Arrow Communications

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent (a) meetings and (b) discussions Ministers in his Department have had with Golden Arrow Communications; and if he will make a statement. [130791]

Gillian Merron: Since 2005, Ministers have attended two events organised by Golden Arrow Communications.

As part of the consultations on the Department's review of ports policy, the Minister of State accompanied by officials attended a lunch on 18 July 2006 to hear the views of ports and shipping interests.

On 21 February 2007 both Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State attended a parliamentary reception at which one spoke about the Government's broad transport priorities.

In addition Ministers have attended conferences, receptions and other such events not organised by Golden Arrow Communications but at which individuals employed by them may have been present. No record is kept of such encounters.

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have held with Golden Arrow Communications since 2005. [129825]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 26 March 2007]: Since 2005, Ministers and officials have attended several events organised by Golden Arrow Communications.

An official gave an introductory address about the Department's review of ports policy at a seminar on 5 July 2006. As part of the consultations on that review, the Minister of State accompanied by officials attended a lunch on 18 July 2006 to hear the views of ports and shipping interests.

On 21 February 2007 both Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State attended a parliamentary reception at which one spoke about the Government's broad transport priorities.

In addition Ministers and officials have attended conferences, receptions and other such events not organised by Golden Arrow Communications but at which individuals employed by them may have been present. No record is kept of such encounters.

Departments: Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [130135]

Gillian Merron: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and publicised in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. This shows that no former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 have since been appointed to public bodies sponsored by the Department.

Departments: Railways

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were employed by his Department with a responsibility for rail transport in each year since 2002. [128919]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department for Transport was established in May 2002. The number of people employed with a specific responsibility for rail transport including Rail Accident Investigation Branch (operational from October 2005) and the transfer of the Strategic Rail Authority's responsibilities (from July 2005) for each year since 2002 were:

	Rail directorates	Rail Accident Investigation Branch (RAIB)	Total
May 2002	70	—	70
April 2002	72	—	72
April 2004	84	4	88
April 2005	90	36	126
April 2006	219	45	264

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drivers working for the Government Car and Despatch Agency in each of the last five years were (a) male and (b) female. [124612]

Dr. Ladyman: Drivers working for the Government Car and Despatch Agency in the last five years were as follows:

2005-06	208	10	218
2004-05	198	8	206
2003-04	210	10	220
2002-03	211	12	223

The Government Car and Despatch Agency is responsible for providing a range of transport and mail distribution services to Government and the wider public sector.

The Agency's Diversity Action Plan 2006-11, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House, includes a target to increase the number of women, disabled and black minority ethnic employees by 2011.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish correspondence between the Highways Agency and Shirley Estates on the proposed motorway service area at junction 4 of the M42. [130472]

Dr. Ladyman: Correspondence between the Highways Agency and Shirley Estates on the proposed motorway service area at junction 4 of the M42 is ongoing. As this correspondence refers to work in progress it is not appropriate to publish it at present. The conclusions reached as a result of this correspondence will be included in the Highways Agency's proof of evidence to be presented at the public inquiry and this document will be in the public domain at the appropriate time.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the correspondence between the Highways Agency, Birmingham International airport and Swayfields with regard to the proposed motorway service area between junction 5 and junction 6 of the M42. [130473]

Dr. Ladyman: Correspondence between the Highways Agency, Birmingham International airport and Swayfields on the proposed motorway service area between junction 5 and junction 6 of the M42 is ongoing. As this correspondence refers to work in progress it is not appropriate to publish it at present. The conclusions reached as a result of this correspondence will be included in the Highways Agency's proof of evidence to be presented at the public inquiry and this document will be in the public domain at the appropriate time.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations between the Highways Agency and Shirley Estates with regard to the proposed motorway service area at Junction 4 of the M42. [130474]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is not negotiating with Shirley Estates with regard to the proposed motorway service area at Junction 4 of the M42. As part of the planning process the Highways Agency has a duty to cooperate and act reasonably in considering proposals coming forward. No conclusions on the acceptability of the proposals have been reached.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations between the Highways Agency, Birmingham International Airport and Swayfields on the proposed motorway service area between Junction 5 and Junction 6 of the M42. [130475]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is not negotiating with Birmingham International Airport and Swayfields with regard to the proposed motorway service area between Junction 5 and Junction 6 of the M42. As part of the planning process the Highways Agency has a duty to cooperate and act reasonably in considering proposals coming forward. A Joint Statement produced by the Highways Agency, Birmingham International Airport Limited and the National Exhibition Centre regarding options for improving motorway access from the M42 was read out and given to the inspector at the pre-inquiry meeting on 19 March 2007.

Motor Vehicles: Registration

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how his Department monitors the registration and taxing of vehicles in their home non-EU or EEA countries when the vehicles have been in the United Kingdom for more than 12 months. [129072]

Dr. Ladyman: This Department does not monitor the registration and licensing status of non-EU or EEA vehicles that may be circulating in the United Kingdom.

Motor Vehicles: Testing

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to change the required frequency of MOT tests for new vehicles. [130617]

Dr. Ladyman: We will be consulting shortly on options for the future conduct of the MOT scheme—and specifically about the frequency of testing—following a recommendation that we do so in the Davidson Review of the implementation of EU legislation. This consultation will include a full discussion of the potential advantages and disadvantages of making any change to test frequency.

Public Transport: Concessions

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of total central Government support for the English concessionary fares scheme (a) was distributed for 2004-05 and (b) is forecast to be distributed to (i) the Scottish Executive, (ii) Transport for London, (iii) the Welsh Assembly, (iv) the Council of the Isles of Scilly and (v) local authorities where there are no bus services in each of the next five years. [129354]

Gillian Merron: In 2004-05, as now, the funding for statutory concessionary fares in England was one of the services supported through formula grant, which comprises Revenue support grant, redistributed business rates and principal formula police grant. Formula grant is an unhypothecated block grant i.e. authorities are free to spend the money on any service. Because of the method of calculation, particularly floor damping (which guarantees local authorities at least a minimum percentage increase by scaling back increases for other authorities), it is not possible to say what has been given to each local authority for any particular service.

Up to an extra £250 million per year will be provided for the national bus concession from April 2008 (this includes Barnett consequentials which will be paid on this in line with statement of funding policy). Eligible residents of the Isles of Scilly will be entitled to national bus concession, and so the Isles of Scilly will be receiving a share of the extra funding.

The Department, in discussions with the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG's) and HM Treasury, is looking at a number of options for distributing the existing and future funding. The options will be discussed through DCLG's Settlement Working Group and, if appropriate, formally consulted upon during the summer.

Rail Franchises

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish (a) the cost benefit analysis and (b) the appraisal summary table taking account of the five objectives outlined in the New Approach to Appraisal prepared by his Department prior to the (i) award of the Greater Western franchise, (ii) award of the South Western Trains franchise and (iii) specification for the new Cross Country franchise. [117125]

Mr. Tom Harris: In respect of the Greater Western and South Western franchises, the Department for Transport determined the value for money case for the specification at the stage prior to issuing the Invitation to Tender (ITT) to bidders. This includes the preparation of cost-benefit analysis tables, and an assessment of the wider benefits. Therefore, the information does not exist in the form that has been requested at the award stage.

The bids for the New Cross Country franchise have been submitted and are currently under evaluation. At the point of awarding the franchise, the Department will review whether the value proposed by the leading bidder to deliver the specification outputs exceeds that prepared at the time of the issue of the ITT.

Railways

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) locomotives, (b) multiple units, (c) freight wagons and (d) carriages were in use on the rail network in the most recent period for which figures are available, broken down by (i) train operating company and (ii) class. [128589]

Mr. Tom Harris: Tables giving details of the number of locomotives, multiple units and carriages used by franchised passenger train operators, broken down by train operating company and class has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Not included are vehicles operated by Scotrail (for which the Scottish Executive is responsible) and non-franchised operators such as Network Rail, open access and charter operators. Information on the number of freight vehicles used on the network is not held by the Department.

This information is based on latest available data but variations in the figures can be expected due to short term vehicle hiring, introduction of new fleets, withdrawal of older vehicles and cascades.

Railways: Capital Investment

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the railway network over the next three years; and what capital improvements of over £10 million each are planned to start in that period. [126865]

Mr. Tom Harris: Improvements in capacity and performance are being achieved through the record investment the Government are making in the railway. Two projects in particular—the West Coast Main Line upgrade and Channel Tunnel Rail Link Stage 2—are due to be completed in the next three years. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State also announced, earlier this month that a thousand new carriages will be introduced on some of the most congested routes in the country.

The High Level Output Specification, due to be announced in the summer of this year, will set out other Government's requirement for railways from 2009-10 and subsequently.

Railways: Fares

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, how train fares have changed on average over the last 10 years; and what assessment he has made of the effect on the number of people travelling by train. [129677]

Mr. Tom Harris: Fares regulated by the Department for Transport cost on average 2 per cent. less in real terms today than in 1996. In that period, passenger numbers have grown by over 40 per cent. with more than a billion passenger journeys on the railway for the first time since 1959.

Railways: Franchises

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what adjustments he has made to his Department's working assumptions on future projected revenues from rail franchise premium payments following the collapse of the GNER franchise. [124832]

Mr. Tom Harris: We do not specify the levels of premium or subsidy payments that bidders may propose in franchise competitions. The Department maintains a close review of the current and projected future financial health of currently operating franchises.

Railways: Freight

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) role and (b) actions his Department has taken in the development of the Strategic Rail Authority's policy towards large-scale railfreight interchanges. [130798]

Mr. Tom Harris: On 14 October 2005 the Department for Transport issued a statement regarding the status of the Strategic Rail Authority's Strategic Rail Freight Interchange Policy. This statement still represents the position of the Department. Both documents are available in the rail freight section of the Department's website.

Railways: Hastings

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with train companies on the Hastings to Charing Cross train line. [130593]

Mr. Tom Harris: I have had no specific discussions with either Southern or Southeastern about the Charing Cross to Hastings line. However I, and my officials, have regular discussions with both train operators about performance and other issues.

Railways: Standards

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many train journeys were cancelled in each year between 1997 and 2006, broken down by train operating company. [122382]

Mr. Tom Harris: This is an operational matter for Network Rail. For a response, the right hon. Member may wish to contact Network Rail's Chief Executive at the following address:

John Armitt
Chief Executive
Network Rail
40 Melton Street
London
NW1 2EE

Railways: Tees Valley

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to fund the development of a Tees Valley metro system. [130896]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department has no plans to fund the development of a Tees Valley Metro system and has received no request to do so.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will assess the merits of funding an extension of the Tyne and Wear Metro system to incorporate South Durham and Hartlepool in its network. [130897]

Mr. Tom Harris: It would be for the Tyne and Wear Passenger Transport Authority and Executive, and not central Government, to investigate the feasibility of any such extensions to the Metro system. The Department is not aware of any such plans.

Railways: Thames Valley

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, columns 2131-2W, on railways: Thames Valley, if he will place in the Library (a) copies of the information provided to his Department by First Great Western of their (i) assessment of and (ii) plans to meet passenger demand to and from Maidenhead and Twyford and (b) his Department's analysis of those proposals. [127989]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department does not publish contents of bids on the grounds of commercial confidentiality. The Department's analysis of franchise bid information provides the basis for further clarification and any subsequent negotiations with bidders. Publication of officials' assessments would be prejudicial to the department's commercial interests.

The Greater Western Franchise Agreement contains details of the franchisee's ongoing obligations in relation to capacity and is available on the Secretary of State's public register. The register can be consulted on application to the Department.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, columns 2131-32W, on railways: Thames Valley, what First Great Western's ongoing obligations are in relation to capacity as defined in the Greater Western Franchise. [127990]

Mr. Tom Harris: The obligation for capacity in the First Greater Western (FGW) National Rail Franchise Terms requires that the Franchisee use reasonable endeavours in planning its timetable and the rolling stock diagrams needed to implement it, to provide passengers with a reasonable expectation of a seat off peak and within 20 minutes of boarding during the peak period.

The Greater Western Franchise Agreement is available on the Secretary of State's public register. The register can be consulted on application to the Department.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 2 March 2007, Official Report, column 1574W, on Railways: Thames Valley, what changes to the timetable and consequential amendments were agreed between the Secretary of State and FGW during their discussions in February and March 2006 on the December 2006 timetable; and what changes and amendments were refused by either party. [130240]

Mr. Tom Harris: The changes which were agreed between the Secretary of State and First Great Western ('FGW') are set out in Appendix 11 of the FGW franchise agreement. The agreement is available on the Secretary of State's public register. The register can be consulted on application to the Department.

No potential changes or amendments in relation to the Thames Valley were refused.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 2 March 2007, Official Report, column 1574W, on Railways: Thames Valley, if he will set out the figures for the established passenger loads during the stated time periods for journeys from, and to, Maidenhead and Twyford stations. [130263]

Mr. Tom Harris: The data referred to in the previous answer are contained in the "Market, Service and Review Report" produced for the Strategic Rail Authority in June 2004. A copy has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Road Traffic Offences: Insurance

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on using Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and motor insurance databases in conjunction with automatic number plate recognition equipment to detect uninsured drivers. [130045]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 26 March 2007]: There has been good progress and I refer to the answer I gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for Warley (Mr. Spellar) on 22 November 2006, Official Report, columns 93-4W. Since that date the police are continuing to use automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) equipment to detect uninsured drivers with excellent results.

Road Works: Fees and Charges

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers local authorities have to charge utility companies for street works; and if he will make a statement. [130572]

Gillian Merron: Currently, local authorities do not have any powers to charge utility companies for carrying out works in the highway. A highway authority may make charges under s74 of New Roads, and Street Works Act 1991, if works are unreasonably prolonged.

The Traffic Management Act 2004 introduces powers that allow highway authorities to operate a permit scheme for all works in the highway, on which undertakers will be charged. Regulations have been drafted for the implementation of permit scheme and were the subject of a consultation that closed on 26 February. The draft Regulations will be revised to take account of consultation responses and will be laid before the House for debate this summer.

Roads: Accidents

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many road traffic accidents occurred in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex in each year since 1997; [130939]

(2) how many accident blackspots have been identified in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex; and what steps his Department has undertaken to reduce the number of accidents in such locations. [130940]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of reported personal injury road accidents in Eastbourne and East Sussex (excluding Brighton and Hove) in each year since 1997 is given in the table.

Number of reported personal injury accidents in Eastbourne and East Sussex, 1997 to 2005

	Eastbourne	East Sussex[1]
1997	279	1,989
1998	338	2,040

2003	343	1,811
2004	309	1,720
2005	306	1,703

[1] Includes Eastbourne but excludes Brighton and Hove

There is no standard definition for an accident blackspot. The assessment of local accident blackspots is a matter for the relevant local highway authorities.

Roads: Construction

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average cost was of building a mile of (a) motorway, (b) trunk road grade dual carriageway, (c) trunk road grade dual carriageway and (d) an extra lane on a motorway in each of the past 10 years. [124831]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table lists the average cost per kilometre in real terms of building motorways, dual carriageway trunk roads and an extra lane to existing motorways, provided by publicly funded major schemes for the last 10 years.

The ranges of cost reflect the different types of projects delivered in each year since 1996. Seven projects were delivered in 1999-2000, two of which included tunnels. One project adding lane capacity was completed in 2001-02 and the majority of its cost was in strengthening an existing bridge.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average cost of building a kilometre of road lane was in each year since 1997. [125978]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table lists the cost per kilometre in real terms of building road lanes on the strategic roads network in each complete year since 1997.

The ranges of cost reflect the different types of projects delivered in each year since 1997. Seven projects were delivered in 1999-2000, two of which included tunnels. Only one project adding lane capacity was completed in 2001-02 and the majority of its cost was in strengthening an existing bridge.

Rolling Stock

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to seek to release rolling stock stored at Eastleigh onto (a) Great Western and (b) South West Trains services; and if he will make a statement. [129355]

Mr. Tom Harris: Rolling stock recently stored at Eastleigh comprises two types.

Most are Class 442s which have recently come off lease from the South West franchise, having been replaced by newer trains. Angel Trains Limited, who own the Class 442s, will be considering how they might be deployed in future, though their relatively low passenger capacity means that they are not suitable for all routes.

A number of Class 158 vehicles have also been stored at Eastleigh. Northern Rail announced on 13 March that they had taken the trains on lease to help ease crowding on some of their busiest services.

South West Trains: Fares

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he was first informed of proposals by South West Trains for a new premium rate for travel; what representations he has made to South West Trains on the new rate; and if he will make a statement. [130527]

Mr. Tom Harris: The franchise bid indicated an intention to review its fares strategy including those for unregulated off-peak fares.

These fares are unregulated and at the discretion of the franchise operator, therefore the Secretary of State has made no representations to Stagecoach.

South West Trains: Rolling Stock

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has made to South West Trains on (a) the condition of existing rolling stock and (b) future requirements for rolling stock. [130528]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department is currently agreeing a service quality regime with Stagecoach South Western Trains. This will cover the condition of the existing rolling stock.

Stagecoach South Western's bid included proposals on their strategy to provide capacity to meet the franchise requirements as outlined by the Department for Transport. This includes an extra 10 vehicles to operate 10-car operation on peak time Windsor Line services.

Tolls

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff in his Department are working on plans to introduce a national road pricing scheme. [122802]

Dr. Ladyman: The road pricing team comprises 22 staff. The present focus of their work is local pricing schemes.

Transport: Lancashire

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much funding the local transport authority in Lancashire received (a) in total, (b) per mile of road and (c) per head of population in each year since 1997. [130738]

Gillian Merron: The following table shows the total funding allocated to Lancashire council in the local transport capital settlements in each year between 1997-98 and 2006-07 (inclusive) in terms of (a) totals (b) per mile of road and (c) per head of population.

Travel: Expenditure

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the percentage change in real terms of the cost of travelling by (a) private car, (b) bus and (c) train since 1997. [122746]

Gillian Merron: The following table shows in index form the costs of motoring, bus and train travel in real terms in each year since 1997.

Real changes in the cost of transport: UK 1997 to 2005 (Index 1997 = 100)

The overall cost of motoring has fallen in real terms by 8.6 per cent. between 1997 and 2005. Over the same period, bus fares and rail fares have risen by 14.5 per cent. and 5.0 per cent. respectively.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the exit figures were from (a) incapacity benefit and (b) severe disability allowance in (i) each Pathways to Work area and (ii) each non-Pathways to Work area in each quarter since the commencement of Pathways to Work pilots. [101792]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Children: Maintenance

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of child maintenance claims were cleared within 18 weeks during the last six months for which the Child Support Agency was accepting applications to the old scheme; and if he will make a statement. [122925]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 23 February 2007]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive.

He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 29 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what percentage of child maintenance claims were cleared within 18 weeks during the last six months for which the Child Support Agency was accepting applications to the old scheme; and if he will make a statement.

The Agency begins to process new applications as soon as they are received and continues until they have been cleared. Any applications that have not yet been cleared can be regarded as outstanding. The amount of work required to achieve clearance and the elapsed time it involves varies considerably depending on, amongst other things, the circumstances of the parents and how readily they cooperate with the Agency. As such, the Agency holds only a negligible number of completely unprocessed applications.

An old scheme clearance is defined under the following circumstances; if a maintenance assessment has been carried out; a parent with care has been identified as claiming Good Cause or is subject to a Reduced Benefit Decision; the application is identified as being a change of circumstances on an existing case; or the application has been closed. This differs from the definition of a new scheme clearance, which also includes further work in agreeing and setting up a collection schedule following the completion of a maintenance calculation.

68 per cent of child maintenance claims received on the old scheme in the period from 1st September 2002 to 28th February 2003, the last six months for which the Child Support Agency was accepting applications to the old scheme, were cleared within 18 weeks.

As you will be aware, the Agency has committed in its Operational Improvement Plan, published in February 2006, to improve performance in this area such that 80 per cent of new applications will be cleared within 18 weeks of receipt by March 2008.

Council Tax: Fraud

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the amount of money lost to council tax benefit fraud in the financial year (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06 and (c) 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [130183]

Mr. Plaskitt: Council tax benefit is similar to housing benefit in both regulations and administration. The following table shows estimated overpaid expenditure for council tax benefit by applying the proportion of expenditure that was overpaid for housing benefit, to the total expenditure on council tax benefit.

Estimated overpayment due to fraud in council tax benefit

	Percentage of expenditure	Overpaid £ million
2004-5	1.3	50

Departmental Websites

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to introduce charges for employers posting adverts on the JobCentre Plus website. [118784]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 29 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question on whether he plans to introduce charges for employers posting adverts on the Jobcentre Plus website. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

There are no plans to charge employers for posting their job vacancies on the Jobcentre Plus website.

The basis of our employer strategy is that we offer enhanced services to those employers who best support our aim to help disadvantaged customers.

I hope this is helpful.

Disability Living Allowance: Fraud

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many prosecutions his Department has instigated for the fraudulent use of disability living allowance in each of the last five years; how many of these prosecutions were successful; and if he will make a statement. [123867]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table.

Prosecutions for disability living allowance related fraud

	Number of prosecutions	Number of convictions
2001-02	68	97
2002-03	85	90
2003-04	60	80
2004-05	86	106
2005-06	198	195

Notes:

1. The figures include prosecutions for benefit and instrument of payment related fraud.
2. The figures for number of prosecutions do not include General Matching Service cases.
3. The figures for the number of convictions include General Matching Service cases.

The Disability and Carers Service, the agency responsible for administering disability living allowance (DLA), is committed to reducing fraud and error in DLA.

All allegations of benefit fraud are carefully considered and, where appropriate, referred for investigation to the Fraud Investigation Service.

Employment: Islam

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to increase the number of Muslim women in employment. [129065]

Mr. Jim Murphy: DWP does not focus its employment programmes specifically by faith, but instead focuses resources on disadvantage. Employment programme funding will be targeted on areas such as Tower Hamlets and Bradford where a large number of the population are Muslim.

Partners' Outreach for Ethnic Minorities, an outreach service which started in February 2007, aims to test ways to improve support for people from ethnic minorities who are disengaged from the labour market and unlikely to use mainstream Jobcentre Plus services. It is targeting Pakistani, Bangladeshi and Somali partners in low income households. The target group includes a high proportion of women who are predominantly Muslim. It is available in London, Birmingham, Manchester, Bradford, Leeds and Leicester, the cities identified in the National Employment Panel's 2005 report 'Enterprising people: Enterprising places'.

Housing Benefit Fraud

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has spent on initiatives to reduce housing benefit fraud in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [118802]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information regarding the amounts provided to local authorities to help reduce fraud and error in housing benefit is in the following table.

	Amount (£ million)
1997-98	62.21
1998-99	38.63
1999-00	39.07
2000-01	35.11
2001-02	65.58
2002-03	73.75
2003-04	130.50
2004-05	128.44
2005-06	143.13

Notes:

1. A number of counter-fraud schemes have operated from 1997. These are the Weekly Benefit Saving Scheme, the New Incentive Scheme, the Security Against Fraud and Error Scheme and the Verification Framework. The figures include set up and ongoing costs for the Verification Framework in addition to money claimed by local authorities for work done under the Weekly Benefit Saving Scheme, the New Incentive Scheme and the Security Against Fraud and Error Scheme.
2. The main changes in expenditure between years can be explained as follows: A tightening of the rules in 1998-99 reduced the amounts local authorities could claim for counter-fraud work. The increase in 2001-02 was due to the replacement of the Weekly Benefit Saving Scheme by the New Incentive Scheme.

A further increase in subsidy paid in 2003/04 stemmed from increases in the rewards for anti-fraud work.

1997-98 to 2000-01 data are from the DWP Appropriation Accounts; later figures are from the DWP Resource Accounts.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many, and what percentage of claimants left incapacity benefit at the (a) four month and (b) 12 month stage of their claim in (i) Pathways to Work areas and (ii) non-pathways area, in each quarter since January 2003. [101793]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the tables. Figures for the latest quarter do not include any late notifications and are subject to major changes in future quarters. For illustration purposes total terminations for May 2004 increased by 33 per cent. in the year following their initial release.

Industrial Health and Safety: Cannabis

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of the regular use of cannabis on the performance at work of those employees on whom the health and safety of members of the public depend. [127806]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 19 March 2007]: No such assessment has been made.

However, in 2004, Cardiff university produced a research report for the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) on the impact of illegal drug use in the workplace. The report is available on the HSE website at www.hse.gov.uk/research/rrpdf/rr193.pdf.

Jobcentre Plus

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what checks are undertaken by Jobcentre Plus to ensure that jobs advertised by agencies via Jobcentre Plus facilities exist and are not attempts to obtain CVs. [125668]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 29 March 2007:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to reply to your question asking what checks are undertaken by Jobcentre Plus to ensure that jobs advertised by agencies via Jobcentre Plus facilities exist and are not attempts to obtain CVs. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

As part of handling agencies through our Employer Direct Contact Centre or via our Employer Direct on-line service there are a number of steps taken before we accept their vacancies. These include making sure we have a signed service level agreement with the agency, which, among other things, clearly states they must not use our services merely to compile lists of potential employees. Over and above this, we also require details of the specific job in question, for example terms, conditions and a reference number, and confirmation that a contract exists between the agency and the employer.

Once accepted, vacancies placed through an Employer Direct Contact Centre or Employer Direct on-line are also subject to a 48-hour follow-up call from the Labour Market and Recruitment Adviser to discuss and agree ongoing handling arrangements. If suspicions are aroused about the legitimacy of the vacancy, either at this stage or subsequently, for example by a customer complaint, this is investigated fully and could, ultimately, lead to the withdrawal of service.

Jobcentre Plus: Telephone Services

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many calls to the central 0845 608 8564 Jobcentre Plus number were made in each month for which records are available; what the average time taken to answer customer calls to the number was in each month; and how many calls to the number were terminated before being answered in each month; [127850]

(2) what the maximum cost per minute is of calling the central 0845 608 8564 Jobcentre Plus number from (a) a land line and (b) a mobile telephone; [127851]

(3) which sections of Jobcentre Plus have to use the central 0845 608 8564 Jobcentre Plus number to make inquiries with central benefits teams; and which sections have alternative numbers by which to contact central benefit teams; [127852]

(4) how telephone and fax numbers for central benefits teams are circulated to (a) Jobcentre Plus offices and (b) Citizen's Advice Bureau offices. [127853]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 29 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking about calls made to the 08456 088564 Jobcentre Plus number of the Department for Work and Pensions; the use of alternative numbers by Jobcentre Plus; and the circulation of telephone and fax numbers to Jobcentre Plus offices and Citizens Advice Bureau offices. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The telephone number 08456 088564 relates to Exeter, which we are currently converting into a Benefits Delivery Centre. The current telephony system only gathers limited management information. The information we hold shows an increase in calls answered each month from 6,426 calls in December 2006 to 7,385 in January 2007 and 7,770 in February 2007. However, the current system does not provide data detailing the average time taken to answer calls or how many calls were terminated before being answered.

An average call lasts about 4 minutes—the calls cost (set by BT) between 1-3p per minute (from a landline) depending on the time of day. Call charges from mobile telephones vary depending on the service provider.

All Jobcentre Plus offices in Somerset were given alternative direct dial telephone numbers for central benefit teams. In addition, an e-mail procedure has been established to allow Jobcentre Plus staff to contact the processing teams, to improve communication. This will be in place by Mid April. The telephone and fax numbers were shared with Citizens Advice Bureau offices by means of a leaflet issued in the week prior to the introduction of the 0845 number on 05 December 2006.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in how many constituencies more people claimed job seeker's allowance at the end of 2006 than at the end of 1997. [118900]

Mr. Plaskitt: Nationally, the number of people claiming jobseeker's allowance in Great Britain in December 2006 was a third less than in December 1997.

There were twenty-four constituencies in England where the number of people in receipt of jobseeker's allowance at December 2006 was greater than the number receiving jobseeker's allowance at December 1997.

There are no constituencies in Wales with such an increase.

Comparable Information is not available for Scottish constituencies due to major boundary changes between the two dates. However, for Scotland as a whole less people were in receipt of jobseeker's allowance in 2006 than in 1997.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the Minister of State for Pension Reform to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute dated (a) 2 January and (b) 9 February on a constituent from the Isle of Mull. [130679]

Mr. Plaskitt: The hon. Member's letter was replied to on 29 March 2007.

New Deal for Long Term Unemployed

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were on the new deal 25 plus programme for the (a) first time, (b) second time, (c) third time, (d) fourth time, (e) fifth time and (f) sixth time or greater in each month since 1998. [124440]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 1 March 2007]: Some people will return to new deal after leaving the programme, but this is inevitable in a dynamic labour market. New deal 25 plus has to be considered in the context of the people it sets out to help. People who suffer long periods of unemployment can find it particularly difficult to get back to and remain in work. The longer they are unemployed, the greater the barriers to getting work, and helping them into work is a considerable achievement.

The available information is in the following table.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many written parliamentary questions to his Department in the 2005-06 session were not answered wholly or in part on grounds of disproportionate cost. [113281]

James Purnell: This information is not held in the format requested. However, it is a matter of public record and can be found in the Official Report.

Part-time Employment: Females

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women were working part-time in (a) 1979 and (b) 2006; and how many of these were earning below the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions in each period. [123623]

James Purnell [holding answer 26 February 2007]: The Labour Force Survey (LFS) uses self-classification to determine full or part time employment status. The LFS for spring 2006 shows 4.6 million part-time female employees. The survey records 1.5 million part-time female employees earning less than £84 per week. Results for spring 1979 show 3.4 million part-time female employees, but no information on earnings was collected in 1979.

Pathways to Work

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason the tender deadline for phase 1 of the private and voluntary sector Pathways to Work pilots was extended to 11 April; what impact he expects the extension to have on service delivery; and if he will make a statement. [125347]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We have extended the deadline for phase 1 provider led Pathways so that potential providers can better take into account the impact of the introduction of the employment and support allowance. This does not adversely affect the national rollout of Pathways.

Pension Credit

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners his Department estimates are eligible for pension credit in (a) the UK and (b) Wales; how many pensioners in (i) the UK and (ii) Wales have taken up pension credit each year since it was introduced; and if he will make a statement. [128428]

James Purnell: Estimates of eligibility and therefore take-up are not available below the level of Great Britain, it is not therefore possible to say how many people are eligible to pension credit or what the take-up is in Wales.

The latest estimate of the number of pensioners entitled to pension credit in Great Britain is between 3.7 million and 4.2 million.

The latest estimates of the take-up of the main income-related benefits: income support, pension credit, housing benefit, council tax benefit and jobseeker's allowance (income-based) in Great Britain can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2004/2005". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Pension credit has been highly successful in reducing pensioner poverty and now, after housing costs have been accounted for, pensioners are less likely to be in poverty than the population as a whole. Since the introduction of pension credit, the number of pensioners in relative poverty has fallen by half a million.

We continue to make every effort to ensure that pension credit goes to those who are entitled to it. The table shows the number of households in Great Britain and Wales receiving pension credit each year since its introduction.

In Northern Ireland pension credit administration is a matter for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Pension credit household recipients

	Great Britain	Wales
November 2003	2,084,700	121,890
August 2004	2,592,590	151,980
August 2005	2,696,660	159,290
August 2006	2,728,150	162,050

Notes:
1. Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest 10/100.
2. Pension credit was introduced on 6 October 2003 and replaced minimum income guarantee (income support for people aged 60 or over).
3. Household recipients are those people who claim pension credit either for themselves only or on behalf of a household.

Pension Credit: Wales

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in each constituency in Wales were in receipt of pension credit in each year since 2003; and how much was claimed in pension credit in each Welsh constituency in each year; and if he will make a statement. [128425]

James Purnell: The answer is set out in the following table.

Household recipients of pension credit and the cost of pension credit expenditure for constituencies in Wales—November 2003 and November 2004

Parliamentary constituencies	Number of household recipients November 2003 (thousand)	Annual minimum income guarantee and pension credit expenditure 2003 (£ million nominal terms)	Number of household recipients November 2004 (thousand)	Annual pension credit expenditure 2004 (£ million nominal terms)

1. Expenditure figures are consistent with the published PBR 2006 Great Britain pension credit outturn annual totals and are rounded to the nearest £100,000.
2. The number of households in receipt are rounded to the nearest 10.
3. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
4. Caseloads and average weekly amounts for November 2003, November 2004, November 2005 and August 2006 have been used to calculate the annual expenditure figures for each constituency in Wales.
5. Household recipients are those people who claim pension credit either for themselves only or on behalf of a household.

Pensioner Poverty

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate (a) how many pensioners were living in deep poverty, defined as a household income below 40 per cent. of median household earnings and (b) how many such pensioners were not claiming the full pension credit or minimum income guarantee they were entitled to in each year since 1997-98. [113565]

James Purnell: The most common and internationally recognised threshold to measure poverty is income below 60 per cent. of median. We do not present information covering 40 per cent. of median income in our Households Below Average Income series as it is not a good measure of poverty. This is because households stating the lowest incomes to the Family Resources Survey (FRS) may not actually have the lowest living standards. Many people who report very low incomes appear to have high spending. Hence any statistics on numbers in this group may be misleading.

Specific information regarding low income for the United Kingdom is available in 'Households Below Average Income 1994-95 to 2005-06' (HBAI). This annual report, which is a National Statistics publication, includes the numbers and proportions of individuals, children, working age adults and pensioners with incomes below 50 per cent., 60 per cent. and 70 per cent. of median income, and the proportions in persistent poverty.

Pension credit has been highly successful in reducing pensioner poverty; since its introduction, the number of pensioners in relative poverty has fallen by over 700,000. Now, for the first time in a period of sustained economic growth, pensioners are less likely to be in poverty than the population as a whole, after housing costs are accounted for.

We continue to make every effort to ensure that pension credit goes to those who are entitled to it. It is more challenging to reach those entitled to smaller amounts, or to the savings credit only, who may be less familiar with the entitlements available to them. The Pension Service has contacted pensioners to encourage them to take up entitlement to pension credit many times already as part of extensive marketing activity. Over 70 per cent. of those pensioners who appear to have entitlement to pension credit have been contacted over five times already. And around 25 per cent. of customers visited about pension credit say that they do not want to make a claim. However, we are committed to improving take-up and are continually looking at further ways to target these groups and encouraging them to apply.

The information requested for pensioners in Great Britain is shown in the following tables. Estimates of entitled non-recipients of MIG or pension credit should be treated with caution. This is especially the case given that we are looking at the extreme of the income distribution and so are less sure of pensioners' modelled entitlement. Results are based on small sample sizes and have not been corrected for biases that may be inherent in estimates of entitlement to income related benefits—that is, they may be based on the data for those who appear to be entitled non-recipients but will not all actually be entitled non recipients and vice versa. Figures are therefore presented as proportions of the total pensioner population below the 40 per cent. of median household income.

Table 1 : Number of pensioners living in households with less than 40 per cent of contemporary median household income, and as a proportion of all pensioners, for the years 1997-98 to 2005-06, Great Britain

	After housing costs (Million)	As a proportion of all pensioners (Percentage)
1997-98	0.47	5
1998-99	0.49	5
1999-2000	0.49	5
2000-01	0.46	5
2001-02	0.51	5
2002-03	0.47	5
2003-04	0.51	5
2004-05	0.45	4
2005-06	0.46	4

Notes:

1. Figures are presented after housing costs as this is our preferred measure for pensioners.
2. The table shows number of individuals in millions, rounded to the nearest 10 thousand.
3. These figures are not National Statistics and caution must be applied because those people stating the lowest incomes in the FRS may not actually have the lowest living standards.
4. Estimates cover the private household population of Great Britain. The data source is the Family Resources Survey.
5. These figures are calculated using OECD equivalisation factors. Prior to 2002-03 they are based on a GB median and from 2002-03 it is based on a UK median. This is consistent with low income estimates published in the latest edition of Households Below Average Income. The GB median is similar to the UK median.

Table 2: Proportion of pensioners living in households with income below 40 per cent. of contemporary median household income who were also living in a benefit unit that is entitled but not receiving IS-MIG-PC, Great Britain

Percentage

	After housing costs	As a proportion of all pensioners
1997-98	36	2
1998-99	35	2
1999-2000	42	2
2000-01	45	2
2001-02	57	3
2002-03	55	3
2003-04	50	2
2004-05	64	3
2005-06	59	3

Notes:

1. Figures are presented after housing costs as this is our preferred measure for pensioners.
2. Estimates of the pensioner population cover those above state pension age (60 for women and 65 for men). The estimates therefore exclude some men aged 60 to 64 and partners of pensioners aged under 60, who may have been eligible but not claiming pension credit.
3. Estimates also exclude those cases where respondents have reported they are awaiting the outcome of a claim for a benefit and have been modelled as entitled to that benefit.
4. Estimates cover the private household population of Great Britain. The data source is the Family Resources Survey.
5. These figures are calculated using OECD equivalisation factors. Prior to 2002-03 they are based on a GB median and from 2002-03 it is based on a UK median. This is consistent with low income estimates published in the latest edition of Households Below Average Income. The GB median is similar to the UK median.
6. minimum income guarantee (MIG) was introduced for pensioners in April 1999 paid through income support.
7. Pension credit (PC) was introduced mid-way through 2003-04; therefore, estimates for 2003-04 cover those pensioners who were entitled but not receiving either MIG or PC. As this relates to the first six months of pension credit the figures should be treated with some caution.
8. For the purposes of this analysis, benefit unit based data (take-up statistics) were combined with household equivalised income based results (Households Below Average Income statistics).
9. Estimates for 2000-2001 and 2003-2004 onwards incorporate the results of a data matching exercise, which links the Family Resources Survey with DWP administrative data in order to identify 'hidden recipients' of MIG-PC, i.e. those people who tell the FRS they do not receive pension credit, but actually do.
10. Estimates are presented as proportions of the total pensioner population below the 40 per cent. of median household income, as the analysis is based on single-year survey data and the absolute numbers of such pensioners who were not claiming the pension credit or minimum income guarantee they were entitled to might be biased due to small sample sizes.
11. These analyses have not been corrected for the biases that may be inherent in estimates of entitlement to income-related benefits—that is, they may be based on the data for those who appear to be entitled non recipients (ENRs) but will not all actually be ENRs and vice versa—and so they should be treated with some caution.
12. The estimates relate only to those who were modelled as entitled to receive benefit but were not identified to be in receipt of any amount of benefit. It therefore does not include cases where a pensioner is in receipt of some benefit, but this is less than the amount they are truly entitled to. Including these cases may not give a reliable indication of full take-up due to the potential error that exists in modelling entitlement.

Pensioners: Social Security Benefits

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was paid in retirement benefits to (a) couples, (b) single men and (c) single women where the recipients were aged (i) 60 to 64, (ii) 65 to 69, (iii) 70 to 74, (iv) 75 to 79 and (v) over 79 in the latest period for which figures are available. [126047]

James Purnell: The information requested is in the following table:

Average benefit income in £ per week, 2004-05 prices

	Couples	Single men	Single women
60-64	68	76	120
65-69	178	129	130
70-74	187	134	137
75-79	186	133	134
Over 79	196	139	148

Notes:
1. Benefit income includes national insurance related benefits (basic and additional state pension, widow's benefits and incapacity benefit), income related benefits (pension credit, housing benefit, council tax benefit and social fund grants) and disability related benefits (mainly disability living allowance and attendance allowance).
2. Figures are for Great Britain.
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest pound.
4. Based on survey data and as such subject to a degree of sampling error.
5. Benefit income is self-reported and consequently can be misreported.
6. The breakdown by age for couples is by the age of the man.
7. The amounts for 60-64 year old couples and single men are lower than for older age groups because 60-64 year old men are not entitled to state pension.

Pensions: EC Law

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the extent to which the Government's policies on pension protection (a) have been and (b) are compliant with EU Council Directive 80/987/EEC of 20 October 1980; and if he will make a statement. [121445]

James Purnell: I refer the hon. member to the Secretary of State's written statement on occupational pensions of 28 March 2007.

Pensions: Call Centres

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of calls to the pension application hotline (a) were answered, (b) received an engaged tone and (c) went unanswered in the last period for which figures are available. [130555]

James Purnell: The Pension Service has two contact centres responsible for taking applications over the telephone. The pension credit application line takes applications for pension credit, and applications for state pension are taken by the Retirement Pension Teleclaim centre.

The latest period for which figures are available for the pension credit application line (PCAL) and for the Retirement Pension Teleclaim Centre (RPTC) is 1 February 2007 to 28 February 2007. A call receiving an engaged tone does not reach the centre and is not therefore available to be answered. A call cannot be answered until it reaches the advisor queue, the percentages quoted are in relation to the calls available to be answered. The information is contained in the following table

1 to 28 February 2007	Percentage of calls which received an engaged tone (these calls did not reach the centre) (b)	Percentage of calls available to be answered which were answered (a)	Percentage of calls available to be answered which were abandoned by the customer (c)

Post Office Card Account

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with representatives of the banking industry on the development of the new Post Office card account; and if he will make a statement. [130191]

Mr. Plaskitt: My officials regularly meet with representatives of the banking industry to discuss issues of mutual interest, including wider developments in the banking world.

The Government have decided that there will be a new service after 2010 when the contract for the Post Office card account ends. In accordance with the EU procurement rules. We will tender competitively for this product and a notice will be placed in the Official Journal of the European Union shortly.

Social Fund

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the effect of centralisation of Social Fund processing on (a) service to the public and (b) debt recovery; and on what evidence his assessment is based; [130177]

(2) how many calls to the Social Fund system have been (a) received, (b) answered and (c) completed in each office dealing with Social Fund applications. [130179]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie dated 29 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the centralisation of Social Fund processing and calls to the Social Fund system. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The centralisation of Social Fund is being undertaken on a roll-out basis and is not due for completion until March 2008. Once this schedule is complete Social Fund will be processed from 20 sites throughout the country. As we are only halfway through this process (with some of the rolled-out offices still to migrate Social Fund work into their sites), it is too early to make an assessment of the impact of centralisation. The decision to centralise this activity was to address performance variation and to concentrate our staff expertise to improve service to our customers.

The revised standard operating model was introduced recently. This makes our service more accessible to our customers because our customers can complete the process in a single call. As a result we have seen an increase in Social Fund applications and payments and a widening of access to the Fund.

The debt recovery process remains the same for centralised and non centralised offices.

As the modernisation programme for advanced telephony is still underway, we do not have management information giving the number of calls received, answered and completed in Social Fund sites.

State Retirement Pensions

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what impact he expects the Pensions Bill to have on the returns delivered by the financial markets to pensioners over the expected life of those expected to contribute under its proposed arrangements. [127520]

James Purnell: The introduction of personal accounts will enable more people to benefit from investment returns in financial markets and to receive higher incomes in retirement. We expect approximately £4 billion-£5 billion of additional savings per year as a result of personal accounts.

The impact on financial markets of such a savings increase is likely to be limited. Funds under management in personal accounts are expected to be invested in a diversified portfolio and are expected to be small compared to existing financial markets. As a result, we would not expect the rates of return delivered by the financial markets to pensioners to be affected significantly by the introduction of personal accounts.

Welfare to Work: Reform

Mr. Raffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department assisted David Freud on the Welfare to Work Review. [127740]

Mr. Jim Murphy: David Freud involved officials from across the Department in his review and was supported by a secretariat of three officials on a full-time basis and two officials on a part-time basis.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Building Regulations: Prosecutions

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many (a) charges and (b) convictions there were for contraventions of building regulations in (i) Basingstoke and Deane Borough, (ii) Hampshire and (iii) England in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [130517]

Angela E. Smith: As building control is a fully devolved service under the Building Act 1984, no central records are kept of charges or convictions arising from non-compliance with building regulations.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the effect of council tax increases since 1997 on pensioners. [104035]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 19 April 2007, Official Report, column 653W, given to the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Holloway).

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, what assessment she has made of the potential for reductions in council tax arising from proposals from shire counties for unitary authorities based on (a) county councils and (b) district councils. [129852]

Mr. Woolas: If implemented, the unitary proposals that we are consulting on have the potential of delivering savings of up to around £200 million per annum. It will be for those local authorities whose bids are implemented to decide whether they use any part of those savings to reduce council tax.

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the cost of the council tax revaluation in England; and if she will make a statement. [130119]

Mr. Woolas: The Government will stand by their commitment not to revalue during the lifetime of this Parliament. With the forthcoming three-year settlement for local government concluding in 2010-11 it would not expect to consider revaluation before this date. Even at this point there would need to be clear benefits given the costs to households that could be involved. It is not possible at this stage to estimate what the costs of a future revaluation would be.

Council Tax: Inspections

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what progress has been made on proposals to give local authorities the power to authorise council tax inspectors to enter private properties; what qualifications such an inspector will require; and what powers they will be granted. [130525]

Mr. Woolas: There are no such proposals. The Valuation Office Agency is a central Government Agency and its listing officers have the same powers of entry for the purposes of valuing homes for council tax that they were given when council tax was introduced in 1993. There have been no changes since then and we have no intention of making any changes in the future.

Council Tax: Valuation

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2153W, on council tax: valuation, what property performance indicators local authorities are encouraged to collect. [128617]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the Communities and Local Government website at:

www.local.communities.gov.uk/finance/capital/data/guidanc3.pdf

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, pursuant to the ministerial statement of 20 February 2007, Official Report, columns 13-7WS, on departmental expenditure limits, what the reason was for the transfer of (a) £104,000 from the Capacity Building to the Standards Board and (b) £300,000 from Bellwin to the Valuation Tribunal Service. [129260]

Angela E. Smith: The increase for the Valuation Tribunal Service is primarily to help cover costs of finding new premises for the Service's Peterborough office.

The increase for the Standards Board for England is to support the ongoing implementation of the code of conduct.

East of England Plan

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what date she gave responsibility for the East of England Plan to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Heeley. [124282]

Meg Munn: The Secretary of State has overall responsibility for decisions taken under Planning Acts. The Regional Assembly for the East of England published the draft East of England Plan on 8 December 2004 which was subject to an independent Examination in Public from 1 November 2005 until the 3 March 2006. The Examination in Public report was published on 22 June 2006.

Procedures and arrangements for the Ministerial phase of decisions on this round of RSSs were considered and set out in October, in advance of the first decisions needing to be taken, with the responsibility for decisions on the East of England Plan being delegated to me. The first decisions on the East of England Plan were taken by me in November.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government to which Minister the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State the hon. Member for Sheffield, Heeley reports on matters concerning housing and planning in the East of England region. [124863]

Meg Munn: I am the Minister responsible for planning case work and the Regional Spatial Strategy in the East of England region, acting on behalf of the Secretary of State.

Equality

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will bring forward a Single Equality Bill. [126245]

Mr. Woolas: Proposals for the Single Equality Bill will be published in a Green Paper for public consultation, shortly.

Housing: Subsidies

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) which local authorities are eligible for housing revenue account subsidy; and how much was granted to each eligible local authority in each year for which there are records; [127669]

(2) how much each local authority in England paid back to the Exchequer from their housing revenue account in each year since 1990. [127670]

Yvette Cooper: I have placed the information requested in the Library of the House in a form of a table showing the amount of positive and negative housing revenue account subsidy entitlement for every eligible authority since 1994-95. Earlier information can only be retrieved at disproportionate cost.

The definition of negative subsidy was changed by the Local Government Act 2003, which came into force on 1 April 2004. The figures given are directly comparable, though the terminology changed between the financial years.

In the most recent year for which audited data are available (2005-06), the Exchequer made an annual contribution of over £200 million.

Housing: Valuation

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Valuation Office Agency's (VOA) definition of an outbuilding is for the purposes of dwellinghouse code 14 as published in VOA document IT IA 180303. [128408]

Mr. Woolas: The VOA has no rigid definition.

Key Workers

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) when she expects to answer question 122428, on key worker homes, tabled by the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green on 20 February; [130619]

(2) when she expects to answer question number 122392, on homes for key workers, tabled by the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green on 20 February. [130620]

Yvette Cooper: I apologise for the delay in responding to the hon. Member's questions.

I will answer them shortly.

Local Enterprise Growth Initiative

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what the budget is for the Local Enterprise Growth Initiative in 2006-07; and what budget is planned for (a) 2007-08 and (b) 2008-09; [130125]

(2) what estimate she has made of the cost of administering the Local Enterprise Growth Initiative in 2007-08. [130185]

Mr. Woolas: The budget for years 2006-07, 2007-08 and 2008-09 are given in the following table. Please note that these figures exclude a possible third round of LEGI which is dependent on the outcome of the comprehensive spending review.

	Round 1	Round 2	Total
2006-07	31,196,136	n/a	31,196,136
2007-08	45,723,021	49,997,471	95,720,492
2008-09	49,132,091	53,913,129	103,045,220

The cost of administering LEGI in 2007-08 will be sensitive to a decision in CSR on whether there will be a third round of LEGI, and the timing of a third round. However, indicative costs for central Government administration spend for 2006-07 were £112,050, or 0.36 per cent. of the total budget for that year. I anticipate that administrative costs should remain broadly the same next year.

It is for local partnerships responsible for delivering LEGI to determine the proportion of their budget that is necessary and appropriate to efficiently administer the programme. We encourage partnerships to evaluate their spend against outcomes to help them achieve good value for money.

Local Government

Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, pursuant to the written statement of 27 March 2007, Official Report, columns 71-3WS, on local government, what steps she plans to take in the event of the proposal for a unitary authority for Bedford being approved to ensure that a satisfactory outcome is obtained for the whole of the county of Bedfordshire. [130775]

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 27 January 2007, Official Report, columns 71-3WS, on local government, what assessment she has made of the potential implications for (a) Mid-Bedfordshire and (b) South Bedfordshire of the approval of a unitary authority for Bedford; and if she will make a statement. [130792]

Mr. Woolas: We are now consulting stakeholders and partners (including all local authorities affected) on two unitary proposals for Bedfordshire—the proposal of Bedfordshire county council for a single unitary for the whole of Bedfordshire, and the proposal of Bedford borough council for a unitary Bedford. It is open to anyone, including the local authorities affected, i.e., Mid Bedfordshire and South Bedfordshire, to comment on these proposals.

They may choose to respond to the consultation by proposing support for the Bedfordshire county council unitary proposal or by proposing support for the Bedford borough proposal, and in doing so, may suggest that the remainder of the county also be made unitary.

On the basis of the information currently before us, it is the Government's view that should the proposals for a unitary Bedford be accepted then the remainder of the county area would not be a viable two-tier area.

If, therefore, following consultation, we decided to implement the Bedford borough proposal, it would be open to us to direct (subject to the enactment of the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill), the remaining authorities in Bedfordshire to come forward with a unitary proposal for the remainder of the county area.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what date Sir Michael Lyons is contractually obliged to deliver his report on local government finance to the Government. [103897]

Mr. Woolas: Sir Michael Lyons published the final report of his independent inquiry into local government on 21 March 2007.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 931W, on local government finance, what the total was of each component of the formula grant to each local authority in each year since 1997. [130416]

Mr. Woolas: Tables showing the components of formula grant, together with formula grant for all authorities for each year from 1998-99 to 2007-08 have been placed in the Library of the House. Formula grant comprises Revenue Support Grant, redistributed business rates, principal formula Police Grant, SSA Reduction Grant (SSA Review), SSA Reduction Grant (Police Funding Review) and Central Support Protection Grant where appropriate.

It is not possible to compare the data year-on-year as these are not on a like-for-like basis as there have been many changes in funding and function. For example, prior to 2006-07 support for schools was provided through formula grant; from 2006-07 support for schools is provided through the Dedicated Schools Grant.

National Association of Councillors

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, what funding her Department or its predecessor has provided to the National Association of Councillors since 2002. [129763]

Ruth Kelly: The Department has provided no funding to this organisation.

Plymouth City Council

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, how many people employed by Plymouth city council are paid £80,000 per annum or more. [129813]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally.

Social Services: Fees and Charges

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the reasons for changes in the fees charged by local authorities for care services in the last 12 months. [128619]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

Charges for residential care are governed by Regulations, the "National Assistance (Assessment of Resources) Regulations 1992", and statutory guidance issued by the Department, the "Charges for Residential Accommodation Guide". Councils must follow these Regulations and have limited scope to make discretionary changes to what is charged for.

Councils have discretion to set the level of charges for non-residential social services, within the framework of the Department's statutory guidance, "Fairer Charging Policies for Home Care and other non-residential Social Services, Guidance for Councils with Social Services Responsibilities".

Copies of the Regulations and guidance are available in the Library. The Department does not collect information on the reasons for changes in the fees charged by councils.

Social Services: Finance

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she made of recent trends in social care costs when agreeing the local government grant settlement. [130188]

Mr. Woolas: Policy responsibility for the provision and funding of local authority services in the area of adult and children's social services rest with the Department of Health and the Department of Education and Skills respectively. The Government have provided significant investment in local services, including in the area of social care, since taking office. Total Government grant to local authorities has increased by 39 per cent. in real terms since 1997 and this has delivered real improvements, with the Commission for Social Care Inspection reporting recently that social care services for adults have improved for the fourth successive year.

The Government looked carefully with local government at all their cost pressures in 2006-07 and 2007-08, and the ways they could be managed, and have provided an extra £800 million over the two years above spending plans.

We are committed to ensuring that authorities can continue to deliver effective local services. We are working with local government to identify future cost pressures on local authorities, and the ways in which these can be mitigated, as part of the comprehensive spending review 2007.

Valuation: IT Equipment

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans the Valuation Office Agency has (a) to use and (b) to trial handheld computers for (i) council tax and (ii) business rate valuations. [129195]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) is considering a number of ways in which it can reduce costs whilst improving its service delivery to taxpayers and ratepayers, and value for money for its clients.

Unitary Councils

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the effect on (a) fixed and (b) revenue costs of providing (i) school support services and (ii) specialist functions in the 26 areas where local authorities have put forward cases for unitary structures. [129591]

Mr. Woolas: In making their cases for unitary local government, authorities were required to submit a detailed financial analysis of the costs involved. These analyses, based on a standard pro-forma, included a breakdown of the existing and future costs of providing local authority services, including education. Education costs were provided separately for nursery and primary schools, secondary and special schools and other expenditure.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what account she plans to take of (a) potential and (b) existing economies of scale in the delivery of services in determining which proposals for future unitary structures should go forward. [129592]

Mr. Woolas: All proposals were assessed against the five criteria set out in the Invitation to councils and we announced on 27 March which we judged, on the basis of the information available, had met the criteria and should go forward to consultation. One of those criteria is that the future local government structure must deliver value for money and equity on public services. A proposal demonstrating potential economies of scale in service delivery would have been a factor in our assessment of whether the proposal met this criterion. We will re-assess all proposals against the five criteria (set out in the Invitation) in the light of the consultation.

Unitary Councils: Exeter

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the (a) affordability and (b) value for money of Exeter City Council's business case for a unitary authority for the city. [130763]

Mr. Woolas: The Department's assessment against all five criteria, including affordability and value for money, are set out in Exeter city council's decision letter of 27 March 2007.

This is available on the Department's website at: http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/121/DecisionletterExterCityCouncil_id1509121.pdf.

Valuation

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will break down by sub-heading the £193.45 million spent by her Department in 2005-06 on valuations services, as set out in the notes to the departmental resource accounts for 2005-06; and if she will make a statement. [130122]

Mr. Woolas: A breakdown of the £193.45 million spent by the former Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in 2005-06 on valuation services provided by the Valuation Office Agency in relation to domestic and non-domestic rating matters can not be provided in a meaningful way.

Waste Management: Cost Effectiveness

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether a saving by a local authority arising from moving from weekly to alternate weekly collections of household rubbish can be counted by the local authority as an efficiency gain for the purposes of completing annual efficiency statements. [128615]

Mr. Woolas: It would depend on the circumstances.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

10 Downing street

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2007, Official Report, columns 956-7W, on No. 10 Downing street, which hon. Members have accepted an invitation to nominate children to have tea at No. 10 Downing street; and what the date was of each such invitation. [130838]

Hilary Armstrong: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the right hon. Member on 21 March 2007, Official Report, columns 956-7W.

Civil Servants: British Nationality

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to how many and what proportion of posts in the civil service a certificate under the Aliens' Employment Act 1955 applies, broken down by Department; and if she will make a statement. [129722]

Mr. McFadden: A certificate under the Aliens' Employment Act 1955 may be awarded in respect of employment in any non-reserved post, that is, in 95 per cent. of the total number of posts in the civil service. Figures on the number of certificates issued during 2006-07 are still to be finalised. For information on earlier years, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to him on 27 June 2006, Official Report, column 314W.

Office of the Third Sector

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much the Office of the Third Sector has spent on recruiting staff since its formation. [130706]

Edward Miliband: The recruiting costs of bringing staff into the Cabinet Office, including the Office of the Third Sector, will be accounted for in the Department's annual report and resource accounts which will be published in the summer.

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment the Office of the Third Sector has made of the proposal from the Commission on Unclaimed Assets for a Social Investment Bank. [130707]

Edward Miliband: We welcome the contribution of the independent Commission on Unclaimed Assets in developing proposals for the use of unclaimed assets in bank accounts.

The Government will consult on the distribution mechanism for unclaimed assets later in the spring and will consider the Commission's proposals for a Social Investment Bank as part of this process.

HOME DEPARTMENT

British Standard 7971

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 7 February 2007, Official Report, column 970W, on British Standard 7971, what the cost has been of analysing the standard against the police operational requirement (POR); and what the cost of producing the related PORs have been. [130336]

John Reid: An estimation of the funds allocated over a three year period (2004 to 2007) for the development and publishing of the Home Office Scientific Development Branch (HOSDB) standards for public order protection is in the region of £200,000. A small part of this would have been used to assess the BS7971 suite of standards against the police operational requirement. The police operational requirements are produced and owned by the Association of Chief Police Officers with input from HOSDB. The cost of the input from HOSDB would be a small fraction of the £200,000 allocated to developing and publishing of HOSDB standards.

Cannabis: Young People

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to warn young people of the dangers of cannabis in the last 12 months. [130281]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are committed to informing and warning young people about the dangers of illegal drugs, including cannabis. Through the FRANK drug information campaign, we have consistently informed young people about the risks associated with cannabis use. Information has been made available on a website (with 1,100 visits to the cannabis page a day), in leaflets and via a helpline which receives around 1,350 calls a day. The message that 'cannabis isn't harmless' has been played out to young people as part of the FRANK campaign since October 2005 and information about the risks and effects associated with cannabis use continue to be a major element of the campaign through 2006-07.

Over the last 12 months, a comprehensive package of communications and resources has been delivered:

Around 25,000 cannabis information leaflets have been distributed to young people and their parents every month in 2006. In October 2006, three new leaflets were published with the clear message that cannabis is not harmless, it can affect mental health and contribute to the risk of schizophrenia. To date over 400,000 leaflets have been distributed.

New radio, TV and online advertising introduced from July 2006 carried strong messages to young people that cannabis can have an impact on mental health as well as having more immediate effects.

The Home Office, DfES and Department of Health have worked together with other key stakeholders to develop a drug education resource for pupils aged 11 to 14 and their teachers.

The pupil book, that accompanies the pack, provides young people with information about those drugs which research indicates they are most likely to encounter, including cannabis.

Working with the Department of Health we have produced a Mental Health pack that has been available to all mental health professionals since October 2006, highlighting the dangers of cannabis use and what can be done to tackle the problem.

The Home Office part funded the charity 'Young Minds' to produce a mental health leaflet for young people which was launched in November 2006.

In addition, DfES has also worked with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) to produce the joining forces pack which provides guidance for police working in schools and colleges in relation to drugs.

Crime Prevention: Charities

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with crime prevention charities ahead of the announcement to cut the annual grant to Crimestoppers by 10 per cent. [130150]

Mr. Coaker: There has been no reduction in the annual grant to Crimestoppers. This charity is funded by the Crime Strategy Unit via a strategic partnership agreement (SPA) which commenced in December 2004 and is valid until March 2008. In March 2007 Crimestoppers were informed that they will be granted £900,000 for the financial year 2007-08 as specified in the SPA.

Demonstration: Parliament

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been (a) arrested for demonstrating and (b) stopped by police on suspicion of demonstrating within the exclusion zone around Parliament since its establishment. [129655]

John Reid: Section 132 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 came into force on 1 August 2005.

The Home Office does not collect the information requested on arrests centrally.

The Metropolitan police warn all demonstrators in the designated area who have not sought prior authorisation from the Commissioner who are invited to stop demonstrating and given time to depart. Those who refuse to stop their unauthorised demonstration, having been advised about the provisions covering demonstrations in the vicinity of Parliament, risk being arrested or reported for summons.

Departments: Golden Arrow Communications

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions during the last 12 months clients of Golden Arrow Communications have (a) tendered for and (b) been awarded contracts by his Department. [130834]

John Reid: The Home Office does not hold and is not responsible for the client list of Golden Arrow Communications. All contracts tendered and awarded by the Department are done so through fair and open competition and in compliance with the regularity framework set out in the European Public Procurement Directives.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128257]

Mr. Byrne: The Department, including its executive agencies, has mail contracts with Royal Mail and Secure Mail Services Ltd.

Deportation: Iran

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had regarding enforcement of deportations to Iran in the last two years. [129342]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 132WS.

Driving Offences: Fixed Penalties

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were issued with a fixed penalty notice for (a) failing to wear a seat belt and (b) speeding in each of the last five years. [129922]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 27 March 2007]: Available information on seat belt and speed limit offences taken from the Fixed Penalty Notices Collection held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, from 2000 to 2004 (latest available) is provided in the table.

2005 data will be available later this year.

Fixed penalty notices issued[1] for seat belt[2] and speed limit[3] offences, England and Wales, 2000 to 2004

Thousand

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
Seat belt offences[2]	135	144	126	146	202
Speed limit offences[3]	942	1,151	1,407	1,895	1,924

[1] Covers tickets paid where there is no further action.
[2] Offences under the Road Traffic Act 1988 ss.14 (3) and 15 (2) & (4).
[3] Offences under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 ss. 16, 81, 84, 86, 88 & 89; Motor Vehicles (Speed Limits on Motorways) Regs. 1973; Parks Regulation (Amendment) Act 1926 - byelaws made thereunder.

Note:
Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Drugs

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of those charged with theft tested positive for an illegal narcotic on arrest in the latest period for which figures are available. [129979]

Mr. Coaker: Information in the format required is not available. Data on those testing positive for specified Class A drugs—heroin, cocaine or crack cocaine—are collected at the point of testing, either on arrest or at charge, but not at both points.

In January 2007, 39 per cent. of offenders arrested for theft tested positive for Class A drugs while 48 per cent. of offenders tested at charge for theft were found to be positive for the specified Class A drugs.

Drugs: Rehabilitation Centres

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will undertake an audit of the availability of beds for convicted offenders in residential rehabilitation centres. [130348]

Mr. Coaker: Figures relating to the number of these beds which are occupied by convicted defendants are not held centrally and an audit would not be cost-effective.

Nationally, there are around 120 drug and alcohol residential rehabilitation services in the community with approximately 3,000 bed spaces. These are available to individual drug misusers in the community, including convicted defendants as part of a community order with a drug rehabilitation requirement (DRR)/ drug treatment and testing order (DTTO) or post-custodial licence, where assessed as suitable on an individual basis by a qualified professional.

Fingerprints: Children

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals are being considered to fingerprint children under the age of 16 as part of the passport and identity card system; and if he will make a statement. [126202]

Joan Ryan: Section 2 of the Identity Cards Act 2006 clearly establishes that only those aged 16 and over are eligible to be registered on the National Identity Register and issued with an identity card. Thus, there are no plans to record fingerprint biometrics of those aged under 16 on the National Identity Register for the purpose of issuing identity cards. The records of passport holders aged under 16 will not form part of the National Identity Register.

To maintain the reputation and integrity of the British passport, we intend to keep in step with European Union regulations which require the introduction of fingerprint biometrics into passports by June 2009. At present, the regulation specifies no minimum age for the recording of fingerprint biometrics and discussions between member states are continuing on that issue.

As set out in the Strategic Action Plan for the National Identity Scheme published in December 2006, the Identity and Passport Service has anticipated that it may be necessary to record fingerprint biometrics for passports issued to those over the age of 11. Passports issued to those aged between 11 and 15 years are of a five year validity. They need to match the physical and technical standards of those issued to adults as the holders of such passports hold them when they become more economically active and move into adulthood, possibly continuing to use such passports up to the age of 20. For example it would be anomalous for one 19-year-old to have a passport which incorporated fingerprint biometric data and another 19-year-old to have a passport which did not incorporate fingerprint biometric data as it was issued when the holder was under 16 and not treated as an adult.

Police

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the salary cost is of the (a) director of the Policing Policy and Operations Directorate and (b) head of the Police Human Resources Unit in 2006-07. [129371]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 March 2007]: It is civil service policy to disclose salary details for senior civil servants at board level only. These are published in the annual Home Office Resource accounts. The director of the Policing Policy and Operations Directorate and the head of the Police Human Resources Unit are not board level posts.

Prison Service Staff

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of senior operational managers in the Prison Service are from ethnic minority groups. [129974]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information is available for all public sector prisons and seven of the 11 private establishments. Together the Prison Service employs 341 senior operational managers, of whom eight (2.3 per cent.) are recorded as black and minority ethnic (BME). The base total includes two people who declined to state their ethnicity.

Prisons: Construction

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional prison officers and custody officers at each rank within (a) the Prison Service and (b) the private sector will be employed to supervise the new prisoner places announced as being available by 2012; how many of those places will be for (a) single and (b) multiple occupation; and how many occupants per multiple occupied cell this represents. [121214]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Staff numbers are dependent on the type. Decisions on the number of additional prison and location of prisons and whether they are financed publicly or privately. As the prison regimes are also still under consideration, decisions on the number of additional prison custody officers required, whether publicly or privately employed, have not yet been made. The number of additional staff required for each site will largely be dependent on the type of prisoners.

Nearly all new places to be provided by 2012 will be built as single occupancy cells although, at certain sites, there will be cells built to hold two prisoners. The final configurations have not yet been confirmed for all sites.

Prisons: Drugs

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were placed on detoxification programmes for drug misuse in each of the last three years. [129931]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table indicates the number of entrants to prison detoxification and drug maintenance programmes for the years 2001-02 to 2005-06. Full year figures for 2006-07 are not yet available.

	Entrants
2003-4	57,891
2004-5	53,903
2005-6	53,773

These data have been extracted from the Prison Service PSimon database.

Road Traffic Offences: Cross Border Cooperation

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department has had with the European Commission on cross border traffic penalty enforcement; and what agreements have been reached. [129264]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has had no direct meetings with the European Commission on cross border traffic penalty enforcement. However, research is being funded by the Commission's Director General for Energy and Transport (DGTREN) under the projects VERA (Video Enforcement for Road Authorities) and CAPTIVE (Common Application of Traffic Violations Enforcement). These projects were initiated to identify the steps that could be taken at a European level to implement a pan-EU approach to cross-border enforcement of traffic offences involving all member states. Officials from the Department and the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency have taken part in workshops to take this work forward.

Additionally, in January, the Department also responded to a Commission consultation paper 'Respecting the Rules Better Road Safety Enforcement in the European Union'. A copy of the response can be found at:

http://ec.europa.eu/transport/roadsafety_library/consultations/enforcement_20061106/enforcement_united_kingdom.pdf.

Serious and Organised Crime Agency

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) set-up and (b) transition costs were for the Serious and Organised Crime Agency. [125759]

Mr. Coaker: The SOCA (a) set-up costs are £27.28 million, made up of £8.9 million net additional resource expenditure and £7.73 million capital as reported in the 2005-06 accounts of the Home Office, NCS and NCIS; in addition to £10.65 million NCS and NCIS reported as core budget expenditure related to SOCA, which included the value of NCS/NCIS staff time spent on implementation and planning of SOCA work.

The SOCA (b) transition costs are identified by SOCA as being £33.5 million during 2006-07; £8 million being related to one-off costs and £25.5 million of recurrent costs.

Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when sections 71 to 74 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 came into effect; and how many times a judge has made an order pursuant to these sections. [128770]

Mr. Coaker: Sections 71 to 74 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 were brought into effect on 1 April 2006 by means of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 (Commencement No. 5 and Transitional and Transitory Provisions and Savings) Order 2006 [SI 2006/378 (C.9)]. Central figures are not kept on how often these provisions have been used.

Standford Hill Prison

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners absconded from HMP Standford Hill in each year since 1992; [130073]

(2) how many prisoners who have absconded from HMP Standford Hill were not recaptured and returned in each year since 1992; [130074]

(3) how many prisoners, returned to HMP Standford Hill having absconded, were dealt with under prison disciplinary procedures in each year since 1987. [130075]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 28 March 2007]: The following table sets out the number of absconds that have occurred from Standford Hill prison in each financial year since 1995-96. It is not possible to provide data for previous years as there are no central records prior to 1995-96. Data for the current financial year are provisional and subject to further validation as part of the in-year and final end of year validation process.

The prison service is currently developing a mechanism for collating recapture data. At the moment the only way of providing this information is for every prison to interrogate records to determine whether any of Standford Hill's absconders were subsequently received in any other prison following recapture and what disciplinary action, in addition to being returned to closed conditions, was taken. This could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

(2) how many prison places were available for adult female prisoners in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [129022]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Secretary is responsible only for prisons in England and Wales. Responsibility for prisons in Scotland and Northern Ireland lies with the Scottish Assembly and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Licensed Premises: Safety Measures

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the use of plastic glasses in licensed premises. [130126]

Mr. Coaker: Other than previous debates in the House and representations made by individual MPs on behalf of their constituents, no specific representations have been made by the drinks industry or other stakeholders on the use of plastic in licensed premises. The Licensing Act 2003 already provides for the police to apply for licence reviews and for conditions to be attached to licences. For example, that the licensed premises should use toughened drinks glasses and bottles. The Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 will in due course also provide a new fast track alcohol licence review process that could lead to such conditions being applied in cases of serious crime and disorder. We are also committed to reviewing the Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy for England that was published in March 2004, later this year.

TREASURY

Occupational Pension Schemes

15. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the cost of compensating those affected by occupational pension wind-ups. [130453]

Ed Balls: The Chancellor meets the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of issues including, in recent weeks the Chancellor's Budget announcement that the Government would triple the long-term money available for the Financial Assistance Scheme from £2.3 billion to £8 billion in cash terms, so that all members of pension schemes that were wound up under-funded due to employer insolvency will receive significantly more assistance from the taxpayer.

G8 Summit

17. Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is planning to attend the G8 Summit of Finance Ministers in Germany in 2007. [130456]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Robert Neill) earlier today, Official Report, col. 1636.

Taxation

18. Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the proportion of income a household on average earnings will spend on taxes in 2007-08. [130457]

19. Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the proportion of income a household on average earnings will spend on taxes in 2007-08. [130458]

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the proportion of income a household on average earnings will spend on taxes in 2007-08. [130454]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the answer given to the hon. Members for Broxbourne (Mr. Walker) and Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Hands) earlier today, Official Report, col. 1619.

21. David Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the burden of taxation following his recent financial statement. [130460]

Mr. Timms: Net taxes and national insurance contributions as a proportion of gross domestic product are shown in Chapter C of Budget 2007. The projections for the next five years are broadly unchanged from those in the 2006 pre-Budget report, and remain well below the peaks reached in the early 1980s.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to redistribute the tax burden. [130438]

Ed Balls: The net tax burden faced by a single earner couple with two children on male mean earnings has fallen from 21.2 per cent. in 1997-98 to 20.5 per cent. in 2007-08. After the reforms announced in Budget 2007 the net tax burden faced by this family will fall further to 20.0 per cent. by April 2009. Figures for the same family on half male mean earnings are 2.4 per cent. in 1997-98 falling to -14.6 per cent. by April 2009.

Financial Assistance Scheme

20. Mike Penning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the net present value is of the additional contribution to the Financial Assistance scheme announced in the Budget. [130459]

Ed Balls: The net present value of the additional contribution to the FAS is £1 billion. This represents an extra £5.6 billion when expressed as long-term cash expenditure. The extension more than triples the previous level of support, raising the total long-term cash expenditure on FAS to £8 billion from a previous £2.3 billion, or to £1.8 billion from a previous £830 million in terms of net present value. This is an extremely generous package of support that will ensure that everyone who has lost out will receive the vast majority of the pension they had originally expected to receive, and will benefit an additional 85,000 people.

Tax Credits

22. Peter Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer In how many cases of tax credit administration the computer system has been incapable of producing a result and the case has been transferred to manual management. [130461]

Mr. Timms: Around 34,500 households are currently receiving manual payments representing around half of one per cent. of households currently benefiting from tax credits.

There have been around 86,000 cases in total to the end of February 2007.

Children's Centres

23. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what funding he has allocated to children's centres in each of the next five years. [130462]

Ed Balls: Budget 2007 announced significant extra funding for Sure Start, childcare and early years over the next spending period. This will amount to at least an additional £340 million by 2010-11 compared with 2007-08 levels—over £1.6 billion by 2010-11. This is in addition to the extra resources that the Government provided at Budget 2007 to meet the commitment in the ten year strategy for childcare to increase the free early education offer to three and four year olds from 12.5 hours to 15 hours by 2010.

Assets

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether (a) he and (b) his officials have held discussions with (i) the Financial Services Authority and (ii) representatives from major insurance corporations on the treatment of orphan assets, with particular reference to distribution and reattribution; and if he will make a statement. [130482]

Ed Balls: Treasury Ministers and officials hold regular meetings with the Financial Services Authority and representatives of the financial sector on a range of topics. Treasury officials have met representatives of Aviva and with the policyholder advocate appointed to represent policyholder interests. The Treasury also issued a consultation on 29 December 2006 on the role of the policyholder advocate and has received a number of responses. However, day-to-day supervision of reattribution of inherited estate is the responsibility of the Financial Services Authority.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to ensure that shareholders in major insurance corporations do not receive dividends based on the release of orphan assets at a higher percentage than on the distribution basis; and if he will make a statement. [130499]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 29 November 2006, Official Report, column 729W.

Cost-effective Energy: Households

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date he assumes the next decade to end; and how he will judge the practical cost-effective energy efficiency potential of each household as referred to in paragraph 7.68 of the Budget 2007 Red Book, HC 342. [130021]

John Healey: The Budget set out a series of measures Government are taking to help householders improve their energy efficiency, with the overarching aim that by the end of the next decade—the end of 2017—where practically possible, all homes will have achieved their cost-effective energy efficiency potential.

Cost-effective action on household energy efficiency refers to those measures that soon pay for themselves in reduced fuel bills for example, this includes where applicable hot water tank insulation, cavity wall insulation, loft insulation, heating controls and draught proofing (see, for example, analysis in the Review of the Sustainability of Existing Buildings, November 2006, available on the Communities and Local Government website).

Customs Officers: Manpower

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many customs officers were employed in the UK in each year since 1995. [130151]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of staff in HM Customs and Excise from 1995 to 2005 were published in the tables to the Civil Service Statistics, available in printed form in the House of Commons Library and online at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/reports/index.asp

After this time, no statistics are available for HM Customs and Excise as a separate Department, and the figures refer to HM Revenue and Customs.

Departments: Air Pollution

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the carbon footprint of his Department, (b) carbon dioxide emissions from his Department's buildings and (c) carbon dioxide emissions from air travel by his Department's (i) Ministers and (ii) officials for each year between 1999 and 2006. [130290]

John Healey: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 7 February 2007, Official Report, column 1027W, to the hon. Members for St. Albans (Anne Main) and Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling).

Departments: Ministerial Policy Advisors

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions he was accompanied on official business abroad by (a) a special adviser, (b) one of the Chief Secretary to the Treasury's special advisers and (c) a member of the Council of Economic Advisers; and at what cost in each year between 1997 and 2006. [130286]

John Healey: Since 1999 the Government have published, on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. Copies of the lists are available in the Library of the House. Information for the financial year 2005-06 was published on 24 July 2006, Official Report, column 85WS.

Records for 2005-06 show the Chancellor was accompanied on official business abroad by special advisers or members of the Council of Economic Advisers on eight occasions, and the costs of their overseas travel is included in the annual list of overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers.

For information on special advisers' overseas travel for years previous to 2005-06 I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 16 March 2006, Official Report, columns 2411-12W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the relevant requirement of the Ministerial Code, paragraph 2.11, if he has more than two special advisers. [130289]

John Healey: All special advisers are appointed under terms and conditions set out in "Code of Conduct for Special Advisers".

As set out in the Prime Minister's statement to the House of 24 July 2006 the Chancellor has two paid special advisers.

The Prime Minister's statement also sets out that the Chancellor has one unpaid special adviser and has appointed a Council of Economic advisers, who are employed on special adviser terms, a commitment in the 1997 Labour party business manifesto. The Council is made up of individual policy experts who will bring their specialist experience to work on the Government's key policy priorities.

Departments: Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [130140]

John Healey: The Treasury has not made any such appointments.

Employment

Lynda Waltho: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to increase employment. [130455]

John Healey: The Government's measures to increase employment build on a platform of macro-economic stability and economic growth, and include continued investment in the New Deal, investment in skills and training, welfare reform to help people move from inactivity to work, and the National Minimum Wage and Tax Credits to make work pay. Employment is now at a record high, with over 2.5 million more people in work than in 1997, and the highest employment rate of the G7 economies.

Low Incomes: Housing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how his Department is working with counterparts in Government on providing more affordable homes. [130152]

John Healey: The Government recognise concerns over housing affordability, particularly among first-time buyers, and is acting to alleviate these pressures on various fronts including by tackling supply constraints; bringing forward public sector land for development; doubling the stamp duty threshold; building more social housing; and helping people into home ownership through supporting shared equity schemes. The Treasury is working with Departments across Government in support of this agenda.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1494W, on ministerial visits, in which publication the locations of visits by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury in 2005 to 2006 are listed. [128486]

Ed Balls: As set out in my answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 1032W, since 1999 the Government have published information on an annual basis listing overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 and the total cost of all ministerial travel.

The locations of overseas visits by junior Ministers are not routinely published. However, as stated in my answers of 18 January 2007, Official Report, column 1341W and 7 February 2007, Official Report column 1032W, I can confirm that I visited Israel and the Occupied Territories in December as part of the work Jon Cunliffe and I are leading on opportunities to support economic development to accompany and enhance the Middle East peace process. I can also confirm that I travelled again to the region on 12-13 March for the same purpose.

NHS Finance

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his reference in his Budget 2007 speech on 21 March 2007 to the £8 billion increase in the national health service budget for England in financial year 2007-08, whether this figure takes account of the private finance initiative debt owed by primary care trusts. [130030]

Mr. Timms: As stated in the budget, total NHS spending in England is expected to increase by over £8 billion in 2007-08. NHS organisations are responsible for how they spend their allocations to meet the health needs of their local populations. Where NHS organisations have invested in improved local services they must meet the costs of this investment, whether it is procured through public or private finance, from their allocated budgets.

Office of Government Commerce

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will estimate (a) the savings delivered to the Exchequer by the activities of the Office of Government Commerce (OCG) in each year since it was established and (b) the savings made on each OCG programme in each year. [107777]

John Healey: The Office of Government Commerce (OGC) reports against two Public Service Agreement targets, and the following tables detail the savings made against these two major programmes.

Value for Money

OGC reports value for money (vfm) gains in central Government civil procurement through improvements in the success rate of programmes and projects and through other commercial initiatives:

£ million

	Total vfm gains	Direct Negotiations	Joint Procurement	Reduced process costs	Gateway and other improved contract or asset management
2005-06	2600	806	484	79	1,231

The Efficiency Programme

The 2004 Spending Review set targets for the Government to achieve annual efficiency gains of over £20 billion and gross workforce reductions of more than 84,000 by 2007-08.

Progress is as follows:

	Efficiency Gains (£ billion)	Comment
2005-2006 - year one of programme	9.8 (by 31 March 2006)	Figure published in HMT CSR 07 document (13 July 2006)

Planning Gain Supplement

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what the timetable is for the (a) consultation process, (b) further publications, (c) introduction of legislation and (d) ratification and implementation in relation to planning gain supplement. [114368]

John Healey: The 2006 pre-Budget report announced that the Government will move forward with the implementation of the planning-gain supplement (PGS) if, after further consultation, it continues to be deemed workable and effective. In response to views expressed by consultation respondents on specific policy areas, the Government have published three further consultation papers on elements of the design of PGS and the new approach to planning obligations. The consultations are:

Valuing planning gain: a planning-gain supplement consultation, HM Revenue and Customs;

Paying PGS: a planning-gain supplement technical consultation HM Revenue and Customs; and Changes to planning obligations: a planning-gain supplement consultation, Department for Communities and Local Government.

The period of consultation on these documents lasts until 28 February 2007 and copies of the consultations are available in the Library of the House and from departmental websites.

The Government also announced at the 2006 pre-Budget report that a workable and effective PGS would not be introduced earlier than 2009.

Public Sector: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimates are of spending on public service pensions as a share of gross domestic product in each year from 2005-06 to 2050-51; and if he will make a statement. [130182]

Mr. Timms: The latest public service pension projections covering a 50-year horizon were published by HM Treasury in the 2006 Long-Term Public Finance report, table 5.1. The report shows that spending as a share of GDP is projected to be very stable over the coming decades, fluctuating between 1.8 per cent. in 2015-16 to 2 per cent. of GDP in 2055-56. The report publishes projections on a 10-year basis.

Tax Allowances: Pensioners

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will hold discussions with HM Revenue and Customs on changing the personal allowance threshold for pensioners. [130113]

Ed Balls: At PBR, the level of the special age-related income tax allowances for 2007-08 was announced. These were increased in line with inflation to £7,550 for those aged 65-74 and £7,690 for those aged 75 and over. This year's Budget announced that the age-related income tax allowances will rise by £1,180 above indexation in April 2008 and that by April 2011 no pensioner aged 75 or over will pay any tax until their income reaches £10,000 a year.

Working Tax Credit

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many families are entitled to working tax credit, broken down by region and nation; and how many and what proportion of eligible families are claiming the credit; [130253]

(2) how many families in Stroud constituency are entitled to claim working tax credit; and how many and what proportion of such families are claiming the credit. [130254]

Ed Balls: Estimates of child and working tax credit take-up rates for 2004-05 are available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-take-up.htm

Take-up rates at United Kingdom level are shown in table 1. Take-up rates for working families with children at country and regional level are shown in table 9.

Take-up rate estimates are not available at parliamentary constituency level.

Youth Sport Trust

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether he expects the National Youth Volunteering Organisation to play a role in administering funds for the Youth Sport Trust programme he announced on 7 February. [129327]

Edward Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

The Youth Sport Trust programme is being funded by v following their successful application to v's grants 1 funding round. The Youth Sport Trust programme aims to provide technical coaching, such as refereeing and umpiring, to 16-19 year olds, creating over one thousand volunteering opportunities.

As the grant provider, v will monitor the grants made by the Youth Sport Trust, ensuring the funds are spent to agreed quality standards, deliverables, timescales and budget.

NORTHERN IRELAND

A2

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what procedures are in place to manage traffic on the A2 Bangor to Belfast road following accidents on that road; what assessment he has made as to whether these procedures were followed following the accident there on 16 March; and if he will make a statement. [129649]

Paul Goggins: During the period 1 January 2004 to 31 December 2006 there have been 119 road traffic collisions on the A2 Belfast to Bangor road, (between the junctions of Knocknagoney road and Abbey street/Brunswick road, Bangor). The vast majority of these collisions have been dealt with causing minimum disruption to the motoring public.

The nature of this route is such that there is almost constant congestion during rush hour; unfortunately any collision or road closure inevitably results in that congestion becoming extreme. The options available to relieve this route are limited and incapable of coping efficiently with diversions.

A serious road traffic collision occurred on the A2 Bangor to Belfast road at approximately 7.45 am on 16 March 2007.

The collision, which was close to the Culloden Hotel, involved four vehicles and blocked both Belfast bound and Bangor bound traffic lanes. In this regard it was necessary to implement a closure of the road in both directions.

All available police resources were tasked to the area to deal with the accident investigation, assist with the casualties and manage the necessary diversions to keep traffic disruption to a minimum.

In addition the Northern Ireland fire and rescue service and the Northern Ireland ambulance service attended the scene.

Debris and a petrol spillage resulted on the road that required the attendance of DRD Roads Service before the route could be safely re-opened.

Police reopened the road on a phased basis as soon as was practically possible, with one Bangor bound traffic lane being reopened initially, followed by the second Bangor bound traffic lane, followed by both Belfast bound traffic lanes.

Full use was made of local media to advise motorists of the incident and text alerts were circulated to members of a local community information network scheme.

Police in North Down are reviewing this incident and a further serious road traffic collision, which occurred in the same vicinity to ascertain if there are any learning points.

The procedure to deal with any road traffic collision will be dependent on the prevailing circumstances and the PSNI made every effort to deal with the incident on 16 March 2007 in a professional, effective and efficient manner and return the area to normality as quickly as possible.

Any disruption to traffic flow and inconvenience to motorists is regrettable; however the primary policing objectives of the protection of life and property must be the paramount and overriding considerations in response to this type of incident.

Community Support Officers

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police community support officers he expects to be employed in each police district command unit area following their introduction in Northern Ireland. [129513]

Paul Goggins: The deployment of PCSOs across police district command units is an operational matter for the chief constable. I am advised by the chief constable that a number of options for the deployment of PCSOs are currently being discussed but no decision on this has yet been taken.

Public Appointments: Former Members

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [130149]

Mr. Hanson: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and publicised in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. This shows that the following hon. Member who left Parliament in 2005 has since been appointed to two public bodies. The information requested is shown in the following table.

Name	Party	Appointing Authority
Mr. Roy Beggs Senior	Ulster Unionist Party	Re-appointed on 1 July 2005 to the North Eastern Education and Library Board by the Department of Education (DE) with the approval of the appropriate Minister
Mr. Roy Beggs Senior	Ulster Unionist Party	Appointed on 20 January 2006 to the Drainage Council for Northern Ireland by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) with the approval of the appropriate Minister

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of electoral malpractice were reported by the police to the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland in each year since 2000. [129412]

Paul Goggins: The Director of Public Prosecutions received reports of eight offences relating to electoral malpractice from the PSNI since 2000:

three offences in 2005 (one defendant);
two offences in 2002 (one defendant);
one offence in 2001 (one defendant);
two offences in 2000 (one defendant).

Elections: Proof of Identity

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of people turned away from polling stations in each constituency in Northern Ireland on 7 March for not having the correct identification. [127131]

Mr. Hanson: The following table provides a breakdown by constituency of how many people were turned away from the polling station for not producing the correct photographic identification at the Assembly elections held on 7 March. It also provides a further breakdown of the types of invalid identification which were produced.

The total number of people turned away at polling stations for having the incorrect identification was 4,161 out of a total of 700,699 who turned up to vote (0.6 per cent.). It is not known whether these people returned with the correct identification. This compares with the 3,493 out of 702,249 people turned away for the same reason for the 2003 Assembly election.

Energy Policy Progress Review

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in relation to the Energy Review. [129664]

Maria Eagle: Following on from the Energy Review of July 2006, "The Energy Challenge", the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) is currently preparing a UK Energy White Paper. DTI has invited input from Northern Ireland on how the local administration is contributing to implementation of UK Energy Policy and the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment (DETI), has provided information on the current position and also future plans.

Invest Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much assistance was offered to existing companies in the Limavady borough council area by Invest Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [129777]

Maria Eagle: Over the past three years (to end of March 2006), Invest NI has offered £14,957,383 of assistance to existing companies in the Limavady borough council area. This has been broken down in the following table.

	£ Assistance
2003-04	4,924,670
2004-05	423,114
2005-06	9,609,599

Police Service of Northern Ireland: Telephone Services

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Police Service of Northern Ireland spent on external consultants in relation to improving call handling in each of the last five years; and what assessment he has made of the effects of such expenditure. [128027]

Paul Goggins: The Police Service of Northern Ireland expenditure on external consultants in relation to improving call handling in the last five years is as follows:

Table 1: External expenditure on consultancy in relation to improving call handling

Financial year	External consultancy (£)
2002-03	7,000
2003-04	—
2004-05	31,489
2005-06	30,062
2006-07 (To date)	—
Total	68,551

These costs were incurred by the PSNI, through its Information Management Steering Group, in establishing a Call Management project appraising how best to take forward call management within the PSNI over the next 20 years.

The spend represents value for money in effectively delivering the outline specification for the project in line with Recommendation 93 of The Report of the Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland (Patten Report) requires the PSNI to prepare and deliver an IT strategy that will ". .deliver fully integrated technology systems that are readily accessible to all staff, and should take advantage of the best analytical and communications systems currently available".

PSNI expenditure in call management is of the order of £40 million per annum. The call centre handling project is in the early stages of business appraisal.

Regeneration

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what regeneration projects received funding from his Department in each of the last six years; and at what cost. [128118]

Mr. Hannon: Regeneration (both urban and rural) has been funded by NI Departments through a number of programmes and projects as shown in the following table. Figures are presented showing resource and capital expenditure. For the first five years these figures are actual outturn (2001 to 2006), while projected expenditure is used for the current financial year (2006-07). It would have been possible to provide a response detailing each individual project only at disproportionate cost.

In addition, a number of projects have also been funded through the Department for Social Development from EU funds which have been recorded in calendar years. Under the Urban I funding stream a total of £954,000 was paid to projects in 2001 and £87,000 was paid in 2002. Under the Peace I programme, a total of £25,471,000 was paid to regeneration projects in Northern Ireland during the period 1 January 1994 to 31 December 2001. Under the EU Physical, Social and Environmental Programme (PSEP) a total of £34,000 was paid in 2001.

Tunes Plateau Wind Farm

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects a decision on a proposed offshore wind farm at Tunes Plateau to be made. [129780]

Maria Eagle: No application has been received in relation to consents that would be needed for the development of a wind farm at Tunes Plateau; it is therefore not possible for me to predict a timeframe for a decision.

Water Service: Standards

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many water leaks were reported to the Water Service in each of the last three years; and what the average length of time taken to repair water leaks was over the same period. [128114]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 28 March 2007:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how many water leaks were reported to the Water Service in each of the last three years; and what the average length of time taken to repair water leaks was over the same period (128114). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

The number of water leaks reported to Water Service from 2003/04 to 2006/07 is set out below.

	Number of leaks reported
2003-04	[1]9,845
2004-05	10,658
2005-06	10,289
2006-07	10,176

[1] The 2003-04 figure is an estimate as the information for that year was not captured in the same format as the other years.

Water Service logs all reported defects in the public water mains and monitors progress through a Work Management System. Repairs are undertaken by a combination of in-house resources and approved contractors and the times taken to complete repairs are monitored to ensure they comply with set targets. These range from 2 to 7 days, depending on the nature of the defect, and they are normally achieved. Exceptions arise as a result of restrictions imposed by the location and nature of the defect. Unfortunately, Water Service does not specifically record average timescales for repairing reported leaks and the information requested could only be extracted manually at disproportionate cost.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what targets are in place to cut the amount of water lost through leakage in Northern Ireland. [128136]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Katharine Bryan, dated 28 March 2007:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what targets are in place to cut the amount of water lost through leakage in Northern Ireland (128136). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

Leakage reduction in a network of approximately 26,500 kilometres of water mains and around 6 million joins in the network is a complex issue that requires significant planning and, to this end, Water Service has in place an active Leakage Reduction Action Plan containing phased annual reduction targets. The targets from 2002/03 are set out in the table below:

	Target	Megalitres per day Achieved
2002-03	291	291
2003-04	233	231
2004-05	205	203
2005-06	179	178
2006-07	169	On target
2007-08	157	[1]—
2008-09	146	[1]—
2009-10	136	[1]—

[1] Subject to board approval.

Since March 2003, Water Service has reduced leakage from 291 Megalitres per day (Ml/d) to 178 Megalitres per day in March 2006 and is on target to achieve 169 Ml/d by 31 March this year. We are currently undertaking a review of the "economic level of leakage", however, it is expected that the existing level of 165 Ml/d will be achieved by March 2008. The economic level of leakage is defined as the point at which it would cost more to make further reductions than to produce the water from another source.

The targets from 2007/08 are provisional and subject to ratification by the Board of Northern Ireland Water.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Broadband: EC Action

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the EU is taking (a) to advance broadband coverage in member states and (b) to promote the take up of mobile phone technology. [121066]

Margaret Hodge: With our strong support the EU is working hard to create a more dynamic and internationally competitive single market for broadband and mobile services accessible to all across Europe. Its current work is largely through the i2010 programme for the information society which was developed and agreed during the UK's presidency, came into effect on 1 January 2006 and lasts until 2010 with a mid-term review in 2008. The i2010 programme includes measures to improve the regulatory framework for electronic communications services like broadband and mobile as well as measures to promote innovation and inclusion including take-up in the less developed regions of Europe. On broadband coverage the Commission is working with a wide range of regional and other interests on the proposals in its Communication last year, "Bridging the Broadband Gap", and has been working with member states and regional authorities to enable public funding of broadband in rural and other areas in accordance with state aid rules. On mobile the EU is also taking action to reduce charges for roaming between national mobile networks.

The proportion of mobile phone subscriptions relative to population in the EU is 93 per cent. one of the highest in the world. In several member states, including the UK, there are more mobile phones than people. A comparable figure for broadband is not available for the whole of the EU. In the 15 older member states it averaged 16 per cent. last year compared with 19 per cent. in Japan, 19.2 per cent. in the USA and 19.4 per cent. in the UK.

Companies: Environmental Protection

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department plans to monitor the (a) effects and (b) costs of the duties upon directors in the Companies Act 2006 in relation to social and environmental issues. [127274]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 14 March 2007]: The Government will review the impacts of the Companies Act 2006 on duties of directors, including the references to social and environmental issues, as part of its review of the overall benefits and costs of the Companies Act 2006. This review will form part of the normal regulatory assessment process, consistent with better regulation principles. The review will involve close engagement with stakeholders who have an interest in the effects of the Act.

Departmental Gifts

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the gifts received by special advisers in his Department and declared to his Department in 2005-06; on what date each gift was given; what the estimated cost was of each gift; what was given; and what the name of the donor was. [117950]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 1 February 2007]: Any gifts received are handled in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Departmental Policy Advisers

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what notices of external employment were given by special advisers in his Department in each of the last two years. [117953]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 1 February 2007]: The rules for civil servants, including special advisers, who wish to take up other employment in addition to their civil service duties are set out in section 4.3 of the civil service management code. Such information is not normally made public.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department spent on (a) sponsoring newspaper and publication supplements and (b) funding advertorials in newspapers and publications in the last year for which figures are available; and what the topic was of each. [130009]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Details of such expenditure are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Digital Switchover

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of relative energy use of (a) digital and (b) analogue broadcast receiving devices. [129485]

Margaret Hodge: The Government through their Market Transformation Programme (MTP) have analysed the performances of over 630 televisions sold in 2004, 2005, and 2006 and have concluded that the difference in energy consumption between analogue and integrated digital televisions (IDTVs) is negligible.

The annual energy consumption of a television varies significantly with screen size and television type, and defining what constitutes a 'typical' television is difficult. However, for a 32in. widescreen cathode-ray television, MTP estimates that the annual energy consumption will be 292 kWh, and 310 kWh for a LCD screen of the same size. A 42in. (a typical size for this technology) Plasma TV will consume 746 kWh per year.

The total energy consumption of all UK televisions has risen in recent years, but this is not as a result of the presence of integrated digital tuners but a function of increased TV ownership, the trend towards larger screen sizes, and the migration away from cathode-ray televisions to other technologies.

MTP does not currently have sufficient information to provide a comparison between the performance of analogue and digital (DAB) radios. However, MTP has identified that many portable DAB radios are supplied with external power supply units which are less efficient—and therefore consume more energy—than those sold with comparable analogue products. MTP will be working with retailers and manufacturers to seek to address this issue.

As these are relatively new products, there are likely to be efficiency gains as the products mature.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many postdoctoral fellowships were awarded by the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council in financial year (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06 and (c) 2006-07; and how many are budgeted for the financial year 2007-08. Programme Making and Special Events Sector

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the value of the programme making and special events sector to the UK economy; and if he will make a statement. [126311]

Margaret Hodge: We have not made an estimate of the value of the programme making and special events sector to the UK economy, but we are conscious of its importance.

The Office of Communications (Ofcom), the independent regulator of communications, is responsible for managing civil radio spectrum in the UK, including the allocation and licensing of frequency bands used by the programme making and special events (PMSE) sector. As part of its digital dividend review, Ofcom published a consultation paper on the Ofcom website (www.ofcom.org.uk) in December 2006. The consultation period is open until 20 March, during which time all interested parties, including those with a specific interest in PMSE requirements, are encouraged to make their views known.

They have received significant interest in their consultation from the programme making and special events (PMSE) sector and are planning a farther consultation on this matter in the near future.

I do understand that the PMSE sector is one of the current users of the DDR spectrum which is being required to change its use and that this has cost implications. As such, a period of transition may be necessary, and fully understanding the impact of any changes on the sector is vital. Officials have, and will continue to engage with stakeholders and Ofcom following the consultation. By exploring the issues, and working together, we hope that a solution can be found which meets the public interest and ensures that the PMSE sector can access appropriate spectrum fit for purpose.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the programme making and special events sector regarding the digital dividend review. [126312]

Margaret Hodge: I have received representations from the organisation Equity. The Office of Communications (Ofcom), the independent regulator of communications, is responsible for managing civil radio spectrum in the UK, including the allocation and licensing of frequency bands used by the programme making and special events (PMSE) sector. Any representation on Ofcom's spectrum consultations is a matter for the regulator; any received by the Department will be passed on to the chief executive officer.

As part of its digital dividend review, Ofcom published a consultation paper on the Ofcom website (www.ofcom.org.uk) in December 2006. The consultation period is open until 20 March, during which time all interested parties, including those with a specific interest in PMSE requirements, are encouraged to make their views known.

Incinerators

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on waste incineration. [128707]

Malcolm Wicks: Officials of both Departments collaborate routinely and on a wide range of issues. These have included waste incineration matters.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding (a) the North West Development Agency, (b) one NorthEast, (c) the London Development Agency, (d) the East of England Development Agency and (e) the South East England Development Agency provided to (i) the IPPR and (ii) IPPR Trading Ltd in each year since their creation. Margaret Hodge: The following tables show North West Regional Development Agency's, One North East's, London Development Agency's, East of England Development Agency's and South East of England Development Agency's payments to the Institute for Public Policy Research (IPPR), their total grant in aid budget and the proportion of payments to IPPR as a percentage of their total budget from 2002-03 to the present date. I am informed that no payments have been made to the Institute for Public Policy Research Trading Limited by these RDAs.

Nuclear Power

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1778W, on nuclear power, which stakeholders (a) he, (b) departmental Ministers and (c) officials have met to discuss the use of nuclear energy in the United Kingdom since the publication of the Energy Review Report. [130291]

Malcolm Wicks: Government are taking forward development of the policy proposals set out in the Energy Review Report and is preparing for a further consultation on nuclear power. Formal and informal discussions with stakeholders have been a key part of informing this work. We expect to publish the Energy White Paper and the new nuclear consultation in May.

Patents: EU Action

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with EU counterparts on the European Community patent. [130485]

Malcolm Wicks: UK Ministers and officials have had ongoing discussions with the European Commission and others, following the consultation launched by the Commission in 2006 on the Community Patent and other initiatives to improve the European Patent system. Negotiations on a Community Patent have been ongoing for a number of decades, and have been complicated by questions around language and jurisdiction. As the European Commission Consultation in 2006 noted, there appears no imminent prospect of achieving the unanimity required in order to establish a Community Patent. The consultation aimed to find steps which could be taken to improve the European patent system in the near future, which would help us to make progress towards the long term goal of a Community Patent. We anticipate that the Commission will publish its Communication on those next steps in the next few months.

Phoenix Holdings: MG Rover

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in his Department's inquiry into Phoenix Holdings' involvement in MG Rover; what the costs to all parties involved have been to date; and if he will make a statement. [127002]

Margaret Hodge: The Companies Act Inspection is being conducted independently of the DTI. The inspectors are not constrained by any Government target date for completion as the Government do not want to impede the thoroughness of the Inspection. The Inspectors do intend to complete this inspection as quickly as possible, consistent with a proper and fair process. The total costs of the inspection to the Department as at 28 February 2007 were £6,557,614 plus VAT of £1,207,257 and disbursements of £340,999.

Post Offices: Closures

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will postpone the abolition of Postwatch until the end of the consultation on the Post Office closure process. [130367]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Discussions between Post Office Ltd and Postwatch are in progress and we expect to set out Postwatch's role in developing local area closure proposals when our decision is announced in May.

The Government have included specific provision in the Consumers, Estate Agents and Redress Bill to ensure that the new National Consumer Council has a statutory role, as Postwatch does now, in advising on the number and location of post offices and their accessibility to users. The provisions in the Bill are designed to strengthen consumer representation in the postal services sector.

We are working closely with Postwatch, Energywatch and the National Consumer Council to ensure that the new arrangements are implemented effectively and with the minimum of disruption to consumers.

Radio Frequencies: Licensing

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on (a) the proposal by the EC Radio Spectrum Committee to allow the refarming of 2G spectrum for 3G use and (b) how to address historic spectrum allocations in implementing such a policy in the UK. [127674]

Margaret Hodge: The matter is the responsibility of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom), which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the Houses.

Research Councils: Finance

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on the research councils' budgets of not authorising them to utilise end-of-year flexibility in 2007-08; [130432]

(2) what steps he plans to take to elicit the necessary authorisation from HM Treasury to allow the research councils to utilise end of year flexibility during 2007-08. [130433]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answers 28 March 2007]: The Department of Trade and Industry continues to have access to End Year Flexibility in the normal way and this will continue to be available to cascade down to Research Councils. My officials are in discussion with Treasury officials about drawdown of End Year Flexibility in 2007-08. An early consultation by DTI officials with the Research Councils has provided robust and realistic forecast spending requirements for 2007-08.

Science and Technology Budget

Andrew Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the science budget is for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [131024]

Mr. Darling: The science and technology budget this year is £3.4 billion, having doubled since 1997, and last week in the Budget my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced a further rise in spending to £3.9 billion in 2010-11; the figure of £4.9 billion referred to on 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1358, is incorrect and is in fact £3.9 billion.

Wind Power: Gwynt y Mor

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce his decision on the application by Npower Renewables for consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 for the development of the Gwynt y Mor wind farm. [129000]

Malcolm Wicks: I cannot give a firm indication of when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be in a position to reach a decision on the Gwynt y Mor consent application. The applicant is currently engaged in a programme of discussions with stakeholders about issues raised in response to the application. No decision will be taken until the applicant has responded formally to the Department on these matters.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received from officials following their visit to Ascension Island in March. [130394]

Mr. Hoon: Officials reported their discussions with the Ascension Island Council on new policies, including housing, to my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, on 19 March. Officials noted that it was difficult to reach agreement on some issues, but that agreement was reached on much of the detail of the draft housing policy; and that discussions concluded with an acknowledgement that there was more work required.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts are being made to engage with those living on Ascension Island on the future plans for the island. [130395]

Mr. Hoon: Before the recent resignations by councillors, the administrator held regular informal and formal meetings with the Ascension Island Council. The Governor also participated regularly in meetings of the council. Following the councillors' resignations, we are considering urgently how to proceed, and are taking steps to ensure that those working and living on Ascension Island are fully informed. The Acting Governor will issue a leaflet this week providing advice for those on the island considering standing for election.

ASEAN

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with ASEAN leaders on expediting the resettlement of refugees in the region. [129966]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any discussions with the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) leaders on expediting the resettlement of refugees in the region.

However, the UK works with the United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) on the issue of the resettlement of refugees, including those in the ASEAN region. Applications for resettlement are assessed by UNHCR staff against a clear set of criteria.

Burma: Democracy

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings UK Government officials have had with (a) the Karen National Union, (b) the Kachin Independence Organisation and (c) other ethnic organisations working for democracy in Burma. [130606]

Mr. McCartney: There have been no meetings with representatives from the Karen National Union or the Kachin Independence Organisation.

Officials are in regular contact with a range of organisations working for democracy in Burma.

Most recently, I met representatives from the Chin Human Rights Organisation, Women's League of Chinland and Kachin National Organisation on 24 January.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Democratic Republic of the Congo on the arrest and trial of Marie-Thérèse Nlandu and others; and if she will make a statement. [130232]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are closely following the continued detention of Mme. Nlandu. Our ambassador in Kinshasa has raised the case of Mme. Nlandu on several occasions with Congolese Ministers, the Congolese Interior Minister and President Kabila's advisors. He raised the case with President Kabila himself in February. Embassy officials have also been present during some of her appearances in court and visited her in prison last month. We continue to monitor her situation and treatment closely. International partners are doing the same.

Departments: Personation

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department has taken to raise awareness of the dangers of identity fraud among departmental employees. [130429]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 28 March 2007]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office provides advice to its staff on the dangers of identity fraud and internet security through its intranet security advice web pages, other publications and training courses.

Gaza

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the freedom of EU monitors to access the Rafah border checkpoint in the Gaza strip; and if she will make a statement. [128890]

Margaret Beckett: We, along with our EU partners, are concerned at the impact of the frequent closures of the Kerem Shalom crossing which means EU border assistance monitors have to withdraw from Rafah causing the crossing to close. The EU is in regular discussion with both sides to enable the Rafah border crossing to be as effective as possible.

We are aware of the importance of the Rafah crossing point to the Palestinian people. We continue to call upon both sides to implement fully the November 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has considered the possibility of stationing EU officials monitoring the Rafah border checkpoint between Gaza and Egypt on the Egyptian side of the border; what discussions she has had with her EU counterparts on this issue; what the outcome was of these discussions; and if she will make a statement. [128891]

Margaret Beckett: I have had no recent discussions about this issue with my EU counterparts. Under the strategic direction of the Political and Security Committee, EU officials are currently examining options to ensure the maximum effectiveness of the Rafah border crossing in the context of the possible renewal of the EU mission's mandate in May 2007.

Horn of Africa and Sudan

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2007, Official Report, column 823W, on the Horn of Africa and Sudan, whether any of the representatives of the parties to the conflict in the Horn of Africa and Sudan whom Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have met in the last 12 months are members of organisations included on the (a) UK and (b) EU list of proscribed terrorist organisations; and if she will make a statement. [121381]

Mr. McCartney: Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have met no representatives of the parties to the conflict in the Horn of Africa and Sudan who are members of organisations included on the UK and EU list of proscribed terrorist organisations in the last 12 months.

Marc Swanson

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 20 March 2007, Official Report, column 838, on Marc Swanson, on which dates her officials in Brazil have had contact with the (a) Brazilian Ministry of Justice and (b) local police; and what information was received on each occasion. [130426]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 28 March 2007]: Our consulate in Rio de Janeiro first made contact with the Brazilian authorities about the disappearance of Marc Swanson on 25 November 2003. They have continued to follow the investigation and remind the local authorities of our interest in resolving the case. Our embassy in Brasilia submitted a letter on behalf of Marc's mother on 15 August 2006, through the Brazilian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, for the attention of the Ministry of Justice (MoJ). Reminders were sent on 5 October 2006 and 14 January 2007. Following further inquiries we can confirm that the MoJ requested clarification on the case from the Secretary for Public Security (MoPS) in the state of Rio de Janeiro where Marc Swanson was reported as missing. The MoJ sent a reminder to the MoPS in February 2007. The MoJ informed us that the MoPS have assured them that they will intensify their investigation into the case, including further involvement with the police in the state of Rio de Janeiro. We will continue to press the Brazilian authorities to conduct a full and thorough investigation.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 6 February 2007 from the hon. Member for North East Milton Keynes on Mr. Ken Hawkins, a constituent, of Willows End House, Milton Keynes, MK15 8AZ. [130358]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 27 March 2007]: I understand that the hon. Member's question refers to his letter of 28 February to which my right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe will be replying this week.

Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1843W, on the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, whether any informal representations have been made (a) directly and (b) indirectly to the UK Government on Trident and the UK's compliance with its obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. [129945]

Mr. McCartney: No informal representations with respect to non-compliance with the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) have been made directly to the UK by another state party to the treaty. We are also unaware of any indirect statements to this effect. As stated in the 2006 White Paper 'The future of the United Kingdom's nuclear deterrence' and accompanying fact sheets: renewing the current Trident system is fully consistent with the NPT and with all our international obligations.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1843W, on the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, whether any states have made informal representations on UK compliance. [130776]

Mr. Hoon: We have no record of any recent informal representations by any states on UK compliance with the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. The Treaty entered into force in 1970. A thorough search of all historical records since then would incur disproportionate cost.

Pakistan: Human Rights

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Pakistan on its blasphemy laws and hudood ordinances. [130671]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade, visited Pakistan in November 2006 and raised the issue of human rights with the Government of Pakistan. He welcomed the adoption of the Women's Protection Bill in November 2006, which made significant amendments to the hudood legislation governing rape and adultery, as an important step by the Government of Pakistan.

In subsequent correspondence with the Government of Pakistan in February, my right hon. Friend raised the abuse of the blasphemy laws and the impact on religious minorities in particular.

We will continue to raise our human rights concerns with the Government of Pakistan, bilaterally and together with our EU partners.

Saudi Arabia

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if she will raise the case of Mr. Razig Gorji, his late wife and the safety of Hajj pilgrimage travel with the Saudi authorities. [129960]

Mr. McCartney: Following the bus crash near Rabigh in Saudi Arabia on 9 December 2006 when three British nationals—including Mr Gorji's wife—died, our ambassador in Riyadh met the Saudi Arabian Minister of Hajj on 10 February and raised the issue of travel safety for pilgrims during the Hajj.

The Minister explained that new measures to improve travel safety would be introduced from next year. These would include:

a requirement that each bus must have two drivers;

a ban to be introduced on all buses carrying pilgrims between Mecca and Medina, after 11 pm; and the development of a new train project between Mecca and Medina.

The safety of British nationals abroad is a priority for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and we welcome these new initiatives.

Sudan

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what reports she has received on the recent use of air attacks by the Sudanese airforce on civilian targets in Darfur; and what progress has been made with her discussions with allies on introducing and enforcing a no-fly zone in Darfur. [129876]

Mr. McCartney: The most recent aerial bombardment we are aware of in Darfur was on 11 February. This was reported by the African Union Mission in Sudan. We have condemned the Sudanese Government for mounting this attack. Although we are not aware of any aerial bombardments since then, the Government of Sudan retains the capacity to mount future bombing raids.

We believe the UN Security Council should impose further measures on those responsible for violating UN Security Council Resolution 1591. In particular, we are pressing for improved monitoring of offensive military flights in and over the Darfur region. We will be taking this forward with our Security Council partners in the coming days. We continue to consider the possibility of imposing a No Fly Zone.

Sudan: Peace Negotiations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the prospects for success of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement for Sudan. [130298]

Mr. McCartney: President Bashir and First Vice President Kiir re-affirmed their commitment to implementing the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) during its second anniversary celebrations in January. But these statements need to be underpinned by serious action. Although there have been advances, not least the formation of the Government of National Unity and the remitting of oil revenues to the south, major issues under the CPA remain outstanding. Of these, resolving the Abyei dispute, north/south border demarcation and initiating election preparations are among the most important. These pose a credible threat to the CPA's future and ordinary Sudanese people's belief that making peace brings about positive change. The UK continues to press for more rapid progress through its membership of the CPA implementation monitoring body—the Assessment and Evaluation Commission. The UK stressed the importance of CPA implementation at the 20-21 March second Sudan Consortium.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role her Department is playing in the negotiations between the Sudanese People's Liberation Movement and the Government in Sudan on boundary disputes to be settled as part of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement. [130299]

Mr. McCartney: The absence of an agreed north/south border has major implications for meeting key security and wealth sharing milestones. The Border Committee's work needs urgent acceleration to ensure this matter is resolved as quickly as possible. International partners, including the UK, stand ready to help. Through the UK's seat on the Assessment and Evaluation Commission—the international body established to monitor the effective implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA)—we will continue to press for the Border Committee to complete its work as soon as possible.

Deadlock on the Abyei Boundary Commission's recommendations must be broken. As an interim step, the UK, with partners, has been pressing the National Congress Party and the Sudan People's Liberation Movement to agree to establish a civil administration in Abyei to ensure the delivery of basic services to local residents.

Uganda

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has made recent representations to the Ugandan government on its relationship with the Presidential candidate Jean-Pierre Bemba and the Mouvement de Libération du Congo. [130513]

Mr. McCartney: We have regular high-level discussions with members of Uganda's government and have regularly raised Uganda's role in stability in the region. We have not made any recent representations specifically regarding the Democratic Republic of Congo's opposition leader Jean-Pierre Bemba or the Mouvement de Libération du Congo.

Our High Commissioner in Kampala saw President Museveni most recently on 28 February to discuss efforts to resolve the conflict in northern Uganda and concerns over the rule of law in relation to the detention of the alleged People's Redemption Army suspects.

Uganda: Zimbabwe

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the Ugandan government on its recent rejection of a Parliamentary motion to condemn human rights violations in Zimbabwe. [130512]

Mr. McCartney: Our High Commissioner in Kampala called on the Ugandan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 28 March to discuss the government's position towards Zimbabwe and to seek its support for an EU statement at the Human Rights Council condemning recent human rights abuses in that country.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects the EU Common Position on Zimbabwe will next be reviewed; and whether the UK will advocate a strengthening of the Common Position. [128587]

Margaret Beckett: The EU Common Position was renewed for a further 12 months on 19 February. The targeted measures it contains can be reviewed and amended by unanimity at any time. We will propose to EU partners that the key perpetrators of the violence on 11 March should be added to the list of those subject to a visa ban and assets freeze.

Zimbabwe: Human Rights

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by her Department to raise the issue of Zimbabwe at (a) the United Nations Security Council and (b) other United Nations bodies; what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of these efforts; and if she will make a statement. [129484]

Margaret Beckett: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade, condemned the government of Zimbabwe in his speech to the UN Human Rights Council in Geneva on 13 March. While there, he also discussed the situation with the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, who herself has made a statement. Our Permanent Representative to the UN in Geneva also raised Zimbabwe at the Human Rights Council on 14 March. In response to our concerns, the UN High Commissioner agreed to monitor the judicial process directed against Mr. Tsvangarai and his colleagues. We are also pressing for further action in the UN Human Rights Council.

We have welcomed the statement made by the UN Secretary-General. On 16 March, our Permanent Representative to the UN in New York raised Zimbabwe with the Secretary-General and Security Council ambassadors. As a result, the Secretary-General has agreed to arrange an urgent briefing on the humanitarian situation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has had discussions with the New Partnership for African Development on whether Zimbabwe has been (a) through the Partnership's peer review mechanism and (b) assessed for its human rights record. [130511]

Mr. McCartney: Zimbabwe has not been examined under the New Partnership for African Development peer review process, this is a voluntary process. But the Africa Commission on People and Human Rights has been asked to report on the human rights situation in Zimbabwe at a future session of the African Union's Executive Council.

Zimbabwe: Sequestration of Assets

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Zimbabwean individuals have been placed on the EU's sanctions list; which Zimbabwean institution each relevant individual represents; what the estimated value is of each individual's assets frozen under EU sanctions; and if she will make a statement. [128892]

Margaret Beckett: There are currently 125 Zimbabweans named on the EU's assets freeze and travel ban list. A copy of the list will be placed in the Library of the House. Another five will be added as a result of a recent ministerial reshuffle. All members of President Mugabe's Cabinet and ZANU-PF's Politburo are included, together with governors, heads of the security forces, election officials and others associated with abuses. In the United Kingdom, 42 accounts containing a total of £172,000 are currently frozen.

HEALTH

North West Ambulance Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect on levels of demand for the North West Ambulance Service of private sector clinical assessment, treatment and support coming into service. [129071]

Andy Burnham: Primary care trusts in Cumbria and Lancashire will discuss the effect on demand for ambulance services with the North West Ambulance Service over the coming months as detailed specifications for the independent sector clinical assessment, treatment and support (CATS) services are developed.

Breast Cancer: Screening

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women over the age of 70 self-referred for breast cancer screening in (a) Surrey Primary Care Trust and (b) England in the last period for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [129045]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is in the table:

Area	Self/general practitioner referral for breast screening for women aged 70 and over in 2005-06	Self/general practitioner referral for breast screening for women aged 70 and over 2003-04 to 2005-06

Cervical Cancer: Screening

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the reasons for recent trends in attendance levels for cervical screening by 25 to 29 year-olds. [124395]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2094W, to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess).

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of cervical smears for younger women. [128799]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Research carried out by Cancer Research UK and presented to the Advisory Committee on Cervical Screening coupled with 15 years of experience of screening has shown that screening women under the age of 25 may do more harm than good.

The cervix is still developing in women under 25 and during the cervical screening process, this development can look like cervical abnormalities, giving a false positive result and resulting in unnecessary investigations and treatments.

By increasing the starting age of cervical screening to 25, we are reducing the number of these unnecessary investigations and unnecessary treatments, as well as reducing the anxiety they cause.

The International Agency for Research on Cancer, an agency of the World Health Organisation, endorse the current starting age of 25 and recent evidence has show that treatment with LLETZ (large loop excision of the transformation zone), following an abnormal cervical sample test, can cause premature delivery in later pregnancies.

Women under 25 who are concerned about their risk of developing cervical cancer or about sexual health should contact their general practitioner or genito-urinary medicine clinic.

Cervical Cancer: Vaccination

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has any plans to introduce a national human papilloma virus vaccination programme. [129614]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 26 March 2007]: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) is in the process of thoroughly examining the vaccine safety, efficacy and cost-effectiveness evidence concerning human papilloma virus vaccines. The work is being taken forward by a sub-group of JCVI, with further work ongoing to evaluate whether the vaccine is considered to be a cost-effective prevention of cervical cancer and the impact that HPV vaccine may have on genital warts.

The sub group's advice will be reported to the main JCVI committee for further discussion.

No decisions will be taken on introducing these vaccines into the immunisation programme until JCVI has presented its advice to Ministers for their consideration.

Children: Abuse

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by her Department on rates of child abuse by women who have previously had an abortion; and if she will make a statement. [129521]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not commissioned any research in this area but child abuse by women who have previously had an abortion is not known to be a factor in the risk of child abuse.

Dentistry

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision is made for dental treatment for people in prison. [129895]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In April 2006, primary care trusts (PCTs) took full responsibility for commissioning all prison health services in their area including dental health services. PCTs are now responsible for assessing the oral health care needs of the inmates of local prisons and contracting with suitably trained and experienced dental practitioners to meet all reasonable needs.

Departmental Commercial Director

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Department's outgoing commercial director will be involved in the appointment of his successor; and what Civil Service rules apply. [108712]

Caroline Flint: The appointment process falls under the remit of the Office of the Civil Service Commissioners and the provisions of the Commissioners' Recruitment Code. The outgoing Commercial Director will not be involved in the appointment of his successor.

Departments: Manpower

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were employed by her Department on 1 January of each of the last five years; and how many of these staff were (a) permanent employees, (b) temporary staff and (c) contractors. [124003]

Caroline Flint: The numbers of permanent and temporary civil servants (full-time equivalents) employed by the Department on 1 January in each of the last three years are as follows:

1 January 2007: 2,256 permanent, 45 temporary;

1 January 2006: 2,323 permanent, 72 temporary; and

1 January 2005: 2,341 permanent, 73 temporary.

Figures for 1 January 2004 and 1 January 2003 are not available.

The number of contractors and agency staff (full-time equivalents) working for the Department on 1 January 2007 was 230.

Figures for 1 January for the years 2003-06 are not available.

Diabetes: Medical Equipment

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of people with diabetes who have not gained access to blood testing strips and blood glucose testing equipment; and if she will make a statement. [128716]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data are not collected on the numbers of people who have not gained access to blood glucose testing strips and blood glucose testing equipment.

Blood glucose testing strips are available on national health service prescriptions and are available free of charge to people with type 1 and type 2 diabetes whose condition is controlled by insulin or tablets.

Diabetes: Screening

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many diabetics visited hospitals and clinics in order to get their blood glucose tested in each year since 1997. [129393]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data are not collected in the format requested.

The table shows the numbers of people with diabetes who received HbA1c (a marker of long-term control of diabetes) or equivalent test in 2004-05 and 2005-06, the latest years for which figures are available:

	Numbers of people aged 17 and over with diagnosed diabetes	Numbers of people who received a HbA1c or equivalent test in the previous 15 months
2004-05	1,734,165	1,637,774
2005-06	1,841,571	1,776,415

The Quality and Outcomes Framework

Food: Packaging

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the merits of requiring food packaging to be tamper proof. [121087]

Caroline Flint: The substance and form of food packaging is the responsibility of food manufacturers.

There are no requirements under food law for packaging to be tamper proof. European Commission General Food Law Regulation 178/2002 requires that food should not be unsafe for consumption. Tamper proof packaging might help meet this requirement but this would be a decision for the business concerned.

GPs: Training

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) duration and (b) content will be of the training to be offered to GPs who wish to take on the role of GP with Special Interest; what hospital specialties she expects to be covered by the programme; what estimate she has made of the number of GPs likely to apply; and if she will make a statement. [128735]

Andy Burnham: The appointment general practitioners with a special interest (GPwSIs) is local matter for primary care trusts. The Department supports this process through guidance, including specific advice on the following specialties:

care for older people;

coronary heart disease;

child protection;

dermatology;

diabetes;

drug misuse;

echocardiography;

emergency care;

ear nose and throat;

epilepsy;

genetics;

headaches;

mental health;

musculoskeletal conditions;

palliative care;

respiratory medicine; and sexual health.

The Department has commissioned the Royal College of General Practitioners to review these frameworks. Revised versions will be published later this year as competency based specialty frameworks.

On training, the departmental guidance makes it clear a qualification alone is not enough and that GPwSIs should have acquired skills through supervised practice in an appropriate setting. Detailed training requirements are however a local matter and information on such training is not collected centrally.

Heart Diseases: Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will commission research into the relationship between levels of air pollution from motor vehicles and rates of heart attack amongst women; and if she will make a statement. [120485]

Caroline Flint: The commissioning of research into this area will need to be considered along with other research priorities.

A paper produced by Miller et al, 2007, on the 'Long-term exposure to air pollution and incidence of cardiovascular events in women', was published in the New England Journal of Medicine 2007; 356: 447-458 on 1 February 2007.

The Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants considered this important publication at its meeting on 23 February 2007 and are exploring the findings in more detail, including the need for further research.

Heart Diseases: North West Region

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with the North West Strategic Health Authority on the adequacy of sufficient personnel to operate myocardial perfusion scanners in the region. [128224]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There have been no discussions between the Department and NHS North West about the staffing of myocardial perfusion scanners in the region.

Hepatitis

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is planned in the next 12 months to ascertain the likely incidence in the UK of all types of chronic hepatitis over the next decade; and if she will make a statement. [129016]

Caroline Flint: The Medical Research Council (MRC) funds a portfolio of basic and underpinning research relating to the various types of hepatitis, which may lead to further understanding of the condition. Research specifically related to the likely incidence of all types of chronic hepatitis over the next decade in this country is not currently being funded.

The Health Protection Agency (HPA) is carrying out ongoing work to estimate the future burden of hepatitis C-related disease in this country. The HPA and the British Association for the Study of the Liver (BASL) are collaborating on a study of end-stage liver disease in patients who are infected with hepatitis B or C and on a pilot survey of the number of people infected with hepatitis C who are treated and treatment outcome in this country.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2007, Official Report, column 2298W, on Hepatitis C, what her assessment is of the reasons for the increase in the number of laboratory cases of Hepatitis C in the London region between 2002 and 2006. [129652]

Caroline Flint: Acute hepatitis C infection usually occurs without symptoms, and there are no laboratory tests to differentiate between acute (recent), chronic (long-standing) or resolved hepatitis C infection. Therefore, trends in the number of laboratory diagnoses reflect the number of individuals being tested, rather than the incidence of infection, and those infections identified may have been acquired years or even decades earlier.

The rise in the number of laboratory diagnoses of hepatitis C in London is likely to reflect greater awareness of hepatitis C and increased testing of individuals as part of the investigation of liver disease (including abnormal liver function), testing in known risk groups or as part of screening (for example for occupational health reasons).

Hospices: Finance

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to ensure that hospices receive adequate funding; and if she will make a statement on the future of hospice funding. [121029]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for commissioning and funding palliative care services locally, including the level of funding for hospices. It is for PCTs to determine how to use the funding allocated to them and to commission service; to meet the healthcare needs of their local population.

As part of the dignity in care for older people initiative, Ministers have recently announced a capital fund of up to 40 million that adult hospices can bid for to improve their environment.

The role of, and funding for hospices are among the issues which will be considered by the end of life care strategy.

We have announced funding of £27 million over 3 years for children's hospice services. The first grants were made in October 2006. We have also established an independent review of the long term sustainability of children's palliative care services (including children's hospices). The review is due to report in spring 2007.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bed days were occupied by patients with long-term conditions in each year since 1997-98. [123148]

Andy Burnham: Information on the number of hospital bed days occupied by patients with long-term conditions is not collected.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has taken to identify and promote best practice on the management of hospital lengths of stay. [130077]

Andy Burnham: The National Health Service Institute for Innovation and Improvement has published a number of documents that include advice on best practice. These are available on its website at www.institute.nhs.uk and include:

Delivering Value and Quality: Focus on Productivity and Efficiency,

Delivering Value and Quality: Focus on High Volume Care, and Delivering Value and Quality: Directory of Ambulatory Emergency Care for Adults.

Hospitals Closures: Media Interest

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 8 January 2007, Official Report, column 39W, on hospital closures (media interest), what methodology was used to arrive at predictions for media interest (a) now, (b) in the summer, (c) in the autumn and (d) in the future as indicated on the heat maps released by her Department on 7 November 2006; and for what reasons her Department analysed media interest surrounding potential hospital closures. [118345]

Andy Burnham: It is routine for the Department to monitor media activity and uses a range of methods to do this. The Department produced a set of maps following discussions with strategic health authorities (SHAs). These gave an indication of local media coverage of health service issues by SHA. The maps have not been updated.

Hospitals: Admissions

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the impact of the introduction of referral management schemes by primary care trusts on patient choice; and if she will make a statement; [121925]

(2) when she expects to answer Question number 121925, on referral management schemes, tabled by the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green on 16 February. [130621]

Andy Burnham: There has been no central assessment as this is for local determination.

The Department's guidance to the national health service is clear that, whether patients are referred direct to hospital by their general practitioner, or through a referral management scheme, they should be offered the choice of which hospital they wish to be referred to. We have asked primary care trusts to review existing referral management centres to ensure that they create tangible benefits for patients, and uphold the principles set out in Care and resource utilisation: ensuring appropriateness of care, published on 14 December 2006. This is available in the Library and at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidanceArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4141316&chk=iJxRrx

One of the principles in this document is that choice should be offered to patients when they are referred to hospital.

Hospitals: Infections

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has undertaken on the relationship between hospital lengths of stay and hospital acquired infection. [130076]

Caroline Flint: Length of stay was one of the factors considered in a report by Public Health Laboratory Service: Plowman, Rosalind et al and is available at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_4089724

This found that patients who acquired an infection in hospital remained in hospital longer than uninfected patients. On average an infection resulted in an extra 11 days in hospital.

The Department is also working on a desk analysis aimed at studying links between hospital level methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) rates and a variety of factors relating to hospital policy, management and patient mix. One of the variables included is an aggregate average length of stay measure for inpatients in each trust. This will test whether, other things being equal, hospitals whose patients have long lengths of stay tend to have higher MRSA rates than hospitals with shorter lengths of stay. The report is being peer reviewed and will be published later this year.

The mandatory surveillance of health care associated infections report 2006, available in the Library and at www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/hai/mandatory_report_2006.htm, provides information on acquisition and length of stay.

In-patients

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged (a) 50 to 64, (b) 65 to 74 and (c) 75 years and over were placed on (i) general wards and (ii) specialist wards in each of the last 10 years, broken down by primary care trust; and if she will make a statement. [116248]

Andy Burnham: The information is not available.

Kettering General Hospital

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will visit Kettering General Hospital to discuss local NHS funding. [115517]

Andy Burnham: There are no immediate plans by the Secretary of State to visit Kettering General hospital.

Funding is allocated to primary care trusts (PCTs) who are responsible for commissioning appropriate services to meet the health needs of their local populations.

Funding for the former Northamptonshire Heartlands PCT increased by over 31 per cent. (£63 million) in the three years from 2003-04 to 2005-06. The new Northamptonshire Teaching PCT which was formed on 1 October 2006 will receive £139 million in the two years from 2006-07 to 2007-08.

When the PCT allocations for 2006-07 and 2007-08 were made, Northamptonshire Heartlands PCT, which has since been merged to form the Northamptonshire Teaching PCT, received an increase of 29.4 per cent, over these two years compared to a national average increase of 19.5 per cent, and the fifth highest increase of any PCT.

Kidney Patients

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England (i) were diagnosed with chronic kidney disease and (ii) required renal replacement therapy in each year since 1997; [128439]

(2) how many people in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England received renal replacement therapy in each year since 1997. [128442]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no national registry of chronic kidney disease (CKD). Over 99.9 per cent., of people with CKD will be under the care of general practitioners (GPs) and not seen by secondary or tertiary hospital services.

At general practice level, maintenance of a practice register of patients with CKD became a part of the quality and outcomes framework in April 2006, which in due course should mean that a very rich dataset will be available for every community in the country.

The United Kingdom Renal Registry (UKRR) holds data on patients receiving renal replacement therapy. The Newcastle renal unit has only been returning these data to the UKRR since 2002. The registry has analysed this data and determined that the number of people receiving renal replacement therapy in South Tyneside at the end of each year since then is in the following table.

Number of people receiving renal replacement therapy in South Tyneside

As of 31 December	Number
2002	78
2003	83
2004	89
2005	97

In the North East of England, the number of people receiving renal replacement therapy at the end of each year is in the following table.

People receiving renal replacement therapy in the North East of England

As of 31 December	Number
2002	1,469
2003	1,501
2004	1,571
2005	1,635

Across England, the number of people receiving renal replacement therapy at the end of each year is in the following table.

People receiving renal replacement therapy across England

As of 31 December	Number
2002	30,966
2003	31,248
2004	32,256
2005	34,574

Data on the number of patients receiving renal replacement therapy are not collected by parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England were on the waiting list for treatment for dialysis services in each year since 1997. [128440]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no specific waiting list for dialysis. Dialysis is often an emergency treatment, and patients with no kidney function will die in a matter of weeks if they do not receive dialysis. For patients whose disease has been identified well in advance of end-stage renal failure, dialysis begins at a time that they and their consultant feel is appropriate.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people died from chronic kidney disease whilst waiting for NHS treatment in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England in each year since 1997. [128441]

Ms Rosie Winterton: These data are not collected centrally.

Mental Health Services: Children

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting times were for young people to see child and adolescent mental health services staff in the last three years for which data are available. [130271]

Caroline Flint: Information is not collected in the format requested. The most recent information available is from the 2005 child and adolescent mental health service (CAMHS) mapping exercise. In November 2005, there were 26,207 children and young people waiting to be seen by specialist CAMHS in England, a reduction of 2,674 from the previous year.

In November 2005 52 per cent. of new cases were seen by specialist CAMHS within four weeks, an additional 33 per cent. within 13 weeks, and a further 10 per cent. within 26 weeks. Five per cent. of children and young people waited over 26 weeks to be seen by specialist CAMHS.

NHS: Complaints

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget for advertising the NHS complaints procedure was for each of the last five years. [128718]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Individual national health service organisations are under a legal requirement to publicise complaints procedures. Information on how much money has been spent on this activity is not collected centrally.

NHS: Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total value of capital-to-revenue transfers made by her Department was in each year since 1997-98. [124933]

Andy Burnham: The information is in the table

	Capital to revenue transfers' (£ million)
1997-98	270.981
1998-99	372.082
1999-2000	534.951
2000-01	750.292
2001-02	877.830
2002-03	1,019.344
2003-04	835.796

	Capital to revenue transfers[1] (£ million)
2004-05	405.562
2005-06	391.562

[1] This includes all transfers, main, in year and technical adjustments.

NHS: Procurement

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2007, Official Report, column 315W, on NHS: procurement, what restrictions are in place on how DHL can (a) apply a margin and (b) increase a sell price. [129653]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is considered commercially sensitive.

Northern Lincolnshire and Goole Hospitals NHS Trust: Maternity Services

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total expenditure on maternity services was at Northern Lincolnshire and Goole hospitals NHS trust in each of the last five years. [129331]

Andy Burnham: The following table shows the total expenditure on maternity services at Northern Lincolnshire and Goole hospitals national health service trust.

			£000
	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04
Maternity function: patients using a bed	8,224	8,539	9,096
Maternity function: out-patients	1,274	877	2,070
Health programme: maternity services	0	0	1,128

Data is obtained from the annual financial returns, because of changes in the format of the financial returns, this information is not available after 2003-04.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made since September 2006 with the new model of midwifery care announced by the Northern Lincolnshire and Goole hospitals NHS trust. [129332]

Andy Burnham: The proposed changes to midwifery services were implemented in January 2007. The newly formed teams now cover the geographical areas of Goole and Isle, Barton, Brigg, town centre north and town centre south. The Yorkshire and the Humber strategic health authority (SHA) reports that the teams are now staffed by both midwives and midwifery support workers, a newly developed post at national vocational qualification (NVQ) level 3. The teams are now practicing from either midwifery centres (Goole, Crowle, Brigg and Ashby) or from children's centres (West Street, Henderson Avenue and Castledyke). A few antenatal clinics continue to be offered from general practitioner surgeries.

The Northern Lincolnshire and Goole hospitals national health service trust continues to evaluate the changes made to the model of care.

Nutrition

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with (a) the Food Standards Agency, (b) Ofcom, (c) Grocer magazine and (d) others on the nutrient profiling model; and if she will make a statement. [126233]

Caroline Flint: The development of the Food Standards Agency's (FSA) nutrient profiling model was subject to extensive public consultation prior to being agreed by the Agency's Board in 2005, and both the Department and the FSA have received a number of representations on the model since.

I have had regular discussions with the FSA on the model while it was being developed for use by Ofcom, to enable them to target new rules on television advertising of foods high in fat, salt or sugar, without having an unhelpful impact on the advertising of healthier options.

I have had several discussions with the Chair of Ofcom, and wrote in support of the model as an appropriate basis for underpinning regulatory intervention in relation to broadcast food advertising to children on 6 December 2005.

I have also undertaken two interviews with The Grocer magazine in May and September 2006, at which time the nutrient profiling model was raised among other topics.

Overweight Children

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the proportion of children who were (a) overweight and (b) obese in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. [129889]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the format requested. Data on obesity and overweight prevalence among children are available from the Health Survey for England. Data on obesity and overweight cannot be provided for individual ages, over a time series. The tables show the prevalence of obesity and overweight for children aged two to 10 and 11 to 15, for the last 10 years for which data are available.

Patients Forums

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she intends patient and public involvement forum members to become members of local involvement networks; and if she will make a statement. [129219]

Ms Rosie Winterton: While we are strongly encouraging forum members to become involved in the new local involvement networks (LINks), we do not wish to prescribe that they should automatically become members because we want all aspects of the arrangements for LINks to be locally determined. It will be a matter for each LINk and Host to consider how best to attract members and involve all people, especially those with experience and knowledge of patient and public involvement.

Patients Forums: Finance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the money provided by her Department to county councils for the purpose of establishing and supporting local involvement networks will be ring-fenced; and if she will make a statement. [129222]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is Government policy to devolve power to local authorities, which will make decisions on priorities according to local needs. For this reason we will not be ring-fencing the funds made available for local involvement networks (LINks), but will be making a targeted grant to each local authority with social services responsibility for the purpose of supporting LINk activities.

Patients Forums: Powers

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether local involvement networks will have a right of entry and access in order to carry out inspections; and if she will make a statement. [129221]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is our intention to give local involvement networks a right of entry to health and social care facilities to enable them to carry out their activities. Clause 175 of the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill, which is currently before Parliament, sets out the duties services-providers will be under to allow entry by local involvement networks.

Patients Forums: Public Appointments

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will issue national guidance on how members should be appointed to local involvement networks; and if she will make a statement. [129220]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are clear that LINks must be able to be flexible and reflect the nature of local communities. Therefore we do not wish to centrally prescribe details on membership. However we do think it is important to provide models of good practice in terms of recruitment, support and conduct of those involved in LINk activity. These will be set out in guidance in due course.

Photosensitivity

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect on people diagnosed with photosensitivity of (i) low energy light bulbs and (ii) incandescent light bulbs; and what assessment she has made of the implications of a ban on the latter for people with photosensitivity. [128689]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not commissioned work of this specific nature. There are no firm proposals to ban such light bulbs and it would clearly be necessary to engage the various interested Government Departments, regulatory agencies and advisory bodies in the event of such a ban being considered.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made by the NHS in making available National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence approved treatments for prostate cancer. [128523]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In June 2006, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published guidance for the national health service on the use of docetaxel for the treatment of prostate cancer. NICE recommended the use of this treatment for particular groups of patients.

NICE technology appraisals are covered by a three-month funding direction. PCTs have a legal obligation to provide funding for treatments recommended by NICE within three months of the guidance being issued.

NICE guidance is also included in "Standards for Better Health", which sets out the Government's high-level expectations for the health service. Adherence to NICE technology appraisals is one of the core standards against which NHS organisations are assessed in the Healthcare Commission's annual health check.

In July 2006, Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, published a review report examining the uptake of NICE approved cancer drugs. Although the report did not include docetaxel for prostate cancer as its guidance had only just been finalised, the report found that approval of a cancer drug by NICE led to increased use of that drug by the NHS and a reduction in variation in use.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases: Vaccination

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce human papilloma virus immunisation for females aged 12 years and above in England; and if she will make a statement. [129559]

Caroline Flint: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) is in the process of thoroughly examining the vaccine safety, efficacy and cost-effectiveness evidence concerning human papilloma virus vaccines. The work is being taken forward by a sub-group of JCVI, with further work ongoing to evaluate whether the vaccine is considered to be a cost-effective prevention of cervical cancer; and the impact that HPV vaccine may have on genital warts.

The sub group's advice will be reported to the main JCVI committee for further discussion.

No decisions will be taken on introducing these vaccines into the immunisation programme until JCVI has presented its advice to Ministers for their consideration.

Social Services

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) primary care trusts and (b) local authorities in England provided services for adults with (i) low and (ii) moderate social care needs in each year since 2001. [130509]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Toxocariasis

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of human toxocariasis there were in England in each year since 1997-98, broken down by primary care trust area. [127827]

Caroline Flint: Toxocara is not a notifiable disease in England and Wales, therefore the numbers of cases per year is taken from confirmed diagnostic laboratory reports. The Health Protection Agency received 19 laboratory reports in 1998 and fewer than 10 reports in each of the years since then. The breakdown of data by primary care trust area is not collected.

Transplant Surgery

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were on a waiting list for an organ transplant in each of the last 10 years. [128554]
